GERMANY DECLARES CONQUEST WON

British Destroyer 'Blown to Bits' by Nazi Bombers

Ships Swarm Over Namsos For 11 Hours

One British Destroyer Slow in Getting Away; German Bombs Strike

STOCKHOLM, May 1 (Wednesday) (AP)—Swarms of German bombers which raided Namsos and vicinity for nearly 11 hours Tuesday blew to bits a British destroyer with heavy loss of life, the Svenska Dagbladet correspondent reported today from that British landing base on the west coast of Norway.

Held off at first by steady British anti-aircraft fire, the Germans persisted from 7:15 a. m. to 6 p. m. (12:15 a. m. to 11 a. m. Iowa time), losing two planes, he said.

"Targets of the German fliers were two British warships—a cruiser and destroyer—which entered the harbor during the night," the correspondent wrote.

"The destroyer received a direct hit on her stern, with the result that the entire ship was blown to pieces, since fire aboard spread quickly to the ammunition store and powder magazine.

"Scores of British marines and sailors were believed killed. The remainder, number unknown, were taken aboard a cruiser which then managed to get out of the fjord," the correspondent wrote from the Namdalen sector of Norway.

"Further details of the story were given me by a Norwegian doctor who was in the French hospital at Namsos during the bombing.

"At 7:15 a. m. (12:15 a. m., CST) six German bombing planes began attacking two English ships which lay at anchor until the bombs began to fall, and then began weaving back and forth at full speed.

"One British destroyer apparently was too slow in its maneuvers, and the Germans' heavy bombs struck it at the stern.

"In a few seconds the whole ship went to pieces, as ammunition and powder exploded."

F.D.R. Won't Oppose Farm Tenancy Plan Financed by RFC

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—President Roosevelt wrote congressional leaders today that he would have no objection to financing a $25,000,000 farm tenancy program through the Reconstruction Finance corporation, as provided in a senate amendment to the agriculture department supply bill.

In his budget message the president requested an appropriation for the purpose but the house made no provision for it.

Barden Plan Voted Down

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—The Barden amendments to exempt large groups of workers from the wage-hour law were voted down, 156 to 66, in the house today after being so altered and "loaded" with additional legislation that their author, Rep. Barden (D-NC) threw up his hands in disgust and disowned them.

The debacle, which came as the culmination of a long controversy in which President Roosevelt vigorously fought the Barden plan, opened the way for consideration, beginning tomorrow, of less sweeping amendments offered by the house labor committee.

Originally, the Barden program provided that a score of operations connected with the processing of farm products (such as the canning of vegetables) should be exempt from the 30-cents-an-hour minimum wage and the 42-hour maximum work week.

"Predicts Anarchy After Hitler," NEW YORK, (AP)—Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, pretender to the non-existent throne of Austria, departed today for Paris with the declaration that "should Hitler win the upper hand in Europe at the end of the present struggle, anarchy will follow."

German Plane Crash Causes 40 Casualties

Lands With Explosion 50 Miles From London In Essex Coastal Town

LONDON, May 1 (Wednesday)—One of a group of German warplanes roaring to within 50 miles of London crashed in an Essex coastal town last night, causing about 40 casualties.

The plane, which plummeted to earth while anti-aircraft guns poured shells into the night sky, hit with a tremendous explosion within 400 yards of a hospital, where the victims were carried.

Several houses were demolished when the plane, which had been fired on at sea, fell in flames in a residential district.

An "alarm" message was flashed following the crash and the town's services were mobilized swiftly.

Soldiers aided air raid precautions units in rescue work.

Air raid precautions workers, demolition and rescue parties worked feverishly in the dim light of the half-darkness.

Tornadoes Kill Two in Illinois Missouri Areas

CAIRO, Ill., April 30 (AP)—At least two persons were killed and an unestimated number were injured, several seriously, as tornadoes ripped through sections of southern Illinois and southeast Missouri late today.

The dead were Lewis Campbell, 66, who was working on a farm a mile north of Sikeston, Mo., and the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Brownie Pettes of Bertrand, Mo.

Thirteen persons from both states, including Mr. and Mrs. Pettes, were brought to a hospital here. Six were hurt at Marion, Ill.

This picture, taken from a British warplane above Norwegian waters, shows a Norwegian gunboat (arrow points to it) circling about to approach a suspicious-looking merchant ship it has stopped. Nazi High Command Boasts Of Control Of Dombas, Trondheim, Main Rail Line

Fresh Forces Reach Norway, Britain Claims

Silent on Nazi Gains; Italian Participation Spurs New Precautions

LONDON, April 30 (AP)—The danger of Italian participation in the European war forced Britain tonight to take "certain precautions"—understood to be diversion of shipping from the Mediterranean—while British setbacks in Norway caused an opposition attack on "apparently inspired articles" in the press suggesting allied troop withdrawals from the central Norwegian battlefronts.

Late tonight a war office communique made this brief announcement:

"In the Dombas area, the British, fighting with indomitable courage, have resisted any further advances by the enemy. North of Steinkjer the British troops again proved their superiority in patrol work, inflicting casualties on the enemy.

"Fresh landings have taken place along the coast of Norway." The communique made no direct mention of German announcements of the capture of Dombas, or the forging of a connecting link by German forces between Oslo and Trondheim, which seemed to bring the Norwegian campaign to a critical stage.

German claims that her Oslo-Trondheim forces had forged a connecting link and had captured Dombas brought to an obviously critical stage the Norwegian campaign, although the war office took no notice of the German communique.

If the German assertions are true it means the British forces south of Trondheim are isolated.

But tonight Sir Archibald Sinclair, liberal leader, hit at those suggesting Britain withdraw her expeditionary force from the sector.

Withdrawal, he said, was a political move. (See BRITAIN, Page 6)

WANTED! Mr. Hitler

Carnegie Institute Head Offers $1,000,000 For Fuehrer's Capture—Alive!

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—A reward of $1,000,000 in cash for the delivery of Adolf Hitler "alive, unharmed and unhurt" into the custody of the League of Nations was offered tonight by Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie institute.

His offer, made in "good faith" in behalf of a group of Pittsburgh residents, was outlined in the following letter to the New York Times:

"In order to prevent further bloodshed and outrage in this war of the German aggression, I am authorized by competent Americans to offer a reward of $1,000,000 to be paid in cash to the person or persons who will deliver Adolf Hitler, alive, unharmed and unhurt, into the custody of the League of Nations for trial before a high court of justice for his crimes against the peace and dignity of the world. This proposal will stand good through the month of May, 1940.

(Signed) Samuel Harden Church, president, the Carnegie institute."

Church, in Pittsburgh, said in a telephone interview with the Times, that the time limitation was made in order to insure that seekers after the reward would act quickly.

He said the decision to post the $1,000,000 reward was reached by a Pittsburgh group after they had received private advices from Europe that Hitler would strike soon on the western front in an attempt to break through, even at the cost of 500,000 German lives.

Asked if he was acting in his capacity as president of the Carnegie institute, one of the major educational and cultural organizations set up by the steel master, Andrew Carnegie, Church replied:

"I see no objection to my making the offer as president of the institute. It chimes perfectly with the ideals of Andrew Carnegie. After all, he founded a peace organization. And he firmly believed in an association of the nations with power to enforce peace."

Church told the Times the question of offering the reward had been under discussion by a group of members of the Duquesne club in Pittsburgh for two or three months.

"Finally the project has taken shape, and I was selected to make the offer public," he continued. "There are, in the group of present sponsors, about 50 persons, some of them women."

"I have held back quite a while, not that I doubted the possibility, but that I doubted the post- (See REWARD, Page 6)

Hitler Lauds His Nazi Army For Success

'Tremendous 20 Days' Finds Main Nazi Forces In Dramatic Meeting

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, April 30 (AP)—The German high command tonight stamped the Nazi conquest of Norway as virtually won with the linking of Oslo and Trondheim by green-grey columns, the capture of strategic Dombas in between, and control of the main rail line from the Norwegian capital to the great west coast port.

Adolf Hitler, himself, sent a special order of the day to the German troops in Norway, praising them for their tremendous 20-day campaign and its result: the smashing of an allied pincers movement aimed at cutting off Trondheim by thrusts from south and north.

Exceed Expectations

The achievements announced today by the high command were said in authorized quarters to have exceeded the fondest expectations of German military authorities in view of the difficulties of the campaign.

