Britain's Air Force Raids Libya, East African Eritrea

English Announce Capture Of Italian Vessel in Red Sea

Prize Ship Loaded With 5,000 Tons of Bombs For Italian East African Air Force; Claim 'Great Success'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LONDON, June 11—Britain's air force raided the desert airdromes in Italian Libya and East African Eritrea today, backing up with bombs the allied declarations of readiness to meet Mussolini.

These blows, along with seven Italian raids on the British naval base at Malta, were the first struck in the new theater of war—the Mediterranean and Red seas.

British announcements said "we caught them napping this time."

A prize claimed by the British was the capture in the Red sea of the 10,000-ton Italian vessel Umbria, loaded with 5,000 tons of bombs intended for the Italian east African air force and thousands of tons of cement.

"Great success" attended the attacks of long-range Blenheim bombers on Italy's principal military airfields in Libya, which threatened Egypt and the Suez canal, and near Asmara, in Eritrea, Italian East Africa, where Italian air bases threatened to cut allied communications through the Red sea.

Swooping down in the desert dawn, British bombs made repeated hits on hangars, gasoline dumps and bomb dumps and destroyed many planes, the British said. They admitted encountering anti-aircraft and fighter opposition and losing three planes in the operation.

"Casualties Slight"
A British war office announcement said "casualties were slight and little damage was done" by the seven Italian raids, between dawn and noon, on Malta, British naval base off the tip of Italian Sicily. Two Italian bombers were declared shot down by ground defenders.

Meanwhile the British navy pounced on the Italian merchant marine from Gibraltar to Africa, and Scotland Yard undertook a roundup of every one of the 25,000 Italians in Britain.

Extending action in which 700 Italians were seized last night amidst rioting, police tonight ordered every Italian in Britain to report immediately to police stations.

Canal Closed to Italy
It was reported here that the Suez canal has been effectively closed to Italian shipping by the allied naval forces.

With the British fleet clamping down on Italy's sea life lines for supplies and raw materials, more than 50,000 tons of Italian merchant shipping was reported in British hands or scuttled.

Uncounted other Italian ships sought shelter in neutral ports. British guns block the route home through Gibraltar or Suez.

Clement R. Attlee, lord privy seal, told commons grimly: "Italy, like Germany, will feel the blockade."

Geneva Suffers In Air Raid By Foreign Plane

GENEVA, June 12 (Wednesday) (AP)—At least one person was killed and six injured in an exclusive suburb of Geneva, seat of the League of Nations, early today when a foreign war plane, apparently Italian, dropped bombs near a French fort.

Geneva was awakened at 2 a.m. by air raid warnings, and citizens shivering in their night clothes, rushed to bomb shelters.

An all clear signal was sounded after 35 minutes.

House Passes Defense Bill Boosting Taxes

Increases Federal Debt Limit to 49 Billion With Little Opposition

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP)—With only six adverse votes, the house passed a defense financing bill today boosting taxes $1,004,000,000 a year and increasing the federal debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $49,000,000,000.

The measure raced through in a single day by a roll-call vote of 396 to 6. The six members opposing the bill were Reps. Crawford (R-Mich.), Thill (R-Wis.), Wolcott (R-Mich.), Alexander (R-Minn.), Thorakson (R-Mont.) and Marcantonio (A-N.Y.).

Senate Approval Expected
Secretary Morgenthau will explain the bill to the senate finance committee tomorrow and senate approval is expected next week.

Senator Byrd (D-Va.) said that Administration leaders had agreed to incorporate his amendment for a 10 per cent reduction in all federal expenditures except those for defense and fixed charges.

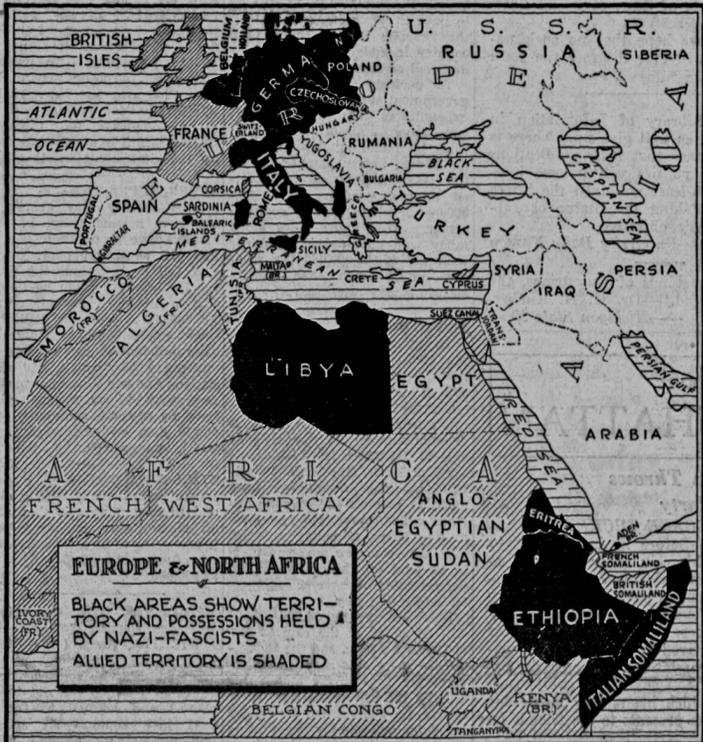

The bill which won such wholehearted approval in this election year would raise all present taxes and increase the number who must pay them by more than 2,000,000. Corporation and manufacturers' excise taxes also would be raised.

