Labor Unions: Vertical and Horizontal

(Second in a series) AMERICAN LABOR, divided by deep-seated changes in the industrial system into two opposing factions, is again stalemated in seeking to reconcile the vertical and horizontal theories of unionism.

The American Federation of Labor, the stronghold of the long dominant craft unions, is the champion of powerful organizations of workers with common interests engaged in the same craft.

There are, however, certain types of industries where it would not be practicable for workers to separate themselves into factions according to types of work. The industrial union is better suited to mines, mills, automobile plants and other large factories where the number of men performing one operation is so small that action by any one group would be useless without the cooperation of all of the workers.

When, in 1935, the proposal of the industrial unions to extend that type of organization to other mass production industries such as rubber, steel, automotive and aluminum was rejected by the A. F. of L., eight of the principle industrial groups formed the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The industrial union has in its favor the claim that mass production methods have displaced the need for highly skilled craftsmen, whose places have been taken by machines and easily trained unskilled workers.

On the other hand, the craft unionists are justified in their conviction that representatives of an entire body of workers would not be able to cope successfully with the more specialized problems of the craft union men.

Notwithstanding these divergent requirements, a solution satisfactory to both sides is not too remote a possibility. Peace, when it comes, and it must if labor is to continue to contribute to social progress, must be on the basis of cooperation for the common welfare.

Japan And America's Pacific Fleet

"WITH THE ENDING of the Treaty of Commerce between Japan and the United States only a matter of days, news of fresh attempts to fortify Guam, the third Vinson Bill, air base plans in the Aleutian Islands and other equally hostile news comes from across the Pacific to stimulate Japanese apprehensions."

The above paragraph is quoted from an article entitled "What is America Preparing For," appearing in the Jan. 18 issue of the Japan Times Weekly. The writer declares that in trying to maintain the 5-3 ratio in naval strength (the ratio established in the abrogated Washington naval pact), the United States "is evidently attempting to carry out its trans-oceanic operations against Japan."

Intimating that the present plans for naval expansion before Congress are a hypocritical contradiction of America's espoused peace policy, the article concludes, "Japan's naval policy, as has been more than sufficiently clarified, has been consistently one of non-aggression. Against such an attitude indicated by Japan, will the United States navy try now to push such a highly offensive and challenging plan? If the United States will not duly reconsider such a possible provocative plan, Japan will not hesitate to meet it with grim determination."

The most significant sentence in the article is that last one. Japanese authorities will not allow the United States navy to acquire what they consider a dangerous size in the Pacific, that much is clearly stated. If such is the case, just where will naval expansion get us? Of what use is a larger navy when other navies increase in the same proportion? No doubt some naval expert could give a beautiful rationalization.

Until such an event, skepticism holds the floor.

Who'll Wear The Pants?

IF THE fashion predictions of Ruth Hutton, expert on ladies' styles, comes true, hubby will be locking the door of his closet and hiding his trousers under the bed. For her prediction is that women will soon be sporting trousers for every occasion. And it is none other than the European war which is bringing about this drastic style change. It is a war on fashion as well as on the Finns.

Fashion will place its emphasis on utilitarianism or functionalism rather than chicness or femininity. Thus, eccentric hats, frills, sable jackets, jewelry and frivolity in dress, symbolizing periods of peace and gaiety are strangely out of place in the war-torn Europe of today.

Already it seems that America has caught this contagion for masculinity. One has but to look about him on the campus and he will see slacks, ski pants, and even riding breeches invading the sanctity of the classroom. Outside of the ready acceptance of trousers, however, American women will not follow in the steps of their sisters across the ocean. A gradual break with the old world fashion centers and couturiers will come and at longlast America will come into her own in the realm of fashion.

It Hitler, Mussolini, and the Russians but knew the fashion upheaval they are causing, hostilities would cease. Men, those brave creatures on the field of battle, will go through a lot for their country, but when it comes to the little woman wearing the trousers in the family, then war is going too far!

Sure, Polly Wants A Cracker!

NEWSPAPER columnists and platform speakers are always searching for quaint stories to show that the American people are unique; that democracy will exist because of the way the American people think and believe in certain ideals. Everything that American people do today that is not connected with war is hailed as a savior of democracy.

Only flaw in their research was that the proverbial "piece of cracker" that Polly always wants was not used. How would Polly react if crackers were used? Now here's the problem for Americans to concentrate on to keep their minds off war. Wouldn't Polly put the right foot forward for a cracker? ters Courageous."

The Unforeseen Rise of John L. Lewis' C. I. O. Has Caused The N. L. R. B.'s Current Headache

By CHARLES P. STEWART Central Press Columnist

Chat on Capitol Hill is to the effect that congress finally will so amend the labor relations law as to place upon labor itself the responsibility of deciding which union is which in reaching agreements between workers and employers.

When the law (sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York) was enacted, only one set of unions existed—the American Federation of Labor group, under William Green's presidency. Independently of it were a good many so-called "company unions," unaffiliated with one another.

The National Labor Relations Board's job was to see that bargains between employers and sure-enough organizations of employees were made fairly, involving the exclusion of phoney "company unions." The A. F. of L. was favorable to that idea, all right.

However, soon after the law became effective, there developed the split between the A. F. of L. and John L. Lewis' then Committee on Industrial Organization, since become the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Abbott and Costello, now on the road with "Streets of Paris," will return to New York for the broadcast which stars Kate Smith in a selection of old favorites and new songs.

rings haven't been unanimous. They've been on a majority-versus-a-minority basis. They not only have disagreed. They've been mutually abusive.

All this has been conspicuously brought out in testimony before Representative Howard W. Smith's congressional committee on investigation of the NLRB situation.

Did Not Foresee C. I. O. The whole nub of it is: Senator Wagner didn't foresee that two rival labor groups would spring into being. He recognized C. I. O. workers on the opposite hand. The employers have been identifiable. But as to labor? Which was which? Was the A. F. of L. the proper labor bargaining element? Or the C. I. O.?

A Hard Problem The NLRB never expected to have to solve this problem. The law didn't contemplate that it would have to do so. Nevertheless, it tackled the situation. Chaos followed.

Every time the board has decided for the A. F. of L., the C. I. O. has been outraged. Every time the decision has been on the C. I. O.'s side the A. F. of L. has torn its hair.