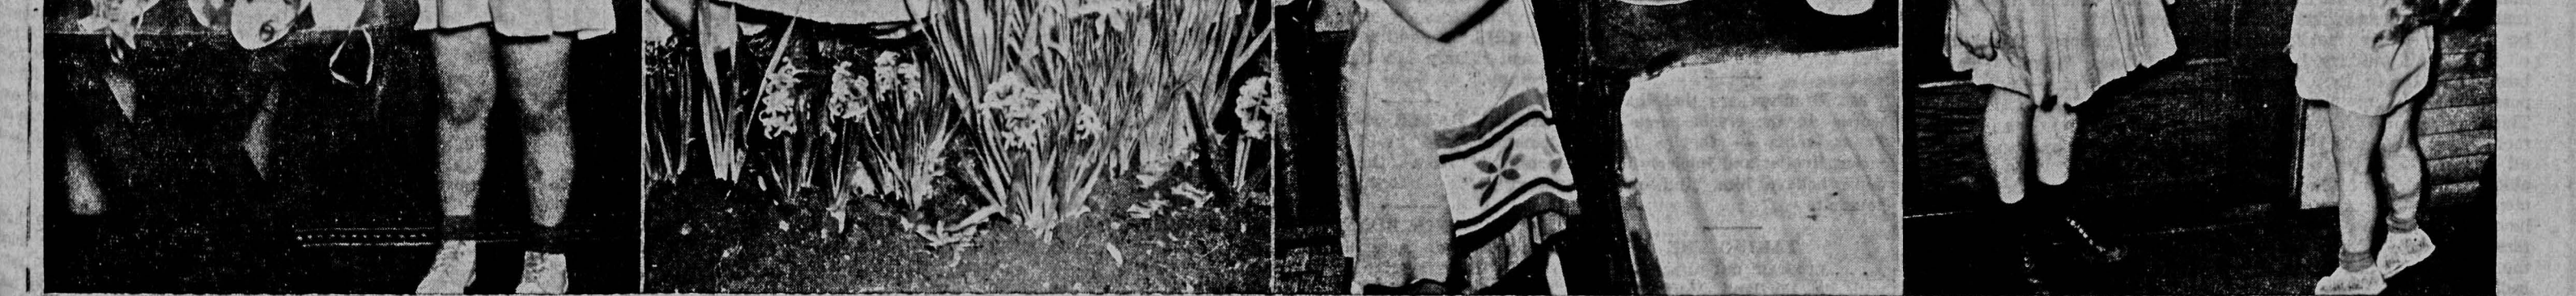

Now that Trondheim is secured and the German troops there no longer are dependent on supplies from sea and air, inspired sources say no time will be lost in starting a concentric attack to sweep the allied troops from their foothold on the stony midriff of Norway.

Dombas Captured

With the announced capture of Dombas, railway junction which connects with the allied landing point of Andalsnes, south of Trondheim, the allied-Norwegian forces in that sector are being "pursued," it was stated. For several days there has been heavy fighting between allies and Germans at the gates of Dombas.

First of all today the high command disclosed that a motorized German force which climbed over (See CONQUEST, Page 7)

The First of May, May Baskets and Susan and Penny

When May Day comes around, the most important thing in sight is making May baskets, Susan (left) and Penelope Prentiss decide (left). It takes a great deal of effort, material and time, but the finished baskets are worth it, these two young ladies are certain. After the baskets are done, they must be filled, and, of course, no May basket is complete without some fresh flowers. These, however, must be picked carefully. There'll be no jerking up by the roots when Susan and Penny gather their posies (second photo). Wild flowers are nice to put in the cornucopias, and so are the hyacinths and crocuses and daffodils that are blooming these days in the garden. In addition to flowers, there's nothing like homemade fudge. In the kitchen (third photo) Susan and Penny measure and stir, cook and beat, with gay peasant aprons tied under chins to protect small frocks from a stray spatter of chocolate or a bit of butter. Now that the baskets are made and filled with candy and flowers they must be delivered. Susan hangs a long horn-shaped one on someone's doorknob, while Penny reaches up to pull the knocker (right). Susan and Penny are the daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Prentiss, 430 S. Dodge. Susan is eight years old and a pupil in the second grade at Longfellow school. Penny is four years old, and she hasn't started to school yet.

A Word About Orientation

NEXT YEAR'S freshmen and transfer orientation staffs have been announced. These campus women will shoulder the responsibility of orienting new women students next fall to our university.

During the first weeks of the semester, informal gatherings will be held for groups with membership ranging between 15 and 22. In these friendly meetings, the orientation leaders will attempt to answer additional questions of these new students which they did not have the opportunity to answer in summer letters.

These new students will learn campus routine, campus custom and will become acquainted with campus buildings. Undoubtedly friendships will be made that will continue throughout the four short years of college in spite of the fact that these same women will live in various housing units. In addition, these informal get-togethers are just plain fun.

Faculty wives cooperate willingly with this splendid program. They open their homes for these meetings.

It is true that the success of orientation differs with each woman. Some are more mature; some are more acquainted with our Iowa. But for each woman orientation means something. If the new student acts friendly toward the orientation program, she will gain much.

So, success to the new staff. The effort that these leaders, assistants and faculty wives expend in this program is well worth it.

The Steel Band

AS THE CONFLAGRATION that is Europe burns ever more brightly, more and more thought is paid to the necessity of the defense of the Americas. Shall we construct around the Western Hemisphere an impregnable band of steel, the purpose of which to guarantee the safety therein from invasion? And how shall we proceed to establish this huge ring of defense?

That amicable relations between the nations of North, South and Central America are entirely possible is proven by the state of friendly co-operation which exists today, and by the fact that not a single serious dispute is present between any of these nations. That eminently successful body, the Pan American Union, has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its establishment, and relations between the twenty-one republics which make up its membership are on every side conceded to be more friendly than they have been for many decades. The Good Neighbor Policy which has been followed by the United States for the past several years has gone further toward establishing complete understanding than any policy which we have used in dealing with Latin America for 50 years. The Americas are with us. We can probably count upon their co-operation and fidelity.

With the subjection of Denmark by Germany has come the realization that our shores may be threatened by the founding of naval and military bases by hostile powers in the American possessions of conquered nations. This may seem to be rather a remote possibility, yet it is not at all impossible or even improbable in the light of the developments of recent years. Only now have we begun to appreciate the farsightedness which attended the purchase of the Danish West Indies in 1917.

If we are to maintain the Monroe Doctrine, it is necessary that we make provision for the defense of the Americas from all possible enemies. It is necessary that we establish bases from which naval and air defense operations can take place. It is essential that we prevent the establishment of bases from which attacks on American shores can take place.

In the West Indies there are some dozens of islands, the majority of which are owned by France and Great Britain. Were these islands in our possession they would make admirable bases for the defense of the Panama Canal, which is essential in guaranteeing successful naval defense of the Atlantic coast. At the same time, all possibility of their becoming enemy bases would be removed.

Some years ago there was put forth the proposition that Great Britain and France cede to us the West Indian islands in return for cancellation of their war debt to us. The time has come when we must give serious thought to this proposal. In the interests of American peace we should take steps to obtain all of these islands which could be used as bases, either by us or by an aggressor.

The United States is today at peace with the world. We can not, however, know when this peace will be shattered by an aggressor power. We are bound by more than one hundred years of agreement to protect the Americas from foreign invasion, and although the time may never come when we shall have to do so, we must be cognizant of the possibilities of the near future, and we must take steps to prevent such possibilities from becoming actualities.

Textbook For Young Dictators

THE PUBLISHERS of the Modern Library series of books reveal a bit of information that casts a great deal of light on the interests of the American people.

You might think that the author of the best-selling title series might be John Steinbeck, or Vincent Sheean, or Walter Edmonds. Or you might think that the American people were interested in reading most of all the Federalist papers or some other top-notch democratic piece of writing.

But a thin-faced, sharp nosed little Florentinian of the fifteenth century by the name of Nicolo Machiavelli has been the bright light this spring.

The publishing house put out an edition of his Discourses and The Prince this spring, the first time that his two master works have ever been done in a single volume in the English language, and added a critical essay by Max Lerner, of Williams college, formerly editor of The Nation.

Machiavelli understood power politics as they are practiced today only too well and his writings might actually serve as textbooks for ambitious young dictators. The American public has evidently decided that it is high time to study the fundamentals over here, because a first printing of ten thousand copies of the new edition was sold out in less than a month.

In Defiance Of Dies

MARTIN DIES, the inquisitor from Texas, got another good one off at the general conference of the Methodist church last week. Now the conservatives of the conference are furling their brows at a group of young men who demonstrated against the Congressional thespian.

Dies told the conference that "a good, old fashioned religious revival" was the only thing that would save democracy in the United States.

We don't doubt the merits of Mr. Dies' statement. But coming from a man who has conducted a modern inquisition in Washington, it sounds like his sincerity is in the show again rather than in the weight of his words.

To those young men who had the courage to defy the hypocrisy of the ruthless representative Dies, will come a personal satisfaction that cannot be dampened by the scattered reactionary criticism of their presumptuous conduct.

