Tax-Supported Propaganda We Object!

SOME OF our contemporaries have commented already on the unique service furnished by the Federal Housing Administration. The publicity division of the loan corporation, a government sponsored agency doing business in competition with private concerns, sends news releases to this and other newspapers.

We have no objection to such publicity material, so long as we can reserve the right to print or not to print it. But those releases, of course, are sent out under a government franking privilege.

Included with the releases is a request for tear sheets, and more important, a franked sticker is included to eliminate the necessity of postage. This is an abuse of the franking privilege.

We have often leaned toward the new deal but regardless of the politics of the administration, we believe such abuses have become excessive.

Adding to our ire is the envelope we received a few days ago mailed under the frank of Milton H. West, member of congress from Texas. It contained a pamphlet (not printed at government expense) containing an Address, "John Nance Garner" by Hon. Roy Miller of Corpus Christi, Tex., delivered at Detroit, Tex., Dec. 6, 1938, and remarks of Congressman West. The whole is a reprint from the Congressional Record.

Here, then, mailed postage free, is what can be termed nothing less than political propaganda for Mr. Garner. This is an even more flagrant abuse of a privilege than the FHA releases.

What reason can there be for sending out the pamphlet unless it is to publicize Mr. Garner? The possibility of Garner running for the presidency has been mentioned many times. The release at this time of a speech made six months ago together with remarks made in the Congressional Record five months ago can be interpreted only one way.

If these men are so fond of Mr. Garner that they want to tell the world of his patriotism, let them do it at their own expense. Why should tax-supported postal facilities be used for such propaganda?

Representative West is immediately to blame for this abuse. The administration is not to be expected.

As many times as we have praised new deal policies, this is one abuse that can not be easily overlooked.

What's All The Shooting For?

THE HOUSE foreign affairs committee has approved the new administration neutrality bill which would permit the purchase, on a cash-and-carry basis, of all American products and commodities by all nations at war. This seems to be the policy finding most favor among our lawmakers and may well be the best solution to a difficult problem.

But can America really remain neutral in the face of another European war? We have only to look at the three major battles in the past few years for the answer. In Italy's grab of Ethiopia we maintained an open-door policy as far as munitions went—and it benefited Italy. No arms from here could get into the invaded nation, while Italy received huge shipments of the fuel necessary to keep her mechanized army moving.

In the same way, our policy in regard to the Far Eastern conflict has favored Japan over China. In both cases the sympathies of the American people were with the nations suffering most from our policy. In the recently-ended Spanish civil war our policy was very different, but the results were the same. We banned all shipments of arms to both participants, and that favored Franco's forces, since they could get all the munitions they needed from the dictator nations. The loyalists were the sufferers.

No matter what we do—whether we ban all arms to warring nations, sell only to the invaded countries, or pursue the cash-and-carry, open-to-everybody policy now under consideration—we, as the greatest source of munitions both raw and finished, cannot easily remain neutral in time of war.

Bonzo, Doctor Of Canine Fidelity

"A SCREWBALL publicity stunt." Mr. Average Citizen thought this week when he read that the University of Newark had bestowed a doctor of canine fidelity degree upon Bonzo, a German police dog.

Very probably some publicity-wise member of Newark's administrative staff had realized that the unprecedented gesture of respect for a dog would get the university's name into the headlines of the nation over.

But we like to believe that there was more behind the university's action than a desire to break into print. We like to believe that the university president was really sincere when he bestowed the award with the assertion that "Newark honors you for the qualities of faithfulness and devotion which have made you a familiar and inspiring figure in its halls."

Certainly Bonzo deserved some special recognition. For four years he had led his blind master to class, enabling the latter finally to graduate with magna cum laude honors and a prize symbolic of the highest scholarship achieved by a Newark senior.

Bonzo, however, had done more than lead a blind youth to knowledge. By his faithfulness, devotion and patience he also had set an example that could be followed with benefit by a majority of his human friends. And doubtless scores of them were led to a more serious consideration of their own places in life simply by observing his day-in and day-out constancy in performing that which to him was duty.

It seems then that the University of Newark is to be commended, not criticized, for its gesture. In Bonzo it saw those qualities which make every life more complete, more serviceable. And it chose to recognize him in a way that would emphasize these qualities to a world in which all too often faithfulness, devotion and patience are lacking.

Stewart Says—

Majesties Fine Folk But Visit to U. S. May Be Bad Guess

By CHARLES P. STEWART

That British royalty's visit to the United States has accomplished much toward cementing friendly Anglo-American relations I have my doubts.

Their majesties got a gorgeous official reception, to be sure. Their popular reception was elegant, too—huge crowds, enthusiastic cheers and all that. The trouble was that the whole thing was rather too obviously manufactured; made to order.

In the first place, King George and Queen Elizabeth simply had to come.

It was highly desirable for them to visit Canada. That stood to reason. Britain is in a tight international situation, Canada is British and it stood the crown in hand to see that the Dominion is solid, in the event of a threatened emergency.

So the Canada trip was strictly according to Hoyle. Well, since the royal couple were coming to Canada, what more natural than for President Roosevelt to invite them to drop in on the United States also?

It almost would have been an affront to Uncle Sam had they refused. Nevertheless, possibly their stop-over here was a trifle ill-advised.

There was an effort to make the affair resemble a move toward a "rapprochement" between the two countries, at a time when there's a strong sentiment on this side of the Atlantic against any association with overseas difficulties.

Revolutionary War Forgotten. I imagine that the average American has pretty well forgotten the Revolutionary war except as a historical incident. I don't believe many Americans still resentfully recall the burning of the Capitol and the White House by British troops during the War of 1812. British support of the Confederate states during the War of Secession presumably is a back number to American northerners and certainly can't be recalled otherwise than somewhat gratefully in the south.

But the recollection of the British World War debt to this republic still is very fresh.

While the king and queen were here I heard it referred to very frequently. The newspapers mentioned it liberally, and so did the "man in the street." He might cheer the king and queen (rating the former as a fine chap personally, and the queen as a lovely woman), but still he suggested sotto voice that it would have been a nice thing for his majesty to bring a couple of billions along, to pay on account.

Seek U. S. as Ally. There also was an evident undercurrent to the effect that John Bull has an eye toward having Uncle Samuel on his side in the event of another war.