Increase Debt Limit
The legislation would permit the government to go into debt an additional $4,000,000,000 to build up the army and navy and then provide means of paying off that debt within five years.

The estimated $1,004,000,000 from the taxes would more than retire the indebtedness and the excess could be used for general treasury purposes.

What critical debate there was came from the republicans and was directed chiefly at administration spending and the linking of a debt increase to taxes. These critics, however, said they would support the bill because it provides for better defenses.

Duce's Decision Also Plunges Africa Into War

This Central Press map shows embattled Allied and Axis powers and the north African colonies belonging to them which now also enter the struggle because of their proximity to each other. With the spread of hostilities to the African continent the European war becomes in actuality World War II.

French Residents Hear Guns Roar as Germans Go Forward

Army Officials Announce That Enemy Seeks To Force Decision West of Oise; Allies Promised Aid

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The German invaders thrust so close to Paris early today (Wednesday) that persons in the northern residential districts heard the mutter of the big guns and watched the flashes of battle like white lightning on the horizon.

In the center of the partly-deserted city, there was the quiet such as precedes a storm.

The French command announced last night that the enemy apparently was seeking to force a decision west of the Oise, which would be almost directly north of Paris, and said that the dog-tired but still fighting French armies to the north-east of the city had withdrawn to the south bank of the historic Marne.

On the west flank, the French were struggling to prevent the Germans from throwing bridges across the Seine.

As quick aid for the hard-pressed French and their British allies, the United States Steel corporation announced that the allies would get $37,600,000 worth of surplus American munitions, ordnance and equipment disposed of by the U. S. war department to the U. S. Steel Export Co.

Italy's entry into the war as Germany's partner produced a wide-flung bustle of aerial bombardments in the Mediterranean, Red sea and even in the African interior.

Rome itself had an air raid alarm, but no attack on the city was disclosed.

The South African air force heavily bombed Banda Hill and other objectives in Italian Moyale, opposite Britain's Kenya colony.

The British bombed the main Italian air bases in Eritrea on the southern Red sea and in Libya on the Mediterranean, and claimed destruction of planes on the ground and gasoline and bomb supplies.

Italy lashed back with seven air raids on the British naval base at Malta and was reported to have struck at Tunisia and Corsica.

In France, despite sudden thunderstorms which hampered the German planes and tanks, the attack of Adolf Hitler's heavy legions was marked by the "greatest violence" the entire length of the great double-curving line from the sea to the Maginot forts, the French said.

The Germans asserted their armies already were knocking loudly at the outer gates of Paris, and the French acknowledged that the enemy was attempting to force a decision west of the Oise, where the main German line apparently approached closest to Paris on the northwest.

The exact distance remained obscure.

In broad terms, the battle line apparently extended across France in this fashion:

From the Bresle river near its mouth on the channel south and west to Rouen and along the Seine from Rouen to Vernon;

East and northeast to the Oise river and through the forest of Compiègne, (where the World war armistice was signed);

South somewhere near Chateau Thierry and along the Marne to an area southwest of Reims;

Thence north and east around Reims to an area in the Vesle river valley east of Reims;

Almost due north to the Rethel vicinity, and south of the Aisne, along the Reoutine river into the Argonne forest and eastward to the Maginot line.

The French said that under cover of smoke bombs the Germans tried to bridge the Seine between Rouen and Vernon and to ferry tanks across on portable boats, but the defenders were counter-attacking there.

In addition to the German attack west of the Oise, they said German tanks were making an attempt to encircle Reims. A heavy German tank drive from Ferte-Milon to Fere-en-Tardenois found only a French rear guard, the main body already having fallen back to the south bank of the Marne.

The rain, pouring through a pall of bomb-fired battle-smoke that drifted over Paris, fell blackly on the besieged city. Parisian shop fronts were steel shattered, rifle-bearing police patrolled the streets, nearly deserted except for the scurrying of occasional refugees, and silent except for the echo of anti-aircraft fire.

The government already has removed, evidently to Tours in east central France.

From the curving battle front, French Generalissimo Maxime Weygand's armies were declared by the French to be holding firm on the west flank, where the Germans have pushed their column across the Seine.

The east flank is steady in the Argonne forest, the French said, and a violent German offensive in the center, north-east of Paris, is being met in a resounding head-on clash in the Ourcq valley.

The French, however, were reported falling back from the Somme river sector, while hanging onto support points at a great depth pinch off German tank charges and air onslaughts.

The Germans contended that two French armies had lost 400,000 to 500,000 men-captured or killed and that "no uniform French line of defense is left."

Air Alarm Over Rome

Bombs in Chungking Hit Soviet Embassy; American Home Razed

CHUNGKING, June 11 (AP)—The Soviet embassy was partly demolished by bombs today as Japanese warplanes subjected this provisional Chinese capital to the heaviest attack since May of last year.

It was the first time a foreign embassy in Chungking suffered a direct hit.

The residence of Andrew Bassi of Chicago, which was damaged in yesterday's raid, was razed by today's. All his belongings were lost.

Walls of the headquarters of foreign correspondents were tottering, the Associated Press office building being on the point of collapse.

Amid the ruins of his embassy grounds, torn up by four 500-pound bombs, the Soviet ambassador declared he and his staff would carry on, although the main building was unusable.