May Day In America

TODAY is May day and we will have no national parade of emblematic significance. No tanks or war machines will rumble down crowded streets behind the marching men.

No groups of uniformed laborers will salute and cheer while they wait for their baskets of bread.

It will happen "there" but it won't happen "here," because today we are free-thinking individuals who believe in making our bread the way we like it. Instead little children go down the street from door to door—not begging for bread or refuge, but hanging May baskets.

Hitler, at last, says an editorial, has stepped on the British lion's tail. Recent events suggest it may have really been a banana peel.

NOT AS NATURE (OR GEORGE WASHINGTON) INTENDED

G. O. P. Observer Would Rather See Dewey As Next Attorney General Than as President

"I'd rather see Tom Dewey," a republican senator remarked to me the other day, "in the attorney general's office, under a G. O. P. president, than in the White House himself."

My interviewee wouldn't be thankful if I named him. He thinks that Tom stands an excellent chance of being nominated, and he doesn't fancy the chance of being in the doghouse if so, and if the New Yorker should be elected, and that he (this pre-convention spokesman) should be recalled as qualifying his commendation of Thomas for first place on his party's ticket.

"All the same," continued this critic, "it's true that Tom is extensively inexperienced. Nobody knows what kind of a president he'd make. His attacks on the new deal are first rate. Yet the fact remains that a lot of republicans consider many of the new dealers' intentions all to the good. They say that the new deal program would work out admirably under a G. O. P. administration. Dewey has overpanned them, in principle."

The fact is that ultra-republicans have found considerable fault with the G. O. P. national committee for having (so the "ultras" say) pulled its punches thus far in the pending fight. More moderate republicans bring in suggestions for awful jobs at today's administration and they complain that the committee turns them down, as injudiciously ugly.

As to Dewey? But as to Dewey, proceeded my republican guesser:

"What kind of a national executive Tom would make we don't know; he never has been tried in that kind of a job.

"But we do know this — he's a dandy prosecutor.

"Now, the justice department is a prosecuting agency.

"Let him get into that, as attorney general, and what he'll do to new deal agencies will be a-plenty. Why, if he's given that stunt, inside four years he'll have Franklin D. Roosevelt and Jim Farley and all hands in jail.

"And, subsequently, in 1944—

"Let him run for president!" My republican friend agreed that the prospects are very favorable for Dewey this time—but he believes it is too soon for satisfactory results at the polls.

Rank-and-File In short, Tom Dewey seems extraordinarily popular with the republican rank-and-file, but true-and-tried G. O. P. leaders in Washington are skeptical of him as yet. If they have to have him, in order to win, they want him. But they'd rather win with somebody else. A bit of jealousy probably is involved. The oldsters are resentful at seeing a youngster breaking in.

And, when it comes to a showdown, the oldsters will do the nominating.

They'll take Dewey if they have to, but they won't do it with much enthusiasm.

The primaries don't mean anything on the convention floor; that's to be remembered. It's a commonplace that nominations are dictated in hotel "back rooms."

Everything looks, from a republican standpoint, like Dewey just now — and it counts, but it isn't decisive.

Maybe the betting's 50-50 (but not better than that) pro-Dewey.

War May Change Matters Furthermore, the war's development may change the whole situation.

Just how—heaven knows! Dewey hasn't said much from that angle. His thesis is that our domestic problems are the whole thing. That's all right if the war doesn't hit us materially. But if it does? Then what? It's already beginning to side-swipe us.

The war will figure in the coming conventions. Just how nobody can say.

A Buxom Lass Was Lil Alice Faye Won't Come Within 50 Pounds of Russell

BY GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — They are dusting off the bustles of another of the nineties and building a movie around her career. This time it is Lillian Russell, and the movies have skipped a couple of her divorces in order to make the film more salable throughout the country.

Our generation doesn't know very much about Lil and her playmates of 40 years ago, unless we are to believe what the earlier historians would have us believe — mainly, that her era was one of incredibly bad taste and exceptionally lusty appetites. Lillian herself paraded Broadway with a dog in a diamond-studded collar. Her curves were couched in a diamond-studded corset, and her face began to appear on cigar labels and box wrappings.

Those were the days when the Minnie Madden Fisks and the Julia Marlowes, together with Maude Adams, the inevitable Diamond Jim (I'm getting tired writing about him) and Weber & Fields dominated the Broadway scene. Their lavish dinners were sparked by black pearls served with the oysters, and cigars were wrapped in hundred dollar bills. Through this company strode the architect Stanford White, soon to be shot, Abe Hummel, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. A belle of her times indeed Lillian was, but I can tell you this: the girl who approximates her on the screen will not come within 50 pounds of the true Lillian. This modern generation would snicker at romance wrapped up in Lillian's generous poundage. . . . And that, you will admit, would never do.

Like any other piker with a new hat, we dodged a shower yesterday by jumping into a cab. As our hack paused at an intersection another driver cruised up and yelled, "Joe, Six Sixty!" Joe nodded then said to us out of the side of his mouth, "That's nuttin. I got $8.50 on my meter. He'll go home and blab to his wife, but not me."

"Don't you tell the little woman anything?" "They's two things I don't do," snapped Joe. "I don't tell my wife my business and I don't allow her to talk to other cab drivers' wives. If I did she'd come home whining that somebody's husband made $10 yesterday and why didn't I make $10 yesterday. I'll give her $4 to-night and that's all. If I have a bad day tomorrow I'll have enough left over to still give her $4. What she don't know don't hurt her."

New York, in the throes of a building program, is like a man who takes off his pants with one hand while putting on his shirt with the other. We tear down and build up without even waiting for the mortar to dry. There hasn't been a single hour in the last 50 years that the town hasn't reverberated to pneumatic drills and falling bricks. At this writing 6th avenue is being torn up and paved for the third time in as many years. Even our own AP building, less than 2 years old, had a scaffolding on it recently while a giant new plaque was being set into place.

We are the greatest and the most prolific builders of wrecking scaffolds on earth. Sometimes I wonder if the captains of our scuttling crews are the descendants of hangmen.

Tex Carleton Hurls No-Hitter For Dodgers

Tex's Hurling Gives Dodgers Ninth Victory

Lanky Texan Came Back From Minors As a Free Agent

CINCINNATI, April 30 (AP)—James Otto (Tex) Carleton, a 33-year-old refugee from the minors, stalked into baseball's no-hit hall of fame today by pitching the undefeated Brooklyn Dodgers to a 3 to 0 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

Ninth Straight Win
It was the ninth straight victory for the stampeding Dodgers, tying a modern major league record for consecutive wins at the start of the season—a string attained by the New York Giants in 1918.

It also was the second no-hit game of the young season, coming two weeks to the day after Bob Feller shaped his opening day spectacle for the Cleveland Indians against the Chicago White Sox.

Carleton, a righthander who served terms with the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs and got into one world series with the Cards and two with Chicago, was one of several free agents the Dodgers picked up during the winter. After developing arm trouble with the Cubs, he was sold "down the river" to Milwaukee of the American Association and eventually released unconditionally after winning only 11 and losing nine games last year.

This was what made his great exhibition today the more astounding. He refused to get unsettled by three errors his teammates committed behind him in the early innings and in the last five frames set the national league champions down in order.

At the start the contest, reeled off before 10,344 enthusiastic fans, was a tight mound duel between Carleton and the equally aged Jim Turner. But in the fifth Turner walked two men and Pete Coscarart hit a home run that accounted for all the scoring of the game.

Crowd Cheers Tex
It was then that the taciturn Texan seemed to grasp the idea that he not only might win, but might get a no-hitter. The crowd sensed the fact, too, and was cheering him on at the finish.

Carleton walked Bill Werber in the first inning, an error by Pee-wee Reese let Harry Craft reach first and a wild throw by Coscarart let him go to second in the second inning. In the third Werber again waited out a base on balls and in the fourth a bad throw by third baseman Cookie Lavagetto allowed Frank McCormick to go all the way to second.

But the big righthander never let any of these incidents develop into a threat.

It was Carleton's second victory this season. His other was over the Boston Bees in the Dodgers' third game when he won 8-3, giving up 10 hits, striking out six and issuing no walks.

Prior to today the national league had not had a no-hit game since Johnny Vander Meer of the Reds fashioned his "double" in June, 1938 and the last one in the American league before Feller's was by Monte Pearson of the New York Yankees in August, 1938.

Herring Wins Stagg Award
PRINCETON, N. J., April 30 (AP)—The first Amos Alonzo Stagg award to be conferred annually for "outstanding services in the advancement of the best interests of football," was presented tonight to the family of Donald G. Herring Jr., Princeton junior whose leg was amputated as a result of a football injury.

