The Board's Choice For The Presidency

FOR University of Iowa students to want a voice in naming the qualities they want in the head of their institution is an admirable demonstration of genuine interest and concern for the educational center they have chosen.

While it is perfectly within their rights for students to petition the state board of education for such voice in the selection of Iowa's next president, we believe that there are certain questions that should be raised.

It is not probable that the board's first consideration—with or without reminding from students—would be the interests of the students? Any evidence that the University of Iowa exists for any other reason than for its students would imply that there is something more drastically wrong than students could remedy.

The Federal Aid Method Of Apportionment

THE FEDERAL subsidy system, although contested several times, still exists and continues to extend into various new fields. But as this extension takes place the problem of apportioning funds to the states becomes a matter of importance.

The more recent subsidy laws have generally apportioned funds on the basis of population, but the Weeks Act left the matter of dividing the funds in the hands of the secretary of agriculture. Under this ruling, need was the basis of allocation.

The federal highway subsidy method of apportioning funds was somewhat complicated. It was determined in this manner: 1. Distribution was one-third in the ratio which the area of each state bore to the area of all the states; 2. One-third was according to the ratio which the population of each state bore to the total population of all the states as shown by the last federal census; 3. And the last third was according to the ratio which the mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes in each state bore to the total mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes in all the states.

Remuneration for the national defense act was based on the number of enlisted men in active service in each state and territory. In 1917 the Smith-Hughes subsidy was distributed in the proportion which the rural population of each state bore to the rural population to all the states.

Thus, one sees that the predominant method of apportioning federal aid among the states is the allotment according to population—rural, urban, or total. This arrangement seems to be unsatisfactory. The use of population as a basis, results in some states receiving far more federal aid than they paid into the treasury, while others receive far less federal grants, thus resulting in the transference of wealth from the richer to the poorer states.

Local need should be the basis of every subsidy, and population does not necessarily determine the need of the state for aid. Two factors determine the extent to which a state requires federal aid, and each of them should be deeply considered during the apportioning of subsidies. One of these factors is the state's need of governmental function for which the aid is granted; the other is the state's per capita income.

A basic requirement of a good tax has been that it be proportionate to the person's ability to pay—likewise a state's ability. Part of the wealth that the tax is levied upon is not always earned entirely within that state to which government it is paid.

This system, if the federal government is going to continue to employ it as a means for governing some of the states' rights and actions, needs remedying immediately so as to alleviate to some extent the extreme inequalities in the tax burdens of the several states.

Great Britain Rejects The 'Safety Belt'

WHAT APPEARS as a British rejection of the American "safety belt" is not as bald a move as it might seem. While American reaction to Great Britain can not be expected to be favorable, the British can not be criticized for taking such a stand.

It was a bold step forward that the American republics took at the Panama conference—and Great Britain has merely challenged the effectiveness of the move in keeping the war from America's shores and in applying restrictions with equal force on both allied and German ships.

While Great Britain is at war, and is taking war as a serious business, she can not be expected to let such a move as the Americas have made endanger the "fruits of superiority at sea." She can not at the same time, however, expect to retain long the sympathies of the United States.

Since the prospect of the United States entering the war on either side is (or should be, we think) remote to her, she is perfectly justified from her view point in refusing to respect the "safety belt."

If Great Britain were to respect and the Nazis to reject it, the consequences to the allied cause would be serious.

The objections Great Britain raises are perfectly rational. If at any time the Americas show they can make the safety belt effective, they will be in position to demand compliance with the specified restrictions from Great Britain as well as Nazi Germany.

We reiterate what we have said before—that the idea of a move to keep the war from our shores is a good one. So long as it remains subject to infringements about which nothing can be done, we can hope to receive little more than affronts from Europe's warring powers.

When the temperature begins to skid we've always noticed automobiles are usually not far behind.