Apparently, the board's rulings have been C. I. O.-ish. Therefore, the A. F. of L. has done most of the yowling. The C. I. O. has been fairly contented. But it's a mean mix-up. Within themselves the board's members have fought also. Their

Abe's Ann Says 'No' Photographers Get No 'Leg Pictures' Of Mary Howard

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—There are some things at which even a modern young Ann Rutledge must demur, and to pretty Mary Howard such a moment came at 4:45 p. m. yesterday while her mother poured tea for reporters and photographers in their suite at the Sherry-Netherland.

All afternoon this wide-eyed Oklahoma girl who plays Ann Rutledge in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" had swapped tidbits with the inquiring reporters. Dutifully she posed in a dozen ways for the relentless cameramen—speaking into a telephone, unpacking her trunk, combing her chestnut hair at her mirror. She was a willing and a striking subject in her sky blue basket-weave wool housecoat which was high at the throat with gold beaded sprays at the shoulders and the waist. She had little quilted sky-blue slippers to match.

She was about to say "Haven't you run out of flashlight bulbs yet?" when he said: "Now sit in this chair and pull your skirts up above your knees."

Mary Howard is a dancer and an actress and she doesn't mind showing her knees when there is a reasonable excuse. But she was thinking fast. "This is a long, high-at-the-throat housecoat. It isn't the sort of thing that goes well with leg art. Unless a leg picture is made at just the right angle it is apt to look funny."

So she hesitated just a moment, looking at the photographer, and he, seeing this hesitation and misinterpreting it, was unaccountably confused for a moment. "Isn't it all right?" he asked.

"It isn't that," said Mary Howard. "I was just wondering what Abe Lincoln would think of Ann Rutledge if he knew she went in for leg art."

Well, that made everything pretty swell. She sat in the chair and he got his picture, and then Mary Howard, who is frequently mistaken for Will Rogers' daughter, was telling about the fun they had in Tennessee when the Lincoln picture had its premiere there, and about the fun they had in Washington where she met FDR and also a policeman named Robert E. Lee, and about coming to New York and just missing the fun at Pete's Monte Carlo where Elaine ("All I want is 24 hours of bliss, Honey") Barrie kidnapped John Barrymore who had just opened on Broadway in "My Dear Children."

She told about going to a dance at the Waldorf and seeing Hal LeRoy, the dancer, for the first time in years. She was so glad to see him that before she realized it was running toward him saying, "Hal, look, don't you remember me!" Then she was suddenly embarrassed, because everybody had stopped to look at her, and she wasn't sure Hal LeRoy would remember her. But that lasted only a second because Hal LeRoy grabbed her and said, "Why, honey, how could I forget you. You were my first girl!"

The world is a tasty, juicy pineapple when you are on the way up, and Mary Howard is learning this now. She was in the Follies at 15, and she danced a little, and she went to Hollywood where after a long time she was given a few parts in a few scattered pictures. But now, well, take a look at her dancing eyes. As you know, your eyes never dance unless your heart is dancing too.

The democrats have definitely picked Chicago for the scene of their national convention, and it looks as if the republicans may hold their shin-dig in the same metropolis. Now you know why they call it the "windy city."

Whitney Martin's SPORTS TRAIL

- It's Unjust
Better Team
No Difference

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (AP)—

The Ryder cup team, picked from the nation's best pro golfers, defeats a team picked from one state's best amateurs, and the pros immediately come to the conclusion that the amateur golfers of today are a bunch of hero-worshipping autograph seekers with putty backbones.

In other words the amateurs, although having the shots, find their self-confidence draining out of them like sawdust out of a punctured doll when in the presence of big names. They need, the pros say, a bell-cow on the order of Bobby Jones or Chick Evans or Jesse Guilford or Lawson Little to lead them out of the wilderness.

It's Unjust
Although nobody would have the temerity to suggest that a team of the best amateurs could defeat a Ryder cup team under any circumstances, the criticism seems a trifle unjust for several reasons, including the fact it is based on one match against a good, but not the best, amateur team.

Texas in recent years probably has produced more high-class golfers, both pro and amateur, than any other state, and you couldn't pick a better state from which to name a one-state amateur team. But even Texans would admit a better team could be selected from the country as a whole.

Better Team
Bud Ward of Spokane, the best of the amateurs right now, some time ago selected a team which he believed would give the pros a good run for their money. It included only one man—Don Schumacher—of the team of Texans. He named 11 men, and in addition to himself and Schumacher the list included Art Doering, Wilfred Wehrle, Ray Billows, Johnny Goodman, Willie Turnesa, Harry Givan, Melvin Harbert, Charley Yates and Ed Kingsley.

The records of National Open tournaments, the only yard stick, do not bear out the pro criticism that amateur golf is slipping. Naturally it has slipped from the Bobby Jones peak, but Jones was Jones, not amateur golf as a whole, and his excellence did not seem to improve the game of the other amateurs.

If memory serves, Bud Ward came within a stroke of tying for the National Open title last summer, and if the pros don't consider that a threat they just don't scare easy. In 1937 amateurs finished eighth, ninth and 10th. Goodman won the Open in 1933, with Gus Moreland eighth.

No Difference
On the other hand, while Jones was either winning or scaring the field without during the '20's and in 1930, the rest of the amateurs as a whole were making no better showing in the Open than they are making today.

In 1930 Jones won, Goodman finished 12th, and the other amateurs out of sight. Jones won in 1929, with George Von Elm tied for fifth, and the others just among those present. Jones lost in a title playoff in 1928. Von Elm was fifth, and again the other amateurs were among the stragglers.

Those are just samples to show that as Jones went, the amateurs as a whole did not go, and that their performance today is no worse than it was away back when.

That the amateurs might be a little nervous when playing against the men who live golf is to be expected, and if they glance up hopefully looking for a little free instruction after each shot, that also is only human. The pros can take that as a compliment.

But so far as the deterioration of the amateur golf game is concerned, there doesn't seem to be much basis for the statement. It's too much like saying baseball has deteriorated because there is no Babe Ruth.

Jim Walker In Hospital For Operation

Jim Walker, powerful colored tackle on last fall's Hawkeye football team, will undergo a minor operation in university hospital today, it was reported last night. He entered the hospital yesterday.

The operation, to remove an excess growth of bone on a toe, will keep Walker in the hospital for several days, but is not considered serious. Walker, a sophomore, was one of the standouts in the Iowa line last fall before injuring a knee in the Michigan game. After that he did not play until the season's final contest, against Northwestern.

