Britain Adopts New Blockade

Spain, Portugal Chiefly Affected by Measures On Atlantic Shipping

LONDON, July 31 (AP)—Great Britain, counting on her heritage of naval supremacy for eventual victory, broadened her blockade of the European continent tonight with a guard of warships which reached from murky Arctic seas to the sun-white beaches of north Africa.

By an order in council to put the expanded blockade into effect at midnight, Britain raised barriers of sea power and red tape to cut off all Atlantic European commerce not to her liking, that is, likely to impair the empire's war effort.

Spain and Portugal were chiefly affected. The British are determined that they shall not become routes for trans-shipment of supplies to Germany and Italy.

British shipping off the southeast coast was attacked again today and British Spitfires and Hurricanes tangled with the invaders. The explosion of bombs could be heard inland before the German planes wheeled back across the channel.

An indication that Britain's own airmen again were on the offensive was seen in the fact that the German radio station at Bremen went off the air in early afternoon—the first such instance noted here in daytime.

Concentrated Attack on Dover Pictured by Nazis as Starting Next Phase of Pre-Invasion

Observers Assert That Havoc Wrought by Stukas At Dover Wrecked Harbor Facilities; Three Ships Sunk

BERLIN, Aug. 1 (Thursday) (AP)—The concentrated dive-bombing attack on Dover last Monday was pictured by German sources today as starting the next phase of pre-invasion action against England—systematic destruction of her vital ports one at a time.

These sources said Britain's trade and supply lanes, and the fort facilities through which she brings in food and war supplies are the weak link in her tight-drawn defense chain.

Observation planes which since have studied the havoc wrought by the Stukas at Dover reported to Berlin that at least three ships were sunk in the harbor, harbor facilities were wrecked and the port definitely was out of commission.

Military observers declared that the preliminary raids, which Marshal Goering termed "exploratory flights," have been completed, and the real Stuka blasting of ports has begun.

The impression was given that for the time being—at least during this port smashing phase—there would be no actual attempt at invasion.

Already, drawing upon her powerful air reserves in an effort to tighten a blockade on England, Germany has claimed a heavy toll in sunken shipping.

Shipping Sunk

Figures released last night listed 1,270,000 tons of British shipping sunk since June 25—a weekly average of 250,000 tons.

Authorized German spokesmen emphasized these Nazi tactics were to sap England's strength through destruction of her vast merchant marine. Nazi news reels showed the supposed effectiveness of bomb and torpedo blasts on British shipping.

Spokesmen side-stepped comment on the statement of Virginio Gayda, fascist editorial spokesman in Rome, that a direct attack on England is not to be expected immediately, but questioned the meaning of the word "immediate."

So the impression grew that long days and nights of air bombing would be made upon Britain before Adolf Hitler gives the word for any troop invasion.

Nazi spokesmen contended much British shipping has been driven from the channel to western ports which they said lacked facilities adequately to sustain England.

Raids in western England have been intensified.

370 Planes Lost

(Reports from Switzerland said German-trained Italian parachute troops and heavy German forces were stationed on the west coast of the continent facing England.) In citing immense British shipping losses, Nazi spokesmen said the figures should still any suspicions abroad that Germany was fighting the war "half-heartedly."

Moreover, they asserted Britain had lost 370 planes since June 25 or an average of 74 a week.

Japanese Hold Tokyo AP Chief For Questioning

TOKYO, Aug. 1 (Thursday) (AP)—Relman Morin, chief of The Associated Press Bureau in Tokyo, returned to his office today after several hours of questioning by Japanese gendarmes about his dispatches reporting the death of Melville James Cox, correspondent in Japan for Reuters (British news agency).

Morin was in good spirits, but said he was unable to comment on the proceedings at the gendarmie headquarters to which he was taken at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday.

He had just finished work at 6 p. m. when two gendarmes entered his office silently and sat down. An interpreter asked what they wanted. They replied that they wanted to ask a few questions and "tell him something."

Gasoline Ban Disapproved By Japanese

TOKYO, Aug. 1 (Thursday) (AP)—The spokesman for the Japanese admiralty today described President Roosevelt's ban on export of aviation gasoline from the western hemisphere as an act directed against Japan and the Rome-Berlin axis.

The spokesman said the gasoline order was an attempt to "kill two birds with one stone"—namely the axis and Japan.

"Under whatever pretext the order on aviation gasoline is issued," said the spokesman, "it undoubtedly is designed to exert economic pressure on Japan."

"If America continues on the same lines it is bound to cause repercussions."

Japan Rejects British Protests Over Arrest Of English Citizens

TOKYO, July 31 (AP)—Foreign office spokesman Yakichiro Suma said tonight Japan would reject British protests over her arrest of more than a dozen British citizens accused of spying and indicated the arrests would continue.

"It would be entirely unreasonable for Britain to make any sort of protest in connection with the arrests," he said. "All persons attempting to spy into military secrets will be dealt with relentlessly."

Shined Shoes—Leaves $33,000 NEW YORK, (AP)—Giuseppe Fezzuoglio, who shined shoes for 23 years in lower Manhattan, left an estate of $33,000, papers filed in surrogates court showed yesterday. He left no will and next of kin are being sought by newspaper advertisements. (See INVASION, Page 6)

Nazi Raiders Drop Heavy Fire Bombs

LONDON, Aug. 1 (Thursday) (AP)—High flying German raiders pelted southeastern England today with heavy explosives and fire bombs, some of them hitting towns.

Other raiders were heard over northeast coastal cities but no bombs were dropped there.

One incendiary bomb smashed through a roof and into a bedroom, spreading flames which were extinguished quickly. Heavy explosions shook communities along the repeatedly bombed coast.

Fight Over Isles Nazi airmen dropped their cargoes near where three German planes were believed to have been shot down late last night. Ground guns and RAF pilots fought the Germans also over southwest England, Wales and northern Ireland.

German raids during July cost the Nazis 240 planes and 600 airmen, the air ministry announced.

Raider Crashes In fierce fighting over the southeast coast last night, one German raider was reported to have crashed near the coast and two others farther inland.

Watches saw another Messerschmitt fall about a thousand feet, trailing smoke, before the pilot lighted his machine and disappeared into a cloud.

Enemy planes also were heard after dark over southwestern England.

Attack Shipping Residents of northern Ireland heard the sound of motors and heavy gunfire for half an hour, but saw no planes.

Earlier German planes attacked shipping, but retired when strong British air forces rose to meet them.

RAF pilots continued to pound German military objectives in Germany, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France.

One British plane was lost in the operations, which included hits on oil refineries at Homburg, and Monheim near Dusseldorf in the Ruhr district. Freight yards at Soest and airdromes at Duisburg, Antwerp and Courtrai also were attacked.