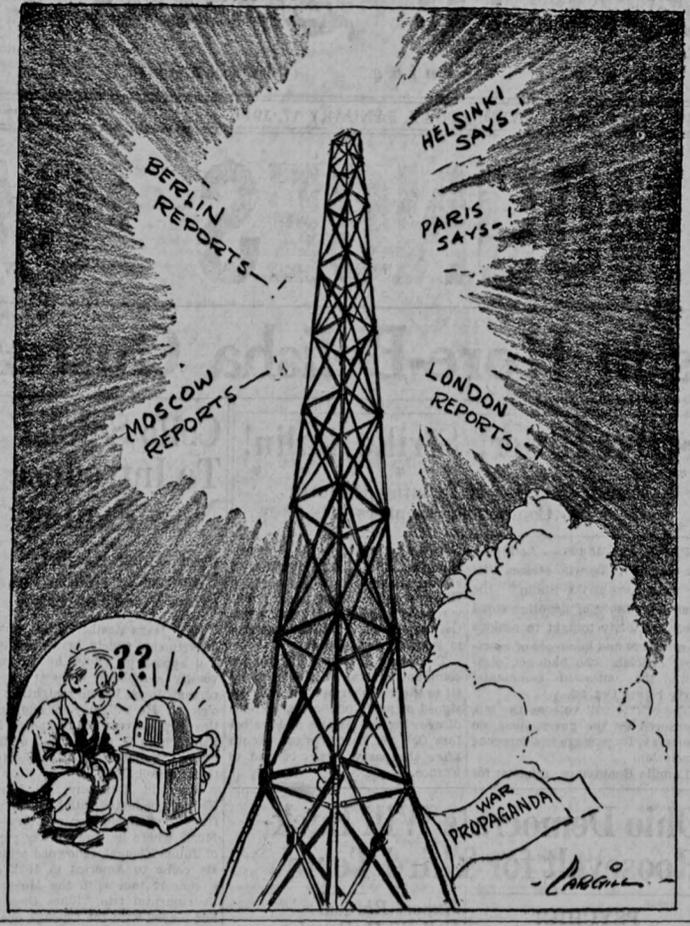

Columbus, too, was once a pretty discouraged sailor, Herr Hitler, but, boy, are we glad he didn't scuttle HIS ships!

Among the things the European conflict has destroyed, according to war correspondents, is the scoop.

CLIPPED FROM OTHER COLUMNS

At Opportunity's Door: Shortly before Christmas, Parker Watkins was listening to Banks Kennedy play the organ that Wam-maker had lent to the Pennsylvania Station, when Mr. Kennedy asked Mr. Watkins why he didn't sing a number. Mr. Watkins obliged. And he kept right on obliging, at noon and night, before audiences which finally numbered several thousand persons.

THE TOWER OF BABBLE!

Aren't Enough Sleuths, Need More Money For Detective Work, Says J. Edgar Hoover

DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER of the Federal Bureau of Investigation wants more money from congress to keep up with his organization's detective work.

International propagandists and spies—"espionage agents," as the latter are called.

The FBI is on their trail. Saboteurs are worse than propagandists and spies. A propagandist just scatters publicity. Who cares for that? It's easy to counteract. A spy digs up military secrets of the country he's spying on. My personal opinion is that he's considerably exaggerated, as a menace.

A lot of the dope many spies peddle is available to anybody who'll take the trouble to hunt for it. Still, the spy's intentions are bad. Maybe it's just as well to detect and incarcerate him for a while.

Menace of Sabotage: But saboteurs are outright dangerous. Their stunt is to throw physical grit into the industrial machinery of the nation they're assigned to operate in.

For instance, suppose an American factory is selling war supplies to the British and French. A German saboteur's job would be to put that factory out of business—perhaps by means of an explosion, of the saboteur's instigation. Or he does some tinkering with the insides of an American aviation plant's flying craft—something that won't show superficially, but which will make those airplanes collapse aloft subsequently, in action.

Why do we have so many more federal convicts than we used to have? In prohibition days captured bootleggers accounted for a big increase, but even that wasn't as tremendous as the present one—maybe because bootleggers generally weren't convicted.

Now, though—what about it? Spies! Propagandists! The suspicious gentry now are Oh, there are plenty of ways in

ON PLANNING FOR FATHERHOOD

I hope some day to become a father. Nothing immediate, understand, just plans for the distant future. My son—for he will be a son—must not be born before the age of 15.