Hawklets Face Bears In Home Final Tonight

Have Fourth Place Chance

Seven Little Hawks Will Play Last Tilt Before Local Crowd

City high's basketballers climb into their home game togs for the last time tonight before going out to meet McKinley high of Cedar Rapids in a Mississippi Valley conference game at the new gym.

For Dick Culberson, Mark Lillick, Bob King, Dave Cannon, Tom Johnson, Dan Devine, and Johnny Gutierrez, tonight's tilt means a last appearance on the City high court. The opposition will be a small, but tough bunch of Golden Bears, set to slip into the first division of the league in place of Iowa City.

McKinley is paced by two scorers listed in the first ten of the conference scoring race. Gregor and Plotz, both forwards, have led the Cedar Rapids team to a bunch of victories in late games. Franklin, Iowa City's jinx team, fell before the accurate shooting of McKinley two weeks ago.

Coach Francis Merten intends to start Dick Culberson and Ray Sullivan at the forwards, Mark Lillick at center, and Norm Paukert and Jack Fetig at guards. Tomorrow night, the Hawklets will travel to Williamsburg to try to keep their state clean against Red Raider competition. Iowa City beat Williamsburg in the first game of the season, 23 to 21, for its ninth straight decision from the Raiders.

Coach Herb Cormack's sophomores will open the doubleheader tonight against the McKinley yearlings in an attempt to take over an undisputed third place in their conference. Both Roth and Dave Danner, the team's leading scorers, are ill and will not play in the game.

Ott Expects To Make Terms With Giants

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 15 (AP)—Melvin Ott, the New York Giants' model ballplayer, who is holding out in a kind of unobtrusive way, expressed belief today he would be at Winter Haven, Fla., March 1 for the start of practice, all signed up and ready to go.

This was no indication that the unassuming Ott would accede to a Giant attempt to cut his reputed $20,000 salary, nor was it a boast that the management would see the light.

"We've had differences before, and never had any trouble getting them straightened out," he explained. "I've never been late for opening of practice, either. So judging by past performances I think I'll be there again on time, with a contract signed."

Mel considers this salary business a routine matter between himself and his bosses, and not something to stop the presses about.

He talks about it only when asked, and then reluctantly, although pleasantly enough.

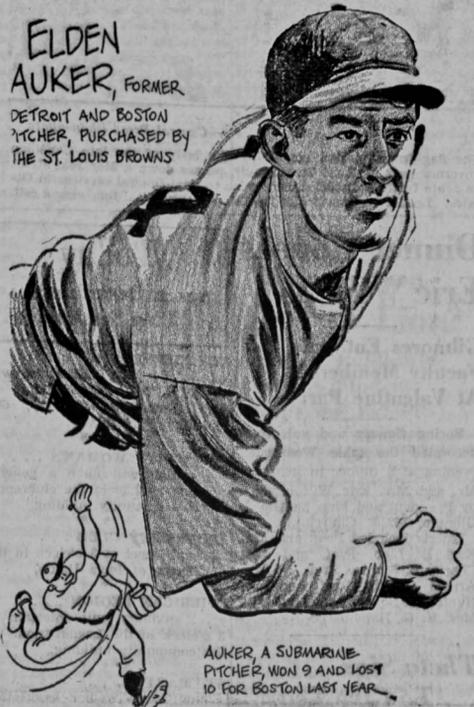

He did specify, however, that the next move was up to the club. "I sent back the contract, and heard from them once more, I told them I wasn't satisfied. I expect to hear again any day now."

Baseball Freshmen To Report This Evening

Freshman baseball candidates will report to Coach Otto Vogel at the field house at 7 o'clock tonight for their first meeting of the year, it was announced yesterday.

Requesting all first year baseball players to be at the meeting, Vogel stated that a schedule of workouts would be arranged and announced at the meeting.

Wesleyan Wins MT. PLEASANT, (AP)—After trailing most of the way, Iowa Wesleyan came from behind in the closing minutes to defeat Penn 43 to 37 in an Iowa conference basketball game last night.

Back in 1914 the members of the journalistic clan began to record the state high school basketball meets. The first state meet to attract the attention of sports scribes of the pre-war era was held at Iowa City. The score of the championship game was 23-23 with Cedar Rapids getting the nod over Clinton. For the next two years Iowa City again was host to the prep cagers. In 1915 Ottumwa beat Clinton 46-23 for the title and in 1916 C. Rapids downed Ft. Dodge 24-14. These contests were preceded by district meets which sent the sectional winners to the state tournament.

Hawklets Beaten In 1917 the tournament was held at Ames with Mt. Pleasant beating Iowa City, 28-22. The next year Iowa City was again beaten by Mt. Pleasant at Iowa City in a close game, 17-16. The following year an invitational meet was held at Ames. This time Ft. Dodge won the championship from Council Bluffs, 16-11.

First Division Berth Is Goal Of Basketeers

Iowans' Chances For Revenge of Early Defeat Is Good

Probable Starting Lineups IOWA MINNESOTA Siegel F. Carlson Lind F. Pearson Evans C. Warhol Prasse G. Anderson Harsha G. Dick Time and Place: Saturday night; 8:00 p.m. Minneapolis. Broadcast: Station WSUI. Officials: Referee, Clarno; umpire, Schommer.

Revenge and the Big Ten's first division beckon as 12 Hawkeyes leave today for Minneapolis and a conference basketball game with Minnesota tomorrow night. Victory would leave the Hawks in possession of a Big Ten record of four won and three lost while defeat would put them back in the second division, from which their three straight wins have lifted them.

In the Gophers, who have dropped their last three conference tilts, Iowa faces an outfit that is trying to get back into the victory habit. Nosed out by a bare two points by Wisconsin, the Gophers are apt to be caught on the rebound by the upcoming Hawkeyes.

As for the revenge angle, Iowa dropped its Big Ten opener back in January to the Gophers, by a goody margin of eight points, 42-34. At that time, the Hawks were struggling through their deepest depression of the year—a losing streak of seven games in all, while the Gophers had been winning regularly.

With the reversal of form by both teams taken into consideration, chances are good for the Hawkeyes to return for Monday's engagement with Indiana's high scoring Hoosiers holding a place in the upper part of the standings. Squad which will make the Minnesota trip: Forwards: Vic Siegel, Tom Lind, Bill Wheeler, Wendell Hill and Fred Hornerhorst. Centers: Dick Evans, Ken Bastian and Milt Kuhl. Senator Rookies Start Training

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 15 (AP)—Stanley "Bucky" Harris, manager of the Washington Nationals, arrived here today with a squad of rookies and a few regulars to set up the first spring training camp of the 1940 baseball season. Players arriving with Harris ranged from Joe Krakauskas, Washington starting pitcher, to Billy Kennedy, southpaw chucker with the Orlando class D club last season.