These sentiments and suspicions apparently were accentuated, if anything, by King George's and Queen Elizabeth's presence here. In short, it was an event which struck me as having reminded Americans of a lot of things. At least, that's the impression I got from Washington comment. I can't speak for chat out in the sticks.

The English press didn't mend matters, either. It over-stressed the American welcome to the king and queen, undertaking to prove that America is British at bottom, after all. The London Times even got out an "American edition" at 5 cents (not tuppence ha'penny) per issue. Its whole purport was to the effect that "all was forgotten"—that Yankee-land is as loyal as ever it was.

Irish by the Ears. The arrest of the Irish agitator, Sean Russell, was unfortunate. It gave congressmen of Hibernian ancestry an excuse for the charge that Scotland Yard had dictated to our police.

It probably wasn't Scotland Yard's fault that something closely resembling martial law prevailed in Washington and New York while our guests were here. That was our own secret service's blunder. For instance, property owners on their majesties' various lines of march through our streets were forbidden to get out on their own roofs, lest someone might toss a pineapple into one of the processions. This sort of restriction is calculated to make liberty-loving folks sore.

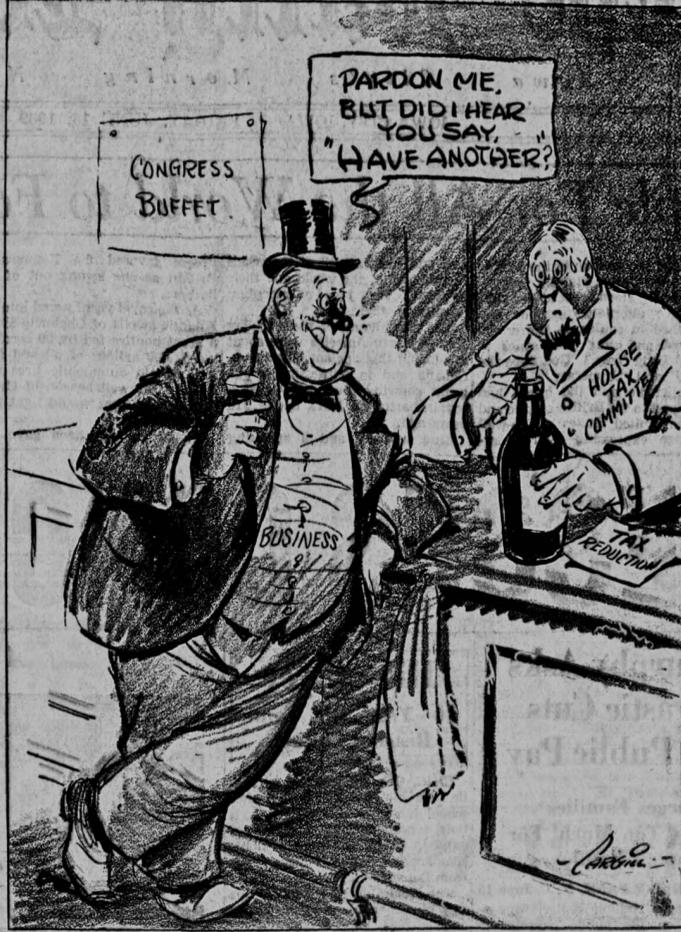

All in all, it was a nice visit, but it had its unfortunate features, too.

Old Boat In New Role. MOQUIAM, Wash. (AP)—A few years ago the San Pablo was one of the fleetest and trimmest ferries plying San Francisco bay. Now it is being used for the dirtiest job in the fish business. Moored near here, the 240-foot ferry has been transformed into a floating smelchard reduction plant—grinding smelly sardines into fish meal and fish oil.

less victories. Every new development—including open rebellion among the Czechs, six months ago so bitter against their former allies that they were ready to cooperate with Germany on any decent terms—warns him that his next move has tremendous risks.

'ONE ON THE HOUSE'

A MAN ABOUT MANHATTAN

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—It isn't often that anyone who isn't a professional Cuban musician is allowed to sit in on the Latin jam sessions which are staged during the early hours of every morning in a small basement cafe near Fifth avenue and 116th street.

This is a spot where liquor flows freely at all hours, yet the establishment has no legal beverage permit. It is a place where dancing flourishes, but there is no cabaret license to conform to the city's laws.

The ponderous steel-sheathed door is equipped with a peephole and buzzer system—a throwback to the speakeasy era of not so long ago.

Only Latin musicians and entertainers frequent this off-the-record cafe. It's theirs by right of exclusive occupancy. They drift in after their own chores for the day are completed. Business is heartiest between 2 a.m. and noon.

The proprietor is Rudolfo, a Cuban and a talented guitarist. When show business went sour seven or eight years ago he turned to bootlegging for a living. He has been at it ever since. Of course, he has run afoul the law at intervals, but, after cheerfully paying a fine, he always returns. Rudolfo speaks only a very few words of English.

This low-ceilinged soiree room is simply furnished with a dozen small tables, a few rough benches, a six-foot bar, and a miniature piano. The gray walls are inhabited by vivid Latin caricatures.

The drinks come high at Rudolfo's place. Whisky and rum are 50 cents a jigger, each jigger an ounce. Beer is 25 cents a small glass. There is no gin, no wine, no brandy. The menu consists of chicken and rice, steak and chops. The food is plainly served and usually is excellent.

It is in this subrosa restaurant where many new breaks and rhythms are previewed before being offered to the public. Criticism is terse and constructive. While praise is genuine, flattery is discouraged, and personal grudges aren't tolerated. The patrons always bring their own instruments and music, and sometimes as many as 15 recognized stars are joined in an impromptu recital of rumba, swing, and even waltz.

Practically the only outsiders on deck are visiting musicians, and they are usually in the jam before the jamboree ends.

Manhattan, long a leader in the world's most modern and most elaborate electric lighting wonders, illuminates its safety zones with kerosene lanterns.

Billy Rose pays those pretty young swimmers in his Acquacade $35 a week. And showgirls in all the Broadway clubs get $35 weekly. Swimming or dancing, it makes no difference in this town, if you're an entertainer.

The afore-mentioned Mr. Rose, by the way, can sit on his front porch and look right down into the Acquacade—at least he could, if he had binoculars. His "porch" is a Manhattan terrace, 22 floors up, looking squarely across Queens to the Fair.

