The Ingenuity of Man

Last night we listened to the ticking of the clock, on and on. An ordinary thing we thought. And yet, after a time, we wondered. Ingenious how regular it is. Day upon day it speeds no faster, goes no slower. Still, it is one of the simpler mechanisms.

Ingenious what man has done, isn't it? Streams of highways span a nation. Trucks and trains roll in an incessant stream. Mammoth factories pour out products with vibrant hum. The soil brings forth, coaxed by man, driven by man, conquered by man.

With machines man harnesses the universe. He shackles the air and water, moves the earth. He fills the sky with sound, with sight.

He spans the world, he widens the threads of life. He gropes downward, outward, upward.

Ingenious, isn't it? He clouds the air with craft. He drags over the earth with hell-spitting machines. He rivals lightning and tornado. He levels houses, towns, cities. He scorches earth.

He burns food. He kills soil. He kills men. He breaks hearts.

He makes time worthless. Clocks need not tick. Centuries roll back upon him.

Man is ingenious, isn't he?

Work: Solution for the Nation

When Germany shattered France, the French people were thoroughly dazed. They could hardly believe, let alone accept, their terrific defeat.

After their tears and despair they began to analyze and rationalize as frustrated individuals will do.

What was the matter with France? Why was she unprepared? Where were the airplanes, the tanks, the morale that should have equaled Germany's.

Who Was to Blame?

Naturally, everybody blamed everybody else. The unions, the communists, and the socialists blamed the middlemen and the manufacturers. The right-wing moneyed groups were equally vocal in condemnation of the left-wing laborites. They cited the non-production of armaments during the Socialism Blum regime and quoted Mr. Blum's philosophy that military preparedness and social advancement could not both be had for France's limited amount of time and money.

As a price for her division, weakness and inefficiency, democratic France was forced into a fascist totalitarian government. Now there are no left wing parties and the utilities are mere pawns to the German war machine.

A Lesson for the Democracies

The utter capitulation of France was a serious shock to the surviving democracies, particularly England and America. The same sad effects that, cancer-like, sapped the vitals of France are admittedly operant in our systems too. A wave of hysteria not known since 1929 swept through the United States. Freedom as we see it was decidedly on the spot.

The present reflex to this danger is speedy re-arming. Money is being spent like water for airplanes, warships, anti-aircraft, and a whole new mechanized army. All summer motorized units have been built and tested, from the swamps of the south to the plains of the west. Taxes on luxuries, amusements and refinements have already bounded. Thousands of youths are debating the first draft.

Co-operation Is the Key

All this political and military activity is not enough. The expenditure of money and the creation of a war machine will not forge a fighting army. The utter failure of the Maginot line proved that. There must be fight and fire, conviction and determination, courage and implacable will to defend democracy against nazi might. These are not platitudes, these are formidable and pressing realities.

The Cult of the Fascist Revolution

Germany's success is based, primarily, upon the utter courage and vigor of her hardy, self-effacing millions. They have been taught to scorn the freedom and independence of democratic peoples. They see us as soft, emasculated plutocrats, as slaves to and victims of dissension, crime and social degradation. Nazi propaganda continues this race hatred and beguiles the German populace with thrilling military victories and the assurances that it will become the super race, the master race of the world.

Regardless of the falseness of the totalitarian regime, and the sacrifices and force that bleed, yet inspire, the people, the fact remains that this system has so far been the most economic and efficient in the present war. With such co-operation, ingenuity, and unflinching, never-remitting work, the German cult is surpassing almost everything in military history.

Convictions, Slogans, and Work

This all means that the democracies are going to have to take a leaf out of the nazi notebook. We must not only prepare for war, we must prepare to work. Consistent patient drudgery, and hours of it, is the price we must pay for our continued freedom. This is nothing new. Every rebirth and regeneration, even in free and prosperous countries, is born of the throes of stress, pain and disillusionment.

We must fuse everything into a propaganda proof, leakproof whole, forgetting about the so-called good old days when we mistook democracy for license and the avoidance of duties and responsibilities necessary for the continued life and prosperity of the nation.