The squad will work out tomorrow morning for the first time. The regulars will not report until around March 1. Besides Krakauskas and Kennedy, the squad included pitchers Louis Thuman, Fred Byram, Sid Hudson, Walter Masterson; catchers Jake Early and Al Evans; infielder Jimmy Waddell, and outfielder Jack Geddon.

Successor to Cunningham Wisconsin Coach Thinks Chuck Fenske May Keep Track Leadership

MADISON, Feb. 15 (AP)—Now that Charles (Chuck) Fenske has won four outstanding indoor mile races on eastern tracks this season his chances of dominating the field for several years, as Glenn Cunningham has done, appear very good to Tom Jones, veteran University of Wisconsin track coach.

"If Chuck doesn't lose interest, he can develop more speed in the next few years and go on with the best of the mile runners until he approaches his late thirties," Jones said. Jones added he believed Cunningham was dropping from his pinnacle only because he had "lost interest."

Fenske, now 24, could remain among top-flight runners of the country for at least 10 years if he continued his methodical training schedule, the Wisconsin coach declared. "Chuck proved his dependability here in the last six years," Jones continued. "He is just about the perfect physical and mental type for running. He never trets away his energy, and an occasional setback has always made him work harder."

Chuck began planning seriously for the 1940 Olympic games back in 1936-37, Jones said "now that he has hit a dead-end street on that program, the effort he put into it hasn't been wasted because he has a full schedule on tracks of this country. He planned well, for he is rounding into better form than he ever had."

His best performance recently was winning the Wanamaker mile in New York in 4 minutes, 7.4 seconds, the second fastest pace on record for an indoor track.

St. Patrick's Will Try To Even Series With Ramblers Tonight

Bresnahan Plans Time Trials For Iowa Thinclads

Coach George Bresnahan plans to coach two Iowa City parochial schools will take to the basketball court tonight to play the major roles in a contest featuring this city's oldest rivals.

This battle is to be staged at St. Patrick's gym with the spotlight on the Shamrocks of the same school and the St. Mary's basketeers from across town. The Shamrocks are primed to even the count after an earlier 43-20 defeat and have worked hard to this end. The Irish have been idle since a 22-16 loss at Cedar Rapids by St. Wenceslaus on Feb. 6.

With seven consecutive victories to date the Marians plan to take this one in stride. The fact that the game will be played on the southside court, however, along with the impressive showing that the Fighting Irish have made on different occasions, has given Coach Suplee a chance to worry. Both teams should be at full strength. Coach Father Harry Ryan will probably start Black and Grady at forwards on the Shamrock team with Holland, who was high man for the Irish in the first game, at his center post, and Miller and Fitzpatrick will cover the back court. Miller was held to three points in the first game but has piled up a season total of 161 points for 14 games.

Back at his forward post on the St. Mary's team will be "Flicker" Chadek, the boy who stole the show with 17 points in the first encounter. Braek will be in the front court with Chadek. Cole is slated to start at center and Bock and Eakes at the guards.

Coach Blames Love Bird For Poor Record

GUNNISON, Colo., Feb. 15 (AP)—Love, says Paul Wright, gray-thatched coach, is the reason his Western State college basketball team is in last place in the Rocky Mountain conference—hasn't won a game. "Eight of the players are in love," Wright wailed. "They eat breakfast with their girls, also lunch and dinner, then go to the library and study together."

"If I painted a heart in the center circle, also a heart on the backboards, then my team would go to town."

DES MOINES, (AP)—The Drake university basketball squad left today for Oklahoma where it will play Tulsa at Tulsa tonight and the Oklahoma Aggies at Stillwater Saturday night.

Marians, With Seven Straight Wins, Hope To Take Tilt Easily

The cagers of two Iowa City parochial schools will take to the basketball court tonight to play the major roles in a contest featuring this city's oldest rivals.

This battle is to be staged at St. Patrick's gym with the spotlight on the Shamrocks of the same school and the St. Mary's basketeers from across town. The Shamrocks are primed to even the count after an earlier 43-20 defeat and have worked hard to this end. The Irish have been idle since a 22-16 loss at Cedar Rapids by St. Wenceslaus on Feb. 6.

With seven consecutive victories to date the Marians plan to take this one in stride. The fact that the game will be played on the southside court, however, along with the impressive showing that the Fighting Irish have made on different occasions, has given Coach Suplee a chance to worry. Both teams should be at full strength. Coach Father Harry Ryan will probably start Black and Grady at forwards on the Shamrock team with Holland, who was high man for the Irish in the first game, at his center post, and Miller and Fitzpatrick will cover the back court. Miller was held to three points in the first game but has piled up a season total of 161 points for 14 games.

Back at his forward post on the St. Mary's team will be "Flicker" Chadek, the boy who stole the show with 17 points in the first encounter. Braek will be in the front court with Chadek. Cole is slated to start at center and Bock and Eakes at the guards.

U-High Meets Mt. Vernon Here Tonight

Bluehawks Enter Home Stretch Of Rugged Schedule

The U-high Bluehawks will enter the home stretch of their basketball schedule tonight in a game against Mt. Vernon at the U-high gym. The game, as usual, will start at 8.

With three home games in front of them the Bluehawks have no hope and not even a mathematical chance of finishing on top in the Eastern Iowa conference race. Theirs has been the fate of losing twice to the leading West Liberty team. Their wins have been over West Branch, Monticello and Anamosa.

Tonight's encounter will feature U-high's Dawson, Beye and Lehman against Mt. Vernon's five which has lost both of its previous conference encounters. Little Cy Beye was a defensive standout in last Friday's losing battle with West Liberty.

Coach Brechler may give freshman Ed Smith the opportunity to show what he can do, although the starting post may be given to Jack Evans. Bob Bender, as usual, will team with Beye at the guards and Bus Smith is held in reserve for the forwards.

Delta Upsilon Nips Sig Eps In 17-14 Tilt

Delta Upsilon continued its winning ways by downing Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 17-14, last night in the fraternity intramural cage tournament. It was a close game all the way with the lead changing hands many times, but D.U. finally emerged the winner by a three point margin.

