Meanwhile, Iowa Sen. Thomas Dekoven, who heads the Senate Republican minority, is working to prevent a vote on the four workers whose role in the strike is being investigated.

The strike is expected to continue for at least two more days, with workers demanding higher wages and better working conditions.

The strike has caused significant disruption to the local economy, with the shutdown of major factories and the closing of many small businesses.

The governor has called for a meeting with the union leaders to discuss a possible resolution to the dispute.

Iowa in Review—That's University's State Fair Presentation

Engineering Display Shows Popularity

University Theater, Mudlak Arts Booth Attract Fair Visitors

BY M. MAC SHORES
Daily Iowan City Editor

MUDLAK—A working model of University Theater, a classroom model used in instruction, and a display of campus work and activities feature all displays at the fair. One booth in the exhibit is devoted to pictures and models of various buildings and on the walls are large glass cases illustrating the college of liberal arts and sciences, college of engineering, art school, and public school departments.

The university exhibit is the largest and most complete of the buildings at the fair. Those who have visited exhibits of schools in the past have been impressed with the wealth of information and pictures shown, in addition to the giant photograph of the university campus. The institution is a large glass case containing a large display of statues and figures. These pictures include work in the college of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, agriculture, and public school departments. The exhibit shows pictures and figures of many buildings, including the science hall, the library, and the administration building.

A feature of the fair display is a large picture of the University of Iowa 1932 basketball team. The team was featured at the National College Athletic Association exhibition at the Des Moines Register Building.

A special feature at the fair is the model of the university's large glass case. The model shows the various phases of student life at the university, including pictures of students, teachers, and administrators. The exhibit also features pictures of the university's athletic teams, including the football team.
