Invasion for Egypt

Bulletins from Rome and Egypt indicated that the Italian army has at last begun its long-expected attack on Egypt.

It was reported by British scouts that Italy's Marshal Graziani has rushed fresh troops from the interior of Libya and massed them near the Egyptian frontier. In Rome it was unofficially declared that the thrust had already begun.

The outcome of an Italian invasion of Egypt is difficult to determine. Outwardly Egypt is an independent nation but actually it is not free; the government is still under the domination of the British army.

The Anglo-Egyptian treaty of alliance of 1936 was an extension of that measure of independence which had been granted in 1922 as a result of long and bitter agitation for self-government. But the British army still guides Egypt's destiny.

Under the terms of the treaty of 1936 to be enforced for 20 years the British representative in Egypt became known as "ambassador." Formerly he had been called the British high commissioner to Egypt.

Egypt conceded to Britain the right to defend the Suez canal. Roads between the canal, Alexandria and Cairo, and barracks at the canal for British troops were to be built by Egypt. The British garrison in Cairo was to be withdrawn upon completion of these projects. Egypt was granted permission to increase its own army but the army must be trained by British officers and the equipment used must be the same as that used by the British army. Alexandria remained as a British naval and air base.

Most significant provision in the treaty is that requiring Egypt to yield all facilities to Britain in case of war.

No nation can remain neutral if it is allied to a warring power under conditions such as these. Egypt had announced a state of "non-belligerency" in the war and it had been expected that war might be declared against Italy. The Anglo-Egyptian alliance of 1936 was not an agreement between two completely independent nations. It is reminiscent rather of an alliance between Manchuria and Japan.

Egypt, therefore, is not in a situation parallel to that of Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium when they were invaded. The sympathies of these nations were for the most part pro-Ally but they strived to be true neutrals and were not committed to aid either side with either military or other concessions. Egypt is in the unfortunate position of being bound to an ally that she does not desire.

Invasion is a bitter experience for any nation. It must be especially so for one that has little reason or desire to be embroiled in war but that cannot even plead neutrality in an effort to escape it.

Conscription and Crime

An angle in favor of the military conscription bill that has not been stressed up to the present time is presented in a book by Dr. Leo Stanley, chief surgeon of San Quentin prison.

Dr. Stanley does not consider the political implications of conscription; his concern is the effect that military training has on the volume of crime in the nation and on the health and well-being of the youths themselves. The experiences of the last war are the basis of Dr. Stanley's observations.

"During the war years the population of the prison dropped greatly," he writes. "This, no doubt, was due to the fact that most of the younger men were drafted into the army and placed in military camps. Being under the jurisdiction of the military authorities made them decidedly less of a problem to the civil powers."

"The great decrease in prison population, demonstrated when there was a call to arms, leads to the thought that perhaps compulsory military service for all youths between sixteen and nineteen years of age would be of great benefit to the lads themselves, and would reduce crime."

"Most of our crime is committed by young men."

"A boy of eighteen who enters a military camp would be examined thoroughly from a medical and psychiatric point of view. Those with remedial defects could be cared for surgically. Teeth and eyes would be cared for. Found normal, the boy would be developed in body by military training, and he would learn the great lessons of discipline and obedience to constituted authority. Discipline, unflavored by home influence, is a fine thing for any boy."

"Then he would be examined psychologically. This would determine his mental and moral standing. If he were found to have certain leanings, say to medicine or law, then the state could subsidize him. . . in other words, encourage youth, place it, fit the square pegs in the square holes. . .

"The crazy ones would be cared for. The dangerous ones suppressed or steered into safer ways. The police problem would be immeasurably reduced. . ."

The primary purpose of the peace-time conscription bill is the defense of America. This must not be forgotten. The point made by Dr. Stanley can not be more than incidental to that purpose. If, however, the benefits described can be achieved at the same time and without sacrificing the initiative and independence that are so vital to youth in democracy, conscription will have an added advantage deserving of more than passing consideration.