Spain Asks Aid From America To Rehabilitate

MADRID, July 31 (AP)—Strong suggestions were heard today that Spain wants no part of the European war and is not willing to limit her major friends to Germany and Italy.

Where two weeks ago the press had cried "dollar imperialism" at the United States—referring to affairs in Latin America—and had been critical of England, these were among its reflections of Spanish feeling today.

The newspaper Arriba, an organ of the dominant falangist party, called for economic aid, particularly from the United States, to rehabilitate Spain from the dislocations of the recent civil war, implying that the tasks of peace rather than war were uppermost here.

Head-On Collision With Freight Train Crushes Gasoline-Electric Coach Traveling Toward Akron

AKRON, O., July 31, (AP)—A head-on collision with a freight train crushed a Pennsylvania railroad gasoline-electric coach into ruins tonight and carried 41 persons to flaming death.

Railroad officials said the coach, shuttling from Hudson, O., to Akron, unexplained failed to take a sidetrack to allow the double-engine, 73-car freight train to pass.

All those killed were in the red-painted steel coach, whose gasoline tanks, bursting at the deafening impact, turned the car into a fiery trap.

All the passengers died. The enginemen and conductor of the coach leaped to safety, but were severely injured. Another trainman, riding home "deadhead," also lived to tell of the tragedy. Recapitulation five hours after the collision, which occurred at 6 p. m., indicated these were the only survivors.

Railroad officials expressed belief four or five other trainmen, aboard the coach, were killed, and all the other victims were passengers.

The engine crews of the two freight locomotives were injured, apparently not seriously.

O. M. Lodge, of Columbus, O., engineer on the lead locomotive, said:

"We just came around the bend in the road when I saw the gasoline electric locomotive in front of us. We jammed on the brakes and there was a terrific explosion. B. E. Reynolds, my fireman, stayed with her through the fire and explosion until she came to a stop, then we jumped through a wall of flame that had surrounded the whole wreckage."

Firemen required three hours to remove the bodies. The "deadheading" trainman who survived was Tod Wonn, 24, of Akron, brought here with leg and arm injuries.

He said Conductor H. B. Shaffer of the coach came running into the baggage compartment, crying:

"We are going to crash!"

"The conductor (who suffered severe injuries) leaped and I followed him."

"My clothing caught fire. I rolled in some bushes at the side of the track and put out the flames."

"My pal, Bruce Kell, who lives at the same place I do, was with me in the car and I did not see any more of him."

Charles Taylor, who lives two blocks from the scene, said the wreck "was the most terrible (See WRECK, Page 6)

British Pursue, Attack German Raider Off Brazilian Coast

BUENOS AIRES, July 31 (AP)—British warcraft ranged angrily off the Brazilian coast tonight in hot pursuit of a German merchant raider already reported damaged by the British merchant cruiser Alcantara in a brief sea battle which returned war action to the western hemisphere.

Official information was sparse, but word from naval circles here and in Montevideo and Rio de Janeiro agreed that the engagement occurred Monday evening near the Brazilian island of Trinidad—well within the American neutrality zone—and that both ships were hit.

British sources in Rio de Janeiro said the 22,000-ton Alcantara, her speed reduced by what the admiralty in London had described as a "lucky" shot suffered while she was in pursuit of the German, was heading into Rio de Janeiro.

This indicated the Britishers which took up the chase where the Alcantara left off were in considerable strength and possibly included the famous cruiser squadron which finished off the German battleship Graf Spee outside Montevideo harbor.

Some persons expressed belief that the Alcantara had caught the Nazi raider while she was re-fueling in the shelter of Trinidad, which frequently was used as a German secret base in the first World war.

It was indicated that the shell which struck the Alcantara exploded in the engine room.

The problem of the pursuing British warcraft was whether the raider had fled seaward or was seeking shelter along the rough Brazilian coastline.

The fight of Monday evening paralleled the classic struggle of 1914 between the German armed merchantman Cap Trafalgar and the British armed cruiser Carmania off Trinidad island.

COMPULSORY ARMY TRAINING

The Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill, being considered now by congressional committees prior to action by congress, is one of the most important pieces of legislation in recent American history.

On the editorial page of this morning's Daily Iowan, aspects of that measure in its present form are discussed by Thomas E. Martin, congressman from the first Iowa district, for and at the request of The Daily Iowan.

LIFE IS "NORMAL" AGAIN IN WAR-RUINED FRANCE

According to the German-censored caption on this picture, life has resumed its peaceful tenor in the occupied portions of France. This photo shows the wrecked town of Reoubaix, with workers going about their business as before the blitzkrieg. Note how wreckage has been neatly swept aside.

Extend Search For 7 Missing In Plant Blaze

CAMDEN, N. J., July 31 (AP)—Trucks with steel cables yanked down two towering walls of a fire-demolished paint factory tonight to make safer the search for seven persons missing in Camden's most disastrous blaze. The known dead stands at two.

Segments of the five-story R. M. Hollingshead company plant, reduced to a shell by yesterday's $2,000,000 fire, crashed to earth in a shower of falling bricks and plaster soon after asbestos-clad men had been called from their hunt for bodies because of the fear buckling walls would trap the searchers.

A brick fire tower, which resisted the flames and the explosions that preceded them, will be dynamited tomorrow, officials decided. Under it, in the factory boiler room, they expect to find the charred remains of at least seven workers unreported since the blaze.

Stimson Pushes Military Conscription

WASHINGTON, July 31 (AP)—Bluntly warning that Great Britain may be prostrate in 30 days, and the United States menaced simultaneously from two directions, Secretary of War Stimson urged immediate military conscription today, while a senate committee worked out a compromise peace-time draft bill for submission to the senate.

At the same time, the house, in a drowsy, sparsely-attended three-hour session, passed what may be history's biggest appropriation bill—nearly five billion dollars for warships, warplanes, guns and an almost endless list of preparedness items.

The day also brought what many considered a significant development in the imposition of an embargo—ordered by President Roosevelt—prohibiting the shipment of aviation gasoline to non-American nations except for the use of American interests abroad.

Late in the day, President Roosevelt signed into a law a bill appropriating $25,000,000 to increase the power production capacity of the Tennessee Valley authority. The project, sponsors said, would provide power for the production of aluminum used in airplanes.

In a statement issued in connection with the signing, Mr. Roosevelt said the funds would "help augment the very substantial blocks of power already available or in prospect not only at TVA, but in other parts of the country."

As it stood tonight, after the revisions of the senate military committee, the draft bill would require all men 21 to 30 years old, inclusive, to register (instead of 18 to 64 as originally proposed). These men would be liable to compulsory service. In addition, one-year voluntary enlistments would be made available to all men 18 to 34, inclusive.