Richard C. Harlow, football coach at Harvard, and De Ormond McLaughry, head coach at Brown, made the award on behalf of the American Football Coaches association.

Bimelech Breezes Past Derby Entrants in Trial Race

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 30 (AP)—If there were any lingering doubts that Bimelech is the "red hot" thing in Saturday's Kentucky Derby—as well as potentially the greatest horse since Man O' War—they were buried deep in the track at Churchill Downs today.

The Lexington Lulu not only waltzed in with the Derby trial stake, flying away from seven other candidates for Saturday's classic, but he ran most of the others right out of the Derby, and may have ruined one or two for keeps.

Col. E. R. Bradley's bid for a fifth derby victory came down the stretch actually laughing, with his tongue hanging out of the side of his mouth as usual, and with the rest of the field spread out behind him like a circus parade marching into town. He finished 2 1-2 lengths in front and it could have been 22 1-2, for Jockey Freddie Smith didn't let him all the way out at any time.

It was his eighth straight victory in a two-year racing career that has never seen defeat. It was probably as easy a win as he's ever had, despite the fact that the rest of the field was made up entirely of gallopers who were supposed to face him Saturday in the mile and a quarter run for the roses. They were supposed to, that is, until they tried the trick today.

Now, it looks as if only two of those in today's mile field will want any part of that assignment. These two were Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion, who finished second, and Charles T. Fisher's Sirocco, who was third, five lengths farther back.

The rest might just as well have "stood in bed," and most likely will on Saturday. Two of them tried to run with Bimelech and not only finished last and next to last, but seemed to have their hearts broken doing it. This pair, A. L. Ferguson's Black Brumail and L. D. Kern's Designer, finished far back and Jockey Willie Garner was pulling up a dispirited Designer at the end.

Bimelech's time of 1:38 was 2 1-5 seconds off the track record, but show. The victory was worth $1,170 and boosted the colt's earnings to $142,835.

Right from the word go, as they started down the chute from which mile races begin at this track, you got the idea this fellow was the real McCoy. L. D. Kern's Potranco broke on top, but Bimmie took the lead away right quick. Designer came along in the back stretch and tried to make a race of it. He may have ruined himself doing it. Then Black Brumail had a crack at it, with the same success.

The current season, during which we have already shivered through half a dozen baseball games, is labelled by Otto Vogel as the worst since he has been at Iowa, insofar as baseball is concerned.

Vogel sat in the windswept Iowa dugout yesterday watching a few Hawkeyes go through their paces—a good share of the players were in the military classes which were under federal inspection. He finally gave up the idea of any real practice—the dangers of sore arms and other such cold weather baseball troubles more than overbalanced the good that could come of a workout.

That, incidentally, is just what the Big Ten schools are having to do this year. Minnesota hasn't even played a Big Ten game yet, having been forced to call off scheduled games. Ohio State and Indiana have had but two contests each, while all the other teams have been effected by the bad weather. Iowa has, in fact, been exceedingly fortunate, having been kept from but four games while playing eight since the eight-game southern trip.

National league publicity this week says Mel Ott came into the majors at the age of 16 and now has his name in baseball's book of all-time records 16 times. He has been in the majors 15 years.

Newest record Ott holds is the base-on-balls mark. At the end of last year Ott had it up to 1135. This year he sets a record each time he walks. He also holds the life-time National league home run record with 369, some runs batted in marks and shares still other batting records.

Back in the American league there seems to be some wonderment about why the Yanks are way down in sixth place, which probably bothers Jake Mahr, local sports expert, worse than it does Joe McCarthy, Yank manager. Jake picked the Yanks by his regular statistical method and the figures are going wrong. The Yanks have done about as bad by him as Iowa's football team did last fall, when he went the way of all experts in his predictions.

Eddie Anderson and Burt Ingwersen, Northwestern line coach and former Hawkeye grid mentor, agree that the center spot is always one of the more troublesome, from a coaching angle. It seems that different centers grasp the ball in slightly different manners. They might put the right on top, with the left under, or vice-versa, or they might stick both hands on the ball's front end and scoot it back like a gangster dumping a body into the river. And most of the methods seem about equally successful, a study of the nation's leading pivot men shows.

DiMaggio Wants To Play Ball But Doctor Keeps Him Off His Bad Knee

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—Joe DiMaggio, the brightest star of the becalmed Yankees, doesn't have the slightest idea when he will be able to get in there and give the champions some help with his big bat.

"It might be in a few days and it might be quite a while before this knee is well," he said over a late breakfast, while his pretty new wife, the former Dorothy Arnold, refilled the coffee cups.

"I'm itching to play, but the doctor has told me not to move a wheel until I'm absolutely sure it's well. It doesn't feel bad now, except that now and then I feel a catch in the back of my knee. I can't run much, though. If I got out there now every ball hit to center field would be a home run."

Joe hurt the knee—his right one—in an exhibition game just before the regular season began. The Yankees have missed him sorely, and some of the critics are satisfied this soon that they won't win a fifth straight flag without plenty of help from Joe.

"I don't think I'm quite that important," he smiled. "The gang just hasn't started hitting yet with men on the bases. We'll get going any day now, whether I'm in there or not. But I sure would like to play, because Boston and Cleveland both have better clubs this year."

Which brought up the subject of Joe's little brother, Dom, who also has been doing no playing to speak of with the Boston Red Sox. Dominick's ankle, which was injured down south, is troubling him again, Joe said.

"I think Dom's still a little scared about being in the big leagues," said Joe with a chuckle. "I know I was scared my first year up. But he'll come out of it. He's a nice kid, and you know, he's a lot bigger than he looks. We're all like that. Nobody would take me to weigh 200, would they? But I do."

Emil Bildilli Puzzles Yanks As Browns Win 2-1 Contest

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—The plague of portersiders that has kept the world champion Yankees in quarantine this spring broke out again today with a two-hit pitching job by young Emil Bildilli of the St. Louis Browns and gave the westerners a 2 to 1 victory.

It was the first start of the season for the 25-year-old recruit from San Antonio in the Texas league and he was a bit nervous letting Frank Crossett open the New York half of the first inning with a triple and Red Rolfe follow with a single.

There was a run—the Yanks' only one—afterward Bildilli gave never a hit and let just three men reach first, two on walks and one on an error.

CINCINNATI, April 30 (AP)—From the sixth inning on, the 10,544 fans in the Cincinnati ball park comprised a house divided against itself today.

By the best estimate, 5,272 were holding out loyally for the Cincinnati Reds to pull the game out of the fire and the other 5,272 were praying for Tex Carleton, the "has been" who suddenly "was" all over again, to pitch a no-hitter.

It was Carleton vs. the Reds, and tonight the 33-year-old veteran found himself perched in baseball's hall of fame through a no-hit, 3-0 victory.

"I sure makes me feel great," he reported jubilantly.

"I didn't realize until the eighth that I was close to a no-hitter, but I was counting them one-by-one from that time on."

The way Carleton was going the game virtually was over when Pete Coscarart slammed his three-run homer in the fifth,

Cold Weather Slows Drills

Figures Show That Conference Teams Fear Iowa's Haub

The weather man and the annual federal military inspection combined yesterday to limit the Hawkeye baseball team's practice.

A lusty, cold wind kept the practice pitchers from opening up and the same wind hindered the hitters.

Sophomore talent didn't show up at practice until after they had tramped around in their military suits. When they did show up Coach Vogel called his squad together for a short skull session.

The scrappy Iowans do not fear the Maroons but they do have a great deal of respect for Art Lapotka who seems to have done most of the pitching and hitting for the Chicago club this year.

Take last week for instance. Lapotka pitched against Purdue Friday losing a tough game to Bob Bailey of the Bollermakers. Saturday he was playing in the outfield where he came through with a home run in the late innings of the ball game to put the Maroons ahead, 2-1. After this feat he came in from the outfield to star in the role of relief pitcher, the Maroons eventually winning the ball game.

This brings up a very interesting phenomena of the present Big Ten race. It seems that the opposition is determined to try and get at least a split with the Iowa club in every series that they have played.

For example, the Illini didn't pitch their ace hurler against Haub in the first game of the series because they figured that their chances of winning against Haub were pretty poor. Instead of pitching Grant the first day they saved him for the next day figuring that they might get an even break out of the series.

Wisconsin did the same thing, pitching Buker against Haub and Saxer against the Hawkeyes' weaker pitchers the next day.

Only at Purdue did Iowa's ace moundman hurl against the opposition's ace hurler. This was because Purdue thought there would only be one game on account of the weather conditions and gambled Bob Bailey against Haub.

With this in mind it appears that Chicago will probably save Lapotka for Iowa's second and third place pitchers.