Italian Plans Not Revealed By Mussolini

ROME, June 12 (Wednesday) (AP)—This ancient capital experienced its first air raid alarm early today and was blacked out completely.

Whether enemy planes actually visited the city was not determined.

Italy, so newly joined as Germany's active partner in the war against Britain and France, moved secretly in her belligerency.

The nation still awaited the first Italian war communique, forecast for 10 p.m. last night, but delayed. (The Italian radio announced it would be issued instead at 10 a.m. (3 a.m., CST) today.)

(British reports told of seven Italian air raids on Malta; a Geneva dispatch said Crown Prince Umberto planned to throw his Italian shock troops against the French in the southern half of the maritime Alps; and meagre advices from the Swiss telegraphic agency reported attacks on French Tunisia and Corsica.)

(British planes raided Italian Libya and Eritrea, in East Africa, bombing air bases; and South Africa planes raided Italian Moyale, near Britain's African Kenya colony.)

Il Duce assumed supreme command of Italy's armed forces "on every front" in the war proclaimed to drive the British and French from their long-held position in the Mediterranean.

He took over with the consent of 70-year-old King Vittorio Emanuele who went into the field with the troops and announced his intention of remaining at the front as he did in the World War.

Italian troops moved quickly into valleys and mined bridges on their side of the French frontier last night as soon as the frontier was closed.

F. D. R. Rushes Plans To Help

President Endorses 'Stop Hitler Now' Movement; Houses Act

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, June 11—Warmly endorsing an organized "stop Hitler now" movement, President Roosevelt worked today to rush all possible material help to the allies, while congress continued its rapid-fire action on the national defense program, now grown to $5,021,619,622.

Reporters attending Mr. Roosevelt's press conference noticed lying on his desk the full-page advertisement which was inserted in many newspapers today by the "committee to defend America by aiding the allies." It bore a big black streamer: "Stop Hitler Now."

"We can help — if we will act now," was one of its statements, "we can help by sending planes, guns, munitions, food. We can help to end the fear that American boys will fight and die in another Flanders, closer to home."

A reporter asked the president for comment on the advertisement. He replied that he had not paid much attention to it until he learned it had been written by Robert S. Sherwood, dramatist, author of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," and the current play on Finland, "There Shall Be No Night."

Without meaning, Mr. Roosevelt said, to endorse each phrase contained in the advertisement, he thought it was a mighty good thing, a great piece of work, educational to the people of this country. It was well, he said, that William Allen White, the chairman of the committee, was placing such things before the people of the country.

U-Boat Threatens United States Liner

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY
ABOARD S. S. WASHINGTON AT SEA, June 11 (AP)—Calm under the supervision of officers of this United States liner, men, women and children climbed into lifeboats in the grey dawn today when Capt. Harry Manning held at bay one unidentified submarine which had threatened to torpedo her in "10 minutes" and outmaneuvered another.

"We are an American ship," "We are an American ship," Captain Manning repeated over and over in answering the signaled threats of the first undersea boat.

This finally satisfied the submarine commander who gave the Washington a "go on" signal.

There were few, if any instances of terror among the 1,020 passengers and 570 crew members. All donned lifebelts for the emergency. Excitement from the meeting with this first submarine had scarcely died down when a second undersea craft was sighted on the horizon.

This time, Capt. Manning did not wait to receive threats of a torpedo. He adopted the tactics of an old-time, experienced navigator.

He swiftly swung the prow of the Washington in the direction of the rising sun.

This maneuver put the Washington between the sun and the second submarine. Its blinding rays prevented the submarine commander from seeing the American ship.

Capt. Manning then ordered full steam ahead and left the submarine far behind.

The undersea raiders came upon the Washington, which was plainly marked with great American flags on her sides, about 180 miles off speeding toward Galway, Ireland, the Spanish coast, as she was to pick up more Americans fleeing war zones.

It was not far from where the Argentine steamer Uruguay and the French freighter Marie Jose were sunk on May 29 by submarines.

(Dispatches from Berlin claimed these vessels as victims of German submarines.)

During the first tense moments, passengers hastily lined up, clambering, in their turn, into lifeboats. Some smiled but others were grim.

One man said "We have been so accustomed to the horrors of war on the European continent, that perhaps we are accustomed to any danger."

Many women wore only flimsy nightgowns. Men passengers tossed them blankets and coats.

While most of the passengers knew of the danger which threatened them, others at first thought it to be merely a boat drill.

Then officers with megaphones called out: "We are now running away from a submarine."

Brandish Johnson, an invalid American returning from Paris, was carried in his chair to the boat deck.

When the alarm was sounded, the crew responded with perfect efficiency and coolness, matched only by the calm of the passengers.

• A Policy for America

The president of the United States, noticeably disheartened by Italy's declaration of war, delivered at Charlottesville, Va., late Monday what has been perhaps the first and only clear statement of American foreign policy as of today.

Two obvious courses will be pursued simultaneously, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

"We will," he said, "extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation, and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipments and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defense."

In the national capital, the president's address was greeted with comment ranging from 100 per cent endorsement to cool pessimism.

CAPITOL COMMENT

Said Senator Minton of Indiana: "He certainly reflects the sentiments of the country, and I know he reflects my views. I am going to support his program 100 per cent."

Said Representative Rogers of Massachusetts: "The speech sounded to me like a prelude to the declaration of war."