'Substitutes' for Defense

Can you imagine doing away with the tin can in America? In spite of the things that have been said against it, and about our tendency to become a nation of can-openers, the tin can is a pretty convenient thing to have around. Britain, however, has found that tin is more important for defense than for convenience, and the tin can is being replaced by paper containers.

The supply minister recently issued an order forbidding the use of tin containers for soups, fruits, cosmetics, cigarettes and tobacco. Through this measure, it is hoped that between forty and fifty thousand tons of tin will annually be conserved for armament. It is to be regretted that nothing more durable than paper is at hand to substitute for tin.

There may be a lesson for us in England's tin-canless predicament. Anticipating future needs contributes toward national security and preparedness. Anticipating future needs provides present employment. An article appearing currently in Harpers canvasses the question of jobs for today's youth, and suggests, among other things, that jobs may be developed out of our need for substitutes. We are told that we need substitutes for tungsten, rubber, manganese and tin.

Substitute materials come in handy when foreign sources of supply are gone. Accept no substitute may be a good advertising slogan, but it doesn't apply to materials that are necessary for national independence.

A Man About MANHATTAN

International Stress Has A New Effect on New York

BY GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Have you ever seen a dream walking? I have. It's the Broadway night-club proprietors. Maybe "daze" would be a better word than "dream." Something's hit them. They don't quite know what. But it all adds up to this: Empty tables. Idle waiters. Maybe it's the weather. Maybe it's the politics. Maybe people prefer to sit by their radios than go out. In any case, the traffic is low, yet the rent goes on, and the license fees and the salaries.

We went into a club last night with seating arrangement for four hundred and found 43 people. We went into another that seats about 300 and found 55. We went into a hotel roof garden that can accommodate 800 people and counted 31. They seemed lost and melancholy. The orchestras were playing their best. But their hearts weren't in it. Their hearts were out of the window with the breezes, or in the manager's office, wondering about their contracts.

It has always been stated that in times of national and international stress—such as wars—people become imbued with a sort of to-hell-with-it-let's-enjoy-life-while-we-can complex. This has been true in the past. It isn't true now. People would rather listen to Willkie or Roosevelt than to Joe Lewis or Milton Berle. They would rather hear a news broadcast than pay a cover charge for the privilege of listening to a "society" orchestra. There will always be nightclubs in New York, and some of them will prosper. But the old, crowded, jammed-up days seem gone.

There is a stenographer in a midtown hotel whose name is Janet Alderman. All day she sits at a typewriter punching out letters but she would rather be playing Helen Holmes on the top of railroad box cars. She comes from Texas, and twice she has fallen off box cars. What, you will very properly ask, what business has a young girl riding on the top of box cars? Absolutely none. "But I can't help it," she confesses. "It's a sort of mania. I've been doing it ever since I was big enough to climb upon one. My mother finally sent me to New York to stay with my aunt—just to keep me off box cars."

We record this item purely on the hunch that it may be of use to theorists who may plan to chart the drift of people from rural communities to the big city.

Went to the talkies last night and saw "My Love Came Back." Grand entertainment... Played croquet in the afternoon with Mill and Esther Caniff out at Pomona, New York, and won, which is a commentary on the level of the game they play out there... I hadn't played in two years... Later, driving home, the radio broke down just as a description of an aerial dog-fight over the North sea was coming in from London... Cost me $4.25 to have it fixed... "The condenser blew out," the man said... Which reminds me, I've got five radios, and four of them are broken... But if I have them all fixed, then I will be broke.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Coaching Technique That Never Fails

BY ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—It's only fair, since football coaches over the country soon will begin their annual 10-week headaches, to let them in on the infallible system of Coach William Frawley.

Good old Bill — as the alumni might say—never has lost a game, and this is his eighth year at it. It's true his seasons usually include only one game, but the system still works. Right now Bill is coaching at Pacific Coast U., his star ball-packer is Wayne Morris, and the game — I mean movie—is prophetically entitled "Touchdown."

Good old Bill's system varies from game to game, but it always produces the same result: Victory, either by a touchdown or a field goal or a point after touchdown just as the final gun pops. There are various ways to achieve this end, but the one that never fails is the last-minute note from the hero's girlfriend in the stands, a note saying all is forgiven and she is his and not that city slicker's. Once the substitute races in, bearing this message, the game is in the bag. Frawley's never seen it fail.

