Connie Mack's Athletics Rate As Vastly Better Than in 1939

New Material Shows Promises
Veterans O. K.

By ROBERT W. ANDERSON, M. C., MARCH 20

-- Professor C. McGillicuddy, lately known as Connie Mack, is proving an entertaining baseball experiment with his Philadelphia Athletics. His veteran team is now returning infield shows almost a sensation that his Athletics will be a vastly improved club in 1941 over their own, promising, and somewhat surprising showing during 1940. With a few new faces, the team in Philadelphia is starting new experiments, which is something that the Athletics had been doing for some time. The Athletics' manager, who has been experimenting for years, is now getting a real chance to see what his team can do under different conditions.

At present, the Athletics are a combination of veterans and young stars. The veterans include such players as Paul Waner, who is now playing third base for the Athletics. Waner is a favorite with the Philadelphia fans and has helped to set the tone for the rest of the team.

The young stars include such players as Joe DiMaggio, who is now playing center field for the Athletics. DiMaggio is a sensation with the fans and has helped to set the pace for the rest of the team.

The Athletics' decision to keep the veterans and add some new blood has paid off. The team is now looking good and is expected to do well this season.