Folks who are always boasting that they do not know their own strength forget that that's their real weakness.

One June wedding that now appears to have been called off by the very altar is that one involving Russia and the Franco-British alliance.

Buenos Aires has made jay-walking a crime. What's the charge? Littering up the street?

If Diogenes were living today he'd give up hunting an honest man and start looking for a radio announcer who could describe the value of his sponsor's product in a calm, well-modulated voice.

Famous celebrities' last words: "I want Paul Muni to play the role."

"Majesties tour carefully planned"—news item. Oh, yeah? Have you ever been in Washington during a simmering June?

After visiting congress their majesties naturally will wonder why Chicago and not Washington is called the Windy City.

That middle-western pooch which enjoys its daily ration of beer is, of course, just a lap-up dog.

The philosopher who said: "Consistency is a jewel," probably never heard of the New York Yankees.

A new method of cooking is supposed to eliminate the necessity of using water or grease. A bigger help would be a new method, eliminating the grocery bill.

On Dad's day we naturally tell him he's the most important member of the household. But we've noticed that even when he's sick we still get our meals on time.

STORM BREWING?

Before the break-up of the Czechoslovak state, three months ago, the first premonition of the impending change was felt in Poland. The rift in Polish policy which led to the British guarantee, with its far-reaching consequences, really began a week or so before the occupation of Prague. It began when Warsaw, sensitive to agitations on her long Slovakian frontier, foresaw that Slovakia was about to be detached from the founding republic. Today Poland is more than ever vigilant. Hence reports of the fight of former Czech soldiers in increasing numbers into Poland cannot be disregarded. Taken in connection with other signs of trouble and unrest, they indicate that further changes are imminent in the unhappy hunting ground that was once Czechoslovakia.

All the news proves that Hitler's own "solution" of the Czechoslovak problem in March was no more final than the four-Power settlement in Munich last September. Czechoslovakia is a lively and troublesome corpse. The Czech fighters fleeing to Poland are said to be forming a new legion on the pattern of the World War legion that deserted the Austro-Hungarian Army and marched around the globe to join the allied ranks. In any event, their flight lends color to stories that German troops are moving in the conquered provinces. Following closely on the incidents in Kladno, Machod and other Czech towns, it carries an ominous suggestion that the last steps in the subjugation of Prague and Bratislava are about to be taken.

The ingredients of crisis, always on hand in the German "living room," are again being stirred up. But the technique is now so hackneyed that, unless the present disturbance is a trick to divert attention from a move somewhere else, Hitler can spring no more surprises. Nor can he count on more "blood-less" victories. Every new development—including open rebellion among the Czechs, six months ago so bitter against their former allies that they were ready to cooperate with Germany on any decent terms—warns him that his next move has tremendous risks.

—The New York Times

Everybody who is overweight wants to reduce by an easy method. They want the Royal Road, and so we have different kinds of baths, and heat, and massage, and drugs, gymnasium exercises, etc., when the fact is that the only way to reduce is to go hungry for a while and cut down on the intake. Overweight people got that way because they had a good appetite and they hate to face the possibility of denying themselves the pleasures of the table. So they will prefer anything that seems an easy way out.

So far as exercise is concerned, exercise is the only logical adjunct to a reducing diet, but, as a matter of fact, it does not reduce proportionately as much as one would expect. I have heard it estimated that walking to the top of Pike's Peak requires somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,500 or 2,000 calories, which could be replaced in a good substantial lunch.

Massage Studied The effect of deep massage for reduction purposes has been studied by Dr. James J. Short and Dr. John D. Currence, of New York. The study was scientifically carried out.

Theoretically, human depot fat could be moved by massage. It is composed largely of the fats called stearin, palmitin and olein. The first two are solid at body temperature. Olein is liquid at less than body temperature. Olein makes up 75 per cent of the mixture of fats and, therefore, theoretically, the use of heat and massage might drive fat particles into the blood stream.

After a meal heavy in fats, we can often find fat in the blood and fatty acids begin to increase about two hours after a meal. These can be detected by modern laboratory methods. So it is perfectly possible to show by modern chemical methods whether, after message of fatty parts, fats have been dislodged and driven into the blood.

HEALTH HINTS

No Reduction In this study, however, it was not shown that fat or fatty acids were increased in the blood after massage and heat. Nor was there any weight reduction recorded after massage. It is possible that the reason for this is that these fats cannot be mobilized from their depots by these means or that the amount which is mobilized is too small to be detected.

Reduction by means of baths is a completely false idea. The baths are usually medicated with epsom salts and sold at a high price under a fancy name. As a matter of fact, some alarming symptoms develop in overweight women who use these baths, and I know of several instances where a fainting spell was induced which lasted for quite a while.

So the sad truth is that there is no Royal Road to reduction except by going hungry for a while, but those who have experienced this will tell you that the suffering is not nearly as great as it appears to the imagination beforehand.

Questions and Answers Subscriber: "I drink the juice of one lemon, mixed with grapefruit juice, every morning. Just what effect does this have on the body? I thought this would rid me of rheumatism and arthritis, but I have found no relief, though only 48."

Answer: A fruit juice at breakfast assures one of plenty of vitamin C, which is good for the teeth, is a preventive of scurvy and helps to reduce lassitude. A fruit diet has no beneficial effect on rheumatism or arthritis whatever, although there is much opinion to the contrary.

JACK DIXON WINS EASTERN IOWA GOLF TOURNAMENT

By J. DENNIS SULLIVAN Daily Iowan Sports Editor Coming out of nowhere with a flashy 76 after taking a 78 during the morning's play, Jack Dixon, a slender better from St. Ambrose academy, Davenport, took top honors in the senior division of the Eastern Iowa Junior golf tournament held yesterday on Finkbine field.