It's long been a contention of mine that no child bears the slightest resemblance to humanity before that age anyway. If the delayed birth is impossible, all under that age should be kept in cages or institutions—not including the family.

To those who joyfully point out I myself was young once, I enter a vigorous denial. I had the mind of a disappointed rooster at 3 and had translated Shakespeare from the original Abyssinian at two months.

My son, moreover, must not bear the slightest resemblance to his father, and old ladies in their dotage who detect a similarity will be shot on sight.

The mother too will be chosen scientifically. First requirement, she must be an orphan. That will dispose of her "family problem" right off.

In addition, she will be pretty. And she must have been in love at least three times before she chooses me. Somehow, unattractive women always seem to blame their husbands because they weren't able to do any better.

Finally, she must have an independent bank account. Two can beg as cheaply as one—but not as cheerfully. I'll be the satisfactory husband, saying clever phrases, jumping at her beck and call, and having only a three-room apartment with bars on the windows and doors for myself.

If I tire of her personality, I'll think of her bank account. The only people who doubt the value of money are those who've always had plenty.

She must leave the training of our son to me. Woman's place is anywhere but the home.

As for the boy, I'll name him simply "He" and save him the bother of being flattered by both sexes.

I'll want him to possess the social graces (barring the social disgrace of playing a good game of bridge), know a fine cocktail from a mediocre one, be rude to his superiors, understand of his inferiors, and never to take anything in the slightest degree seriously—especially himself.

He must know how to work as little as possible for his own comfort, and must never under any circumstance do anything he doesn't want—a trait praised only by college professors and filing clerks.

I'll want him to agree to nothing and question everything, to be as dishonest as he wants with the world as long as he's honest to himself.

To get along on four hours sleep a night; time is too valuable to waste more. To be sure that the panorama of life is better than Hollywood's most super-colossal, and to know as many people as he wants but never to have more than three friends.

To believe in a few things and fight for them; to have a complete change of mind at least once a week, to avoid "finding himself," thus signing his mental death warrant, and finally to be more often right than consistent.

I'll want him to be a specialist only in the fine art of enjoying himself, especially his work. And finally never to be tolerant of the intolerant but only patient and argumentative.

He'll probably be a first-class

Whitney Martin's SPORTS TRAIL

Paavo Returns Stars in Olympics Popular Overnight

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP) — Paavo Nurmi is returning to this country. Probably not to run, as time is not kind to wind and limb, and more than a decade has passed since his name was a household word in foot racing.

He's bringing with him Taisto Maki, a Finnish runner of a new generation, and Nurmi probably will aid in guiding a tour in the interest of the Finnish relief fund, a tour similar to Nurmi's own tour in the fabulous 20's.

They might hit the same towns, but it won't be the same tour. There never will be another quite like the one made by the silent Finn in that era of dollars and dizziness; an era of Joneses and Tildens and Ruths and Dempseys; of million-dollar gates and two-bit cigars.

Stars in Olympics Just two decades ago the sports world at large became aware that a Finnish youth named Nurmi was a trifle extraordinary when it came to foot racing.

There followed news of other record-breaking feats and amazing victories, and after the 1924 Olympic games, in which he set records for the 1,500-meter and 5,000-meter events and won the 10,000-meter run, America was Nurmi-conscious.

He arrived in New York Sept. 12, 1924, and in his first appearance lived up to advance notices by setting world indoor marks for the mile, 1,500-meter and 5,000-meter events.

That was enough to fan the already glowing fire of public interest. Overnight he became an international celebrity. Promoters clamored for his services, the newspaper headlines shouted Nurmi and Nurmi that as he made a grand tour of one-night stands under the direction of Hugo Quist.

Through it all Nurmi maintained a tight-lipped calm and the storms invariably blew over. He was accused of demanding excessive expenses to appear at Chicago and at Des Moines, but the Midwest A. U. cleared him on the grounds he wasn't responsible for Quist's actions.

He was threatened with suspension for failing to appear at Kansas City and at Hartford, but on both occasions he got the all-clear signal.

Explains Injury He had color, but it was in the rhythm of his stride and not his words. A sample of his speech was the cryptic explanation of an ankle injury suffered en route to the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles.