Said Chairman Bloom of the house foreign affairs committee: "The president's address proves conclusively that he had continued his efforts to bring about peace in the world, and I doubt if any Americans disapprove or disagree with any word he uttered."

Said Senator Adams of Colorado: "A wise corollary to the Monroe Doctrine would be the doctrine that we should not interfere with the affairs of Europe."

AMERICA'S VIEWS?

Did the president voice the opinion of America when he declared that this nation would extend its material resources to the allies?

Did Mr. Roosevelt voice the opinion of the nation when he declared that America would speed up the use of those resources in order that "we ourselves may be equal to the task of any emergency and every defense?"

A difficult question, to be sure. But can anyone doubt that in the briefest of months past the citizens of the United States have about-faced in their points of view, chiefly because nobody, least of all the rank and file of America, credited Hitler with the force he has displayed.

Three months ago Lord Haw Haw had his American counterpart.

One month ago Americans were shouting "Why don't the British do something?"

Today a united America is determined to speed its arms program to a point which insures safety for its hemisphere and its possessions.

U. S. POLICY CRYSTALLIZED

This about-face in opinion has been evident across the nation, voiced in newspaper editorial, voiced by public officials in print and over the air.

The president crystallized this new American position in a clear, concise paragraph at Charlottesville Monday. We repeat, it's about the first clear statement of any definite American policy based on a changed and changing world.

In England, the reaction to Roosevelt was one of glad recognition to American championing of the allied cause.

Said official circles there: "The material resources of the United States, added to those of the allies, will prove to be a vital factor in the struggle now going on between democracies of the west and the anti-Christian forces of barbarism."

Said Senator Hatch of New Mexico in Washington: "The president's words today constitute a complete abandonment of any pretense toward so-called neutrality. If this government furnishes material aid to a belligerent, of course we have assumed at least a non-belligerent role."

AMERICA'S NEW ROLE

America entered a new role in world affairs with Roosevelt's pronouncement Monday—that of a nation who has officially sanctioned the cause of England, France and their allied powers.

We believe he voiced the majority opinion of the United States.

With the theater of war spread or spreading now to engulf the whole of Europe, with the belief prevalent in America that loss of the allied cause will "bring the war to America" in the words of Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma, America's new foreign policy is consistent, distinct.

Let us pray that it is effective.

• Des Moines Youth vs. Vice

Adult groups in Des Moines should not be alarmed over activities of young vice crusaders. Pin ball, slot machines and punch boards have drained too many nickels from the seamy jeans of too many youngsters. Since it is youth that is the most sadly exploited, it should be youth that reveals the illegal operation of these gaming devices to the authorities.

In the meantime their slightly older brothers might pause for a grain of thought. To invest or not invest, that is the question. Jack pot, will you come home to daddy? Or is it proper to stake the week's groceries on a punch board?

• Misguided Patriotism

While Professor Hoelty-Nickel directed a patriotic music program on the Luther college campus at Decorah, some thoughtless Decorah youths smeared his home with a red swastika.

Such mistaken patriotism is not only dangerous but inexcusable. Rowdism and vandalism can never be justified, even though masked as sincere devotion to the American scheme of government.

Professor Hoelty-Nickel, true enough, was educated in Germany. But he is an American by birth, conviction and service. His published point of view is unmistakably broad-minded. His every action has probed his loyalty to the tenets of democracy and liberalism.

It is our sincere hope that no such unsavory incident will ever disgrace the Iowa campus.

The German Library of Information in New York might as well give up. There is absolutely no chance that their publications exonerating nazi politics will become best-sellers here—at least not until the Stuka planes begin mistaking the Statue of Liberty for a military objective.

A Man About MANHATTAN

Basil Fomeen Throws A Farewell Party

BY GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Before he hurried off to California with his coin collections, his basifon, his czarist medals, his wife and his accordions Basil Fomeen gave a farewell party for his friends. Fomeen is a cherubic, slightly mad Russian who served with the Whites as an officer and arrived in Manhattan with exactly two cents in his pocket after the experiment failed. He smokes long, white Russian cigarettes which his mother makes for him and which he presents to his friends on all occasions.

This party, held on top of one of Manhattan's tallest hotels, turned out to be a Carpathian Mardi Gras of smoked sturgeon, caviar, smouldering-eyed girls, vodka, and champagne. The vodka was plentifully scattered around on tables in water glasses. There were also plenty of water glasses holding water, which presented a puzzling problem to late arrivals in as much as vodka and water are identical in appearance. Finally Basil made things easier for those who wished to drink water occasionally by dropping jackstraws into the vodka glasses.

It was a noisy, tumultuously sentimental evening. Adia Kuznetzoff flew in from Hollywood just to lend his Russian baritone to the occasion. There was an amplifier on the floor, and a recording machine present. Every note, yell, shout, cheer, laugh, wisecrack, plus all the hum and confusion was instantly recorded and played back to this appreciative audience of newspapermen, Russian chanteuses, dancers, and just people. Through the evening a gypsy orchestra played unremittingly, and a black-eyed girl from the Ural mountains district in Russia sang passionate laments, all in Russian. Most of the songs were Basil's own. Indeed, for favors, his guests were presented with richly ornamented albums of his songs—published in Russian but carrying English translations. Some are melancholy airs, imbued with the traditional melancholy of Moscow maidens whose Cossack lovers are off on dangerous forages. Others are light and gay. All are melodious and catchy.