The measure also contained rigid provisions safeguarding the jobs of those called up for service, permitting the national labor relations board to take court action, if necessary, to force an employer to rehire a conscript at the end (See CONSCRIPTION, page 6)

American Youth AND THE NEW WAR

In the current Atlantic Professor Arnold Whitridge of Yale university is much concerned with the present attitude of American youth toward the European war. His article is in the form of an open letter to American undergraduates. It deserves an answer from a midwestern university as well as from the Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale student publications it specifically condemns.

Briefly this is the substance of Dr. Whitridge's accusations. The late war generation is "baffled by the attitude" of contemporary youth. The older generation thinks modern youth is "unimaginative and cold-blooded." Youth has assumed a "purely negative attitude in foreign affairs very difficult to square with the notions of idealism" usually associated with young people. Most academic youngsters are not Christian pacifists or conscientious objectors; they are merely blind escapists.

Although most teeners in the colleges are admittedly not pro-nazis, they nevertheless "blackguard the allies upon every possible occasion" and soft-pedal the considered brutality of Germany. They are disgusted by any sort of moral appeal, fearful of death of propaganda, resentful of idealism, and distrustful of "any expression of patriotism." The typical ideology of youth is a "philosophy of meaninglessness."

Youth Wants Consistency

In the first place the present generation is the product of and conditioned by the other world war. It is the victim of unemployment, crime, property losses, and a depression that blackened the entire viewpoint of thousands of youngsters who during normal times would have had something more cheerful to look forward to. Thus modern youth is a little more realistic, disillusioned and skeptical than, say, the youth of 1916. The present generation are the sons and daughters of the youth of 1916 who are themselves a little more realistic, disillusioned and skeptical than they were in 1916.

Modern youth is the product of the teaching of the post-last-war generation. From our earliest moments we have been indoctrinated with the idea that war is useless, wasteful and insane. A flood of literature illustrated by horrible pictures of the living death of hundreds of war veterans, subsidized by peace groups, came off the press. Preachers, teachers, social workers, and parents long and loudly proclaimed their intention never to send another generation of Americans to a European war. The most remarkable thing is that youth still remembers this philosophy, though negative.

Hitler Changes the Face of Things

Now the advent of Adolf Hitler has revived the old war mania among many of the former advocates of peace. The other war generation has, in part, made a right-about-face turn of policy. It is surprised when youth is not so hasty.

It is amazed that youth is reluctant to abandon summarily the long-cherished ideals of peace. Within a few months it expects a younger generation to rush into the timeworn pattern of death when it knows that the same old evils, suffering and pain will be the tragic payoff. The illusion of war is at present dead among young thinkers in America.

Youth Is Not Deaf to Defense

It is nevertheless utterly unfair to mistake youthful distrust of war for a lack of patriotism. Every informed person knows that America is not prepared to send any expeditionary force across the sea. Such an attempt would be as disastrous as the British fiascos in Norway and Flanders.

Every army and navy recruiting officer, however, will report that young men are enlisting in the services as fast as they can be handled. There are literally thousands of youngsters, both in and out of college, who understand America's defensive needs, who would be only too glad to have arms issued to them and a range on which to practice. Hundreds would be glad to drive trucks, even tanks. Thousands in high schools, even the junior high schools, are learning the fundamentals of flying in airplane model clubs. College aeronautics courses are filled far in advance. Candid camera artists are so numerous that the government could use only a fraction of them for military photography. Countless other students are ready for new vocational high schools where crafts allied to war industries can be taught to supplement present outmoded curricula to fill a pressing need.

Finally, youth wants actual munitions and a state of watchful preparedness if it is going to be converted to war. It is tired of blustering talk and a wooden gun. If and when the actual war setup is effected, the isolationists outvoted, and military strength substituted for the present confusion among the policy makers and leaders, youth will fall in with the procession.

Until that time perspicacious young college editors and vocal campus groups will continue their present analysis of present weakness and advocate at least a consistent peace policy, even though they embarrass their elders.

Photography—A Big Business

If all the pictures should suddenly disappear from newspapers and magazines, what a clamor would be heard. During the past few years we have come to depend more and more on the photograph to aid us in understanding the news, in forming opinions, likes and dislikes.

We have ceased to marvel at the wonder of photography, we accept it as a commonplace, a necessary part of knowing what is going on in the world. Radiophones no longer impress us, we complain if they are not clear. More and more, better and better pictures we demand. It isn't our worry who the photographers are going to satisfy our demands.

The photographers who attended the short course on photography in Iowa City were here because they realized it is their worry. It is no longer enough to click a picture—the picture itself must click. Not only in the news is good photography becoming increasingly important. Education, medical science, sports, advertising, the recreational industries, are only a few of the fields where pictures are significant factors in continued progress.

No longer is photography an art practiced by a few; it has become an important service industry. Improving skills, getting new ideas, considering future uses for photography by means of conferences and short courses should be of not only immediate benefit to the photographers and the public they serve, but should contribute to future economic welfare as well.

An expanding service industry calls for research, invention, and opens new fields for employment. Photography in itself is important, and new jobs, present and future are one of America's most important considerations right now.

A Man About

MANHATTAN

The Picturesque, Romantic Aspects of Waterfront Life

BY GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Tallulah Bankhead, whose pop is Senator Bankhead of Alabama, has bought a new home in Rockland county, New York.

This has become prime territory for many of Broadway's best known people, including Jim Whittaker, composer and author (he was once married to Ina Claire); William C. Vogt, Helen Hayes (whose brick-walled home is a landmark for passing motorists), Milton Caniff, the artist; Franchot Tone, and Burgess Meredith. The Meredith place is commanded by a couple of artificial cannon, inspired no doubt by the fact that it overlooks the ground where the battle of Stony Point was fought. W. C. Vogt is a famous fisherman who has written books on the subject, and among his friends and fishing companions was the Indian Two-Guns White Calf, whose face is on the buffalo nickel.

When Whittaker was writing drama criticisms for a New York paper he sent Broadway into hysterics on one occasion: "When I married Ina Claire a year ago she told me she was an actress. There was nothing in her performance at the Empire theater last night to bear out this statement."

I can't verify this, but there is said to be a sort of "lost colony" of mountaineers in Rockland county who have hibernated there out of touch, almost, with civilization, since the Revolutionary war. They were pacifists, or deserters, and retreated into an obscure mountain valley rather than shoulder arms against the British.

A storekeeper who is in touch with them once told me that they have changed little since those days. They wear homespun garments. They have no cars, no electricity. They live out themselves in their mountain fastness. They farm a little, hunt and fish. Every week or so one of their number goes, at night, to the store to make arrangements for such purchases as they must have. This storekeeper, who operates a sort of country crossroads commissary about 25 miles from Manhattan, is the only "outsider" they deal with.