At the second hole of sudden-death play. In the extra play Dixon and Bracken both belted beautiful tee shots, good seconds and came out all even with par 4's for the first hole. Bracken, a terrific wood-shot better, lammed one about 250 yards, but sliced into the rough to the right of the fairway. Dixon's tee shot, not as long as Bracken's, landed on the fairway. Dixon recovered nicely from an all but impossible lie and was back in the game when Dixon's second shot, a long iron, landed in the rough to the left of the green and behind a sand trap. Bracken's third shot was a beauty, straight for the pin but 10-yards short, but with Dixon in the rough he seemed to have the upper hand. Dixon, however, with the same coolness that marked his play through the long day of competition, lined up his shot and lifted it over the trap and on to the green 10-feet from the pin. Visibly nervous over his opponent's great recovery, Bracken's next shot was far past the pin and his putt missed the cup by inches. Dixon studied his lie for some moments, putted briskly and dropped the pellet into the cup for a par 4 and the championship. This was the first time Dixon had entered the tournament, and it will be his last as he is 17 years old and will be over the age limit for further competition. He explained, however, that he has had previous tournament experience, winning the Davenport Caddy's tourney last year.

He has been playing golf for four years. Team honors for the day went to Davenport with a team total of 650, 23 strokes better than West Waterloo, nearest rival with a total of 673. The girl's section was captured by little Mary Weaver of Burlington, who outdistanced her rivals, "Tootsie" Holt of Ft. Madison and Dot Dungan of Ames, by rounding out the day's play with 191. Mary has been playing golf since she was old enough to swing a club, her father being a golf pro at the Burlington country club. There was but one entry in the boy's junior division, Gene Matthes of Iowa City capturing the trophy with a total of 225. Moe Arnovich Hits Hot Pace

National League Hurlers Moaning Because Moe Hits Only Good Ones

By WHITNEY MARTIN nearest rival. It is 150 points above his lifetime average. Arnovich attributes his improvement to a lighter bat — 35 instead of 37 ounces — but rival pitchers have a different answer. "He won't bite at bad balls," one moaned. "He hits anything—fast ones, slow ones, curves. He's got a Medwick swing and wrists which slap out line drives. He's poison." Young Moe can't account for his power, unless, he says, "I absorbed it watching others chop wood up around Superior."

Whether Arnovich can keep up his sizzling pace is problematical, but 398 for approximately one third of a season is something more than a flash in the pan. And with the Phillies yet. No wonder the good citizens of Superior are digesting Phillie box scores with their morning coffee.

Big-Time Race Drivers Want Larger Purses for Risking Lives on Tracks

INDIANAPOLIS, June 15 (AP)—Big-time automobile race drivers, serving notice on promoters they want more money for flirting with death, withdrew support today from the Illinois state fair race scheduled for August 19 at Springfield, Ill. Through the medium of the United States Racing association, organization which includes nearly all of the nation's top-notch speed kings, the drivers announced they would skip the Illinois race because "a purse of less than $2,500 is offered for 108 miles of competition."

John Woodruff in California For N. C. A. A. Cinder Meet

LOS ANGELES, June 15 (AP)—Pittsburgh's John Woodruff added the final dizzy chapter to the N.C.A.A. athletic amateur union row today. He landed here after a plane trip from the east, ready to compete for Pitt instead of in the A.A.U. sponsored Princeton invitational. Woodruff announced he would defend his 880 N.C.A.A. title but would pass up the quarter-mile, eliminating the possibility of a renewed war with his close rivals in the recent N.C.A.A. A. A. Howard Upton and Irwin Miller of Southern California.

Ceferino Garcia Flattens Woods In Four Heats

NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—Ceferino Garcia, the bolo-punching Filipino from Los Angeles, belted his way into the forefront of the middleweight ranks to-night by flattening Walter (Pop-cye) Woods, New York east sider, in four rounds in Madison Square garden. The 154-pounder, who only recently graduated from welterweight ranks and went into tonight's tilt a 2-1 underdog, dropped the 160 1-4 pound Woods five times before putting him down for keeps at 17 seconds of the fourth round.

Walter Hagen In Return To Winning Form

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 15 (AP)—Three teams fired five under par 66's today to take the lead in the fifth annual Inverness four-ball matches, but more important than that was the return of Walter Hagen to the form which won for him scores of tournaments in the last quarter century. "The Hag" and his teammate, Gene Sarazen, finished the opening day tied for last place with two other pairs, but the veteran star, making his third competitive start of the year, scored all four birdies counted by his side as he and Sarazen dropped a two-up decision to Horton Smith and "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper.

Klein Wallops Homer but Bucs Lose Again, 6-5

PITTSBURGH, June 15 (AP)—Debs Garms' fourth hit of the day, a double with two out in the 11th inning, followed by 37-year-old Johnny Cooney's single gave Boston a 6 to 5 decision today over the tailspinning Pittsburgh Pirates. It was the sixth consecutive setback for the Bucs and left them only a game ahead of the seventh place Reds. Chuck Klein kept Pittsburgh in the running for a time with three hits that drove in as many runs. His homer in the seventh put the Pirates a run ahead but doubles by Henry Majeski and Al Lopez in the eighth tied the score again.

Bucky Walters Shackles Phils With Five Hits

CINCINNATI, June 15 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, taking full advantage of six errors, won their first home night game of the season tonight, beating Philadelphia, 4 to 1. Bucky Walters allowed the Phils only five hits, three by Arnovich and two by Martin. It was a heartbreaker for Hugh Mulcahy to lose. Up to the eighth, when Willard Hersherberger doubled to drive in the fourth Red run, he had allowed the Reds not an earned run. Werber and Myers contributed errors for the Reds, but neither did damage and a pair of fast double plays cut off the best Phil scoring threats.

Tree 80-Foot High Grows On Rock Ledge

YOSEMITE, Cal. (AP)—Park officials have to keep explaining to visitors how a large pine tree manages to grow on a little ledge in the sheer face of El Capitan, a mighty granite monolith which towers 3,000 feet above the floor of Yosemite valley.

The tree is more than one-third the way up the cliff and surveyors have established it is 80 feet high, though it is impossible to reach it.

The seed was evidently blown on to the ledge more than half a century ago, park officials say, and the necessary nutrition is evidently obtained from the rock and air.

Stegner Appears in Defense Of 'The Novel in Short Pants'

Stegner's Father Dies in Utah

Five minutes before Wallace Stegner, young Iowa author, concluded the first of a series of writers' round tables in Old Capitol yesterday, a long distance telephone call brought word that his father had died in Salt Lake City, Utah.

The question and answer period which was to follow the speaker's talk was cancelled, and he departed immediately for Salt Lake City. The young author of "Remembering Laughter" had planned a longer stay on the campus.