Muffling the Issues

The republican national committee is barking up the wrong tree in selecting the inadequately armed United States army as a campaign issue. There are plenty of good issues that deserve to be completely hashed over before the public but the army isn't one of them.

The republicans accuse the Roosevelt administration of failure to build up and equip the army to strength adequate to defend the United States. They point to pictures of national guardsmen at recent maneuvers using sticks of wood to simulate 60 mm. trench mortars, a type of armament in which they are deficient; trucks rigged up to represent tanks and gas-pipe anti-tank guns. These are called examples of the administration's failure to consider "preparedness" in the last seven years.

The charges are true. The administration didn't worry much about having or preparing for a great standing. But neither did anyone else—prior to May 10 when Hitler demonstrated that he meant business and that it did not take two to make a fight.

The navy has always been our first line of defense. We have always laughed at the thought of needing a million men or more standing around in uniform. All of that has changed now. We realize that neutrality proclamations aren't really much more than scraps of paper. So we're deciding that we must have an adequately equipped and manned army and we're working hard to see that we have one in the shortest possible time.

We know that the republicans will work just as hard for defense if they are elected in November, but they won't win any votes by telling us that the army is in pretty sad shape. The G.O.P. would do better to hunt up and debate the issues on which there is a real difference of opinion.

A Man About MANHATTAN

Supply Your Own Gestures For This Little Tale

NEW YORK — For days now Broadway has been in a story-telling mood, and at the risk of being silly I am going to pass along the one that is getting the biggest play in the backstage dressing rooms and at restaurant tables. It's a hard story to tell, because it should be acted with gestures, but then maybe you can supply your own.

This story concerns three little kittens whose names were Phittt, Phittt-Phittt, and Phittt-Phittt-Phittt. They were the happiest little kittens you ever saw, until, one day, little Phittt came down with the fever.

"Little Phittt is burning up," cried little Phittt-Phittt to her little sister Phittt-Phittt-Phittt. "Oh, what shall we do to save her?" "I know," cried little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt. "I'll run and get the doctor." Which she did, but it was too late. By the time that little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt returned, poor little Phittt was dead, and poor little Phittt-Phittt was sobbing her eyes out.

For many days after this, little Phittt-Phittt and her sister, little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt, went about very sorrowfully. They gave up playing with the ball of yarn with which the three of them had so frequently cavorted in the good old days when poor little Phittt was alive.

But time, the great healer, heals all wounds, and so one day little Phittt-Phittt and little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt forgot all about their sorrow. They began to play again, as healthy young kittens should play. They ran out of doors and raced across the lawn. They played so hard that they scarcely noticed that the sun had gone down and that a cold rain was beginning to fall.

That night, alas and alack, little Phittt-Phittt bobbed up with a sore throat. By morning she was worse. "Oh, dear," cried little Phittt-Phittt, "the fever is burning me up. What shall I do?"

This frightened little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt almost out of her wits, as she remembered only too well what had happened to poor little Phittt when the fevers came.

So she gathered up her skirts and flew down the hill to where the doctor lived.

"Doctor," she panted, "oh, do come quickly. Little Phittt-Phittt has the ague, and I fear some harm will come to her."

"Little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt," consoled the doctor, "calm yourself. Everything will be okay."

So they hurried up the hill to where poor little Phittt-Phittt lay wheezing and coughing. "Say 'ah,'" said the doctor, ramming a stick down poor little Phittt-Phittt's throat. "Yep," he added thoughtfully, "just as I feared. We'll have to give you some medicine."

But alas and alack, poor little Phittt-Phittt passed away before morning, leaving poor little Phittt-Phittt-Phittt all by herself.

That's about all there is to the story, except the moral, which is: Only the phittest survive.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

The Customers Still Call for Old Tunes

HOLLYWOOD — You walk on the set and hear a familiar tune with a lilt in it, and you know those two purveyors of musical nostalgia, Anne Neagle and her producer-director, Herbert Wilcox, are at it again.

The tune is "Tea for Two" and the picture is "No, No, Nanette." There's another tune called "I Want to Be Happy" and still another from which the movie takes its title, and they'll all be in the movie just as they were in the play.