Some of the best informal marine photography in the world is being done by people who live on tugboats in the Hudson river. There are quite a number of New Yorkers, some poor and almost poverty stricken, others well off, who compose a sort of floating community along the Manhattan waterfront. Their craft ranges from houseboats to old abandoned barges. But all, or most, have cameras. They are able to obtain intimate views of ships and waterfront scenes that are unspoiled by the professional "staginess" of posed pictures. Today, for instance, three battleships of the U. S. navy are lying at anchor below the George Washington bridge. Off to one side is the hull of an old whaler. There are shad dories and oil barges. There are the arrested barks of warring nations, riveted to their slips, unable to move.

Now that the nights are warm people sit out on the decks of their barges, dancing to music from their radios or phonographs. Here is a wife hanging out the week's wash... there is a young man in dungarees courting his girl on the deck of a half-rotten tug... It is a picturesque and at times a romantic aspect of waterfront life.

A 'Rather Drastic' Measure of Vital Importance to America's Future—

The Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Training Bill

We asked Iowa's Congressman Thomas E. Martin, member of the house military affairs committee, to express his views for The Daily Iowan with reference to the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill—a legislative measure which will have a sweeping effect upon almost every phase of American life.

Congressman Martin's views at this particular stage of committee consideration of the bill will clarify many of the measure's aspects.

—The Editor

"Although the general hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth bill before the House Committee have not yet been completed and of course our action with reference to various proposed amendments thereto will not be taken until the close of these hearings, I am glad to give you my own impressions with reference to this measure as the situation appears to date.

A Drastic Bill
"The Burke-Wadsworth bill is rather drastic in the extent of the powers it gives the President in peace time. While there is much to be said in favor of complete registration in peace time in order to eliminate such preliminary work after any possible outbreak of hostilities, it seems to me that before men are actually drafted for training in peace time, the War Department and the National Administration should first be required to give the plan for voluntary enlistment every possible opportunity to meet the requirements.

"To do this, it seems to me that voluntary enlistments should be made available for one year instead of three years as at present. Another point that is of great importance, it seems to me, is the rate of pay offered to our soldiers.

Below CCC Rate
"At present the rate of pay for a private is $21 per month whereas the pay for a boy in the CCC camps is $30 per month and to make enlistment in the army more attractive, I think it is not at all unfair to ask that it be at least equal to the CCC pay.

CMTC, ROTC

"Another point that I have hoped may be incorporated in the bill is some plan for expansion of our CMTC and ROTC programs and also for increasing the size of our National Guard.

"It is my own impression that increasing the size of the CMTC, ROTC and National Guard units and also increasing the number of their drills and the compensation thereof could and would develop an adequate available reserve force, which added to the increase of the regular forces brought about by the one-year enlistment and increase in pay, would altogether serve our needs without tearing large numbers of boys from their scheduled courses and various trades or professions.

"It is impossible to state as yet just how much of the foregoing modification of the proposed bill would receive Congressional consideration or approval and of course there are many other modifications that are worthy of and should be given full consideration before final enactment of any law in this field.

"The final decision regarding this bill will be very largely dependent upon the form it takes while passing through the consideration of the Committee and the Congress prior to its final submission and it is impossible as yet to state definitely whether or not it will be acceptable in its final form.

How the Bill Works

"You have no doubt read various analyses of the proposed bill and the probable number of registrants from which the estimated number of trainees will be drawn. As I recall these figures, the number between the ages of 21 and 31 will be approximately 12,000,000 and it is contemplated that 400,000 of these boys will be called for training on Oct. 1, an additional 400,000 on April 1 and 600,000 the following October.

"Prior to the April 1 call all those between the ages of 31 and 45 will be registered and they will fill part of the April 1 call. Of the 12,000,000 men in the group between 21 and 31, it is estimated that one-third of the men will be placed in Class 1 and will be subject to immediate call and would furnish 400,000 men called on Oct. 1, whereas the other two-thirds would be in various exempted classifications.

"Of the boys registered in the 21-31 group who are placed in Class 1, about one in ten will be called for training Oct. 1.

Modifications

"I do not know the full extent of possible modifications of these figures inasmuch as the bill itself provides that the number called for training shall be determined by the President as in his judgement the circumstances may require.

"I am sorry I cannot be more specific as to the complete ramifications of the bill but the legislation at the particular stage this bill has reached, is very solid and certain either as to its terms or as to the acceptance of Congress of the various provisions therein.

"I thank you for the opportunity to discuss this most important measure in this preliminary fashion.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc., reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

The Story Written At Havana—

WASHINGTON—The American delegation found out a lot more at Havana than its bulging portfolios will record.

The difficulty with which the United States is confronted all south of the Rio Grande became apparent in the convolutions of the problem child of the Americas, Argentina. The Argentine statesmen were afraid of the United States but more afraid of Germany. That's it. They wanted the security of this hemisphere but they also wanted neutrality. Theirs was the strictly neutral role of Belgium and Holland. It may have looked to American news readers like at least a fourth and a half column policy, but it was really only "appeasement" again. (My information comes well from Havana.)

ARGENTINA AIMS—

Argentina is determined to make itself more self-sufficient, less a raw material country. That is a laudable purpose. It would like our financial aid to industrialize, and believes (correctly) its central government credit is so good that it can borrow in Wall street anytime.

But for us to finance Argentine industrialization, as indeed we have been privately doing for years, is to reduce and cut off eventually our actual or potential market for our industrial products. They won't want ours when they can make their own.

Knowing all that, the Americans at Havana were nevertheless willing to finance Argentina if the Argentines would only play ball. They would and we did, simply because there is something far more important than balanced economics and that is life itself.

SOLIDARITY WITH SHIPS—

News headlines have glibly proclaimed the defensive security that the conference assures for the Americas, without any recognition of the fact that U. S. battleships alone will be responsible for that security. No one else in this hemisphere has anything to supplement the pious declaration. The U. S. delegation was entirely aware of that during the conference, but naturally wanted diplomatic support.

The conference, therefore, amounts only to a step, a big step, toward diplomatic solidarity behind our guns.

NOTE: Washington let the word get around the conference that it was strengthening the Guantanamo marine garrison and planning to base additional ships at this single keystone defense point of the Caribbean.

NO BATON DEFENSE—

The patience which State Secretary Hull exhibited was not shared by all the American business men who sat around the Hotel Nacional.

In their excellently schooled opinion, our friends down south do not respect anyone who has power and yet lets his toes be trampled.

Their new dealism may be somewhat tarnished by experience but in their opinion the way to handle the defense of this hemisphere is with a gun, not a baton. The Latins, they say, have feared and disliked the U. S. as the Colossus of the north, a phrase which seems far more dramatic than accurate. No ships have been sailing between our legs bearing gold from the south. Rather we have been a Gulliver towing such ships from those ports as we could find.

RESPECT BY GUNS—

These business men with experience favored a firmer Latin policy than the administration has seen fit to adopt under Mr. Hull. They thought the way to settle the Mexican problem for instance would be to:

- (1) Stop buying Mexican silver at an excess price.
- (2) Blockade Mexican exports of "stolen oil" and "stolen chicle." (Theft refers to seized American lands for which no remuneration has been received.)
- (3) Retaliation with force for any anti-American acts.