Hal LeRoy, at the age of five, was a cripple from spinal meningitis. At seven he took up dancing, spurred by the proficiency of Negro children he saw on the streets of Memphis, where his family had moved from his native Cincinnati. Today, a lean, tall, limber-limbed youth, he's one of the stage top steppers.

Hollywood has him now for "Too Many Girls." He didn't care for the town his last trip out, in 1937. He was signed for "Start Cheering" and arrived to learn that nobody knew what his role would be. Al Rogell, the sympathetic director, didn't know either — but they invented one.

Hal chuckles as he tells one of those good Hollywood yarns on himself. "My first day," he says, "nobody told me where to go, so I found a stage with a sign over the door that said 'LeRoy Company' and I went in. They were shooting and I watched them work about an hour and then I asked somebody what I was supposed to do. He didn't know, and I mentioned the sign and said I was LeRoy. And then I found out that the sign meant Mervyn LeRoy, the director, and there I was, a greenhorn, horn-ing in... They didn't let me forget it, you bet!"

Ben Hecht, the producer who baits producers, is skimming along through his picture, "Before I Die." His record: four days ahead of schedule the first week; seven days ahead the second week. He is author, director, and actor as well as producer.

The acting was an afterthought. He sought first Ernst Lubitsch, then Alfred Hitchcock, for the role of a city tramp; when they were "unavailable," Hecht award-

F. R. Tries to Mend Campaign Pieces

WASHINGTON—Toughest job of rehabilitation since the celebrated case of Humpty Dumpty has been encountered by Mr. Roosevelt in trying to mend the pieces of his campaign organization shattered at Chicago.

Paul McNutt, federal courtier and Indiana democratic political director, shifted directly away from first inside overtures designed to place him in Farley's job as chairman of the democratic national committee. McNutt wisely assumed that job would be an un-fitting end to a budding national political career. He is looking beyond the horizon of existing democratic conditions apparently directly at the presidential nomination of 1944.

It is true the job would call for renunciation of McNutt's future political ambitions. People always have liked to think of the president as a statesman rather than a politician. Those who have been nominally in charge of political activities have been excluded from consideration in the past for the highest office.

McNutt may be mended but it will take more glue than was at first offered.

ed the bit to himself. He is a little worried, however, about this smoothness and speed. He's afraid he should have had a Search, to give his production dignity. Every producer who is as shaky as a producer has a Search. He figures he could start a Search, maybe, for Something to Search For.

ICKES AND FDR

Even the third term's most ardent advocate, Interior Secretary Ickes, was angered personally by the Chicago outcome. His most persistent personal foe in the administration has been Agriculture Secretary Wallace. They have quarreled constantly over the handling of the forestry service and several incidents have developed which made Wallace less acceptable to Ickes personally as a vice presidential nominee than practically any other in that predetermined race.

Ickes did not make a statement after the conference where he could be asked questions about the ticket up to the time this column went to press.

Those who are close to him say there is, of course, no question but what he will actively get out and campaign for the ticket but he required a week or ten days after the convention to get his blood pressure back to normal.

Johnson Hot—Tommye Corcoran is reported to have flown out to Bohemian Grove with a cold towel for Ex-Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson.

Johnson's friends have an idea he will come back into line after a cooling out period but if even a man had a right to run a temperature of disappointment it is Mr. Johnson. He may have been mistaken but he personally understood he was to be Secretary of War whenever Mr. Woodring left and thereafter understood there would be no White House preference expressed in the choice of vice presidential nominee and that he with five others was on a white list of those who would be acceptable.

Johnson's highly successful leadership for national defense (a policy of which he was the original champion in the government) and his campaigning ability in view of his American Legion and business connections, make it necessary for Mr. Corcoran to wield the coldest possible towel and present more alluring hopes for the future in case the president's proffered bait of a job as administrative as-

Dr. Jack T. Johnson of the political science department will be heard on the regular Headline News program on WSUI at 12:30 today.