And just why was Basil Fomeen pulling out from his slip in Manhattan for California?

"I'm tired of New York life. Maybe I will make a great success in California. If not, I will buy me a filling station and write a symphony."

He said, "See that lady with the white hat framed against the window? That is my mother. God bless her." He leaped up and ran across the floor and kissed her cheek. He drank a noisy salute to his friends, introducing first one then another over the amplifier.

"Come" shouted Basil, "let there be more sturgeon and champagne. See that lady across this table with the flower in her hair. That is my wife. God bless her." He leaped across the table and kissed her cheek. There was tumultuous applause. Just as he was saying, "That is my wife. God bless her," his own voice playing back through the amplified recording, was saying, "This is my mother. God bless her."

It was a sort of double talk, with caviar dressing, and in this room the record on the recording machine wasn't the only thing that was whirling.

Down stairs, we hailed a passing cab, waved a fond adieu to Basil, and, with a prayer for Holy Russia on our lips, climbed in and gave the driver directions for getting us home.

Filling the Treasury's Cash Barrel

WASHINGTON—The new tax bill is less than 50 per cent an emergency national defense revenue raiser. It is proposing to raise $5,000,000,000 in additional revenue to pay for only $2,350,000,000 of additional defense expenditures.

The levying of such heavy new taxes is to be justified on several grounds. Foremost seems to be the fact (although this particular reason is not being mentioned much) that the treasury was getting into such a tight position it needed more money in the cash barrel. The administration appears to have decided simply to get all the revenue it could while the country is under the unquestioning spell of defensive needs.

To perfect its strategem, the government slipped the extra new expenditures into the old army and navy appropriations bills. Thus by including the old regular budget outlay planned before the crisis, the program has assumed total proportions of $4,350,000,000 or more to the casual observer. This figure rides along fairly well balanced in headlines with the $5,000,000,000 tax measure—much better than $2,350,000,000 at any rate.

LEGAL DECEPTION

To make the deception legal, the treasury is re-arranging its books. It is taking the $2,000,000,000 of old defense expenditures out of the budget and putting them into a new category with the crisis expenditures so no one will be able to tell which is which.

To make it still more justifiable, an arrangement has been made to pay off the current defense expenditures, old and new, in five years, although no other expenditure of the government is to be paid off in that time, and defense costs were never segregated before that way.

Furthermore the $5,000,000,000 will be raised at the rate of $1,000,000,000 a year, and the $2,350,000,000 represents a two-year expenditure. So on the stump this fall, by the use of this particular mirror, the complicated device can be explained simply as putting the extra new national defense outlays nearly on a pay-as-you-go basis.

There seems to be no limit to what you can do with figures if you set your mirrors to them.

LITTLE OPPOSITION

The above is not editorial observation. It is the news of what the congressional tax makers themselves have been saying about the program, although perhaps not from the housetops.

Nevertheless, no spirited opposition is likely, even from the republicans. For one thing the public generally will never be able to understand the hocus-pocus and there is no reason to believe the public would protest if it did. Af-

FISCAL REFORM

Basic form which has been used for the new revenue is the old La Follette income tax reform. No social reforms are apparent in the measure but it contains a modicum of fiscal reform, re-adjusting exemptions and surtaxes along the general line which Senator Robert La Follette of Wisconsin has long advocated, and which has been three times rejected by congress in recent years.

Practically no public hearings were held on the measure. Less than a half dozen witnesses testified, and these only in connection with the 10 per cent increase in excise taxes. Brevity was due to the necessity for speed and the desire of everyone concerned to avoid controversy. To promote both these purposes, Senate Finance Chairman Pat Harrison has unofficially been working with the house committee and, therefore, the house bill is assured approval by the controlling senate clique.

SUPER, SUPER TAX

Bugs aplenty may abound in the new income rates, but the leaders have promised to use the Flit gun as they appear.

A California accountant found the first creeper when he figured that a nebulous person with a $10,000,000 income in California might not only have to give the state and federal governments the entire $10,000,000 but $6,050 additional. Another figured a married man with $5,000 income might have to pay the same tax as a single man without responsibilities, earning $7,500.

STILL A DEFICIT

One thing that is wholly clear and understandable is that after all this new revenue raising, there is still going to be a treasury deficit of possibly $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000.

What's This Older Generation Coming To?

WICHITA, Kans. (AP)—While his wife wasn't looking, 81-year-old Emory Taggart, retired banker, scampered out to the airport and learned to fly.

"I just couldn't sit around and do nothing after I retired," says the merry-eyed five-foot-two-inches tall, energetic oldster.

When his wife finally heard about it she didn't object.

Oldest Tommy Is 70

LONDON (AP)—Tom Scrase, 70, claims to be the oldest soldier in the British army. Now a private in the Royal Essex regiment, Tom was in the 14th Hussars in South Africa and the Veterinary Corps in 1914-18. Tom slipped by the recruiting officer this time by giving his age as 54. Everything went fine until it was discovered he was in the army 52 years ago. Authorities allowed him to remain.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

From Pigeons To News Agency

BY ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—There's such a look in the eye of Jack Sanders that I don't doubt it when he says 250,000 people in the U. S. hardly can wait to see a certain movie.

The 250,000 are American pigeon-flyers. The movie is "The Man from Fleet Street." According to Jack, who should know, this is the most pigeon-y picture ever made. According to Jack and the look in his eye, it's wonderful.