When the Neagle-Wilcox team toured with "Irene," their first revived old-timer, they found that the only thing wrong with the old tunes was that the paying customers couldn't get enough of them. Those "Nanette" tunes, like those of "Irene," have lasted through the years and still are played on the air—still were played, that is, until recently. For six months, by order of Wilcox, the "Nanette" music is off the air to freshen it up, so to speak, for the Christmas release of the movie.

Sometimes, on the set where Miss Neagle and her leading men, Richard Carlson and Victor Mature, are dancing in ballroom scenes, you can't hear the music. You can see the orchestra playing, led by a rotund, chubby maestro, but you can't hear anything but dialogue. Which brings us to Manny Harmon and his "silent" band.

For 15 years Manny and his nine good men have been fingering and blowing instruments nobody hears. Long ago directors gave up trying to record music on sets during film action. They record it first—usually with large orchestras—and then shoot the picture to "playbacks" of the recordings. And that's where Manny and his trained musicians come in—to be photographed as they play to match the music.

They're real musicians, too. Between pictures they take engagements at clubs, banquets, and the like. They all have union cards, even have a theme song for between-scenes. It's "Tea for Two." And you know what happened? The first time they struck it up on the set where it belongs they couldn't strike it up. One of the men—a new one—had lost his music!

Brief description of the moral status of all the characters in "High Sierra" by Humphrey Bogart, who plays the "heaviest" of the lot: "There's one good guy in it—that's the dog!"

Odd that in the current oilfield cycle, with pictures full of oil, so many of the plots should creak. . . Promising teaming: Alfred Hitchcock's direction and Bob Montgomery's style in "Mr. and Mrs. Smith"—with Carole Lombard in it too. . . Paramount should groan when it sees "Brigham Young" with Dean Jagger, ex-Paramount. . . Watch for Dennis Morgan (ex-Stanley Morner) to surprise in "Kitty Foyle" . . . Shirley Temple is "out" as far as stage offers are concerned, but there'll likely be a movie announcement before too long. . . Stanley Smith, lately on air and stage, is coming back with Bob Taylor in "Flight Command."

BUMPER CROP OF CYLINDERS FOR U. S. WAR PLANES

An inspector, above, looks over thousands of cylinders, lying row upon row, which have been turned out by the Pratt and Whitney plant in Hartford, Conn. Operating night and day, the plant is working to manufacture $27,000,000 worth of airplane engines contracted for by the United States government to be used in the new fighting planes.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

British Not Beaten Yet in the Air

WASHINGTON—As long as the flashes from London tell of long night and short day raids, you may feel reasonably sure the British are not near the end. The Goering plan of throwing his waves of bombers in nine-hour after dark assaults, while curtailing his daytime bolts to sporadic forays is a tall-tale disclosure to the initiated that the British have not yet been conquered in the air.

If Goering starts nine-hour day raids, then watch out. It may well mean British air resistance is broken.

ARMY NOT CONQUERED

Every stone of London could be crumbled to dust without necessarily causing defeat. The really vital point involved is whether Churchill can keep enough fighting planes on hand to thwart the beaching of German boats on British shores. Britain will not fall until her army is beaten. It cannot be beaten by civic destruction.

This at any rate has been the preponderant view of our military authorities who have been sitting on the edge of their chairs watching the incoming dispatches. It is true there is another school among them. Some of our air force officers have faith in the ability of the air arm alone to break the backbone morale of an enemy. They cite Warsaw and Rotterdam, but in both cases the cities were actually conquered by an army at their gates. In both cases also the cities were the last defended bastions of retreating armies. The situation of London is different. Some three million undefeated soldiers are under arms around the island. Their ports are open to all the food producing nations of the world, and they have the money to buy and the ships to carry.

The air-minded school holds that destruction of water mains, gas supply, electrical energy, would, when added to the destruction of docking facilities, cause resistless civilian pressure upon the government for a negotiated peace. They expected the constantly increasing severity of destruction would cause ousting of the Churchill government and establishment of a peace party in control. (Every-one agrees Britain will never give in as long as Churchill is at the top.)