THE ARMY BILL

The army scheme behind the draft bill is simply this (from the official viewpoint): The general staff decided exigencies of defense require 1,300,000 trained men as soon as possible to guarantee American security. By voluntary enlistment they will increase the regular army from 270,000 to 375,000 men. They had hoped to do this by September 1 but now believe it will require four months more because enlistments are lagging. True, they only expected 15,000 enlistments in June and got 18,000. The number for July will probably reach the unprecedented total of 36,000. But this unexpected surge was due mainly to the fact that many young men left high schools and colleges in those two months, and, therefore, the rate cannot be maintained.

By training the national guard in accordance with the new bill, they leave them less than one-half way toward their security goal. So they composed the direct draft program planning to call 400,000 men for October 1 and 300,000 more for next April 1. This would give them a necessary 1,300,000.

Apparently they did not devote much thought to the social or economic aspects of the matter.

477 University of Iowa Students Awarded Degrees, Certificates

C. A. Phillips Gives Honors At Convocation

Prof. Harry G. Barnes Acts as Master Of Ceremonies Last Night

Four hundred and seventy seven University of Iowa students were awarded degrees and certificates by Acting President Chester A. Phillips at the 41st summer session convocation here last night in the main lounge of Iowa Union, where over 2,000 crowded to witness the exercises.

Master of ceremonies at the convocation was Prof. Harry G. Barnes, registrar, assisted by Prof. Vance Morton as university marshal.

Prof. M. Willard Lampe presented the invocation, followed by the commencement address by Prof. Fred Alexander of the University of Western Australia.

First Master of fine arts degree in drama was conferred last night upon Henderson Forsythe, Monroe City, Mo., who wrote his thesis on "An Actor's Preparation and Interpretation of Three Widely Different Major Roles in the Theater."

Bernard Fraser Balluff of Davenport was the only student to finish with distinction. Graduated from Saint Ambrose college in 1937, he received his degree of juris doctor here last night.

Iowa City students who received B.A. degrees were Frank Height, Richard Jones, Florence Peters, Eugene T. Richter, Helen Ries, Mary Sheets, Howard James and Esther Martin.

Local students awarded M.A. degrees include Wilhelm Bodine, Paul Brechler, Harold Christensen, Herbert Cormack, James Curtis, Marcella Gray, Janet Henry, Lee Mathes, Gerald Maxwell, William Pierce, Beatrice Posner, Anna Raikie, Margaret M. Schindhelm and Gordon Southard.

Master of science degrees were awarded to Nathan N. Crouse, John O. Schulze and Carolyn F. Trowbridge.

Those receiving their Ph.D. degrees last night from Iowa City include Leigh Douglass, Walter Fahrner, Maurice Farber, Charles E. Henry, Rosemary Lippitt, James Maucker, Benjamin McKeever Jr., R. Eleanor Methany, Wilson Paul, Henry Price, Fred Rigby, Malcolm Stewart, Mary Thompson and M. Erik Wright.

The convocation speaker addressed the graduates, faculty and friends on "An American Looks at the America of 1940." The historian, speaking "not as a foreign visitor addressing an audience of strangers," discussed the topic with "a gesture of good will."

"I like to think," he said, "that all of us here tonight belong to a world-wide family of universities; as university men and women, our aim should be to seek the truth and to speak the truth as we see it, regardless of the limitations of national frontiers and regardless of the feelings of those to whom we address ourselves."

International Outlook "Perhaps I can best begin by saying that the international outlook of the Australian people has been very limited during the greater part of the last half century. More often than not, our attitude as a nation has been provincial and self-centered.

"Our primary concern has been

304 Master of Arts Degrees Awarded At Convocation

If advanced degrees in college are any criterion, summer session students at the University of Iowa must have really "cracked the books," for statistics from yesterday's convocation record show that 304 master of arts degrees were awarded.

From the 501 applications for degrees earlier this month, 477 students were successful, indicating a greater shrinkage than last year when, from over 500 applications, 489 degrees and certificates were conferred.

Second highest number of degrees awarded were bachelor of arts, numbering 57. Doctor of philosophy degrees followed with 49.

Additional statistics show the following degrees awarded: bachelor of fine arts—2 bachelor of science in physical education—3 bachelor of science in school supervision—1

juris doctor—8

bachelor of science in pharmacy—2

bachelor of science in chemical engineering—2

bachelor of science in civil engineering—2

bachelor of science in commerce—7 with the development of our own island continent. International relations in general have not greatly interested the Australian people.