Jack Sanders is in charge of the nursery (horticultural) at the Warner ranch at Calabasas, but right now he's supplying pigeons from his own lofts for the movie. The pigeons, 36 of 'em, are "supported" by Edward G. Robinson, Edna Best, Albert Basserman and sundry other actors, and the story is the life of Julius Reuter, founder of the great English news association. Reuter used carrier pigeons in lieu of cables in his beginnings, and had a tough time convincing the skeptics of their worth.

Sanders exudes pigeon lore and pigeon-love. He'd tell you pigeons are very knowing, contrary to popular belief that they don't understand a word. Sanders won a 275-mile race with one of his birds just the other day—he selected a father-bird who hurried home to take care of feeding a young one while the mother-bird nursed an egg.

Genevieve Tobin is playing in "No Time for Comedy," directed by her husband, William Keighley. Hollywood is notoriously a happy hunting-ground for relatives, and Keighley said, "Never let it be said, etc." So he discouraged the Tobin selection; he tested, tested and tested; Miss Tobin was tested also; Miss Tobin, over Keighley's protests, was selected by the higher-ups. For one reason, i. e., that nobody in town plays a glittering sophisticate with quite the conviction of Mrs. William Keighley. Mr. Keighley seems quite happy over it, having done his best to defeat the charge of nepotism.

Brian Aherne is playing the role of a well-intentioned old geezer in "Gribovitch," a title you can forget because you won't see it on the marquee. "Gribovitch" was a French movie, now being remade by Director Charles Vidor with Aherne, Rita Hayworth and Glenn Ford.

Aherne is playing a role he thought, and insisted, he couldn't play. This is how it came about: Vidor has just directed Aherne in "My Son, My Son!" One scene in that film—the sequence in which Aherne disguised himself as a miner to study mine conditions—suggested to Vidor that the actor could be "Gribovitch." Aherne protested. Columbia executives persuaded him to test for it regardless.

"I took the test to prove I couldn't do it," says Brian, "and I didn't convince them. I've taken so many tests to prove I could do parts that this was a novelty. In this one, happily, I convinced myself too. I think it will turn out all right."

Byrd's Rescuer to Open Summer Lecture Series

Polar Explorer Will Lecture Friday Evening

Physicists' Session To Feature Authority, Thomas C. Poulter

Thomas C. Poulter, commander of the Snow Cruiser and scientific advisor of the United States Antarctic service expedition, will open the summer university lecture series with an illustrated lecture on the south Iowa Union campus Friday night at 8:15 p.m.

The lecture is open to the public and no tickets are needed. In case of rain the motion picture and talk will be given in Macbride hall, Prof. M. Willard Lampe, chairman, announced.

The visiting lecturer is a brother of Dr. Robert W. Poulter, instructor in botany at Iowa City high school.

Leading Authority

A leading authority on Antarctica and polar exploration, Poulter will speak on "With The Snow Cruiser in Antarctica — The World's Last Frontier."

The lecturer was recently awarded the Congressional medal and the National Geographic society's gold medal for his exploration, scientific and technical research achievements with the second Byrd expedition to the North Pole.

Poulter led a party of three into the dangers of the South polar night to rescue Admiral Byrd during the latter's long illness from carbon monoxide fumes in his underground hut, 123 miles south of Little America, where he had gone alone to conduct important research work.

The harrowing experience caused Poulter to consider means of simplifying Antarctic transportation facilities for future explorations and the new Snow Cruiser was the result.

Poulter's lecture will serve as the feature event on the program of the college physicists' colloquium convening here tomorrow and Friday.

The guest lecturer will make a second appearance before university and Iowa City audience when he leads the round table discussion in the house chamber of Old Capitol Saturday morning at 9 a.m.

To Dedicate Oil Painting

Ward J. Davidson Will Present Portrait Of Department Head

An oil portrait of Prof. H. L. Rietz, head of the department of mathematics, will be presented to the University of Iowa at a dinner here June 20.

Former students of Professor Rietz, members of the Iowa Mathematics Alumni association, commissioned Aden Arnold, formerly of the art department here and present faculty member at the University of Montana, to execute the portrait.

At the dinner honoring the university department head, Ward J. Davidson of Des Moines, secretary of the National Life company, will make the presentation. President Eugene A. Gilmore will accept the portrait for the university.

Ladies Club Meets Today

Mrs. Frank Lechty will be hostess at the card party given by the Ladies club of St. Wenceslaus church at 2:15 this afternoon in the church basement.

Bridge and euchre will be played.

John A. Gilmore Marries Mary Frances Warner in Washington, D. C.

In an afternoon ceremony Saturday Mary Frances Warner, daughter of Mrs. Henry Michael Warner of Washington, D. C., and John Andrew Gilmore, son of President and Mrs. Eugene Allen Gilmore, were married in St. John's Episcopal church in Washington, D. C. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with white peonies and gladioli.

Wearing a princess-styled gown of white tulle, the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Edwin Gordon Fox. Her full-length veil was held by a starched lace de Medici cap; she carried white iris, snapdragons and orchids.

The maid of honor, Julia Rogers Warfield, a cousin of the bride, was dressed in a white marquisette gown on redingote lines and carried deep pink peonies. Dressed similarly were the other attendants, Mrs. John Martin Woodside, Mrs. Field Cheatham, Mrs. John Bradshaw Holt, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. C. Julian Bartlett of New Orleans.