This no doubt reflects Hitler's aim and he has proven himself in the past surprisingly correct in his unique military theories. But the prevailing opinion from the beginning of the bombing here has been that Hitler cannot win without defeating the army, cannot defeat the army without invasion, cannot invade until he gets air superiority. And the experience of London is only a great dramatic sideshow which cannot be decisive.

The next week or 10 days should tell the tale.

DELIBERATE LETDOWN?

The republican high command has not paid as much attention to the let-down in the Willkie campaign as has the press. Those who have been to the Willkie camp in Rushville report that the candidate deliberately planned to ease down the tempo in preparation for the final drive. The rhythm has been carefully arranged for the future to lead up gradually to a high pitch the last two weeks before election day. The leaders seem fairly well pleased with this new way of doing things, remembering that the Landon campaign had its letdown after October 1.

Critical republican congressmen have been quieted also by the latest private advices on improvement in republican organization. Willkie has been spending every free moment for weeks consulting republican organization specialists. Only complaints now seem to come from business men inexperienced in politics who are regretting that the republican nominee did not keep the offensive.

ROOSEVELT FRESH OUT

Mr. Roosevelt has been in the swiches for days on the new labor board chairman. He held up the reappointment of Madden on advices from his senate leaders that the nomination could not be confirmed. Also Madden does not have the personal approval of A. F. of L. directors, who must be kept pleased with an election in the offing.

Scouting about for someone else who was sufficiently obscure to satisfy both A. F. of L. and CIO, and yet get past the senate, he first hit upon a 67-year-old college professor who was inclined to turn it down because of his years. Then came another poll of the senate by Senator Thomas of Utah indicating Madden might be pushed through under strong White House pressure, although an awkward fight could not be avoided. All through this the White House has been afraid Willkie would get hold of the embarrassing situation and make capital of it.

When asked what the president would do a few days back, one of his leading advisers replied: "Mr. Roosevelt seems to be fresh out of Harvard lawyers."

Zadok Dumbkopf, after listening to some speeches, thinks both political parties ought to adopt the parrot as their emblem.

The New York aquarium attracts nearly 3,000,000 persons annually. By this time the fish ought to have a fair idea how the average American looks.

Schoolboy, Tigers Whip Yanks

6 to 3 Victory Keeps Detroit In Loop Lead

Greenberg's Homer In Sixth Inning Aids Tiger Cause

By DALE STAFFORD

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP)—Baseball's grandest pitching comeback of the year continued today when big Lynnwood (Schoolboy) Rowe hurled the first-place Detroit Tigers to a 6 to 3 victory over the New York Yankees before 19,272 howling spectators.

The win, fourteenth of the season for Rowe, enabled the Tigers to stay three percentage points and a half game up on the Cleveland Indians, who trimmed the Boston Red Sox, to remain in the American league pennant scramble.

Old Yankee Nemesis
A Yankee nemesis in his heyday, Rowe lacked the speed of the Tigers' pennant winning years of 1934 and 1935, but he used what stuff he did have to remarkable advantage. The Yanks combated him for 11 hits, two more than Detroit obtained, but left 11 runners stranded on the bases. Rowe allowed at least one hit in seven of the nine innings.

In winning the seventh game in their last eight starts, the Tigers benefited from four unearned runs scored in the eighth inning after Second Baseman Joe Gordon had thrown a double play ball into the New York dugout. Four singles and an intentional walk followed, sewing up the game and dropping the Yankees two full games behind Detroit.

Tigers in Uphill Battle
Before the big eighth the Tigers fought an uphill battle against Atley Donald, who yielded only five hits before the winning spurge.

Donald, who has never beaten Detroit, got in a jam in the first when the Tigers scored a run. He walked Dick Bartell, and Barney McCosky followed with a single that moved the Tiger shortstop to third. Charley Gehringier fled out. When Donald uncorked a wild pitch, sending McCosky to second, the Yanks issued an intentional pass to Hank Greenberg. Bartell came home after the catch on Rudy York's long fly and Bruce Campbell hit into a force play.