Haynes' Pitching, 13 Washington Hits Bring 9-4 Victory

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—Joe Haynes' pitching and his mates' 13 hits today gave Washington a 9-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Detroit took a 2-0 lead in the third inning when Barney McCosky hit a home run, Bruce Campbell tripled and Charley Gehringier singled.

In the fifth the Senators, who had gotten but two hits off Tommy Bridges, filled the bases with one out. Gerald Walker then put the game on ice, hitting Bridges' first pitch against the left field wall for a double which cleaned the sacks. Walker scored as Zeke Bonura flied deep to McCosky.

Home Run Clouters Get Two Apiece In Wild Contest

PHILADELPHIA, April 30 (AP)—Two home runs each by Hal Trosky and Ken Keltner sparked the Cleveland Indians to a 10 to 5 victory over Philadelphia today before a crowd of 2,500.

The Indians peppered the offerings of two athletic pitchers for 13 blows. The early inning barrage which included Trosky's first circuit clout with the bases empty cut short Herman Besse's pitching debut before home town folk in the third with the count 4 to 1 against him. Bill Beckman let two more runs in before he retired the side.

The husky Indian first sacker slapped out his second homer in the fourth, again with no one on. Third baseman Keltner collected his in the seventh and ninth, likewise with the sacks empty.

The A's came to life briefly in the eighth with safeties by Wally Moses, Benny McCoy, Bob Johnson and Dick Siebert but even with the aid of Ben Chapman's error, collected but three runs off Willis Hudlin. The Indian hurler held the A's to six hits in the first seven innings, including Johnson's homer in the second. He gave up six others in the last two.

TO ALL IOWA CITY, IA., CITIZENS

A great deal of interest has been shown in the coming election on May 7, and we believe it would be well to let the people of the city know of certain things that will probably have a bearing on the future concerning MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP OF THE WATER PLANT AND SYSTEM.

In the first place we want to mention again that POLITICS WILL NOT, and MUST NOT, HAVE A PLACE IN THIS PICTURE, and it is most essential that ALL CITIZENS VOTE FOR A BOARD OF TRUSTEES TO OPERATE THE WATERWORKS SYSTEM, if the same is voted and acquired by the city.

In this venture we are ACCEPTING THE HELP OF ALL FACTIONS in order that the city may take advantage of this opportunity and benefit by doing so, and after the situation has been successfully consummated, POLITICS WILL CONTINUE TO BE OUTLAWED IN IOWA CITY'S MUNICIPALLY OPERATED UTILITY.

As stated on the ballot this will be accomplished by having the waterworks system under the SUPERVISION OF A BOARD OF TRUSTEES, composed of THREE IOWA CITY CITIZENS, to be appointed when the city takes over the property. EVERY PRECAUTION WILL BE TAKEN TO SEE THAT YOU ARE PROTECTED NOT ONLY NOW, BUT FOR THE YEARS TO COME.

WHAT ABOUT REVENUE BONDS?

Should the vote on May 7 be favorable to acquire the waterworks system, the city would have to be in a position to pay for the utility.

In order to do this arrangements have been made and a CONTRACT HAS BEEN SIGNED with the owners of the plant TO ACCEPT 2 3/4% REVENUE BONDS in payment for the plant. The important thing to remember about such a transaction is this, WHILE BONDS WILL BE ISSUED to pay for the plant THEY ARE NOT OBLIGATIONS OF THE CITY. These bonds are known as WATER REVENUE BONDS and are payable solely FROM THE EARNINGS OF THE WATER PLANT, and do not in any way effect the bonding power or the taxing power of the city. The only security the bondholders have is the earning power of the utility. This fact should be kept in mind.

If the purchase is made, IOWA CITY AS A CITY ASSUMES NO LIABILITY WHATSOEVER. The utility acts as security for the bond issue, and the bonds are payable solely from earnings. THE LAW AUTHORIZING REVENUE BONDS PROVIDES THAT EACH BOND MUST STATE ON ITS FACE THAT IT CAN NEVER BE PAID FROM TAXES.

One thing we would like to impress upon all of the citizens is this, that the situation would be exactly the same as it is now with just one exception, and that is, that the CITY WOULD BE GETTING THE PROFITS WHICH NOW GO TO THE WATER COMPANY.

THIS PROPOSITION IS ABSOLUTELY OPEN TO INSPECTION, THERE IS NOTHING TO HIDE, AND WE WILL ENDEAVOR TO PASS ON TO THE CITIZENS ALL OF THE FACTS PERTAINING TO THE PLANT AND PURCHASE.

Beginning tomorrow morning and continuing throughout the next four days, certain pertinent questions and answers thereto will be published in this paper for your information.

Prof. Longman Gives Speech

Prof. Lester D. Longman, head of the University of Iowa art department, gave a talk on art education at the Midwest College Art conference at the Chicago Art institute last Friday and Saturday. As chairman of the objectives committee, Professor Longman proposed a motion which was approved, of admitting to membership colleges and universities in the states between Iowa and the Rocky Mountain region. Formerly the membership was restricted to Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois.

Professor Longman was instrumental in the founding of the new organization two years ago and in 1939 was president of the conference which met at Iowa. This year the conference affiliated as Midwest chapter with the national organization of the College Art association, on a move proposed by Professor Longman, member of the association's board of directors and chairman of its membership committee.

The objectives of the conference include clarification and organization of the philosophy and practice of art education in general in the colleges and universities of the middle western states.

Daily Iowan of Air Keeps S. U. I. Informed

By JACK HAGENS
One of the most listened-to programs of WSUI is the Daily Iowan of the Air, heard three times daily except Sunday and presented by three university students.

Early every morning, much before most University of Iowa students are up to begin the day, Hubert Bowen, A4 of Marshalltown, prepares his third of the day's broadcast. His news report is the 8:30 program which compiles the high spots of the news during the night plus last-minute flashes.

Bowen was selected during last semester to take over the morning broadcast. At the time he was in a news broadcasting class.

Afternoon Announcer
At 5:50 in the afternoon, Art Bellaire, J4 of Sioux City, comes in with the news broadcast. Art's job is to take the Associated Press teletype flashes which start coming over the wires at 4 p. m. and prepare his broadcast into continuity form.

Art has held the job since early last fall. At the present time he is city editor for The Daily Iowan. He has worked with KTRI, the station at Sioux City, where he was a general announcer which included giving news broadcasts.

He recounts the exciting experiences he had with the news broadcast of WSUI last fall when the mike was placed in the news room of the Daily Iowan next to the AP teletype machine. From the room, they gave last-minute reports of activity from the coming second World war. He said that the actual entrance of Germany as a marching army was the biggest story of the year for him.

Evening Broadcast
Loren Hickerson, J4 of Iowa City, managing editor of The Daily Iowan, has the evening broadcast at 8:45. After seeing the highlights of the day's news from his post as managing editor, Loren pulls them together. The listener hears the reports of the day, too. From this observation, Loren has a fairly good idea of what to outline for the front page of The Daily Iowan.

All three news broadcasters prepare a certain amount of continuity to their broadcasts. At times, the news is so perfectly arranged this is not necessary. However, as a general rule for radio broadcasting is the use of a prepared script, the three know very well how their news broadcast will run. In many cases, rewriting is done with stories to make them more listenable. For broadcasting, sentences must be much shorter than written copy.

In ordinary circumstances, the three will begin with international events (Art Bellaire states that nearly one-half of his broadcasting time is used for international events), then down through national, state and local. This does not hold true to form for often certain of these brackets will contain news which far surpasses the others.

The Daily Iowan of the Air has perhaps the greatest listening audience of any WSUI program. This is common with most news broadcasts throughout the country. As a project for these three students, The Daily Iowan of the Air keeps the campus well-informed of important news happenings here and abroad.

Pershing Rifles Head

Gaylord H. Gilmore, A3 of Morning Sun, above, has been appointed lieutenant colonel in command of the second regiment of Pershing Rifles to succeed Lieut. Col. Dwight Hunter, P3 of Iowa City, retiring commanding officer. Gilmore's jurisdiction will include companies from the Universities of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa.

Typical Day? They're All Different - Crooks Says

"The opera singer," says Richard Crooks, tenor, who will be heard here tomorrow evening, has no "typical day." Every day is different, according to the varied demands which prepare him for the one important event, "the show."

"There are two sorts of days—when you sing and when you don't. Performance days require a strict routine of rest and care. Singing an opera performance is a taxing job and physical care is necessary, that you may be at your best for the audience which has paid you the courtesy of coming to hear you."