Mary Keonan Hay, the flower girl, wore a long white batiste dress and organza bonnet.

The best man was the bride's cousin, Frederick Howard Warfield of Philadelphia. Prof. Eugene A. Gilmore Jr. of the University of Nebraska, brother of the bridegroom; John Bradshaw Holt of College Park, Md.; Gilbert Fowler White of Chicago, and Charles Henderson were ushers.

Large bowls of white and pink peonies were about the room at the reception in the Washington club after the ceremony. The bride's table was centered with a large bouquet of white garden flowers.

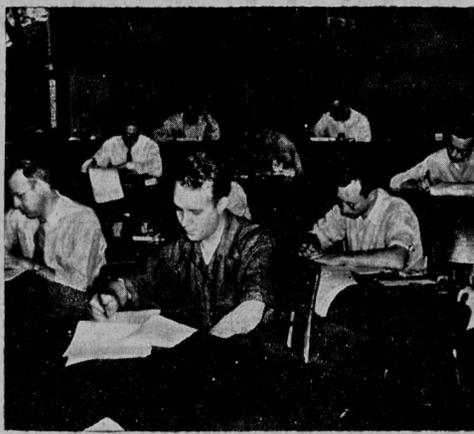

For her traveling costume, Mrs. Gilmore wore a brown and white bolero silk suit with pique accessories and a white orchid. On their return from their wedding trip after July 1, Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore will be at home at 1717 20th street in Washington.

Guests not from Washington included President and Mrs. Gilmore, Prof. and Mrs. Gilmore of Lincoln, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. Fox of Chicago; Elizabeth Gordon Fox of New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Frederick Howard Warfield, Mary Godey Warner and Mrs. Charles E.

Morgan of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. George Stuart Horsey and Mrs. Charles L. Chest of Baltimore; Mrs. Bartlett of New Orleans; Mr. and Mrs. William Lee Fewsmith of Montclair, N. J.; Miss Warfield and Frederick Howard Warfield of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. George Aspinwall of Baltimore and Mrs. James A. Thomas and Eleanor Thomas of White Plains, N. Y.

After Graduation Come Exams

The aftermath of graduation for every young law student is the state bar exam which must be successfully passed before the degree of juris doctor is significant. For the past three days here, 75 students have been examined over 35 legal subjects which are selected by the state board of examiners in an effort to cope with the modern law school curriculum. Results of the bar examinations will be announced in Des Moines June 25 when the successful applicants will take the oath of office before the Iowa supreme court justices.

Mary Ethel Schenk To Marry Clarence Woolridge Today

Ceremony Will Be At Schenk Residence In Families' Presence

Only the immediate family will attend the wedding at 4 o'clock today of Mary Ethel Schenk, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Schenk, 1123 E. College, and Clarence Woolridge, son of Mrs. Carrie Woolridge of Lake City. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's only attendant will be her sister Marjorie Schenk. Margaret Schrock will play the wedding music and Lorraine Hobbs will sing.

A reception will be held after the ceremony in the Schenk home. About 25 guests will share the courtesy. The couple will leave for a short wedding trip later and will be at home in Lake City July 1.

Miss Schenk is a graduate of Iowa City high school and was graduated from the university here at commencement June 3. She was a member of Tau Gamma society.

A graduate of the university college of engineering, Mr. Woolridge is now employed by the Iowa Public Service company in Lake City as a district engineer.

Coralville Resident Entertains Tonight

Mrs. Earl Ewalt, 231 Huston in Coralville, will entertain members of the "500" club in her home tonight. The group will meet at 8 o'clock.

First Forum Series Opens This Afternoon

Prof. H. P. Bowen Speaker; Visiting Professors Guests

Prof. Howard R. Bowen of the college of commerce will open the summer series of campus forums with a discussion of "Balancing the Budget" at 3:10 p.m. this afternoon in the house chamber of Old Capitol.

The meeting to be broadcast over WSUI is open to the public and all persons attending are invited to participate in the discussion.

This year an innovation will be introduced in the forum series. Two persons will be invited to sit with the leader and the chairman for the purpose of questioning the leader following his preliminary remarks.

Prof. Lester Thonsson of the College of the City of New York and Prof. Orville Hitchcock of the University of Akron, who are doing advanced work in speech, will sit with the leader at today's forum.

Prof. Kirk Porter of the political science department is chairman of the forum series planned to give students the opportunity to participate in public discussions. Professor Bowen teaches courses in economic theory and public finance here. He spent a year in England doing research on a study of Great Britain's public finance.

The forum leader received his B.A. degree from the State College of Washington in 1929 and his M.A. degree in 1933. He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Iowa in 1935 and has been a member of the economics department since that time.

Professor Bowen is a member of the American Economic association and the Royal Economic society.

Industrial Head, W. E. Crotley, To Speak Today

"Production Planning and Control of Manufacturing" will be discussed in a lecture in the radio auditorium of the engineering building at 10 o'clock this morning by W. E. Crotley, production manager, International Business Machines Corp. at Endicott, N. Y.

Crotley is a visiting lecturer who has come to Iowa City to address the summer management course devoted to time and motion study.

On the subject of production control, Crotley says: "In many industries the problem of controlling raw materials and parts in process is a major one. It has been demonstrated that such problems can be solved by the application of fundamental principles and suitable techniques."