Sanford and Cox shared scoring honors for Delta Upsilon with four points apiece. Whalen led the scoring parade for Sigma Alpha Epsilon with seven points. Phi Epsilon Pi outscored Phi Chi, 21-15, in a class B league game. Bill Rivkin and Abe Rosenberg were instrumental in the Phi Ep victory by caging six points apiece. Amick and Smith also notched six points apiece for Phi Chi.

The Phi Kappa Psi team defeated Delta Sigma Delta 20-15 in another class B league game. Beal topped the Phi Psi scorers with seven points. Humphrey was second with five and Stephan caged eight points for Delta Sigma Delta.

Just Enough Two Points Give Game To Aggies

STILLWATER, Okla., Feb. 15 (AP)—Jess "Cab" Renick, big Indian guard, made only two points tonight, but that was all that was needed to break a 22-22 tie in the last three minutes and give the Oklahoma Aggies a hard-earned 24 to 22 victory over Kansas and stretch their winning streak to 20 games.

A crowd of 6,500 fans saw the Cowboys choke the Jayhawk offense down to four points in the second half and come from behind to win one of the most hectic games of the season. With only three minutes to go, Renick dropped the ball in from under the backboards to break the tie and the Aggies froze the ball.

The victory was the 44th straight on the home floor for the Cowboys. Kansas holds the only victory of the season over the Aggies, a 34 to 30 decision in the Oklahoma's first game of the year.

Overlooked in favor of Des Moines for four years. In 1934 Sioux City won the state meet at Cedar Falls and the next year Mason City won the title at the same place. For the last three years Des Moines has used the facilities of the Drake fieldhouse for the state tournament finals. This year the meet has been scheduled to return to the fieldhouse of the University of Iowa for the 1940 championships.

It is a well known fact that the Iowa State High School association disliked the idea of turning away customers at the Drake fieldhouse because they couldn't get seats. With the tremendous seating possibilities at Iowa's fieldhouse there is a chance the Iowa State High School Athletic association may make this the permanent site. Any way you look at it the state tournament has finally come back to the place of its origin.

Oh-What A Wicked Man!

Friend John Brown Gets Sued Again—This Time Divorce

John Brown, the man around the law school, is back again after being tried last week on a charge of murder!

Luckily for Mr. Brown, he escaped last week and the jury was unable to come to a decision as to his innocence or guilt. This week in the college of law's mock courtroom, John Brown is being sued for divorce by his wife, Alice Brown.

As is generally the case in most men-women affairs, Mrs. Brown's attorneys will be heard first. They are petitioning on charges of cruel and inhuman treatment. They also ask for the custody of the child of the pair.

Don Beving, L3 of Spencer, and Tom Birch, L3 of Marcus, are attorneys for the plaintiff, Mrs. Brown. Robert Petersen, L3 of Muscatine, and Don Pfaltzgraf, L2 of Iowa City, are attorneys for the defendant.

John Brown has entered a counter-petition in the divorce asking for the custody of the child.

Attorney Arthur O. Leff, who is in charge of all the mock trials, will again act as judge in the proceedings. There will be no jury in connection with this trial.

Problems such as temporary support and alimony will be taken up in the decision. The trial began yesterday at 3 p.m. and will last until 5 o'clock this afternoon. There are two sessions in every case, one Thursday and one Friday.

Museum Publication Pictures Students Preparing Exhibits

"Training Museum Workers" is the title of the new summer bulletin, released recently on the courses and opportunities the museum of natural history will offer summer school students this year.

The eight-page booklet is illustrated with 12 pictures of university students at work in the museum laboratory. The mounting of the lioness which died in City park last year and was prepared for the museum in the local laboratory, is shown by illustrations in the booklet, from the construction of the lioness' modeling form to the completed specimen.

The local museum contains exhibits, prepared for exhibition by student workers, which are used by classes in geography, geology, botany and zoology. Art classes draw and design from the mounted specimens there. In addition to the direct service to the university, the exhibition halls are the site for field trips of hundreds of school children every year.

Offering a reproduction of the specimen and its habitat, the museum exhibits "give a new conception to the visitors of the manifold works of nature."

Once Frowned on Fiction

80 Years Ago Newspapers Lashed at Novel Reading But Upheld Periodicals

Reading of fiction was condemned in Iowa 80 years ago and the pioneer bookstores could not prosper unless they handled "drugs, pictures, stationery, periodicals, and paper-hangings."

And, according to research of Dr. Thomas Tweito at the University of Iowa, the Council Bluffs Frontier Guardian lived up to its name by lashing at novels with such phrases as "destroying the power of concentration," and "subjecting the purity of the mind to a fearful trial with their hellish seduction."

If fiction made the mind "dwarfish and unfit for the actual duties of life," the reading of magazines and eastern newspapers evidently was regarded as perfectly suitable, Dr. Tweito's studies showed.

The New York Tribune was one of the favorites and the pioneers were in favor of its fight against ignorance, intemperance, and immorality and its advocacy of emancipation, free homesteads, and construction of western railroads.

Among the popular periodicals of the time were Harper's Monthly, The Atlantic, Godey's Ladies Book, and Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. Even the National Police Gazette was a family favorite.

Dr. Tweito found that agricultural journals, German and Irish newspapers, and religious publications also had many readers. And according to a visiting correspondent of the New York Tribune, Iowans were "great readers."

Students Interested in International Relations Can Serve as Fair Guides

Students interested in international relations are in demand to serve as guides this summer at the League of Nations pavilion in the 1940 New York World's fair.

As guides, the students would be expected to welcome all visitors and conduct them through the pavilion, explaining the work illustrated in the various rooms. This guide system proved successful last summer and the students found the experience most worthwhile.

Presenting an evaluation of the work of the League of Nations, the pavilion is comprised of six rooms. The first treats with the development of the concept of international cooperation; the three rooms which follow are devoted respectively to the health, social and economic work of the League; the fifth room deals with disarmament and the political and legal work of the council of the League and the sixth room, the Rotunda, symbolizes the aims and purposes of the League.

Students interested in the possibility of doing this work can apply to the League of Nations association, 8 West 40th street, New York City.

Iowa State College Professor Urges Congress To End Absentee Farm Ownership

Asks Federal Credit Groups To Cooperate

William G. Murray Lays Plan Before Monopoly Committee

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15 (AP)—An Iowa state college economist proposed before the monopoly committee today that the farm security administration and the farm credit administration "get together" to help end "absentee ownership" of farm lands by financial institutions.