The theory of course is to create respect by power, not by kindness alone.

Even Cuba, according to local Americans in Havana, has virtually confiscated large sums of American investments in mortgages, (sugar controls, etc.) The new constitution puts a 30 year (yes 30) moratorium on all existing mortgages, and a low rate of interest. Mortgages already greatly modified, according to capacity to pay, are now taken within the scope of the new gift constitution.

If our guns are going to defend this hemisphere, our diplomats and economists should be allowed to defend it with equal freedom and force. If we are going to be responsible for something we should be able to control it—not for our selfish citizens, but for all our people who are interested solely in their security and the security of those around us.

Greedy objections, lust for profits, should no more be tolerated in Mexico in the name of "the people" than the same things in the U. S. in the name of Wall street. There is a halfway mark of harsh, armed fairness which is not hard to find, and the American delegation seems to be groping toward it, even though its somewhat siffed gestures here failed fully to reveal it.

The City Slicker Of the Movie Lots

BY ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Aben Kandel is the city slicker of the movie lots.

Hand a producer a story about a metropolis, and the odds are he'll think of Kandel for the treatment. That's because Kandel wrote a book called "City for Conquest" and it's being made into a movie.

Kandel is a stocky, vigorous, black-haired fellow who laughs at himself as frequently as not and writes upstanding, vigorous prose poetry about skyscrapers and slums, steaming streets and alleys, and the people who live in or around them. His city, of course, is New York.

He knows other cities, too, and the hinterlands. He knows Alaska. He worked there on a geodetic survey boat, and in a gold mine, until he tired of it and went to Seattle for a newspaper job. That was fine until he got tired of the rain (Seattle was having unusual weather, naturally) and the chief, Ted Cook, heeded his complaint and sent him off to a Spokane paper, which he liked better. He did a journalistic trick in Los Angeles, too, and made it locale of his "Rabbi Burns."

But Kandel's city is New York, and he comes to Hollywood only occasionally to do a treatment or a screenplay. He says he would rather do this to the stories of other writers, because on his own he runs the risk of becoming emotionally involved, which interferes with his primary business of novel-writing. He is contributing dialogue to his "City for Conquest."

He was born in Rumania. His family — "a long line of dentists and gypsies" — brought him to New York when he was two years old. The city always fascinated him. He learned it by heart, at all hours of day and night, its sounds, sights, smells, music, people. He has worked there, and been flat broke (there and elsewhere) exactly 11 times. He hasn't been broke lately.

Kandel grew up on the East Side. He wishes "City for Conquest" had been filmed entirely in exterior sets, because "we lived outdoors mostly. We slept inside, but there was no room in the houses to live." Today, if you mention his fondness for fine food at his one real meal a day, he says he trained for status as a gourmet by skipping many a meal in other days, by eating cold canned beans in the Alaska period, by eating "food that smelled" in his gold mining adventure. Once, while busy on a movie in England, he flew to Holland for a meal in a celebrated restaurant.

Kandel planned "City of Conquest" as a book in which the main character would be the city itself; a book with no personal villains, a book in which people did what they did under the spur of city-fostered ambition. The book took hold, despite rave reviews, rather slowly. Columbia bought it for pictures, never got around to making it. Directors and producers, as they read it, clamored for the rights. James Cagney read it. Cagney's brother Bill read it too. The Cagneys together talked Warner bosses into buying the rights. So now Jimmy is starring in it with Ann Sheridan, and Bill is producing.

As for Kandel, he has finished a treatment on Elmer Rice's play, "Two On an Island," for R-K-O. His immediate plans included a visit to New Orleans, where the food is to his taste, and a stay in New York to get started on a sequel to "City for Conquest."

Radio actor Jay Jostyn once appeared in 36 script shows in one week, portraying 48 different characters.

World registration of automobiles now is 45,422,411, of which more than 68 per cent are in the United States and possessions.

Ruts of the old Santa Fe trail, opened in 1821 by Captain William Becknell, still are visible in New Mexico.

Warns U. S. on Trade

U. S. has been warned by Walther Funk, German economics minister, that she must be prepared to trade with a victorious Germany on Germany's own terms after the war or suffer a lockout from the commerce on a whole Europe geared to Nazi economics. If the U. S. expects to make any use of her gold hoard, Funk said, she must revalue her dollar upward so it can flow out of America and goods flow in. At the same time, Funk outlined a vast trade system covering much of the world based on barter.

Yankees Fall To End Detroit Losing Streak

Greenberg Singles Off Gomez in 11th To Win Ball Game

DETROIT, July 31 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers remained in a deadlock for the American league lead today by wriggling to a 7 to 6 eleven-inning victory over the New York Yankees and thereby ending a three-game losing streak.

It was a weird game lasting nearly three hours and requiring the Tigers to come from behind four times before they finally victimized relief pitcher Lefty Gomez on two walks and a single by Hank Greenberg.

The Tigers thought they had won the game in the eighth inning when Pinky Higgins tripled with the bases loaded to put them in front 5 to 4. But the Yankees moved back on top in the ninth, when George Selkirk, batting for pitcher Spud Chandler, hit a home run with one on.

As soon as Johnny Murphy, who saved yesterday's game for Red Ruffing, went to the mound in the ninth, pinchhitters Earl Averill and Billy Sullivan singled and Bruce Campbell knocked in the tying run with another single. That's when Gomez came in. He walked Greenberg to fill the bases, but got the Tigers out with no further damage until the eleventh.

St. Louis Wins 17th Of Last 21 Starts; Bees Lose 9 Straight

BOSTON, July 31 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals grabbed both ends of a twin bill from the Boston Bees, today, 3-1 in 11 innings and 17-8, to sweep the four-game series and creep within a few percentage points of the first division.

The double victory gave the Cardinals a record of 17 victories in their last 21 starts and the pair of defeats extended the Bees' losing streak to nine straight.

A pop-fly muffed by Max West, on which Terry Moore was given a questionable two-base hit, spelled the end of a duel between Clyde Shoun and Dick Erickson in the 11th inning of the first game, tallied the third on Stu Martin's single, after he and Don Padgett had been passed intentionally.

The second game turned into a rout in the second inning when the Cards pushed over six count-ers. Five Boston pitchers saw service while Bill McGee went the distance for the Cards.

Galan Hurt As Cubs Lose To Phils, 7-3

PHILADELPHIA, July 31 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs went down to a costly 7 to 3 defeat at the hands of the Phillies today as outfielder Augie Galan suffered a fractured left knee crashing against a concrete wall. He probably will be out for the remainder of the season.

Galan was chasing a foul fly off the bat of Herman Schulte in the fifth inning when he hit the wall. He was removed to Temple hospital where X-rays disclosed the injury.