New York scored twice after two were out in the third, singles by Red Rolfe and George Selkirk and Joe DiMaggio's triple producing the runs.

Tigers Knot Score
The Tigers deadlocked the score at 2-2 in the sixth when Greenberg belted his 32nd homer of the year and his sixth in the last eight games.

Singles by Rolfe and Charley Keller interspersed by an infield out gave New York a run and a 3 to 2 advantage in the seventh. The Tiger eighth started harmlessly when McCosky flied out and Gehringier walked. Greenberg then lashed a hot grounder at Rolfe and the Yankee third baseman threw to Gordon, forcing Gehringier. In his try for a double play, Gordon threw the ball away and the Tigers were off.

York smashed a single to right, scoring Greenberg, who had reached second on the error. York took second on a throw to the plate. Campbell was given an intentional pass. Pinky Higgins, who had struck out twice and popped, hit a 3 and 2 pitch into right field for a single, scoring York and placing Campbell on third. Billy Sullivan's single scored Campbell and brought in Marvin Brewer to relieve Donald.

Rowe laid down a surprise bunt for a single that scored Higgins from third. A walk to Bartell filled the sacks but McCosky, up for the second time, grounded out to end the rally.

In the second tilt of the three game series tomorrow, Tommy Bridges will fling for Detroit and Marius Russo, victor in six straight games, for the Yankees.

Sophs Work in Iowa Backfield As Hawks Get Down to Work

The University of Iowa football squad was sent through two long sessions of signal drill and passing workouts yesterday by Coach Eddie Anderson as injuries cut into the ranks of the Hawkeys for the first time this season.

Francis Curran, 190-pound sophomore guard from Chicago, received a bruised shoulder and George Gable, 200-pound Cedar Rapids tackle, was forced to leave practice with a bruised leg muscle in the afternoon workout. Neither injury was reported serious.

Byron McCaughey, Rock Rapids sophomore, was advised by doctors today to quit the squad because he has not sufficiently recovered from an appendicitis operation which he underwent in June.

On the hurling end of yesterday's passes were Stauss, Bender, Tom Farmer, Jim Youel and Tony Komlanc—all sophomores.

Harder Hurls 3-Hit Triumph

Win Keeps Cleveland In Pennant Chase; Detroit Still Leads

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12 (AP)—Veteran Mel Harder flung a three-hit pitching masterpiece at the Boston Red Sox today for an 8 to 1 triumph which kept the Cleveland Indians a half-game behind league-leading Detroit.

The Indians found the Red Sox pitching to their liking, teeing off on Fritz Ostermueller and Emerson Dickman for a fourth inning outburst which produced seven runs.

The scant crowd of 1,000 in Cleveland's 80,000-seat stadium saw Harder finish his second game of the season, good for his fifth victory over Joe Cronin's sluggers. It was the veteran right hander's 10th win against 12 defeats.

Jury Convicts 5 Annenberg Associates

Judge W. C. Lindley Denies Motion For New Trial in Case

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—Five former business associates of M. L. Annenberg were convicted by a federal court jury today of conspiracy to defraud the government of $77,883 in taxes of the Consensus Publishing company.

Judge Walter C. Lindley denied motions for a new trial and imposed these penalties:

Arnold W. Kruse, secretary of the Cecilia company, Annenberg holding firm, 18 months in prison and a $10,000 fine.

James M. Ragen, Sr., who was general manager of Annenberg's nationwide Turt News Service before it was dissolved last fall, and William Molasky, president of the Consensus company, one year and a day imprisonment and a $10,000 fine each.

Lester Kruse, son of Arnold Kruse, and James M. Ragen, Jr., $1,000 fine each.

The Consensus company, a $45,000 fine.

All individual defendants were convicted on all counts in the indictment except Lester Kruse, who was adjudged guilty on only two counts. All were granted five-day stays of execution. Molasky resides in St. Louis and the others in Chicago.