"As a nation, we have at all times been very interested in our special south-west Pacific region . . . just as the people of the United States have long been interested in South and Central America, in the Caribbean and in other neighboring regions.

"Throughout the 19th century, as well as in recent decades, Australians have watched with acute concern the activities of foreign powers in the South Pacific whether the power concerned was France in the early 19th century or Germany in the eighties and after, or Japan in our own time.

"But, except for this steady interest of the Australian people in what might be described as Australian waters, most of my fellow countrymen have turned their eyes inward rather than outward. Until quite recent times the rank and file of Australians were ready enough to leave larger problems of international relations to the British government in London.

"On the eve of the great war of 1914, Australians were still not interested in the intricate details of European diplomacy. The real concern of the Australian people was with home affairs . . . with the beginnings of a great manufacturing development and with a corresponding attempt to establish fair play and a decent living standard for the Australian worker.

Two Great Shocks "From this characteristic preoccupation with their own internal affairs, the Australian people have not been rudely disturbed twice during the last decade. They have suffered two great shocks in the last 10 years; and some of the results are likely to be permanent.

"The first shock was the world depression which gave Australians a sharp reminder that they could not ignore what was happening in other countries while they sought to go ahead with their own problems of local development.

"Unfortunately, the lessons of the world depression were only partly learnt in Australia. We emerged from the worst phase of the depression comparatively quickly. Partly as the result of the courage and determination with which the problems were tackled and partly because of the strength of the internal social and industrial machinery which had been built up in earlier years, Australia had its house fairly well in order before the effects of the economic blizzard had been fully felt in North America.

"When events of March, 1939, demonstrated the real intentions of Hitler, the Australian people were well on the way to military preparedness. What is much more important, they were being mentally prepared for a new test of their nationhood.

"When Nazi Germany invaded Poland, there were no doubts as to what Australia would do. All three political parties joined in supporting the British government's action. There were differences as to the form of Australia's contribution; some of these differences persisted down to the beginning of the blitzkrieg in western Europe in May; other differences have since revealed themselves; others again will doubtless arise from time to time; but on the basic question of the need for courage and self-sacrifice there was and there is agreement among the Australian people.

"We entered the war against Nazi Germany in a very different spirit from that which had influenced many Australians in 1914. The spirit was different if only because, in 1939, there was full realization of the grim consequences of modern war.

"Australia's entry into the war last September was not the mere emotional rallying of a British Dominion to the cause of its mother country; rather did it express a cold determination to undertake and to see through a high-ly unpleasant, and an unwelcome task but a task which could not be avoided without material danger and without loss of self-respect.

American Attitude "Perhaps the thing which first impressed me sharply in the America of early 1940 was the prevailing attitude of aloofness from the war in Europe. I found this attitude of aloofness pretty general among the American people with whom I talked on the Pacific coast.

"At first I thought this determination of Americans to remain above the battle struck me as being somewhat similar to the detachment from and lack of interest in European affairs which many Australians had shown in the years before Munich. I soon realized my mistake.

"The American attitude of aloofness from Europe as I found it on the Pacific coast in February and March was not the result of a lack of interest; it certainly was not the result of lack of knowledge. On the contrary, I was forced to the belief that it was an attitude of mind deliberately adopted and that it had a moral rather than a material basis.

Left Yesterday

Mapping out their route are pictured Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Saetviet, who left yesterday for an extended trip before they reach Geneseo, N. Y., where they will make their home. They plan to visit in Chicago and Colfax, Wis.; drive to Minneapolis and Cambly, Minn.; see friends in Sheldon and Mason City, and visit briefly in Iowa City again. Then they will go to Geneseo, where Mr. Saetviet will be an instructor in the music department of the Geneseo State Teachers college. Mr. Saetviet received his master's and doctor's degrees in the university here and has been a resident associate in the music department here.