By MADELYN MILES "Every story has a definite right form, therefore it should not be lopped off or stretched out to conform to a definite length or an editor's needs," asserted Wallace Stegner, author of the prize winning novelette, "Remembering Laughter" yesterday afternoon in the first in the series of round table discussions of the writers' workshop.

Stegner, in his lecture, "The Novel in Short Pants," defended the novelette or short novel of 5000 to 80,000 words, pointing out that it differs from the novel and the short story only in length. "Most men are of middle height," Stegner said, "and the majority of fiction should be of middle length. The novelette is the middle in fiction."

Ordinarily fiction is divided into two parts, the novel and the short story. There should be no barriers at all, Stegner said, for every story has a right length. The novelette should not be contest, entrants are to call or see Professor Zopf. The annual badge sale was inaugurated in 1924 for the purpose of financing the homecoming activities. It replaced the former system whereby Iowa City business men and alumni contributed to a fund used to pay for the events.

Prof. Clarence Smith Demonstrates

Prof. Clarence R. Smith, above, involved in the optics of a cat's eye being slit. He explained that while a human's eye has a circular hole in the pupil, a cat's eye is slit vertically and a horse's eye is slit horizontally. These demonstrations, 14 of which were presented yesterday afternoon and evening, are worked out by the professors and brought to the colloquium in order to share the discoveries with other teachers. More than 100 teachers and professors from schools all over the middle west are attending.

Measuring Wave Lengths of Sounds

In this picture Prof. H. K. Schilling of Union college is shown measuring wave lengths of sound. Professor Schilling has perfected this equipment to the point where it will measure these wave lengths with a speed and precision never before attained. He also showed how changes in temperature affect the strength of the sound waves. To demonstrate this in the lecture room, he blew warm air into the sound producer and the change was immediately noticed. Many experiments were shown yesterday spotlight is fixed on the characters. In the novelette the imagination furnishes the details and the action goes unharassed.

"The primary object of fiction," Stegner said, "is to allow the audience to participate in the action."

Form Depends On Fashion
According to Stegner, form depends upon fashion and most of all upon commercial desires of the editors. In the past novelettes have been less profitable than the novel or short story.

Commercial magazines, especially the "slick" variety have little use for novelettes because they are too bulky. If a novelette is published in a magazine, it automatically pushes everything but short articles out.

"It's like putting all your eggs in one basket and if the readers don't like it, circulation suffers," Stegner declared.

Published as books, novelettes suffer in comparison with the bulkier novels. Because of their length they sell for much less than novels, the binding costs proportionately more, he commented.

Present System Unprofitable
"This does not prove that the novelette is a bad form," asserted Stegner, "it only proves that the present system makes them unprofitable."

"The Voice of Bugle Ann" and "Goodby, Mr. Chips" are two of the few successful novelettes of today, he declared.

Stegner has written six novelettes, the first and most successful being "Remembering Laughter," which won the Little Brown novelette prize of $2,500 in 1937.

Physical Education Conference Ends at SUI This Afternoon

Hernlund, Wayman, Bauer To Speak As Annual Meet Closes

The activities of the first day of the tenth annual conference on problems in physical education ended last night with a picnic in the women's gymnasium.

Four speakers, two in the morning and two in the afternoon, made up yesterday's program of the conference. The morning meeting, which was presided over by Prof. E. G. (Dad) Schroeder, director of athletics at the University of Iowa, was opened with a word of welcome from President Eugene A. Gilmore.

The first of the morning speakers was Vernon F. Hernlund, general supervisor of physical activities in the Chicago park district, who spoke on "The Program Content in a Progressive Recreation Community." His talk was illustrated with colored slides.

Florence Owens, assistant supervisor of physical education at Duluth, Minn., spoke on "Criteria for Making School Programs Effective" illustrating her lecture with moving pictures.

which will soon prove of great value. In some cases the students in the class of the professors helped work out the experiments and construct the equipment. Today's program will consist of lectures and panel discussions.

Dr. Petersen Will Address Group Tonight

Dr. William J. Petersen, lecturer in Iowa history and research assistant of the Iowa State Historical society, will give an illustrated lecture this evening before the 17th annual meeting of the Minnesota State Historical society at Winona, Minn.

Dr. Petersen will speak on "Steamboating on the Upper Mississippi." The meeting will be at 7:30 in the Winona country club and the speaking program will follow a dinner.

This will be the fifth time that Dr. Petersen has lectured to the annual meeting of the Minnesota society.

Pi Gamma Mu President To Visit Campus

Local Chapters Of Economics Society Will Honor Officer

Prof. S. Howard Patterson of the economics department at the University of Pennsylvania, national president of Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary social science society, will visit the Iowa campus Saturday, June 24, it was announced yesterday by Prof. Ethan Allen of the political science department, president of the Iowa chapter of the society.

The local chapter of Pi Gamma Mu together with the Order of Artus, economics society, will hold a joint luncheon meeting in Iowa Union after which Professor Patterson will address the group.

Professor Allen also said that he expected Prof. Leroy Allen, executive secretary of the society, to visit Iowa City with the president.

Professor Allen and H. W. Saunders, instructor in the college of commerce and local president of the Order of Artus, are in charge of arrangements for the visit.

100 Attend Opening Meetings Of Annual Physics Colloquium

Memorial Mural To Be Unveiled Today As Session Highlight

The University of Iowa's annual physics colloquium, important summer conference on the Iowa campus, opened yesterday, with almost 100 persons in attendance. The conference continues today, and will end tomorrow afternoon.

The highlight of the meeting, which is attended by college and university physics teachers and professors from all parts of the middle west, will come this afternoon when the E. O. Dieterich Memorial mural is unveiled at a specially arranged program.

The mural was painted by Richard Gates, a graduate student in the university art department, under the direction of Prof. Grant Wood.

Yesterday's program consisted mainly of demonstration experiments presented by visiting physics teachers who had worked out some idea or a new presentation of an old idea and brought equipment and apparatus to Iowa City to give the demonstration before other teachers.

Seven such demonstrations were given yesterday afternoon, with seven more being presented in the evening. After the afternoon experiments yesterday, Prof. Edward L. Hill of the University of Minnesota presented a lecture.