So remarkable was his success that offers to turn pro flooded in. A circus offered him $60,000 for 20 weeks. In 1925 alone he is reported to have turned down bids totaling $250,000.

But the blow finally fell, leaving him a stunned spectator at the 1932 Olympics, and bringing indignant demonstrations at Helsinki. He was banned by the I. A. A. F., and the ban stood, despite petitions by rival athletes that he be allowed to compete at Los Angeles.

The saga of the great Nurmi apparently had ended. But he's coming back, not as a runner, but bringing his name and another great trackman. He'll find a friendly public—and memories.

Nile Receives Walter Camp Trophy; Eddie Honored

By EDDY GILMORE WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (AP)—Three of the country's most highly valued football players took divergent views today on the professional game as a profession. The three received awards at the Touchdown club's annual dinner tonight.

John Kimbrough, Texas A. & M.'s 220-pound fullback, honored as the nation's "back of the year," says he wants no part of the game in which they play for pay.

Nile Kinnick, all-American half-back from Iowa, given the Walter Camp memorial trophy as "the player of the year," says he won't play, but with a reservation.

Ken Kavanaugh, the great end from Louisiana State university, who received the Knute Rockne memorial award as "the lineman of the year," likes professional football and plans to play it.

turn down $15,000 a year, Kinnick said: "Well, that puts a different angle on the situation." The Dodgers have been reported as willing to pay $15,000 to get him.

Chicago Tribune's trophy to Nile Kinnick of the University of Iowa has been changed from Feb. 10 to Feb. 12. Director E. G. Schroeder of the athletic department announced Tuesday.

Pinkie's Turn To Howl Takes Savold Out of Nowhere and Brings Him Into The Limelight

By SID FEDER NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP) — Pinkie George of Des Moines, Ia., a little guy barely bigger than the cigar he's always smoking, is known to the fight-writing fraternity as the only boxer without a muscle ever to compete in the ring.

where he took a job on the docks to keep going. "The pay wasn't much," Lee explains, "but when the ships were in they let us go aboard and eat free. I used to knock off every couple of hours and have a snack. Guess I was eating eight or nine meals a day."

After 12 years, it's Pinkie's turn to howl. He finally has hit the jackpot with Lee Savold, a big blond Norwegian wallop, late of Decatur, Ia., and St. Paul, who made such an impression on "Uncle Mike" Jacobs, the promoter, in his Madison Square Garden debut last week that there's talk of feuding him to Joe Louis, come September.

Savold ate himself right up to 253 pounds. Finally he returned to St. Paul and took a job as a bartender, which also was no help to his out-sized waistline. He had an occasional fight on the side.

There are 60 less pounds and twice as much ambition and punching power to Savold now than a year ago. Although this 23-year-old husky has been fighting since he was 16 (his first appearance was at a county fair), he'd never thought of the ring as a steady career until he signed up with George. In fact, twice he quit in disgust.

It should mean the breaking of a deadlock, in reference to the records of the past 10 years, in which each team has won 10 victories. And, despite the better record this year of the Ramblers, there is every reason for believing that this classic will equal those which have gone before.

As a youngster, he knocked around St. Paul for a while, learning considerable about boxing from old Mike Gibbons, and then went to California with his family.

Good Season The present season for the Ramblers has been fairly successful, they having won 10 out of 12 games played. However, sickness and injuries have been prevalent, hampering the records of both Cole and Eakes, two of the trustees on the St. Mary's squad.

So remarkable was his success that offers to turn pro flooded in. A circus offered him $60,000 for 20 weeks. In 1925 alone he is reported to have turned down bids totaling $250,000.

Nevertheless, all the Suplemen are now back in shape and have been reporting regularly for practice since the last two games. No one player of the Marian cagers can wholly claim the credit for leadership, because all of the veterans have proven their ability.

Briggs Not Alarmed Over Loss of 91 Ball Players

DETROIT, Jan. 16 (AP)—Walter O. Briggs, whose Detroit baseball club lost 91 players when they were declared free agents by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis Sunday, said today he did not believe the team would be handicapped in 1940 by the decision.