'Control Rooms to be Modernized'

With the installation of the latest and most modern radio control-room equipment, WSUI will have facilities to provide programs with more technical and engineering perfection. The new equipment received here this week will replace obsolete control boards in use here for many years. Carl Menzer, director of WSUI, shown above, examines the control room apparatus.

advantage or rational consideration for material interests are clearly not the sole determinants of the foreign policy of the American democracy; yet there have been times during the present year when I wondered whether the Americans who indulged in emotional outbursts against Japanese aggressors, or who denounced Russian or Nazi invaders, ever wanted to see their sentiments translated into action.

"My impression of America since the blitzkrieg is not so encouraging. It has seemed to me that there is real danger that the moral significance of the government attack upon the problem of rearmament might be missed by many Americans.

"I will confess that I have no blind faith in the value of armaments as such. It is the spirit behind a nation's determination to make itself strong which seems to be important.

"I believe that the United States has before it a future greater than anything it has had in the past. The chaos in Europe today, and the greater chaos which must be expected in that continent tomorrow, give the American people an opportunity for leadership such as rarely comes twice in the life of any nation.

"But if this opportunity is to be seized, it will demand three things of Americans. You must have confidence in your strength as a nation; you must have faith in your purpose as a people; as individuals, you must be willing to accept leadership and to give leadership."

Sox Nip Detroit, 12-9; Yanks Blast Tribe

Tigers Keep League Lead Despite Loss

Newsom Battered From Mound Early By Boston Belters

DETROIT, Aug. 2 (AP)—Boston's battering Red Sox stormed five Tiger pitchers, among them that drawing man, Buck Newsom, for a 12 to 9 victory in a free-for-all slugfest today, but Detroit came out of the melee still leader in the American league.

Thanks to the Yankees' triumph over the Cleveland Indians, the Tigers retained their one-game lead and got some consolation for a hard three-hour job in trying to stem the havoc from Boston bats.

Old Bobo, beaten by the Athletics last Sunday when trying for his 14th straight win, departed in the fifth today, the last shot against him being a homer by Jimmy Foxx, his 23rd of the year. Four successors to Newsom were little better.

The Sox began their ill treatment of Newsom in the fourth when Charley Gehring's error and a pair of singles scored two runs and Dom DiMaggio's four-master into the left field pavilion three more.

Young Earl Johnson, southpaw rookie from the Piedmont league, was shelled by Detroit for four runs in the first three frames and gave up for a pinch hitter in the fourth. Eventually Jack Wilson was returned the winning pitcher although lasting less than four innings.

Manager Joe Cronin put the game safely away for Boston in the eighth by homering off Archie McKain after Rog Cramer had tripled. Cronin collected a single, double, triple and four-bagger in five times at bat.

Cronin, who represents Newsom's latest peevish for the latter's failure to start in the all-star game, had a personal duel with Buck. Joe tripled in the first and doubled in the fifth. Teammates failed to get him around in the first and Newsom caught him off second with a snap throw in the fifth.

Yankees Chase Indians' Milnar For 10 to 2 Win

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2 (AP)—The New York Yankees had one of their good days today and crushed the Cleveland Indians 10 to 2 behind the six-hit hurling of Lefty Matuszko.

The game was marred by nine errors, five by the Indians and four by the Yanks. As a result neither of the two runs scored against the rookie southpaw was earned.

The champions collected 13 hits off four Cleveland pitchers and tallied five times against Al Milnar in the second and third innings to tag him with the defeat.

Charley Keller led the Yankee attack with three hits, but the bombardment was general and Babe Dahlgren drove in four runs. He doubled for one in the second, tripled with two in the third and raised a long fly with the bases loaded in the fifth.

Eddie Anderson Polls Biggest One-Day Total

Local Vote Passes 14,000

Organizations Send Huge Block Ballots; Vote Ends Tomorrow

As Iowa City's total vote to date of resident and passer-through reached a high mark of 14,000 last night, Eddie Anderson moved still closer the head coach's post for the college all-stars-Green Bay Packers football game.

Yesterday's vote in Iowa City, amounting to 4,000 signatures, was combined with a tremendous vote from other Iowa cities to make the day the biggest thus far in the balloting. The Daily Iowan receiving more than 100,000 votes by mail. Of these votes, more than 60,000 were block votes from chapters of three organizations, the Knights of Columbus, the Elks and the Moose.