Professor Hill also led a round table discussion after a dinner in Iowa Union last night. Following the evening program of demonstrations, there was an open house in all physics laboratories.

Today's schedule of events consists of lectures and panel discussions with the unveiling of the memorial mural in the late afternoon. Following a dinner and discussion in Iowa Union, the latest physics movies will be shown to the visitors.

This colloquium is unique in the fact that it is the only meeting of its kind—conducted as a teaching aid and service to college physics teachers—west of Chicago.

TODAY'S PROGRAM

9 a.m.—Lecture, "The Teacher Looks at Current Research," Prof. Thomas H. Osgood, University of Toledo.

10 a.m. to 12 noon—Panel discussion, "Merits of a General Physics Text," leader, Prof. J. W. Buchta, University of Minnesota.

Prof. J. W. Woodrow, Iowa State college.

Prof. Lloyd W. Taylor, Oberlin college.

Prof. W. H. Kadesch, Iowa State Teachers college.

Prof. C. N. Wall, North Central college.

Registration Closes for Management Course; 12 States Are Represented

Executives and engineers from all parts of the United States and Canada snapped up every available place in the three-week summer management course being offered by the college of engineering of the University of Iowa.

Industrial leaders from 12 states enrolled in advance, and since the industrial engineering laboratories are able to accommodate only a limited number, the short course will not be open to late registrants.

Such organizations as General Motors, Sherwin-Williams Paint company, Eastman Kodak company, Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, B. F. Goodrich company, Sears Roebuck and company, American Machines and Metals company, Proctor and Gamble, Westclox company, Owens-Illinois

Glass company and International Harvester company, sent executives to attend the three-week course.

Arranged for people from industrial concerns who desire to obtain practical training in cost reduction methods in production, the course is directed by Prof. Ralph M. Barnes of the industrial engineering department. Dr. Barnes' work in this field and in the allied subject of time and motion studies have drawn the attention of many large industrial concerns in the nation to the University of Iowa.

Public speaking instruction by Prof. A. Craig Baird has also been made part of the course, as are lectures on economic law by Prof. W. L. Daykin of the college of commerce and Prof. W. W. Wirtz of the college of law. Lectures and forums by outstanding leaders from industry are scheduled as another feature of the course.

Slipping Cubs Bow as Giants Wallop French

Five Run Flurry In Seventh Routs Larry From Mound

CHICAGO, June 15 (AP)—The New York Giants routed Lefty Larry French with a five-run flurry in the seventh inning today to beat the Chicago Cubs, 7-4, and increase their string of consecutive victories to seven.

After six innings of sniping a run here and another there had put the Cubs in front, 3-2, Joe Moore led off the seventh with a homer and his fellow Giants added four more runs on a walk, two wild pitches and four hits—the last a two-run double by Alex Kampouris.

Fat Walter Brown, who relieved Manny Salvo at the start of the sixth, was credited with the victory, his third against no defeats. He permitted one run, a homer by Hank Leiber in the seventh.

Dodger's Dynamos Click To Score 8 Runs for Win

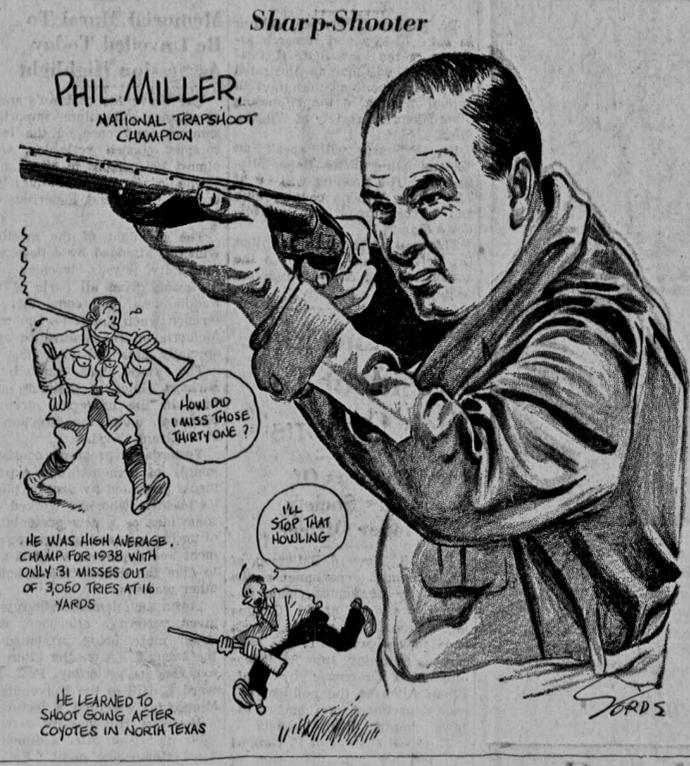

ST. LOUIS, June 15 (AP)—A 16-hit assault on three Cardinal hurlers brought the Brooklyn Dodgers an 8-3 victory over St. Louis today, evening their series and maintaining Brooklyn's slender percentage hold on third place in the National League.

The Redbirds had belted Luke Hamlin out of the game and taken a 3-1 advantage in the fourth before the Dodgers' dynamos started turning. Then they scored twice in the fifth, three times in the sixth and once each in the seventh and eighth while Rookie Hugh Casey held St. Louis in check to get credit for the victory.

Gomez Wins Pitching Battle

Bests Harder In Duel, 1 to 0

Gift Run in Fourth Only Run of Game As Hurlers Sparkle

NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—A drab run in the fourth inning became a gift-edged security in the ninth today when it decided a spectacular pitching duel between Lefty Gomez and Mel Harder in favor of the Yankees, 1-0, over the Cleveland Indians.

Each pitcher gave four hits, but the champions supported Gomez with three double plays. Harder gave four passes and one of these got him in trouble in the fourth when it put Tom Henrich on base to start the inning. Joe DiMaggio singled to left, sending Henrich to third and enabling him to score as Bill Dickey grounded out on the next play.

Tommy Bridges Hurls Eighth Win of Year In Downing Bosox

BOSTON, June 15 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers gained their eighth straight win and Tommy Bridges his eighth triumph of the season today when they gave the Red Sox their third smearing of the current series, 6-3, thanks to Pete Fox's grand-slam homer.