Briggs' statement was sent from his winter home at Miami Beach, Fla., and issued by club officials here. It said: "I have received Commissioner Landis' recent decision. We have surely been fully penalized for any mistakes or wrongdoings within the organization. The cost of this is mine and will be properly taken care of."

Siegel Tops Iowa Scorers With 101 Points in 11 Tilts

Scholastic engagements take the place of Big Ten competition for a few days now as Iowa's cagers wait until Jan. 29 before they move out on the hardwood again, against South Dakota State in the Iowa fieldhouse.

Returning yesterday from a two game road trip, the Hawkeyes had a Big Ten win to their credit—the win that broke a long losing streak. In their two engagements, the Hawks lost to Michigan at Ann Arbor Saturday and then overwhelmed Chicago, 41-21, Monday night.

Their hopes revived somewhat by Monday's rise from the conference cellar, the Hawkeyes will swing back into the midst of the Tommy Lind, veteran who works at both forward and guard on the Iowa team, sprained his ankle in practice yesterday. Although the injury had not been fully diagnosed as yet last night, it was thought the ankle would respond quickly to treatment and rest. It is expected Lind will be back in uniform before the end of the week.

struggle immediately after exams. They meet South Dakota State on Jan. 29, entertain DePauw Feb. 5, Wisconsin Feb. 10 and Ohio State Feb. 12 before moving out to meet Minnesota at Minneapolis Feb. 17.

Although the Big Ten still looks like a plenty tough road for the Hawkeyes to travel, they have been improving of late and seem to be capturing, at last, some of the necessary poise. Against Chicago, a tight-guarding outfit, the Hawks grabbed a small lead and then stalled to make the Maroons open up. After that, the game was all Iowa.

Vic Siegel, always good for a few points to the game, still leads the Hawks in the point-getting department. The wiry sophomore has counted 101 points in 11 games for an average of nearly 10 a contest. He has, besides caging 39 field goals, gathered in 23 charity tosses while missing eight. This record on free throws is in marked contrast to that of Siegel's running mate at forward, Bill Wheeler, second high scorer of the squad.

Wheeler, who has 61 points to his credit, has made only three from the foul line. That makes Wheeler's free throw percentage .250, for the sophomore trick pass artist has missed nine attempts.

Of late the Iowa machine has been exhibiting a more balanced scoring power, with three other members moving up. Against Chicago, Siegel and Erwin Prasse each marked up nine points, with Wheeler getting eight. Tommy Lind, working from both guard and forward posts, has scored 50 points, while Prasse has 38, Dick Evans has hit for 34 and Kenny Bastian claims a total of 26 points.

Vacik, Charles Lyle, Leonard Fuller and Ed Lewis look to be the most promising. The frosh squad will elect their team captain on Monday, Feb. 26.

Little Hawks Are Shifted

Meet Dubuque In Conference Game Here Friday Night

Entrenched deep in lower bracket of the conference standings, the City high Little Hawks can do little else for the rest of the season but lay back and prepare to spring upsets in their remaining games.

Lanky Dick Culberson, heretofore Merten's stellar pivot man, was shifted to forward this week to take advantage of Mark Lillick's height and ball-handling. With Lillick handling the feed spot, Merten has shifted Bud Lemons to a guard to instill better and more clever ball-handling at that spot. Ray Sullivan and Bob King complete this lineup, which Merten will give a try this week.

Another surprise that Merten has cooked up is a fast break, with Culberson bringing the ball down. The dusky sharpshooter has shown plenty of ability in dribbling and has worked both the forwards loose consistently for setups.

The big fault of last week's game was that the Little Hawks couldn't work the ball down the floor against a close-guarding Franklin defense. The fast break threat and the improved ball-handling could be the remedy for the situation, and Merten is going to give it a try.

Dubuque's up-and-down ball club comes to town Friday to meet City high in a conference game. If the Hawkeyes beat the Rams, they will pull themselves into a tie with them for a possible fourth ranking.

At present, Iowa City occupies fifth spot in the standings, with Dubuque in a tie for third. Sullivan of Iowa City is fourth in the conference scoring race, with 42 markers, while Culberson trails him in fifth with one point less.