Harvard Head Will Speak

Dr. David B. Dill, Fatigue Laboratory Director, To Appear Here

Dr. David B. Dill, director of Harvard university's fatigue laboratory, will make his first appearance at the University of Iowa tomorrow when he speaks at the annual physical education conference.

His lectures are on physiologic effects of exercise, to begin at 9:15 a.m. at the senate chamber of Old Capitol and on the influence of climate and weather on physical activity, set for 7:30 p.m. in chemistry auditorium.

The Harvard director's lectures will be followed by open discussions, the program announces.

His research work has given the 49-year-old former Californian a national reputation. Trained at Stanford university as a chemist, he has developed a series of tests to measure the effects of exercises and athletic competition upon the body.

Dr. Dill's work has included studies of many famous athletes. He has set up his apparatus in Madison Square garden and tested such great runners as Don Lash, Glenn Cunningham and Charles Fenske before and after they ran record-breaking races.

- Tough Break
Reds Were Champs
Injury List

NEW YORK, June 11 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals had Ray Blades teed up for some time, so it was no great surprise when they finally drove the little guy clean off the reservation.

His job as Redbird pilot lasted about a year and a quarter, which approached par for the job, at that. In the last 15 years the Cards have changed managers eight times, or an average of about once every two years.

Since Rogers Hornsby took the driver's seat from Branch Rickey in 1925, Bob O'Farrell, Bill McKechnie, Billy Southworth, Gabby Street, Frankie Frisch, Blades, and now Southworth again have tried their luck, with McKechnie also being called back for a return engagement.

It's a tough break for the pleasant little man who had his own ideas as to how a club should be run and stuck to them through an avalanche of criticism.

Perhaps this belief in his own policy and a stubborn refusal to change, it even when it showed signs of wrecking the team's pennant chances was largely responsible for his dismissal. That, and the fact that through no fault of his own except that he had jumped the team from sixth place to second last year the Cards had been ballyhoed as the 1940 champions.

Blades was quite upset this spring over this choice of his team to dethrone the Reds. We recall talking to him on a hot day at St. Petersburg as he rested in his cubby-hole dressing room between the daily double workouts.

"Why do they do it?" he asked plaintively. "The Reds are the champions, and the natural favorites. Why pick on us?"

At that time he reiterated his faith in his policy of handling pitchers, a policy which made a relay team of his mound staff, with hapless Clyde Shoun the anchor man. Like a man who has announced he will dig his way out of jail, and stubbornly continues to dig after someone has opened the door, he refused to go back on his own statement.

He has had a run of tough luck this year. Martin Marion, Jimmy Brown and Stu Martin all have been on the injured list at one time or another. Whether the Cards would be higher in the standings today if he hadn't yanked his pitchers at the first loud foul is problematical. Certainly there have been times when the yanking was justifiable, although 109 pitchers in about a quarter of a season does seem to be a little high.

Southworth didn't last long in his first appearance as Card manager in 1929. He was young then, handicapped by lack of experience. Since then he has bounced around various leagues as manager and coach, and has added wisdom with the years.

He is reported to be cagey in his handling of pitchers, but he also has the reputation of a bunter, and expecting the Mizes and Medwicks and those other heavy-handed St. Louis sluggers to play a bunting game would seem like using a crowbar to move a peanut.

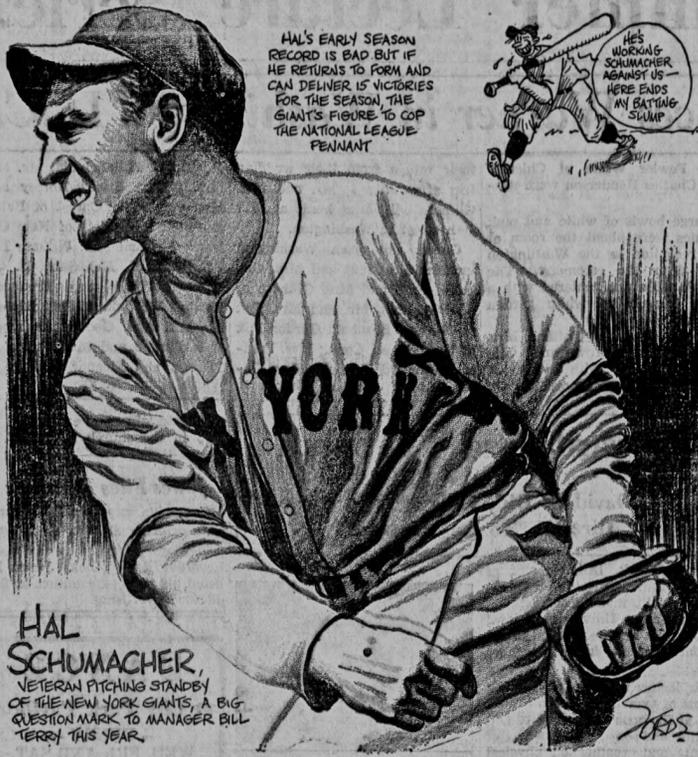

The power is there. It didn't win enough games for Blades, so if the team starts to win consistently under Southworth it will mean that the Blades' system of handling pitchers was all wrong. If the Cards don't start to win, and the starting pitchers begin to look hopefully toward the bullpen about the third inning, it will mean that Blades was a martyr, appreciated only after he's gone.