They made eight hits off two Boston pitchers and decided the game in eight minutes. After Jack Wilson passed three to load the bases in the first inning, Fox cleared them by driving into the left field screen.

Little Jeanne's 1 up victory put her in the semi-finals, where she runs into her toughest competition tomorrow—Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C., the only professional player surviving of the four who started the tournament.

Miss Dettweiler, playing superb golf, trounced Shirley Ann Johnson of Chicago, 6 and 5, in their quarter-final match.

Gridders To Air
LOS ANGELES, (AP)—Use of airplanes to transport football teams to and from intersectional games probably will increase, says Harry Stuhldreher, one of Notre Dame's "four horsemen" of football in the '20's. Stuhldreher, now a coach at the University of Wisconsin, addressed a conference of the air transport association of America. "When air transportation is used," he said, "the school is not subject to criticism for having its team absent for long periods on trips. The team can leave the night before the game and be back in classes Monday morning."

The story of "Juarez," is three stories in one—the intrigue of Napoleon III; the tragic romance of his puppet emperor and empress, Maximilian and Carlota; and the incredible life story of Benito Pablo Juarez, who liberated his land from monarchy, and became the "Abraham Lincoln of Mexico."

JUAREZ

(WAR-EZZ)

A Warner Bros. Picture Starring PAUL MUNI and BETTE DAVIS—Screen Play by John Hutton, Annet Muckenlie and Wolfgang Reinhardt—Based on a Play by Franz Werfel—and on "The Phantom Crown" by Bertha Harding. Directed by WILLIAM DIETERLE

Serialized by HARRY LEE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Benito Juarez, a poor Indian, fights his way to the heights in his native Mexico and in 1861 is elected President. His sympathy with the poor embroils his country in a war with France. Napoleon III promises Maximilian and Carlota his support if they accept the position of Emperor and Empress of Mexico. Juarez pursues ruthless warfare against monarchy. Maximilian, who also sympathizes with the poor, tries to win the support of Juarez, but fails. When the Civil War ends in victory for the North, the United States orders Napoleon to remove his armies from Mexico. This leaves Maximilian at the mercy of Juarez. Carlota goes to France to plead for Napoleon's help, and when she fails, for the first time shows symptoms of insanity.

CHAPTER X

MAXIMILIAN—still called Emperor of Mexico—stood before the fire in his shadowy study, talking with the court physician. Night again enfolded the castle of Chapultepec, and the vast rooms seemed strangely deserted, now that the Empress Carlota was on the high seas, bound for France and an audience with Napoleon III.

"I am uneasy, Dr. Basch, about my wife!"

"Her letter, when it comes, will dispel all that, Your Majesty!"

"Remember the dream I told you about? Last night I had it again. She was calling my name from the darkness . . . calling over and over again . . . as if in terror! My dreams of her had been so comforting! But now, always the dream in which she Maximilian had scarcely bade good night to the child and left him, when Marechal Bazaine, commander of the French forces, entered, followed by an equestrian, and with a clash of spurs. "I am intruding against Your Majesty's orders!" he said. "Very well, I calls . . . calls . . .

"If, upon retiring, Your Majesty, you try to make your mind a blank . . . try to think nothing, as it were . . . I believe that . . ."

The heat of nearing drums broke the stillness.

"Listen, Basch, the last of the French troops are on the march!"

"Yes, and with them a number of our first Mexican families . . . the erstwhile members of Your Majesty's cabinet!"

Maximilian summoned a footman and commanded that all windows fronting on the plaza be immediately shuttered. "And order the guard to let no one enter the palace," he said, "until the troops have passed."

A French column in full marching order was passing, followed by a line of coaches, one of them heavily laden with padlocked coffers, jewels, cases, trunks and other luggage. Between the slats of the shutters Dr. Basch saw the procession, and smiled with bitterness as he saw, reclining on the treasure coach, the elegant figure of Senor Jose Maria Manuel de Montares, the messenger who had borne the hypocritical offer of Napoleon to Maximilian and Carlota in far-away Miramar. The martial music reached its height.

"I hope I never hear it again," sighed Maximilian, and turned and went to the nursery where tiny Prince Augustin knelt by his bed, saying his prayers: "Blessed St. Christopher, who watches over all travelers in peril upon land or deep water . . . preserve, I beseech thee, the person of Her Majesty, my mother, and bring her safely home! How soon will she be back, Papa?"

"Soon, Augustin, very soon, I hope . . ."

'Big Wind That Talks' Is Popular With Indians

GALLUP, N. M. (AP)—The "big wind that talks" is becoming more and more popular on the Navajo Indian reservation.

"Big Wind that Talks" is Navajo for radio. Recently a tribal broadcasting system was installed and every Saturday afternoon a special Indian program is presented.

Several of the receiving sets are public ones and some Indians drive as far as 50 miles to listen. A reservation doctor recently requested a receiver for the hospital. Too many patients insist upon getting up and riding to the nearest set, he explained.

Announce Activities Of I.C. Playgrounds

Opening Date To Be Monday At 3 Schools

Handicrafts, Athletic Events Included On Summer Schedule

A full schedule of activities is planned for the city's three summer playgrounds to be opened next Monday morning, Gene Trowbridge, recreation director, announced yesterday.

The play centers are located at Longfellow, Henry Sabin and Horace Mann schools.

Handicraft work, individual and team competition in athletic events for older girls and boys, swimming, story telling, supervised group games and a variety of special events for large groups are included in the activities planned for the eight-week supervised play period.

Softball League New
A junior softball league is one of the new activities to be carried on in connection with the summer program. It is being organized for boys under 17 years of age. The first league game will be played June 26.

Already team entries to date make certain a six-team league, according to Otto Toppenberg, recreation leader in charge of the league. He said that additional entries would probably be made.

Special events will include family night programs, a bicycle day, an inter-playground track and field meet for both girls and boys, swim carnival, an inter-playground playday during the last week of the playground season and a venetian lantern display.

Boys' Tournaments
City-wide competitive tournaments for the boys include softball, croquet, ring tennis, tether ball, clock golf, horse shoes and newcome.

Older girls will participate in bat ball, ring tennis, croquet, tether ball, clock golf and newcome tournaments.