'The First True American' Needless To Say - 'Twas Benjamin Franklin Born 234 Years Ago Today

On Jan. 17, 1706, 234 years ago today, a man was born who has been called "the first true American" for his life was dedicated to his country.

Author, statesman, inventor, journalist—he filled his life with so many professions it is hard to ever classify him. The advancements which he made in promoting good-feeling among the powers of the world have made his name a revered one throughout the world. He ran away from home at the age of 17 to a city 400 miles away. He walked into the city of his destination—and of his destiny. The girl whom ultimately he was to marry saw him munching a roll, and laughed at him. A little later in his life he flew a kite into the heavens and discovered the marvel of the century—electricity. Of all the things he was interested in, invention probably meant the most to him.

In part, some of the things which interested him were—electricity, treatises, hospitals, literary clubs, street sweeping, universities, the gulf stream, stoves, essays, the post and post roads, army supply, the copper plate press, the Declaration of Independence, the guitar, the Constitution of the United States and many others too numerous to mention. He was undoubtedly the most comprehensive mind America ever produced, it has been stated.

Needless to say, his name was Benjamin Franklin.

Sigma Delta Chi To Sell Tickets for Birthday Ball

Will Cover Men's Co-Op Dormitories And Fraternities

An extensive coverage of the university in the sale of tickets for the annual celebration of the President's Birthday ball, to be held here Jan. 31, will begin tomorrow, Dr. T. J. Greteman, university representative on the county committee, announced last night.

He said the sale of tickets in all fraternities and men's cooperative dormitories would be in charge of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity. James Fox, 44 of Boone, president of the organization, said he would appoint a committee today to arrange for immediate coverage.

Other committee members working with Dr. Greteman, including Harry Johnson, Prof. Bruce Mahan and Leslie Moore, in charge of the sale of tickets, announced that members of the university faculty would be contacted by two representatives in each building.

Arrangements to contact other university groups are scheduled to be made at a special meeting of the sub-committee this morning.

Dr. Greteman also announced that the sale of tickets to the annual dance is in progress in the University hospitals. Student nurses, he said, are soliciting under the leadership of Lois Corder, director.

The Women of the Moose, headed during the campaign by Mrs. William Zeithamel, are selling tickets to permanent residents of the city. The President's Ball committee has already held several meetings in preparation for the largest attendance in Iowa City history.

The event will be staged at the Community building "and, if necessary, on one or two other popular dance floors," Swisher said.

Proceeds from the benefit affair are to be divided equally between the local and national foundations to fight infantile paralysis.

Last year two dance floors were necessary to accommodate the crowds.

W. Fred Roberson received a gold key last night, symbol of outstanding civic service to Iowa City in 1939. The award was presented by the junior chamber of commerce at its bi-weekly meeting in Smith's private dining room.

Especially cited by a committee of five disinterested citizens was Roberson's work as treasurer of the committee for Iowa City Centennial celebration last summer and his service as junior chamber of commerce president in 1939.

Byron Jeffrey of Burlington, state president of the junior chamber, made the presentation. After the award was given, Prof. C. Woody Thompson of the college of commerce talked on the selection and care of pipes.

Court Grants Alimony Case Wage Petition

An order authorizing and directing J. H. Gregory, paymaster of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad, to furnish a certificate of wages of E. F. Cooper during 1939 was issued yesterday in district court by Judge H. D. Evans.

A petition asking that the certificate be obtained was filed in district court Monday by Agnes M. Cooper after Cooper had applied for a modification in alimony payments.

Mrs. Cooper, in asking that certificate of wages be furnished, said that it was necessary and material in order to determine the issues raised by the defendant's application.

The law firm of Byington and Rate represented the plaintiff.

Stalin must believe there is something, after all, in a name. With Russian army discipline at a low level, Joe put General Stern in charge.

If New Year's resolutions made a noise when broken, the month of January would sound like 31 consecutive Fourths of July.

$1,000 Given In Settlement

Damage Suit Decided In Favor of Givan By Mutual Agreement

Agreement of all parties concerned resulted in a $1,000 settlement out of court yesterday of the $15,000 damage suit of Rowena Mae Givan against Jess Mitchell, the result of an auto-truck collision four miles east of Marengo in August.