Huge totals came in from cities and organizations all over Iowa and from surrounding states. Represented in the list with large numbers of votes were Williamsburg, Cedar Rapids, Roseau, Minn.; Chicago, Atwood, Kans.; Warroad, Minn.; Mishawaka, Ind.; Glendale, Cal.; Newburyport, Mass.; Decatur, Ill.; Tulsa, Okla.; Billings, Mont.; LaPorte, Ind.; Findlay, Ohio; Detroit, Mich.; Granville, Ohio; and Fort Snelling, Minn.

With only two days of balloting left, this big day's total put the Iowan into the stretch drive as a virtual cinch for the coaching position. Up until yesterday Anderson had led Don Faurot of Missouri, his nearest competitor by approximately a million points and the gap appears to be widening.

And, with the Big Ten to furnish one coach, whether he is head mentor or not, it appears that only a miracle could keep the Iowa coach off the staff completely.

Up to yesterday his total of nearly two and one-half million points led the closest Big Ten representative, Mal Elward of Purdue, by nearly two million points.

VOTING ENDS TOMORROW AT MIDNIGHT. CAST YOUR BALLOT NOW FOR IOWA'S EDDIE ANDERSON.

Bruins Shade Dodgers, 4-3

BROOKLYN, Aug. 2 (AP)—Claude Passeau, who is laboring both as a starter and as a relief pitcher these days, stepped to the mound in the ninth inning today and saved the Chicago Cubs a 4 to 3 triumph over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Larry French got credit for his 11th victory, pitching six-hit ball up until the final inning. But he gave singles to two of the first three batters he faced in the ninth and Passeau was summoned. He gave up a single for one run, but struck out two men to end the game.

Loop Game Played Under Protest By Manager Bob King

St. Mary's pulled a full game ahead of Iowa Supply in the city league race last night by beating Wilkinson Realty, 9 to 2. The losers drew first blood, counting twice in the second on two walks, an error, a fielder's choice and a hit, but Vic Belger's two-run homer in the third tied the score.

In the fourth St. Mary's led the game by scoring seven runs. Belger, Gaulchoer and Chadek each pounded out two safeties for the winners while Gaulchoer and Shannon gave up only three hits to Wilkinson's.

While Former War Secretary Woodring Opposes—

President Roosevelt Directly Advocates Peace-Time Military Conscription

BY RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP)—

President Roosevelt directly advocated peace-time military conscription today and his former secretary of war, Harry W. Woodring, opposed it.

"I am distinctly in favor of a selective service training bill and I consider it essential to adequate national defense," the chief executive said at a press conference, emphasizing his words by permitting direct quotation.

"How any fair-minded member of congress," Woodring said in a letter to Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), who issued it to the press, "could say that we have given the voluntary system of enlistment for the U. S. army a fair trial and that it has broken down, and therefore we need the compulsory service, is beyond my understanding."

Meanwhile, the taxation subcommittee of the house ways and means committee was taking action to remove what many have called an important obstacle to the production of defense items. It drafted legislation to permit firms which expand their plants for the production of defense orders to deduct from their taxable earnings 20 per cent of the expansion cost annually for five years.

Then, the subcommittee went on to the question of repealing present limitations on the profits and of substitution of an excess profits tax. Administration officials said the aim of the latter tax was to prevent undue enrichment of anyone as a result of the defense program.

The senate military committee was busy, too, polishing the conscription bill for a final vote scheduled for early next week. After hearing the testimony of war department officials, it rejected an amendment to limit the number of men who might be called up to 900,000, and another, under which voluntary one-year enlistments would be tried for a 90-day period to see if the army's personnel needs could be satisfied without compulsory service.

As the measure stood, it would require all men 21 to 30 years old, inclusive — some 12,000,000 in all — to register for the draft, with exemptions for those with dependents to support. It also would permit supplemental voluntary one-year enlistments for all between 18 and 35.

The coincidence of the statements by the president and by Woodring attracted much attention in Washington. The latter had served as secretary of war until less than two months ago. Then he resigned to make way for his republican successor, Col. Henry L. Stimson.

With the increasing acuteness of the conscription controversy, demands had been made in recent days for a statement from the president of the legislation before the senate committee. He had previously declared himself for compulsory service in principle, but declined to be drawn into a discussion of details of particular legislation. He followed the same course today, but the circumstances and the direct quotation gave his statement added point.