Women workers will supervise morning periods with the exception of Saturdays, placing emphasis on play activities for the younger children from five to 10 years of age. Sand pile play, story telling, simple craft work and games for small children will feature this part of the play program. Mothers are particularly urged by the play leaders to send the smaller children to the playgrounds during the morning hours.

Playground Hours
Playgrounds will be supervised each morning from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; each afternoon from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., and each evening from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. This schedule of hours will be left in effect each week day except Saturday when the playgrounds will be open only during the morning from 9 a.m. until 12 noon.

This week end the training school for playground workers will close.

Toppenberg, in addition to his work with the softball league, will supervise handicraft work on all three playgrounds.

Directors
Two play directors are provided for each play center, Sophus Hansen and Naomi Miller for Horace Mann; Dorothy Ahern and Wilbur Lahr, Henry Sabin, and John Swope and Virginia Mackey, Longfellow.

Gene Coultas will assist with the organization in conducting the special playground events this summer.

Community Chest funds finance the city playgrounds and no charge is made in connection with any of the play activities.

Registration with their play supervisors is required of all youngsters.

The summer play program is operated under the sponsorship of the Iowa City Recreation board in cooperation with the board of education.

The recreation division of the Works Progress administration cooperates in furnishing a number of the playground workers this season.

Around the world with a match folder! And when you have over 19,000 from the Bright White Way to the far corners of Timbuctoo as does Charles O'Donnell, 15 1/2 N. Johnson street, you're quite a globe trotter.

"I just got a kick out of collecting things," said Mr. O'Donnell, "so about seven years ago I started picking up folders here and there and now I have over 19,000."

All shapes and sizes varying from one half inch for feminine purses to the master sized folders of five by three inches are neatly packed in cigar boxes and classified according to sections of the country, metropolises and foreign countries.

"Many a night I sat up late putting folders into old sections or making news ones," said Mr. O'Donnell. But meanwhile, he traveled along from coast to coast to New York's bright spots, the sophisticated Waldorf-Astoria, national parks, famous playground resorts, Hollywood's own Brown

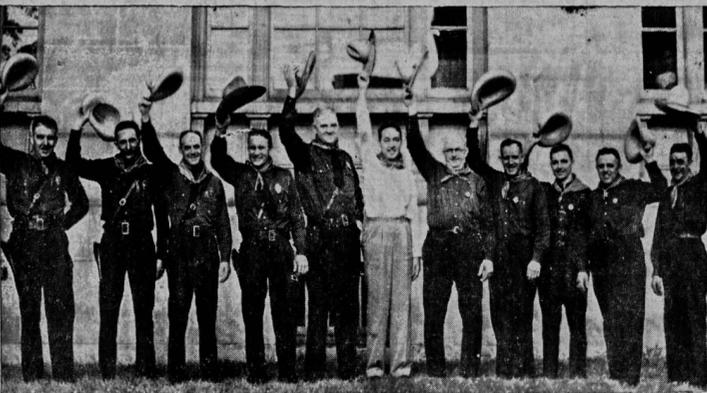

City Assumes A Centennial Air

Roy J. Koza and O. J. McCollister, proprietors of the Koza and McCollister meat market, are among the first of the merchants providing an elaborate centennial exhibit. The structure, which gives the store a definite old-fashioned appearance, complete with hitching posts, was constructed yesterday. The cameraman had no difficulty finding enough people dressed in garb appropriate for the picture. More and more townspeople appear on the streets each day dressed in keeping with the idea of the observance of the city's 100th birthday. Koza has a more than passing interest in the city's centennial. His family operated one of the first meat markets here, opening for business shortly before the university was founded. McCollister is the grandson of Joseph Walker who came here in 1837 and was among the first of Johnson county's settlers. The survey shown above belonged to Peter A. Dey, prominent railroad surveyor who worked here with Colonel Dodge. The team hitched to the survey was furnished by Dan Gates, operator of the Iowa City Sales company.

Letting down the bars of dignity, the local police and fire department personnel yesterday, on the first day of wearing their broad-rimmed hats and red bandanas, doff their sombreros in an old-fashioned greeting to Iowa City Centennial visitors. So don't be surprised if in the progress of duty a fireman sings his beard or a policeman shoots his sombrero full of holes. Pictured at the left are members of the day police force. Reading (left to right) are Harland F. Sprinkle, patrolman; B. A. Hauber, patrolman; L. N. Ham, patrolman; Joe

Shipping Molested
Jamieson cited cases of Britons subjected to Japanese search, including two uniformed British soldiers concerning whom he particularly protested, and also of molestation of British shipping on the Hai river, Tientsin's outlet to the sea.

He specified two instances where Japanese military and Chinese police "stopped, boarded and searched" British craft, declaring that "nobody but duly authorized customs officials have the right to board British ships."

The British consul-general requested an "immediate reply... for the information of my government to whom these facts already have been transmitted."

Reports List Benefits From PWA Projects to Merchants

Iowa grocers will receive more than $150,000 from the wages of workers employed on five projects which the Public Works administration is assisting in constructing here, it was estimated yesterday.

The projects include an addition to Currier hall, addition to Hillcrest dormitory, addition to the engineering building, air conditioning of University theater and Iowa Union and boiler replacements at Oakdale.

The estimate was based on recently completed findings of the United States department of labor as to how workers' wages on PWA projects are expended for the benefit of business in a community. This is the first time such information has been available.

Applying the findings to the local projects, L. L. Klippel, PWA resident engineer inspector, estimated that 57.4 per cent of the payrolls would go directly to local grocers, clothing and landlords. The balance will be spent for such necessities as medical care, household operation and other items, he said.

The wages paid to the local workmen will be spent, in addition to the $150,000 for food, for nearly $46,400 in clothing, $72,500 for housing, $53,800 for coal, electricity, water, paint, house repairs and other items for operating a household, on the basis of these estimates Klippel reported.

Local merchants will receive nearly $21,750 for furniture, rugs, carpets, curtains, beds, refrigerators and other home furnishings, he revealed.

The wages will purchase $50,-

700 worth of tires, gasoline, bus, train and other transportation; $19,700 will purchase medical and dental care; $23,900, businesses offering movies, sporting events and other forms of recreation, and $30,000 savings, insurance, and other items, the estimate read.

It was believed Himmler was sent to tighten the nazi grip in the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate and suppress anti-German elements.