The Day Begins
"On singing days, I arise at 8:30, breakfast on fruit juice, hot cereal and toast, rest about an hour, then vocalize for a while. I read, write letters, and talk as little as possible. If the day is fine, and not too icy, I take a brisk walk before noon. Then comes my dinner—meat, green vegetables, and stewed fruit. I rest again until about 4 o'clock. Then I begin to think about getting down to the opera house."

"No later than 5, I have a very light lunch—tea, an egg, and some orange juice; but I take nothing that might rasp my throat or produce mucus (which milk would do)."

"I like to leave home early, to arrive at my dressing room a full two hours before the curtain. That gives me plenty of time to get used to the temperature of the house, to dress with care, to allow for unforeseen difficulties with costumes, etc."

"Next comes the call boy and then—the show is on!"

Experiments in the Theater

Directors, Actors Get Work Out in Mable's Experimental Series

By WALTER H. HOGAN

Mention experiments and one usually thinks of the chemistry or physics laboratory. Something in the way of science. But Prof. E. C. Mable's project in the field of dramatic arts—the "experimental" theater—does some excellent testing in its own right.

The productions are a practice ground for directors and actors. They help authors of new plays to see the flaws in their work.

First Nighters
For the privilege of attending, members of the "First Nighters" club write criticisms for the benefit of persons involved in the production. The performances are not open to the general public, because they are just "experiments." But some are extremely successful and the audience gets a real treat. As, for instance, Thursday night when, for the first time on any stage, the experimental theater presented "BeeBee," a new play by Arthur Clifton Lamb, G of Prairie View, Tex. It was a Negro play written by a Negro and interpreted by Negroes—a happy combination for an experiment far from failure.

C. Stewart in Lead
Carolyn Stewart, G of Charleston, W. Va., played the leading role of BeeBee Walker, the girl who was so homely her mother called her a "buzzard baby." The play revolves around the struggle of BeeBee, who becomes a doctor and wants to organize a hospital in the south.

Four Iowa Citizens were members of the cast. Helen R. Lemme was Susie Walker; LeRoy Hester, Jeff Walker; Betty Tate, Naomi Walker, and Carl E. Hardiman, Martin "Country" Lee. University students who had roles in the production included William P. Shelton, E1 of Detroit, Mich.; Caesar Rainey, Alfred L. Woodridge, G of Baltimore, Md., as Doctor Rainey; Victor Moore, A1 of Waukegan, Ill.; and Jim, and Marguerite Greene, A1 of Des Moines, as Ella Jones.

The only white members of the cast were Robley Evans, A2 of Kent, Ohio, as Mr. Harrison, who wanted to help BeeBee in her theater in Macbride auditorium. Author of the Negro play about the struggles to organize a hospital in the south is Arthur Clifton Lamb, G of Prairie View, Tex. The play was under the direction of Robert Whitehand, G of Tulsa, Okla.

work, and Miriam Peterson, u of Medfield, Mass., as A Woman.

Whitehand Directs
Director of the production was Robert Whitehand, G of Tulsa, Okla. "Behind the scenes" people included Wayne Bundy, A4 of Ogdon, Utah, as stage manager and technician; Miriam Peterson as bookholder; and Marjorie Jackson, G of Iowa Falls, in charge of make-up. The stage crew was Miriam Phipps, G of South Euclid, Ohio; Ambrose Schenk, G of Utica, S. D.; Robert Wolber, A3 of Peoria, Ill.; lights, Keith Porter and Florence Christiansen, G of Denison; properties, Don Sobieske, A4 of Mason City; costumes, Gloria Franks, A1 of Cedar Rapids, and Marilyn Hammer, A1 of Geneseo, Ill.

When Playwright Lamb took his bow at the conclusion of the play after the long applause and cries of "Author," it wasn't his first appearance before a university audience. He played the role of Abraham McCranie opposite Miss Stewart as Goldie McAllister in the successful experimental production of Paul Green's "In Abraham's Bosom" (in "The Abraham's Bosom" of the University of Iowa). Earlier he directed an all-white cast in his one-act comedy of Negro sideshow life, "She Died for a Prince."

Other Plays
Lamb has written a number of one-acts, but his first long play, "God's Great Acres," was produced last year at Prairie View State college, where he served as an instructor two years. In 1931 he received his B. A. at Grinnell, where he won the Henry York Steiner prize in playwriting with his "Shades of Cottonlips." "I have a couple of long plays under way now," said Lamb. One is as yet untitled. The one which will be completed in September is called "Gadfly from Glory."

In the field of lyric poetry the name of Paul Lawrence Dunbar is well known. Perhaps, in the future, the name of Arthur Clifton Lamb will be recognized in the field of playwriting.

'Who's Who,' County History Planned Here

Two representatives of the Iowa Press association, Wayne Wilt and Mrs. James A. Hall, are in Johnson county compiling data and securing the services of local historians to collect a summary of the history of the county itself.

Material which is gathered will be used in a statewide publication, "Who's Who in Iowa." From 12,000 to 15,000 Iowans will be represented biographically preceding each sketch of the history of the county.

A list of people has been selected because of their active civic life or because they have attained unusual recognition in their respective fields. The volume will contain no commercial advertising.

The association, composed of newspapers in Iowa, has been requested by various groups throughout the state to undertake this task of compiling a complete history of Iowa and its leading citizens.

The publication will probably appear early next fall, it was announced.

THE BOOK PARADE—

'AEROSPHERE': A Gold Mine for the Air-Minded

By LUCIEN ZACHAROFF
(Editor's Note: The following dispatch to this paper was written by Lucien Zacharoff, author of "This is War!" and other books; commentator on flying affairs for the leading American and European newspapers, magazines, syndicates and aviation journals. He has made a special study of civilian pilot training throughout the world, as sponsored by various governments, and his article herewith is of particular interest to the air-minded in American colleges.)

NEW YORK, April 30—There is gold in that there mountain called 'Aerosphere,' the new international annual—I call it a mountain because one can't very well designate as a mere hill a book that weighs nearly 12 pounds.

It is safe to prophesy that before long this extraordinary publication will become an inseparable companion of teachers and students alike in schools participating in the Civil Aeronautics Authority's Civilian Training Program. This rather safe prediction is based on the simple fact that a flying student pops an average of 1,001 questions in connection with his course, while an average instructor is called on to answer them.

Meet "Aerosphere," ladies and gentlemen!

It has virtually all the answers.

For instance? As students, you may want to learn the specifications and performance of training ships. They are all in the modern-aircraft section of "Aerosphere," including the photos. In the same section you have an opportunity to compare American training planes with their counterparts abroad, where young Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans are using them for considerably grimmer purposes. Here, too, are similarly comprehensive though succinct accounts of all other types of modern aircraft—military, commercial, private.

Or, perhaps you are wondering how to obtain a job in the flourishing aviation industry? As good a way as any to plan your campaign of application letters or personal appearances is to consult carefully "Aerosphere's" trade directory section which lists alphabetically firms and organizations even remotely connected with aviation, including the names of executives who, too, may be wondering . . . as to how to get in touch with you. There are 274 pages solving this problem for you, and they include foreign firms as well, over 6,500 organizations in all.

At the beginning of this monumental compendium there is an 844-page section devoted to the world's aircraft engines, a complete story with hundreds upon hundreds of illustrations, describing the design, construction and performance of every aero engine ever produced anywhere in the world, from the epochal creations of Wright Brothers down to the very latest.

There is a statistical section of 63 large pages, and so on, far 'finto the night.' Altogether, there are 1,420 pages and 2,055 illustrations on heavy coated paper. "Aerosphere" is twice as thick and four times as heavy as the New York City telephone directory. I had to nurse my arm and recuperate in general for a week after trying to bring home a copy in the New York subway rush hour. And if I ever get a chance to live my life over again, I shall be willing to undergo the same agony, because no one in aviation can afford to be without this completest of works.

I think I can clinch my argument with the greatest of ease by mentioning that "Aerosphere's" editor is Glenn D. Angle himself—well-known consulting engineer, pioneer aero-engine designer, author of authoritative technical volumes and for a number of years in charge of engine design for the U. S. Army. An associate fellow of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, he has been for some years technical editor of Aero Digest and used to be professor of mechanical engineering.

Any other questions, class? Don't ask me; make sure of getting the right answer, by looking it up in "Aerosphere."

Tributes to Iowa's Gilmore, Grinnell's Nollen

President D. W. Morehouse of Drake university, Des Moines, paid tribute to two retiring university presidents in Iowa in an address delivered recently to a meeting of the Iowa College President's association.

"It is true," President Morehouse commented, "that paper never refuses ink and that praise per se is unbecoming real personalities. Nevertheless, there are occasions when a true and sincere expression of our appreciation is demanded and there are individuals who merit such recognition because of the conspicuous service they have rendered."