Suits amounting to $40,000 had been filed against Mitchell after the accident. W. O. Remella, whose suit has not yet come before court, is seeking judgment of $15,000 for himself and $10,000 as administrator of the estate of Frances Eugene Remella.

Remella's petition charged the defendant "failed to yield to the car occupied by the plaintiff its right hand side of the highway," and that "the defendant was driving upon said highway in a careless and heedless manner."

Official Tells Results Of Civic Charity

Food, Clothing, Toys Among Most Prominent Presents Donated

Frances Wilson, executive secretary of the Social Service league, yesterday announced that Iowa City churches, service clubs and fraternal organizations brightened 288 of Iowa City's neediest families, nearly 1,400 persons, Christmas.

As is the custom of the Social Service league each year, the names of needy and deserving families were distributed among organizations or persons wishing to participate in charitable giving, Miss Wilson said.

"Gifts of all sorts were received here at the Social Service headquarters," Miss Wilson said. "Wearing apparel, toys, food, magazines and books made up the major portion of the gifts."

According to a report prepared for The Daily Iowan, churches participating in the Christmas giving, and providing gifts for a total of 120 families, included the Baptist, Presbyterian, St. Mary's St. Patrick's, Christian, Congregational, Unitarian, St. Wenceslaus, English Lutheran, Menonite, Zion Lutheran, Episcopal, Methodist, Nazarene and the Congregational young peoples group.

The Kiwanis club gave gifts of toys and candy to 150 children between the ages of 3 and 10. The Elks lodge and the Women of the Elks provided for 54 families. The Rotary club gave cash which was used to buy food, clothing and toys for 47 families. In addition to this donation, the Rotary club provided a special fund which aided 20 needy families in clothing and grocery purchases.

The Moose lodge, including the Women of the Moose, also provided for 20 needy families. The senior class and the 8th grade of University high school provided for two families.

Other groups providing for one family each were Eastern Star, Girl Scout troop No. 5, Junior farm bureau, Home Economics club, Chi Omega sorority, the Federated Business and Professional Women's club.

Service clubs and fraternal organizations contributing cash and grocery credit donations included the Rotary club, $50; Omega association, $10; Alpha Chi Omega sorority, $4.35; Sigma Delta Tau sorority, $3; Theta Rho club, $1.85, and the balance from the Iowa Union Thanksgiving offering, $33.48. Four and one-half dollars was donated by individuals, making the total cash donation $96.18.

Other organizations giving aid were the Needlework guild, which provided clothing for needy families, and the inter-fraternity council, which sponsored a free movie and gave candy treats for children.

Transportation for the distribution of gifts was handled largely through a central delivery system. Companies donating trucks and cars were the Lampert yards, Pack-

Snow Fun! Hillcrest Men Besieged With Problem

Cold weather, and especially snow, brings handicaps to everyone but the residents of Hillcrest are besieged with the greatest problem yet!

At least three times a day, the men have to come down the hill on which Hillcrest sits. It has become quite an art to come down without falling at least once. Of course, no injuries occur for the snow is soft.

At first, the resident starts out with full confidence for it is quite level. All of a sudden, there is a considerable drop. If it is slippery, he slides and is caught either in a snowdrift or stopped by a huge tree which is half way down the hill.

If the resident arrives safely at the bottom of the hill, he usually remarks, "Oh, boy, what fun," and waits for the next time when he will be coming down the hill!

Prof. Cowan Will Discuss Phonetics

Baconian Lecturer To Analyze Science Of Linguistics Friday

Prof. J. Milton Cowan of the German department will discuss recent research in the fields of phonetics and linguistics, when he speaks on the subject "Phonetics and Linguistic Science" at 7:30 p. m. Friday in the senate chamber of Old Capitol. Professor Cowan's lecture will be the seventh in the current Baconian series.

During the summer of 1937 and 1938, Professor Cowan has been lecturer at the University of Michigan linguistic institute. In addition to his lectures, he has written several articles, which appeared in the Archives of Speech and in the Journal of the Acoustical society in America.