Galan's mishap followed a minor one for Manager Gabby Hartnett. The Cub catcher was struck on the head by Mel Mazza's bat in the second inning and left the game. He continued, however, to direct the team from the bench.

Johnny Rizzo's 14th home run sent Hugh Mulcahy on the road to his 12th victory of the season. Rizzo's blow came in the fourth with two aboard to give the Phils a 3 to 0 lead and the Cubs never caught up.

Homeers Beat Reds' Walters

NEW YORK, July 31 (AP)—Two home runs in the ninth inning by Burgess Whitehead and Hank Danning, each with a man on base, broke up Bucky Walters' ball game tonight and gave the New York Giants a 5 to 4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds before a crowd of 30,334, largest night game turnout of the season at the Polo grounds.

It was a dramatic climax to a previously one-sided struggle that seemed certain to go into Walters' bag as his 16th triumph of the year. Instead it became his sixth defeat and second straight.

Frank McCormick had hit a home run with one on in the first inning to send the Reds off in front and Bill Werber added another round-tripper in the fifth with the bases empty, while two singles sandwiched around a sacrifice, an intentional walk and a force out were good for another tally in the sixth.

During this time Walters managed to evade any serious catastrophe, although he wasn't at his peak and put runners on base in every inning except one, and gave up a run in the fifth.

His customary control was missing and he served five bases on balls, three of them eventually turning into runs. Tony Cuccinello waited out a walk at the start of the fifth, looped to third on Mickey Witke's double down the left field line, and scored on a ground-er by Bob Seeds.

When the Giants' storm broke in the ninth Walters had two out and a count of two strikes and one ball on Seeds. Then he served three bad pitches to walk Seeds, whom Whitehead brought home with a "Polo grounds" homer into the short right field stands.

Mel Ott then was walked and Danning stalked to the plate, took a called strike, fouled one and sent the crowd into ecstasy by smashing a liner into the left field grand-stand.

Rally in 8th For 12-11 Win

10 Pitchers Hit For 26 Safeties In Wild Melee

CLEVELAND, July 31 (AP)—A four-run rally in the eighth inning gave the Cleveland Indians a 12-to-11 victory in a slugfest with Boston today and kept the Tribe tied with Detroit for first place.

Jimmy Foxx catches Jimmie Foxx, who had been out with a leg injury, returned to the Boston lineup as catcher instead of at first base. He poked two singles and batted in two runs. Manager Joe Cronin made the move to keep the heavy-hitting Lou Finney at first.

Boston slammed four of the Indians' junior hurling corps and one senior for 10 hits while the Tribe treated five Red Sox like wickets for 16 safeties.

The Sox rapped Joe Dobson for four runs in the first inning and added two more at his expense in the third.

The Indians opened their scoring in the up-hill battle with a five-run blast in the fourth inning, featured by Ken Keltner's 10th home run with the bases full.

Dennis Galehouse, the Sox' starting pitcher, gave way to Emerson Dickman in this flurry. Earl Johnson, Joe Heving and Jack Wilson followed them to the mound.

Dobson went to the showers after the third inning and was followed by Harry Eisenstat, Johnny Humphries, Bill Zuber and Al Smith.

The Sox collected another run in the fourth, three more in the sixth and their final in the seventh.

Roy Weatherly opened the Tribe's eighth with a single. Hal Trosky tripled and scored on Heving's wild pitch. Keltner singled and Ray Mack bounced a ground-rule double into the left field stands to score Ken. With the bases walked full, pinch hitter Russ Peters singled in the tying and winning runs.

CHICAGO (AP)—Promoter Bill Rand said last night he had signed Tony Zale, the National Boxing association's new middleweight champion, for a 10-round overwight bout Aug. 21 with Billy Soose of Scranton, Pa.

But, no American loop team has been able to blast its main rivals out of this year's race. In fact, there seems little reason to think that Detroit, Cleveland or any other club will have many games to spare during the final day.

But, what happens in the National? Cincinnati pulls out of third place a few weeks back and moves ahead of Brooklyn and New York by the simplest and quickest known method—by pounding them from one

Ailing Ex-Governor Brings Democratic Convention to Close-

Kraschel Rebukes Straying Demos, Republican Mongers, in Convention Talk

DES MOINES, July 31 (AP)—Ailing Nelson G. Kraschel brought the Iowa democratic convention to a close today with a blistering speech assailing "those few maverick democrats whose votes Willie may wiggle away from us."

The former governor, who has been ill several days, drove here from his Harlan home against his doctor's orders. One of the convention's final acts was the selection of two electors-at-large, E. J. Snyder of Oskaloosa, and Tom P. Cleary of Sioux City. The nine district electors and the two named at-large will cast Iowa's 11 electoral votes next fall in the event President Roosevelt and Henry A. Wallace carry the state in the national election.

Meeting after the convention had adjourned, the democratic state central committee re-elected E. H. Birmingham of Sioux City state chairman and chose Mrs. Lawrence Smith, Dyersville, as state vice chairman. Mrs. Smith, who was opposed by Mrs. Ray Baxter of Burlington, succeeded Mrs. Mary S. Keller of Fort Dodge. Mrs. Keller recently was named national committeewoman.

The committee also re-elected Mrs. Florence Lynch of LeMars, secretary, and G. G. Jeck of Atlantic, treasurer. Kraschel declared he "never yet had permitted the state convention to degenerate into a love feast without doing something about it." The unusual harmony prevalent here today had caused the convention to be termed a "love feast." Pleading guilty to the charge of having been a No. 1 Wallace man long before the Chicago convention, the former chief executive said the farm program "saved the farmer from bankruptcy and Main street, upon whom the farmer depends, from bankruptcy and ruin."

It has so helped the Iowa farmer, he continued, that feeders have been paying 10 or 11 cents a pound for western cattle, "the highest prices ever known in peacetime." Asserting the Willie democrats

"never were good democrats in the first place," he termed Senator Burke of Nebraska "one of the most disgruntled and ungrateful." "He never would have been a member of the senate if it hadn't been for 'President Roosevelt,'" Kraschel said.

If the republicans win this fall, the speaker continued, "you and I and our children will never see the day again when a great political party will offer to the farmer what he is receiving now."

The convention approved a set of resolutions which, on the special request of John K. Valentine, nominee for governor, included no $40-a-month old age pension plank. Valentine said he favored giving the aged "all possible" help up to a $40 a month maximum but that he would not be a party to promising something on which he might not be able to deliver later on.

His stand provoked a comment from one member of the committee that "John is almost too honest." One of the republican slogans in the 1938 state campaign was "adequate old age pensions—not just half a loaf."