The jury deliberated four hours. The trial, involving the last group of defendants indicted during the investigation of Annenberg's services to betting rooms, lasted six days.

Aged Man Carrying $95,000 in Hatbox Chats with Police, Shuns Escort Home

Mrs. Snite, Jr. Expects Baby Within 2 Weeks

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Fred B. Snite, Jr., wife of the iron lung globe trotter, entered Lying-In hospital today in expectation of motherhood within two weeks.

Snite, infantile paralysis victim who has lived in respirators for four years, announced the forthcoming event to friends last May. He and the former Teresa Larkin, of Dayton, Ohio, were married Aug. 10, 1939 in suburban River Forest, where they make their home.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 12 (AP)—The strange case of the aged man who arrived from California carrying a battered hatbox containing $95,000 in cash and bonds reached an impasse at police headquarters today.

The nonchalant traveler, James D. Davidson, 82, refused stubbornly to accede to proposals by five nephews—who hail from three different cities—that he accompany them home.

He sat calmly chatting with police clerks, puffing contentedly on his pipe.

Meanwhile, harried police, the nephews, two police attorneys and a public welfare commissioner, went into a huddle to determine what to do.

Hatbox and contents rested securely in a police vault. Astounded police decided to guard the treasure temporarily after they found Davidson wandering about in Union station Sunday night.

"Heck boys," the octogenarian told wide-eyed officers, "nobody's gonna steal it."

After a night at police headquarters, Davidson, who said he was a retired merchant from Long Beach and Riverside, Cal., was sent to a hospital for two days. Physicians there said they treated him for malnutrition.

Yesterday, Davidson agreed to accompany two nephews, James C. and Charles W. Davidson, to their father's home at Champion, Neb. Joined by two other nephews, Ralph T. and James H. Davidson of Luverne, Ia., the group went to a hotel.

Police heaved a sigh of relief. Today the old man changed his mind. He returned to the hospital for his cane, then refused to go back to the hotel with his nephews. Fearing an argument, hospital authorities summoned police.

Davidson said he spent last night "seeing the town" alone—ambling leisurely about streets, through hotel lobbies and window shopping.

Actually, the nephews said, he wasn't alone. Fearing for his safety, they took turns trailing him.

A fifth nephew, Charles Davidson of Newton, Ill., arrived on the scene today.

No New Cases Of Paralysis In Johnson County

Dr. Isom A. Rankin, city physician, yesterday reported a "moderately severe" case of small pox in Iowa City. The victim is Lawrence Merrifield, 301 1/2 Kirkwood avenue.

No additional cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in Iowa City or Johnson county. There are now four cases, none of them severe, in the county.

The city physician explained yesterday that colder weather tends to suppress the danger of infantile paralysis though still lower temperatures than have been recorded this week are necessary.

Five Iowa Citizens constitute a committee which will sponsor the annual "Heart" tag sale in Iowa City Saturday for the Volunteers of America, religious and philanthropic agency. Permission has been granted by the city administration for the sale. Committee members announced yesterday are Mayor Henry F. Willenbrock, the Rev. Ralph M. Krueger, pastor of the First English Lutheran church; Mrs. E. O. Wilson, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Carl H. Meinberg, pastor of St. Mary's church, and Mrs. Jessie B. Gordon, librarian of the public library.

In charge of headquarters for the sale, which will be at the mayor's office in the city hall, will be Dorothy Wallace.

The Volunteers of America, an organization devoted to war on crime, poverty and misery, was founded in 1896 by Gen. Ballington Booth and his wife, Mrs. Maude B. Booth, both of whom are still in charge. The organization recognizes no distinction of race, color or creed. Its objective is to carry out a program of social rehabilitation through its many welfare activities.

Iowa City young people are invited to assist in the selling of "heart" tags for whatever amount one is willing to give. Local merchants are offering awards to those who receive the largest amounts for their tags, it has been announced.

nearby a score of structures crumpled like cardboard and windows were shattered and furniture damaged in buildings miles away. Trees were denuded of foliage and bark. Some snapped off like matchsticks. All around the explosion area was a scene of burned, blackened and smoking desolation.