William G. Murray, professor of agricultural economics at the Iowa school, suggested that cooperation of the two agencies in an expansion of the government's tenant purchase program, coupled with possible reevaluation by insurance companies of their holdings in "twilight zones," would meet one of the corn belt's knottiest problems.

He suggested also that more insurance companies permit tenants to purchase farms on an installment basis at rates they could afford to pay. Some companies, he testified, have successfully disposed of lower-value lands by this method.

Recommends Cooperation

In recommending cooperation between the farm security and farm credit administration, Murray said that "at the present time, it seems to me, there is no cooperation between them except that both are in the department of agriculture."

He suggested that the farm credit administration, using its borrowing power to obtain funds, might put up perhaps half of the amounts needed to finance individual farm purchases by tenants, while the farm security administration could lend an additional sum.

The witness declined to express an opinion as to whether the insurance companies were carrying their foreclosed land holdings in lower value areas of Iowa at too high a price, but he suggested that they take stock to determine whether that was not one deterrent to sale of such property.

Murray testified that on Jan. 1, 1939, insurance companies owned 2,752,000 acres of Iowa farm land, or 8 per cent of the total in the state. The area owned by the companies, he told the committee, was equal to eight counties out of Iowa's 99.

Largest proportion of this land, he said, was not in the best farming territory, where the companies had met little difficulty in disposing of their foreclosed holdings, but in "the twilight zone between the best and the poorest," where loans of the '20's were highest in relation to values.

Much of the land in the lower value areas, Murray told the committee, was being depreciated through the effects of drought and erosion. For that reason, he said, insurance companies might find it profitable to sell them on contract at reduced prices rather than hold them in the slender hope of a rise in values.

Blame Lending Policies

The witness attributed partly to the lending policies of the insurance companies the large amount of foreclosures which followed their mortgage acquisitions of 1921 and 1928, although he said there had been a "healthy change of attitude since." During that period, he testified, the companies built up their mortgages on Iowa land to $500,000,000 or 40 per cent of the total mortgage debt.

During the acquisition period, Murray said, most of the mortgages were purchased by the eastern companies through correspondents who were paid on a commission basis. He contended this was "unsound" because it led to pressure from the agents for higher loans and appraisals.

Competition, he added, frequently led to placing too high a value on the land for mortgage purposes, and many lenders did not take account of differences of land value within the state, regarding nearly all farms as of approximately equal worth.

Murray testified that insurance companies were responsible for 27 per cent of Iowa's foreclosures in 1930, 38 per cent in 1931, 46 per cent in 1932, 51 per cent in 1933 and 67 per cent in 1934. Companies which had their home offices in the farm belt were "quicker to realize the situation" than those with offices in the east, he said, and were at first relatively more willing to extend time for payment and make adjustments.

"Do you mean," asked Gerhard A. Gesell, committee counsel, "that you wouldn't have needed a moratorium if all the companies had been located in the farm belt?"

"That's a pretty broad statement, and I wouldn't agree with all of it," Murray replied, "but the circumstances would lead to a conclusion approximating that."

Senator Herring (D-Ia.), who attended the committee session, remarked that only three life insurance companies failed to beseech a mortgage moratorium which he issued as governor.

An Indictment of Japan's Aggression By Iowa's Chinese Students

The 13 Chinese students on the Iowa campus, members of the Chinese Students' association of the university, representatives of a distressed country, have prepared the following statement of three points for publication.

"Under the present critical international situation, the Chinese Students' association of the State University of Iowa has the following announcement to make to the faithful friends of China in all parts of the world and the American public.

"(1) We declare Wang Ching-Wei a traitor, and protest against his alleged attempt to establish a puppet government. This is intended to serve the 'Continental Policy' or the so-called 'New Order' which has long been planned by the Japanese Empire to cloak her ambition of a systematic world conquest.

"At present the plot of his betrayal of China has already been discovered and proved, and this traitor is bitterly condemned by all the people of China except those who serve as puppets at the point of the bayonet or under the lure of the Japanese military and political machine.

"We like to point out the fact that the past history of Wang Ching-Wei proves that he is a constant hypocritical agitator and corrupt politician. When the World's Student Christian federation held its conference at Peiping, China, Wang Ching-Wei initiated a nationwide anti-Christian campaign to attack Christianity and other religions. Such agitation and dangerous effects lasted for more than a decade.

"Under the strong leadership of Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, Wang Ching-Wei participated in the revolutionary causes. But after Dr. Sun's death he has been always found rebellious and hypocritical, constantly seeking to seize power and leadership and to satisfy his selfish interests.

Recently he has been found to attempt illegally to sell out to Japan the rights of China, under the name of the puppet government. The pact contracted with Japan includes the following points: it recognizes 'Manchukuo,' which is really the northeastern province of China.

"It betrays North China, Mongolia, Yang-Tze-Kiang regions, Shanghai, Hainan, Amoy, designated islands in South China and other strategic points, to the complete control of Japan. It allows the Japanese military occupations and political domination in practically all the vital points of interest in China.

It delivers up treacherously to the enemy the national rights of exploiting mines and all natural resources, of controlling railways, communications, air transportation, navigation, customs, taxation, national revenue, currency, banking, commerce, industry and agriculture, foreign relations, water - passages, seas, ports, police, army, munitions, national defense, education, and appointment of government officials.

"It traitorously agrees to compensate the Japanese for the losses in China after the war. Since Wang Ching-Wei has given in to the Japanese, he is placed under the protection and complete control of the Japanese.

"This traitor's pact was signed under the name of an organized puppet government Dec. 31, 1939; it betrays the sovereignty and territory of China to satisfy the Japanese aspirations in Asia and in the world.

"The full contents of the pact were recently exposed by two members of the committee for organizing the puppet government, who vainly hoped that the Japanese would come to a reasonable conclusion of a peace treaty.

"(2) We warn the people of the world against the danger of permitting the existence of the puppet regimes in the areas invaded by Japan and in the so-called 'Manchukuo' in violation of the Nine Power treaty which the United States as well as Japan has signed.

"As indicated above, Wang Ching-Wei's rebel organization is entirely under the control of the Japanese imperial jingoists. Any unlawful bloc formed between the puppet regimes and the Japanese empire will facilitate the Japanese to invade China and subsequently to exploit resources, collect taxes, use the national revenue, control and conscript the enormous man-power of China to fight other peoples and nations.