The resolutions in part said: "The producers of the nation know by experience that the reelection of the present (national) administration will mean the continuation of the farm program with such improvements as might prove necessary or advisable." "We favor a just and reasonable teachers' retirement annuity plan. "We denounce the callous refusal of Governor Wilson and his legislature to recognize the deplorable conditions existing in our board of control institutions."

Other planks included indirect approval of a chain store tax, a drive on farm tenancy, low cost housing, aid to dependent children, a state civil service system and a junking of the Iowa government reorganization program.

The convention had little to do aside from whooping it up for the speakers and the platform. About 2,500 delegates and visitors heard Valentine deliver the keynote address this morning. State Senator Ed Breen of Fort Dodge was the afternoon permanent chairman. Among today's absentees were Wallace, Senators Clyde L. Herring and Guy M. Gillette and Congressman W. S. Jacobsen and Vincent Harrington.

The convention did not nominate a candidate for the attorney general short term, thereby insuring the occupancy of J. M. Rankin in that post at least until Jan. 1. Rankin, the present republican attorney general, is a candidate for the long term. The democratic nominee is Harry Hagemann of Waverly.

Inter-Playground Competition At Longfellow School Today

Recreational Director Reports 70 Awards To Be Given at Meet

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the third annual Iowa City inter-playground track and field meet will get under way at the Longfellow school playground.

Eugene Trowbridge, director of the recreational center and summer playgrounds, said yesterday that if interest in the meet is equal to former years, between 150 and 200 girl and boy competitors will be taking part in the contests for possession of their share of the 70 awards which will be won during the course of the afternoon.

Separate contests for both boys and girls will be divided into A and B age classes with the added feature of a senior boys' decathlon being run off.

Class B events will be for girls and boys 12 years old and under and class A contests for girls and boys of 13, 14 and 15 years.

In the senior boys' decathlon or all-around championship, four events will be run off with the same six boys competing in each of the four events. These four include a 12-inch softball throw, running broad jump, high jump and a 100-yard dash.

Each boy taking part in this will be given points for the respective placing in each event with the total points for each determining his final standing. These points are six for first place, five for second, four for third, three for fourth, two for fifth and one for sixth. The high-point man will be the decathlon champion.

A victory trophy, two watch chain medals and three ribbon awards will go to the six competitors in the decathlon. The six finalists will be Bob Gingerich, Francis Leoney, Harvey Secor, Bill Barkley and Bert Miller with one more competitor to be chosen yet.

The schedule of events for this afternoon's meet as announced yesterday is given here.

2-Girls' 40-yard dash, class B; girls' 50-yard dash, class A; decathlon 12-inch softball throw, and boys' high jump, classes A and B to be run off simultaneously.

2:30-Boys' 50-yard dash, class B; boys' 75-yard dash, class A; decathlon running broad jump, and girls' stick-the-peg, classes A and B to be run off simultaneously.

3-Boys' ten trips, class B; boys' ten trips, class A (ten trips is a ball throwing and catching relay); decathlon high jumping, and girls' high jump, classes A and B to be run off simultaneously.

3:30-Girls' ten trips, classes A and B, and boys' running broad jump, classes A and B to be run off together.

4-Decathlon 100-yard dash, girls' 160-yard shuttle relay, class B; girls' 200-yard shuttle relay, class A; boys' 200-yard shuttle relay, class B, and boys' 300-yard shuttle relay, class A.

Each playground operating in Iowa City under the direction of the recreational center will enter a team in the inter-playground meet. Team members will participate in the various events and team points will be given on the basis of placings. Individual and team awards will be made following the afternoon's contests.

of his period of duty. The committee planned to give the measure its final approval tomorrow and prospects were that it would go before the senate next week, there to run the gantlet of a determined opposition. Meanwhile, it was planned that the senate should take up legislation recently requested by President Roosevelt empowering him to call out the national guard for a 12-month period of training.

Stimson, the 72-year-old republican, whom President Roosevelt called to duty as his secretary of war, was emphatic both in urging compulsory military service, and in detailing what he considers the dangers which this country faces today.

"A prudent trustee," he told the house military committee, "must take into consideration that in another 30 days Great Britain may be conquered and her fleet come under enemy control. Across the Pacific there is a powerful Japan in sympathy with Italy and Germany."

"We've got to very radically revise our prejudices about our first line of defense."

"A German victory over England would give her a fleet outranking that of the United States and a shipbuilding capacity six times that of this country."

As for conscription, Stimson said:

"If there is ever a lesson we've learned, it is that the only way to meet a war situation is by a compulsory system of raising our own armies."

"We've tried other systems, we've always had a penchant for volunteering. That system has been a costly failure . . ."

"The voluntary system not only is inadequate but disruptive of industry and agriculture and the sciences and specialties on which the nation must depend in time of war."

He asked the members of the committee to "consider whether we are not confronted with a far greater peril today than we were in June, 1917."

"Today," he continued, "we are faced with a potential enemy who has been using conscription for six years, and today he's putting it into effect—conscription—on the victims of Germany and compelling them to furnish Germany war supplies."

The action of the senate military committee followed the receipt of communications from Stimson saying that the war department "urgently recommends" the passage of the bill and that it had the approval of the budget bureau. The latter stated: "You are advised that the general objectives of the proposed legislation are in accord with the program of the president."

The gasoline embargo was announced by Stephen T. Early, the president's secretary in these words:

"In the interests of the national defense, the export of aviation gasoline is being limited to nations of the western hemisphere except where such gasoline is required elsewhere for the operations of American-owned companies."

The embargo was recommended by Col. R. L. Maxwell, the administrator of export control, and approved by the president.

At the commerce department, it was said that the order would virtually wipe out the American gasoline export business. In the first six months of this year 1,164,343 barrels were exported with 1,076,238 of that amount going to Europe. Almost all of the latter total went to Great Britain and France.

The appropriation bill called for an outlay of $4,963,151,957 to begin work on America's proposed "two-ocean navy" and furnish equipment for 2,000,000 men. When finally enacted, it will have raised the session's total defense appropriations to a record-breaking $10,040,225,543.

Rome Contradicts Rumors

Nazis Unlikely to Invade Britain; German Air Force Inadequate—Gayda

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Although rumors of an immediate nazi-fascist invasion of England have been coming thick and fast from the Swiss whispering gallery, there is a touch of authority about a conflicting forecast from Rome.

Virginia Gayda, frequent mouthpiece for Mussolini, has too recently demonstrated his access to nazi-fascist high policy decisions to be taken lightly. He foretold the Hitler "appeal-to-reason" peace gesture a week or two in advance.

Gayda now warns his Italian readers that a "spectacular" blitzkrieg involving a mass invasion of England is not to be expected because it is not feasible.

In so stating, Gayda is in harmony with Britain's prime minister, Winston Churchill. Summing up England's chances of repelling a German or German-Italian attack, Churchill bluntly said six weeks ago that invasion would be the last, not the first, enemy move.