Praises Nollen

The Drake president then paid his tribute to President John S. Nollen of Grinnell college, pointing out his background and linking it with the many years of academic service he has given to Iowa.

"In quite sharp contrast to the development and functions of the small liberal arts college," the speaker continued, "is our great state university.

"While it too had its beginnings in the pioneer days, its development and functions have been along entirely different lines. Anyone who assumes the leadership of a state university with its intricate complexes must have high courage, ineluctable standards and unassailable integrity.

Leadership

"It is one thing to know the pole star; it is another thing to recognize the arrangements and relations of the constellations and not lose oneself in the galaxy. No institution ever grows beyond its leadership and the fact that our own state university in a comparatively short time has taken first rank among the great universities of the world is proof of the adequacy of its leadership.

"The roster of Iowa presidents is not unduly long and like the American Men of Science there are a few starred names which stand out because of their peculiar contribution and service to the institution. A great university grows in waves even as Planck's theory of the distribution of energy. Of these bundles of growth there might be noted as conspicuous in our younger institutions—the spiritual, the physical and the scholastic.

E. A. Gilmore

"President Eugene A. Gilmore's name will be starred in the latter group. He came to the presidency of the state university following a conspicuous leader in the physical domain and in my judgment has brought to a high point the scholastic constant. His peculiar background of legal training, statesmanship and generic culture, has fitted him particularly for the task he assumed.

"He has fulfilled Elliott's prayer for a president with his 'Habit of quiet, unobtrusive, self-regulated conduct not accepted from others or influenced by the vulgar breath; reticence, reserve, not many acquaintances but a few intimate friends; carrying in his face his character so plainly to be seen by the most casual observer that nobody ever made to him a dishonest proposal."

'Our Appreciation'

"Your colleagues, the Iowa College Presidents, take this opportunity to extend to you, President John S. Nollen of Grinnell college and President Eugene A. Gilmore of the State University of Iowa, our appreciation of the privilege of working with you through these trying years in academia. We would be justly appreciative of your leadership, your counsel and your understanding, but most of all of your respective personalities.

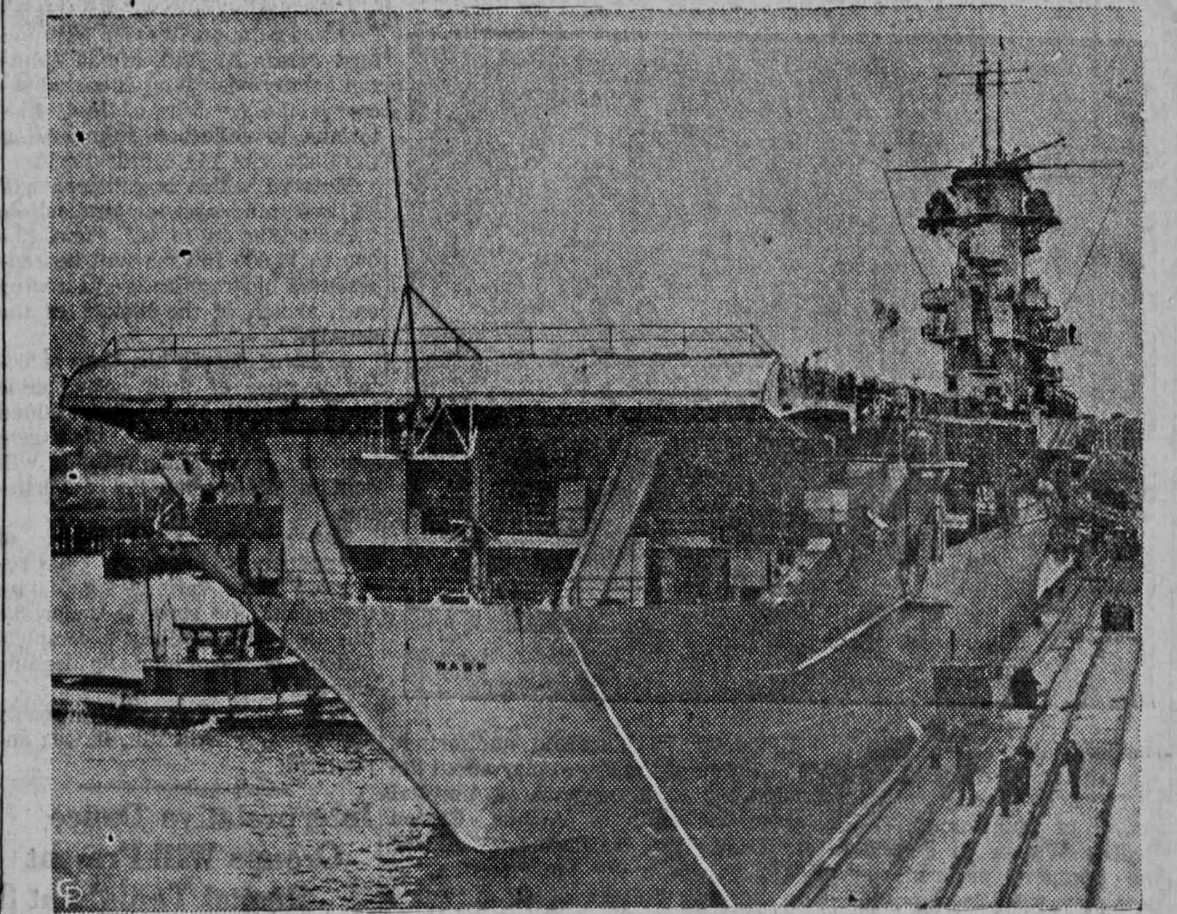

End of Active Service

"And now that your active service among the Iowa College Presidents is about to close we congratulate ourselves that the radiations from your work among us will continue to irradiate our own efforts and guide our thinking."

Following the address by President Morehouse, the association approved and adopted the address as its expression of appreciation for the "long and valuable services of Presidents Nollen and Gilmore to higher education in Iowa and that the secretary be instructed to forward copies to both retiring presidents."

sibility of success of the plan—nor do I doubt it now—but because I doubted that it would strike the imagination of the world in the manner that it should.

"But I felt that there was some power in the idea, especially so because it is not in any sense an offer of reward for an assassination, and so I have come to believe that it will indeed catch people's imagination."

Slight Chance

Church said that although the group backing the project realized the possibility of achieving its aim was slight, they decided to make the offer anyway on the ground that the capture of Hitler would avert untold suffering.

Recalling that after the close of the World War a group of Americans had tried to capture the former Kaiser Wilhelm in Holland, Church observed "there is in the record an actual case of a try at such a grandiose adventure."

Denouncing Hitler as "the common enemy of mankind," Church said the Nazi chancellor was actuated by the "same criminal motive which has guided the destroyers of civilization of other times."

"He is consumed with the desire of conquering the world for the mere pleasure of conquering the world."

Problems Involved

The Carnegie institute head said he realized it would "be unwise" to attempt to deliver Hitler, if captured, to the League of Nations at Geneva, for the Reich's army would quickly overrun little Switzerland.

"The proper goal would be England," he said. "But the question of trial would be too big for Great Britain or any other one country. A court of all the civilized nations of the world should try such a case, and the United States should be a member of such a court."

Church told the Times that the tribunal would establish a "magnificent precedent" for any "adventurer" who hereafter "made war upon a peaceful world."

Precedent? Death!

"That precedent would say that such a man would be held personally responsible for his crime and would be executed in punishment for it."

Church said the names of sponsors of the Hitler reward would not be made public, but that they were amply able and willing to pay it if the terms were fulfilled.

ity which could be justified only if the military situation were beyond repair.

"If indeed that be the case it would be criminal to urge the government to throw away any more valuable lives in a hopeless or almost hopeless effort to retrieve it (the military situation), but searching questions will have to be asked," he said.

Britain's precautions in the Mediterranean were disclosed in an authoritative statement. It said "pronouncements by Italians in responsible positions and the attitude of the Italian press have been recently of such a character as to make it necessary for his majesty's government to take precautions as regards British shipping which would normally pass through the Mediterranean."

The statement added it was hoped circumstances soon would permit cancellation of the special precautions.

Before The War

At the outbreak of the war, until it was clear Italy was staying non-belligerent, Britain routed her shipping around the cape instead of through the Mediterranean.

It was not apparent whether the order tonight applied to all British shipping using the Mediterranean, or only to ships making continuous voyages through that sea.

Sinclair, who voiced his warning in a speech at Glasgow, declared the government must decide on vigorous measures and determined action in Norway, or remaining neutrals would rush to the German bandwagon.

He struck sharply at "false prophets telling us Hitler has missed the bus"—a phrase which Prime Minister Chamberlain used recently in describing Adolf Hitler's strategy.