"It has now become an open secret that the former Japanese Emperor Meiji had left a will that Japan should conquer step by step Formosa, Korea, Manchuria, China, America, Asia, Europe and the whole world.

"The first three steps have been accomplished, while the rest will be successively taken if other countries continue to be indifferent to the development of the critical situation.

"Since July 25, 1927, Japan has adopted the policies outlined by Premier Tanaka in carrying out his detailed plans of invading the northeastern provinces of China and in preparing to crush the United States for 'giving warning to China and the rest of the world' before subjugating China.

and remove the persistent growing threats of the Japanese empire.

"(3) We cordially appeal to the chief signatories of the Nine Power treaty and the Kellogg Anti-War pact to be continually responsible to exercise an intelligent international control of the Japanese, and to withhold from Japan supplies necessary to the continuance of war, including war supplies and raw materials, until Japan abandons her aggression upon China, withdraws all her forces from the entire China, and shall have agreed to abide by the treaties she has signed and respect the sanctity of lawful procedure and international morality.

"In spite of official figures published, reliable investigations have proved that Japan has actually received without interruption a great majority of munitions and necessities for war from this country to kill the innocent people of China and make her invasion of China a growing menace to world peace.

"Therefore, for the sake of moral and legal obligations to withhold help from the Japanese aggression and for maintaining good faith, world peace and justice, the United States and other countries are urged to place embargo on war supplies, raw materials, and the necessities for the continuance of war, as these supplies enable the people and government of Japan to support and carry on their barbarous assaults on China.

"Hence we prayerfully hope that the democratic countries will not stand by but will take effective action to uphold justice and establish a lasting peace.

"Besides the Japanese ambition for world-wide conquest, atrocious deeds and designs indicate that the Japanese domination will undermine the best in human civilization and make human life miserable. Armed with modern implements, Japanese imperialists and militarists have re-enacted the horrors of the Dark Ages powerfully multiplied by the latest methods of warfare.

"In the areas that the Japanese soldiers have invaded, they have murdered, pillaged and destroyed on a scale comparable only to the barbarous outrages of European marauders of distant centuries.

"In her mad desire to subjugate China to her long planned world conquest, Japan has discarded rules of international law and flouted all principles of humanity and decency. A few instances of Japanese outrages committed before our very eyes may be mentioned as follows:

"(a) Deliberate bombing of civilian non-combatants in densely populated areas such as residential districts and refugee camps in which a large proportion of the victims are women and children.

"(b) Shooting and deliberate killing of Red Cross doctors, nurses, and workers, in spite of the fact that emblems are prominently displayed.

"(c) Deliberate shooting and wounding of neutral persons and destruction of neutral possessions, such as the shooting by machine-gun of the British Ambassador to China and the raid on the United States war vessel, Panay, property belonging to nationals of neutral countries have been deliberately destroyed by Japanese aerial bombs and artillery.

"(d) Sinking of helpless fishing boats along the south China coast, where congested thousands of people have for centuries been dependent solely on this means of support. Without warning, Japanese destroyers deliberately opened fire on these boats, cruelly killing a great number of non-combatants. Such outrages against humanity are expressly forbidden by international law.

"(e) Use of dum-dum bullets and poisonous gas, both of which have been outlawed by international conventions.

"In face of these and thousands of other repeated outrages against law and humanity, civilized people should no longer remain aloof but should organize to curb, by concerted action, any further lawless violations.

"The present issue does not concern merely the Chinese. It is an issue which concerns not only today, but many tomorrows. It is an issue for modern civilization and affects every part of the modern world which cherishes the priceless privilege of freedom, democratic government and those guarantees of home, personality and other human rights for which through many centuries the peoples of the west have paid a great price.

"So civilization is in peril at the hands of Japanese militarism. Today it strikes at China, Japan's neighboring country. Tomorrow who can tell where it will strike, if it continues to have striking power and remains a persistent threat.

"What is then the true significance of the Chinese resistance to the Japanese aggression and our present declaration? We sincerely believe that, aside from defending our own soil, national independence, and a great number of helpless, innocent people from the permanent slavery of invading barbarism, we are also undertaking the defense of certain basic principles indispensable to the maintenance of international peace and good order.

"These principles are, firstly, the sanctity of treaties, without which there would be utter anarchy in this world and normal international intercourse would be impossible; secondly, the outlawry of war as an instrument of national policy and of aggression as the root of all wars, and, thirdly, the principle, long established in international law, of non-interference in the internal affairs of other nations.

RESCUED FROM JAIL MOB

State police restored calm to Snow Hill, Md., following a wild night in which a quartet of state troopers rescued two Negro women, pictured above, from the hands of a threatening mob of 1,000 men. The mob seized the women, Martha Blake, 31, and her daughter, Lillian, 14, from the county jail and questioned them in connection with the slaying of a farmer, for whose death the women were being held for "investigation." The troopers finally rescued the women.

Government Labor Official Will Assist in Negotiations Here

Bus Drivers Ask Increase In Salaries

Reject $10-A-Month Raise Offer; State Officials Also Here

Sam B. Berrong of Detroit, Mich., representing the A. F. of L. international on behalf of 14 local bus drivers in their demand for an increase in wages, said last night he received a phone call from the department of labor in Washington advising him that Commissioner William Houston would be in town today or tomorrow to participate in negotiations.

Berrong had called on the department of labor early yesterday for a representative to assist in the newly-formed local's demands for an increase of wages, "improved working conditions" and employment under union contract.

The arrival of Commissioner Charles Harness and Deputy Commissioner Frank Flaherty of the Iowa state bureau of labor late yesterday afternoon gave rise to possible settlement before Houston's arrival.

The state labor men are scheduled to meet with company officials today to attempt to affect a raise in wages from $72.50 a month, the amount Berrong said the drivers earn.

He said the local drivers make on an average of 30 cents an hour, and that a $10-a-month raise offer made by company officials would be rejected.

Union officials, he said, would demand about 50 cents an hour for the drivers to compare more closely with the following rates in other cities:

Cedar Rapids, 62 cents an hour; Waterloo, 58 cents; Ottumwa and Burlington, each 54 cents; Ames, 50 cents; Des Moines, 70 cents, and Marshalltown, $115 a month.

Berrong said the men would continue to work unless conditions reached a stalemate.

The company's offer of a $10 raise came after a meeting Wednesday night.