Professor Cowan received his Ph. D. from the University of Iowa in 1935, after graduating from the University of Utah in 1931. He studied philosophy and psychology at the University of Leipzig in 1930 and later held the Willard Dawson Thompson fellowship at the University of California at Berkeley.

India's Madame Kamala Devi Speaks Today at Old Capitol

Interesting Political Leaders To Disclose Facts on 'New' India

Madame Kamala Devi, ambitious political leader of India, will speak from personal observation about "new" India at 4:10 this afternoon at a graduate college lecture in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Well acquainted with that land of 370 million persons, Madame Kamala Devi will present a picture of their interests, the struggle for voting privileges, India's position in this war, and other national problems.

At home and abroad, Madame Kamala Devi has distinguished herself in political leadership. She has been unanimously elected general secretary to the All-India woman's conference and twice re-elected to that office. Last July she represented India at the congress of women's international alliance at Copenhagen, Denmark, and is now a member of the All-India congress committee that is shaping the destinies of millions in India.

Spoke in England At the outbreak of the war, Madame Kamala Devi was in England, where she addressed numerous British audiences including a group composed of members of the House of Commons. Her visit there was interspersed with interviews with the Marquess of Zeland, secretary of state for India, Sir Stafford Cripps, and Sir Arthur Greenwood, at that time leader of the opposition in the House of Commons.

Madame Kamala Devi's outstanding political career in connection with the Indian socialist party is illustrative of the progress in government affairs made by women in India recently.

Comparing the status of men and women in India, Madame Kamala Devi recently told New York reporters that there is no sex antagonism in political and economic life in India. She admitted that men and women of India are cooperating today in sharing common national problems and holding official positions.

Throughout India, women have achieved first rank in provincial assemblies, similar to the position of speaker in state legislative bodies. One is a cabinet member, presiding over public health matters and still another holds the post of surgeon general. Over 50 women have gained places in provincial assemblies, according to Madame Kamala Devi.

In spite of her extensive lecture tours, Madame Kamala Devi has found time to appear on the stage, in the Indian cinema, and to write many articles for the press. Born in Mangalore, India, she received her first education there and completed it in London. Since that time she has travelled extensively in Europe, studying various labor movements.

Before many audiences, Madame Kamala Devi has spoken on "India and the War," "What is Gandhi's next move," "The Indian Women Awake," and "The Renaissance in India."

Law School's Practice Court Hears First Case February 1

Model Trials Last 2 Days Each Week

Students, Townspeople Eligible To Serve As Trial Case Jurors

The practice court of the college of law will consist of the trial of cases at which non-law students, townspeople and law majors may participate as jurors, Arthur Leff of the college of law faculty announced today. Beginning with the second semester, the first case will be held Feb. 1 and 2.

The first case is an automobile accident case involving claims for wrongful death and property damage. Pictures and plaques will be introduced as evidence. The second case will be a murder in which there is a plea for self-defense and the use of a confession.

Last year, for the first time, the jury was composed of students and townspeople who were not connected with the law school. A number of people served as jurors several different times.

Interesting Trials

Mr. Leff commented that "The trials proved very interesting and that all of the jurors enjoyed attending the trials and acting as jurors." He added that "it was of greater interest to the senior law students who were trying the cases to have the jury composed of students from outside the law school."

The cases are criminal trials such as murder and robbery and civil cases such as auto accidents and other damage actions. The cases are tried in the same manner as actual cases and are based upon them.

One case is tried each week on Thursday and Friday afternoons. In order to serve as a juror, it is necessary to be able to attend the trial from 3 to 5 p. m. on Thursday and 1:30 to 5 p. m. on Friday. Each case is completed during the two days so that it would not be necessary to come back another week, although jurors may serve on more than one case if they care to do so, and others are given opportunity to serve.

Mr. Leff said that pre-law students have been especially interested in the trial cases.

All Conveniences

All of the cases are tried in the court room on the second floor of the law building. It is modeled from an actual court room and all of the conveniences found in regular court rooms are found in the law school court. The jury has a jury box and there is a press table.

Those who care to serve as jurors should write to Arthur Leff, college of law, giving their telephone number and address. They will then be called several days prior to a case and arrangements will be made.