He based that forecast on the conclusion that invasion by sea could not be achieved against British sea power adequately supported by the royal air force. Invasion by air he also dismissed as impractical and improbable, "until our air force has been definitely overpowered."

During the rain of bombs that has fallen on England for more than 40 days and nights and has thus rivaled the duration of the Biblical flood-rains, little has developed to change the factors Churchill then enumerated.

"The great question is—can we break Hitler's air weapon?" was the way Churchill then summed it up.

That still is the question, nor do Swiss reports that Hitler has called upon Mussolini for heavy air reinforcements lessen its force. It is also the thought in Gayda's mind in warning that a repetition against England of the swift and smashing attacks on Holland, Belgium and France is not feasible.

The Gayda warning also serves to point up anew the fact that the nazi war bulletins have been giving claims of staggering ship losses inflicted on Britain more attention than bombing attacks on the island itself. There is no possibility of reconciling British and German reports as to the extent of that shipping toll. They are fantastically far apart.

A great deal depends upon which reports come closest to the truth. Should the fact be anywhere near the German claims, a danger of starvation far graver than that of invasion threatens England. Hunger would do more than bombs to break British will to resist.

If the nazi high command believes its own claims of British sea tonnage destroyed and port facilities utterly wrecked along England's east coast, it need only intensify the attack at sea and await the certain end. Invasion would be a needless and risky business.

Accept British admiralty figures on cargo tonnage losses, and England seems secure from starvation for months or years to come. Neutral observers reaching this side of the Atlantic recently have reported many huge convoys and individual cargo craft still steaming toward England.

Invasion--

continuous "pulverizing" air attack on industries and shipping of which Gayda spoke — was far from being exhausted.

They wondered how Germany and Italy could afford to give Britain even a month — much less a whole winter — in which to catch her breath, increase her munitions production, speed up shipments of warplanes from the United States.

But while some accepted the Gayda editorial as a plain statement of German and Italian intentions, others suggested that it might have been intended only to mislead the British and to give to an imminent invasion as much of the element of surprise as possible.

Along this line, there were various strong indications that the invasion was close at hand:

1. From Vichy, France, it was reported that postal, telephone and telegraph communication in the German-occupied areas of France had been suspended. This would be a normal prelude to operations against England.

2. Not only were Italian troops and planes declared to be at the alert in North sea and English channel bases, but even Italy's share in the coming invasion was reported; the Italian army is to participate mainly in a "token" way, but great squadrons of Italian planes are to take part. Italy also was said to have completed moving many 36-foot "pocket" submarines into Germany for use in the channel, and to be poised for a probable air attack on the British fortress of Gibraltar.

3. Weather conditions were improving generally over western Europe.

4. The German-Swiss frontier remained closed.

Yesterday's Top Temperatures Normal With 86 Degrees High

Iowa City's high temperature yesterday was normal as the mercury topped 86 degrees with a low of 71 recorded for the day. Normal low was 62 degrees.

Iowa City temperatures a year ago were 91 degrees high and 62 degrees low. Rainfall which cooled the atmosphere Tuesday night amounted to .22 of an inch. This brought the total for the year to 15.98 inches. Normal for the year thus far is 20.42 inches making a deficiency in rainfall so far of 4.44 inches, the weather bureau observation station reported last night.

The average day temperature for the month of July was 88.9 degrees, 1.6 degrees above the normal average. Average night temperature for the month was 64 degrees, one degree above normal making the average combined day and night temperature for the month but 1.3 degrees above normal.

The highest reading recorded by the observation station for the month was 105 degrees on July 13.

Rainfall for the month totaled 3.62 inches and normal for the month was 3.77 leaving a rainfall deficiency of .15 of an inch. During the month there were 20 clear days, eight partly cloudy days and three cloudy days, it was reported.

The evaporation mark for the month of July this year was the highest for any time since the installation of the weather bureau observation station in Iowa City. The mark was 9.36 inches and the normal evaporation is about 9 or 7 inches for July.

The evaporation mark is computed by keeping a large flat pan full of water and measuring each day the amount evaporated. The figure of 9.36 inches indicates that much water evaporated during the course of the month. Comparing that amount of evaporation with the 3.62 inches of rainfall for the month will account in part for the extremely dry conditions which have existed during the month prior to the recent rains.

County Chorus Receives Invitation To Sing at Cedar Falls Ceremony

An invitation to participate in the dedication ceremonies Sept. 12 of the Josh Higgins state park at Cedar Falls was received yesterday by the Johnson county women's farm bureau chorus.

In a letter to County Agent Emmett C. Gardner, the Black Hawk county agent, Paul B. Barger, explained that the Cedar Falls chamber of commerce and the National Broadcasting company are cooperating in the dedication ceremony.

For the occasion the NBC wants a mass farm bureau women's chorus so the Black Hawk county farm bureau has invited several choruses from surrounding counties to take part in the ceremonies and also to compete in a chorus contest.

On the day of the dedication NBC will broadcast the daily National Farm and Home hour from the new park and will present the point of whether it actually was the largest appropriation bill ever passed by the house. The exact previous record was unavailable, but Rep. Taber (R-NY), ranking minority member of the appropriations committee, said it was the largest in his 18 years in the house. The general recollection was that the big World War appropriations had come along in smaller amounts.

At any rate, the house quickly disposed of the bill. At no time during the brief period that it was up were there many more than fifty members in attendance, and most of these were engaged in private conversations. Rep. Gigglesworth (R-Mass) called attention to the small attendance and sleepy atmosphere, but said it probably was due to the fact that the house was already in agreement upon the necessity for the bill.

At the time of the dedication ceremony, the city hall is full of rats and even the council admits it.

City Recorder A. Warren Jones complained the pests climbed the timbers and water pipes and wore paths across the floors. They turned the cupola into a summer resort and took refuge in hot weather. Poison failed and traps were never sprung.

The council voted $50 and sent Jones looking for an expert.

Wreck--

He told the following story: "I was ready to sit down to dinner a little after 6 when I heard what I thought was an explosion followed by a rumbling noise. A few minutes later I heard ambulance sirens and I raced to the scene."

"The first thing I saw was firemen playing water on a Pennsylvania coach which was half wrapped around the front of a double-header freight train. The coach was burning furiously with flames flicking around the top."

"The fuel in the gasoline coach had exploded and caught fire when hit by the freight train."

"The firemen played water on the wreckage for three-quarters of an hour before they could get to the bodies."

"I could see inside the coach. Seats and bodies were scattered around. Bodies were wedged in the windows and we could see legs and arms hanging outside."

"It was the most terrible scene I ever witnessed."

"The freight train had ploughed half way through the 'doodlebug,' bulging the sides around its cow-catchers. The impact had forced the coach about 200 yards back down the track."

Russell Steffy, another eyewitness, said he was standing 50 yards away.

"I saw they were meeting on a