Elaborating his views, Mr.

Roosevelt said that in 1917, the nation built up an army of 4,000,000 men, but it was 13 1-2 months later that they went into action. During that period, no shot was fired at this country over here, he added, but that was a bit of sheer luck which would never happen again.

The lesson to be learned from the present war, Mr. Roosevelt said, was that a nation must have trained men and equipment ready when it starts. The personnel, he said, must include fighting men, supply men, mechanics, and factory workers, all of whom would require training whether they were in uniform or not. By training in advance a nation reduced casualties, he continued, and a country can not get a trained force by merely passing a law when war breaks out, or by using a voluntary system.

County Attorney Says Molestations Appear Work of One Person

County Attorney Harold W. Vestermark studied evidence presented by Special Police Investigator John Barnes and witnesses in reported women molestation cases in Iowa City yesterday, and said that the evidence indicated that the advances seemed primarily to be the work of one man.

He said he believed that man has been apprehended.

County Attorney Vestermark said that his office is ready to prosecute any such violations of state law that are brought to his attention in the investigation.

He pointed out yesterday that no accosted woman has filed information with him and that the only apparent person with an apparent bearing in the case was charged with disorderly conduct, a violation of a city ordinance over which the county attorney's office has no jurisdiction.

After considering the evidence collected by Barnes since he was deputized by Mayor Henry F. Willenbrock to work on the case July 22, Vestermark said that in only one instance could charges other than assault and battery be brought against the molester or molesters.

The county attorney said that the evidence indicated that no attack had been attempted in many of the cases (35, according to Barnes) and that only charges of disorderly conduct, under the jurisdiction of the police court, could be filed against the accoster.

Many of the descriptions of the accoster in the 35 cases reported tallied, said Vestermark, which led him to believe that the most of the cases might be attributed to one man, he explained.

De Gaulle has been condemned to death in absentia by a military court in Clermont-Ferrant.

The damage at Hamburg, a city of more than 1,000,000 population which handles an annual peacetime traffic of 17,000,000 tons, is only a sample of destruction wrought by British bombs dumped by day and night on hundreds of objectives, authoritative sources said.

The lesser port of Bremen, home of huge shipyards, miles of docks and its big Xocke-Wulf airplane factory; the Kiel and Wilhelmshaven naval bases, and Cologne, continental traffic center, have drawn a large share of attention from British airmen carrying the war to Germany.

In all, the British reported more than 1,000 German objectives bombed in more than 3,000 raids "of genuine weight and importance" to date.

Answer to Hitler
This, they asserted, is the answer which is being given with increasing vigor to Adolf Hitler's threat of invasion.

At the same time the British said all their harbors remained intact despite unending German forays, although casualties and damage have resulted inland.

Nevertheless, many of Britain's pre-war channel and North sea ports have been closed because of the danger to shipping in the mine and submarine-infested channel waters.

British bombers reported the bombardment of a wireless station after the crippling of a German supply ship off Norway and a "successful" daylight attack on Cherbourg, France, yesterday. Three British planes were reported lost.

German Version
(On the other hand, today's German high command communique said every one of the eight planes in the Cherbourg raid were shot down.

(The Germans also reported a British submarine sunk by a U-boat and one merchantman sunk and others damaged in air attacks on convoys off the east coast, and an airplane factory set afire in "another especially effective raid" on Norwich, in eastern England.

(The Germans placed yesterday's plane losses at 10 British to one German.)

by her merchant sailor gunners in an early morning fight off the northeast coast. The other fell in flames into the sea.

"We heard bombers circling over the ship and one of them opened fire with cannon and machine guns," said the first mate. "Our boys held their fire until they got the plane in their sights, then they gave it a fast burst."

"This one crashed but a second made off. Half an hour later it came back and our gunners made quick work of it."

Canadian Contingent
Britain's forces were augmented with the arrival of another formidable Canadian contingent, including a liberal sprinkling of Americans.

One former member of the Michigan state legislature among the new arrivals, said there were a substantial number of Americans in his brigade.

"There would have been lots more if we had not persuaded them to stay at home and look after their families," he said.