The local drivers joined the A. F. of L. Jan. 23. Ralph A. Hess is the local president. Charles Briggs is here representing the Cedar Rapids union.

Release Foley Pending Trial

Vestermark Files Informations Against Tomlin, Royster Jr.

Virgil Foley, charged in a grand jury indictment with grand larceny, was released yesterday on $1,500 bond pending trial.

Foley allegedly stole machinery and road construction equipment last October which belonged to the Ryan Construction company.

In addition to the filing of the indictment, two informations were filed yesterday by Johnson county attorney Harold Vestermark.

Lloyd Tomlin was charged in one information with child abandonment. The information stated that Tomlin left three minor children without means of support on Feb. 3.

A second information charged George M. Royster Jr., with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. The defendant was released after posting a $500 bond.

performed "Khovantschina." In retrospect one calls to mind the beautifully played oboe solo in the first part of the number and certain unmistakable echoes of the Coronation scene from Mousorgsky's "Boris Godanov." Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser," the filled lounge for two hours of splendid music.

One approaches an unknown reading of the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6, in B minor, subtitled, by Tchaikovsky's brother Modest, "Pathétique," with fear and trepidation. The Pathétique is, for many conductors, a field day of emotionalism. But not so for Vladimir Goldschmann.

Never did Mr. Goldschmann allow his orchestra to wallow in the depths of psychopathic despair. Always he kept a firm hand upon his orchestra, and the result was as excellent a reading as your reviewer has ever heard. Even the last movement, usually unrestrained pathos, seemed to be imbued with a deep, though infinitely pathetic dignity. Interesting were the moments of quiet seriousness in the middle of the graceful 5/4 waltz, and the third movement March was quite stirring.

The excerpts from the once-modernistic "Firebird" ballet seemed mild and acceptable so clean and crisp was last night's performance. Memorable was the haunting Berceuse with its beautifully played bassoon solo. Weinberger demonstrated that even the old-fashioned Polka and the usually academic Fugue, if handled with skill and humor, can be most attractive.

Despite what must have been a very hard day's work, the orchestra and Mr. Goldschmann responded with four encores, and even then the audience was reluctant to let them go.

The encores were "Spring" by Eduard Grieg, the Wedding March from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Tsar's Daughter," "Valse Triste" by Jan Sibelius and the introduction to the third act of Wagner's "Lohengrin."

Judge Gaffney Grants Three Divorces Here

Three divorces were granted by Judge James P. Gaffney in Johnson county district court yesterday.

Herbert Gibson was granted a divorce from Mildred Gibson. He charged cruel and inhuman treatment. The plaintiff was granted the custody of one minor child.

A second decree granted Lucy Hall a divorce from A. George Hall. She charged cruel and inhuman treatment.

Carole Earl was divorced from Dale Earl, charging the defendant with cruel and inhuman treatment. The decree appointed Mrs. Homer Pieffer guardian of one minor child, and ordered that the defendant pay $10 a month for the child's support.

Any Bottles? Junior High Girl Sells Them for Gifts

Her friend couldn't imagine how Betty, a 13-year-old junior high school pupil, found so much money with which to buy valentines.

The mystery was disclosed yesterday when she admitted neighbors had donated empty beer bottles to the cause. She didn't reveal the total amount they brought from the corner store, but her friends said they took one look at their gifts and thought prosperity had come.

Concert Preview--

Symphony Musicians Display Informality—Before Concerts

By ED BAIRD

The beautiful music of the St. Louis symphony has faded into the past now and leaves only thoughts of the swinging baton of Vladimir Golschmann through both afternoon and evening concerts presented yesterday afternoon in Iowa Union lounge.

Many were fortunate in seeing and hearing both concerts; but few, if any, were fortunate enough to peek behind the scenes—the hour of preparation before the afternoon performance. For just a moment, let us go behind the scenes.

At 9 o'clock in the morning over 60 wardrobe and instrument trunks had been neatly arranged in Iowa Union river room. On a normal southern trip there would have been as many as 90 trunks in similar arrangement due to longer tours and concerts.

It was 2 o'clock before things began to move. One by one the members of the famed orchestra appeared, sought their instruments, tuned them and went about the room playing various chords. There was life and music in the river room now; "raw materials" for the concert, the finished product soon to begin.

For 10 years Frank Allen has been the road manager for the group. Allen told many humorous yarns concerning his travels on concert tour—how members are sometimes left behind and are forced to take taxicabs to the next stop, as two cellists once were forced to do. Allen was not enthusiastic about rising at 2 in the morning to prepare for the trip ahead to Omaha.

Those who attended either concert yesterday were gazing at over $100,000 worth of instruments.

One man found time, before taking up his instrument, to roll up his sleeves, find an electric plug, place his electric shaver connection into it and proceed to remove his beard. Some gentlemen were roaming about in the act of changing their attire, others were laughing and joking; some read papers.

A dark-haired gentleman sat running his agile fingers over the strings of his violin. One commented on the beauty of Iowa girls.

Professor Richter was walking about and talking freely, making certain that things were in order.

Three-fifteen was near; the "boss" hadn't made his entrance through the rear lower door—some wondered if he was going to make it, others supposed he had entered another way.

The time for the concert had arrived. The tuning ceased. Order consumed the scene; the electric shaver was put away—grouped together the musicians of one of America's finest orchestras filed up the stairs to the platform and were greeted by their audience—all so formally.

Iowan Readers Raise a Rumpus

OUR SUBSCRIBERS don't waste much time in letting us know when they don't receive their copy of The Iowan. (If you've ever worked in the Circulation Department of a newspaper, you know the rumpus subscribers raise because of delay or failure to deliver their newspaper.)

This does happen, despite the amazing efficiency of newspaper boys. Did you ever stop to think just what the fuss is all about? Is it simply because they want to put someone on the carpet? Not at all! The reason is this: that newspaper is important to them. They look forward to reading it! When it isn't there, they want to know why! The vital information in The Iowan is what they're after. "Where's my paper?" Yes, these people want the facts! They want to know about campus, city, national and world-wide affairs... about science... art... literature... health... education.

The Iowan brings all this, and much more, in every issue. Is it any wonder that failure to receive a copy causes so much disappointment? Is it any wonder that they feel this loss so greatly? They depend on The Iowan for News. 31% of the students at Iowa read no other daily paper than The Daily Iowan. Without it, they have lost their one accurate source. The Iowan is important to everyone, especially those advertisers who want to sell to Iowa City's greatest single market, the University.