"That reminds me of the prophecy that Munich meant 'peace in our time,'" said Sir Archibald, in another reference to Chamberlain.

F. R. Remarks On New Book

Finds U. S. Policy Outline 'Interesting' In Comments on War

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—President Roosevelt termed extremely interesting today a new book which depicts the administration as committed to a policy of sending no troops abroad, but of helping the allies by methods short of war.

The book, American White Paper, also expressed the opinion that the United States may have to decide by 1942 whether to aid the allies by "methods no longer short of war" or take the consequences of a German victory in Europe. It was written by Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner, Washington columnists.

The volume recounts in direct quotations conversations which the authors say took place between Mr. Roosevelt and members of his official family.

Its authors say further that should the allies lose the war, the United States would be forced to "treble our navy, radically alter our economic system," and "bid farewell to the historic freedom for which the founders of this republic toiled and fought."

Conquest--

3,000-foot mountain trails, northward from Tynset, had reached the Trondheim-Dombas-Hamar-Oslo railway, southwest of Storen, and there met a southbound force from Trondheim.

The officers of these two forces shook hands solemnly. (Presumably the southbound force had fought its way through allied units at Storen, 35 miles south of Trondheim.)

Then came the word that the main German column, fighting its way through the Gudbrands valley from the south, had occupied Dombas, which is 100 miles south of Trondheim.

Still later, the force following the railway down from Storen took over the station of Opdal, half way between Storen and Dombas.

"Therefore the main rail connection from Oslo to Trondheim is in German hands," said the high command.

German forces also are west of Storen on the eastern line of the railway, fighting up from Roros and the Glomma river.

Breaking of the brief allied siege of Trondheim, in German eyes, not only cracked the lower jaw of the attempted pincers on the port but effectively prevented the allies from making any land connection between their widely separated two landing points, Andalsnes on the south of Trondheim and Namsos on the north.

Moreover, heavy German reinforcements may now be brought up to Trondheim, if the land line from Oslo can be maintained. The Germans say they are landing troops and supplies without interruption at Oslo.

Authorized sources admitted that every difficulty the allies could muster was placed in their way, but insisted the strategy of advancing from Oslo simultaneously in north, northwest and westerly directions was 100 per cent successful.

"Question of Time"

The Germans say it is only a question of time before they mop up the allied troops between Dombas and Andalsnes with bombers and mechanized forces. Farther south, the Germans are rapidly closing the gap around Voss on the Bergen-Oslo railway, despite Norwegian opposition.

Today's feat, said DNB, the German news agency, was accomplished despite British initiative in throwing their regiments as far as possible to the front, in destroying bridges in cooperation with the Norwegians and building earthworks wherever possible for defense.

Pointing out that the distance covered in 20 days of fighting is as far as from Berlin to Nurnberg, DNB asserted the marching feat alone was "remarkable" in the rugged, icy mountainland.

Air Chief Testifies

The board that released U. S. war planes to foreign purchasers was told "by implication" that the United States must help the Allies, Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, above, chief of the U. S. Army Air Corps, testified before the senate naval affairs committee. He did not reveal who made the statement.

And what did he talk to them about? The "Art of Feeling Sorry for Each Other" as from an oldtimer to the younger generation of physicians. His talk was divided into two parts, in the first of which he "felt sorry" for the students, and the second in which he gave them the chance to "feel sorry" for him.

In criticizing some of the present methods of teaching, Dr. Hertzler started off with a bang. "A year ago I spoke at the University of Chicago on 'How to Get an Education in Spite of the Faculty,'" he said. "Some of the faculty members sneaked in, unbeknownst to me, and it didn't set so well. I knew the way the boys yelled that I'd covered too much territory." Faculty members, as well as students, doubled up at this point in his lecture.

His "pet peeves," he said, were "standardizers" and "teachers who make students afraid of them." The former, especially, give him "a pain." He cited the instance of one who "came to Kansas and tried to tell me how to run my hospital. If he does what I told him to do," he said solemnly, "I don't think that we'll ever meet again."

Dr. Hertzler believes experience has it all over book learning. "Nine-tenths of what I was taught, never happened," he declared. "It ain't all in the books so I guess I'll stick around for quite a spell, as long as I can see now."

"Medicine was in a bad way once and we hollered for the universities to come take us in," he continued, "and I mean we HAVE been took!"

Dr. Hertzler is really a native Iowan, having been born in West Point, "down in Lee county—where I spent my boyhood." As he stepped stiff-leggedly off the Rocket in Iowa City yesterday morning, his middlewestern drawl, angular figure, and flapping coat tails betrayed him as a son of the soil. Shy about having his picture taken, he exclaimed when asked about his early life in Iowa—"Now why bring that up!"

He was brought to the Iowa campus by Alpha Omega Alpha, medical society, and was the guest of Dr. Frank R. Peterson, head of general surgery, while in Iowa City. 'Horse and Buggy Doctor' He Brings Experiences, Ideas, Humor to S. U. I. Audience

By LAYTON HURST

A "horse and buggy doctor" stood up before an auditorium full of scientifically trained specialists and medical students last night in University hospital, and kept them literally hanging on the edges of their seats in laughter and applause for what was probably the shortest 45 minutes of lecture they have known this year.

In order to see and hear Arthur E. Hertzler, the witty 70-year-old country doctor from Halstead, Kan., whose story of his professional life as "The Horse and Buggy Doctor" they have well thumbed, doctors, nurses, dieticians and students, many of them just off duty and still in uniform, pushed their way into the small room at 8 o'clock to stand or sit on crowded seats in an overheated, stuffy atmosphere.

And what did he talk to them about? The "Art of Feeling Sorry for Each Other" as from an oldtimer to the younger generation of physicians. His talk was divided into two parts, in the first of which he "felt sorry" for the students, and the second in which he gave them the chance to "feel sorry" for him.

In criticizing some of the present methods of teaching, Dr. Hertzler started off with a bang. "A year ago I spoke at the University of Chicago on 'How to Get an Education in Spite of the Faculty,'" he said. "Some of the faculty members sneaked in, unbeknownst to me, and it didn't set so well. I knew the way the boys yelled that I'd covered too much territory." Faculty members, as well as students, doubled up at this point in his lecture.

His "pet peeves," he said, were "standardizers" and "teachers who make students afraid of them." The former, especially, give him "a pain." He cited the instance of one who "came to Kansas and tried to tell me how to run my hospital. If he does what I told him to do," he said solemnly, "I don't think that we'll ever meet again."

Dr. Hertzler believes experience has it all over book learning. "Nine-tenths of what I was taught, never happened," he declared. "It ain't all in the books so I guess I'll stick around for quite a spell, as long as I can see now."

"Medicine was in a bad way once and we hollered for the universities to come take us in," he continued, "and I mean we HAVE been took!"

Dr. Hertzler is really a native Iowan, having been born in West Point, "down in Lee county—where I spent my boyhood." As he stepped stiff-leggedly off the Rocket in Iowa City yesterday morning, his middlewestern drawl, angular figure, and flapping coat tails betrayed him as a son of the soil. Shy about having his picture taken, he exclaimed when asked about his early life in Iowa—"Now why bring that up!"

McKay Named To Head Club

Dentistry Freshman Elected President Of Organization

Jim McKay, D1 of Dubuque, was elected president of Newman club last night in Iowa Union at the final business meeting of the year. Other officers of the club were also elected at that time.

Jean Foley, A2 of Manson, was elected vice-president; Rosemary Moran, A2 of Freeport, Ill., secretary, and Glen Dyer, A2 of Ledyard, treasurer.

By nomination of one of the club's members, a special office, that of publicity manager, was unanimously given to Jack Hagens, J3 of Missoula, Mont.

Final plans for the Newman club banquet, to be held in the river room of Iowa Union May 6 at 6 p. m., were given by Dick McMahon, A3 of Fort Dodge, present vice-president and chairman of the banquet. At that time, he said, the Newman Club Year, an eight-page pamphlet concerning the activities of the club during the past year, will be given to those in attendance.

In addition, numerous guests and friends of the club will attend this first all-Newman club banquet.

"The banquet will be the climax of a highly successful year of the Newman club," said Herb McHugh, A4 of Chicago, Ill., present president of the club. "It will be a fitting send-off to next year's newly elected members," he added.

Father Donald Hayne, Newman club chaplain, spoke briefly to the members on the evening of officers. Father Hayne stressed the importance of choosing officers who will not go backwards with the work done by the present members but will attempt to make still greater advancements during the coming school year.

Father Hayne pointed out that one of the better moves made by this year's club was enrolling over 400 members where there had been slightly over 250 in 1938-39.

Newly elected officers will be installed next Sunday evening at the banquet. Tickets for Newman club members may be acquired from any Newman club officer or from Father Hayne.