An official of the company, who would not permit use of his name, issued a statement in which he said:

"The total casualty list cannot exceed 200 as that was the total employed in the affected area. Reports that it had been easy to gain access to the plant are absurd because the company has an elaborate guard system and elaborate pass system. Every employe came under rigid supervision and their past records had been carefully studied before they were employed."

Hunt estimated the damage totaled "at least $1,000,000." He described the blast as follows: "Apparently a fire started which was followed by a series of explosions which spread to adjoining buildings, 15 or 20 of which were demolished over a half-mile square area."

He added that the fire apparently started in the solvent recovery tanks "where 16,000 pounds of smokeless powder were being processed."

"There were probably 75 men working in the area where the major explosions occurred," he added. He said he was unable to estimate the number of men at work in the building where the fire started.

"The company," Hunt continued, "is at a loss to explain the cause of the fire and the explosions. The buildings in which the powder was located were separated by substantial brick walls and there was a sprinkler system in all of them."

"We thought all safeguards possible to prevent such an occurrence had been taken. We have no suspicions of any sabotage."

Hunt said the company would not be able to publish the names of the dead until all had been identified. He estimated that about 50,000 pounds of powder were destroyed.

The building in which disaster struck was built only recently to handle national defense contracts. The plant sprawls over 2,000 acres about a mile off route 6. It was established in 1876. No women were employed there.

Death Toll
Earlier Police Chief Harry Jenkins quoted County Physician Raymond Mutchler that the tentative death toll was 20. Other estimates ran as high as 50. The number of persons at work in the plant at the time of the explosions could not be immediately ascertained.

The 400 acre smokeless powder manufacturing plant was engaged on numerous national defense contracts. The company had received $40,000,000 in contracts from the federal government in the last three months.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Newark sent agents to the scene and naval officials at New York said an investigation would be launched because a naval ammunition depot is at Lake Denmark, seven miles away. Picatinny army arsenal is eight miles away.

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R-NJ) said after a visit to the scene that the Dies committee, of which he is a member, would "investigate the group who are holding employment in the plant."

Thomas said the inquiry would include employes of all plants "that have defense contracts."

Most of the injured were taken to the Dover hospital at Dover, five miles away. Hospital attaches said they received 130 victims.

At least three of the injured died at the hospital.

The institution could not accommodate the rush of victims in its surgical rooms. Many were treated in hallways. Dover residents contributed blankets.

At Washington, the Red Cross said tonight that it had a group of field workers at the disaster scene, and that Dr. William DeKleine, its medical director, was there, or enroute there from New York.

In addition to emergency medical care for the injured, officials said the Red Cross will extend temporary aid to the families of those killed, if it is necessary.

President Roosevelt asked the Red Cross earlier to rush relief facilities and directed the war department to extend relief. Officials said army aid would be extended under direction of the second corps area headquarters, New York city.

The terrific force of the concussion shattered windows and damaged furniture in homes of Kenvil, Dover and other nearby communities.

Early estimates set the plant damage at $2,000,000.

State police and company officials cleared all persons from the huge plant enclosure as the inferno raged. They said "more explosions are expected at any minute."

The plant is 30 miles northwest of New York city metropolitan area in a rural area. Kenvil's population is 900.

indicated, however, that some announcement might come tomorrow.

Air attacks upon Egypt, a British ally, and the Sudan have been intensified in the past few days.

Giovanni Ansaldo, an authoritative editor, spoke cryptically today of a telegram from Alexandria which would be a greater bombshell to Britain than a German bomb. What the telegram might contain, he said, "we will not say but you will guess it."

Officers said, however, the Italian offensive may await the outcome of the battle of Britain, because of indications that Hitler may attempt an invasion of Britain within a week.

(In London, authorized sources said there was no official confirmation of reports that an Italian offensive already had started.)

Italian troop and supply concentrations at Bardia and Fort Capuzzo in Libya have been hit seriously by recent British attacks and Graziani is believed striving to get his offensive preparations complete before he gets a new slap in the face.
