Committee Puts 'More Teeth' in Industry Conscription

Calls Part on Commandeering Of 'Non-Cooperative Industry' Very Weak and Unenforceable

Language Inserted in Measure Provides That Government Can Take Plant if Orders Refused by Manufacturer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Angry contentions in the senate that a clause calling for the commandeering of "non-cooperative industry" was weak and unenforceable prompted a senate-house conference committee tonight to insert in the peace-time conscription bill a section, described as having "more teeth in it."

The senate had balked at accepting the language originally laid before it by the conference committee and, by a vote of 37 to 33, had sent the whole bill back to conference with instructions to insert a more iron-bound provision.

The conference committee then threw out the criticized passage and approved one which the bill contained when it originally passed the house.

It was too late, however, to obtain final action on the bill, which makes the nation's manpower, from 21 to 35 years old, inclusive, liable for one year's military service.

Both senate and house had recessed until tomorrow. The language inserted tonight provides that if a manufacturer refuses to accept government orders or give priority to them, the government shall take over the plant and operate it on a "fair and just" rental basis. Anyone failing to comply with the section could be sent to prison for three years.

The language to which the senate objected provided that industrial units could be commandeered only if the "public necessity" for such action was "immediate," the emergency in the public service imperative and such as "would not admit of resort to any other source of supply."

When the committee's "report," a compromise version of the two differing bills passed by the house and senate—was presented to the senate for action, this was the only issue raised.

Forgotten were the other controversial questions—such as the report's provision that men from 21 to 35, inclusive, should be subject to the draft, instead of the 21-through-30 age limit of the senate, and the conference committee's action in tossing out the Fish amendment calling for a 60-day trial of voluntary enlistment.

For five hours, critics of the controversial provision hit it, hard and hotly, in senate debate. "Confused," "vague," "meaningless," and even "ungrammatical," were some of the adjectives used.

Typical of the destruction visited upon the British empire's capital is the scene above of a London street after German bombers had dropped their missiles. The shattering power of the bombs has wrecked one building completely and littered the street with debris.

German Bombs Fill London's Streets with Rubble

Germans Hurl High Explosives, Incendiary Bombs in Seventh Consecutive All Night Assault

British Announce Week of Raiding Has Taken Toll of More Than 1,200 Dead and 4,900 Persons Wounded

LONDON, Sept. 14—(Saturday)—German warplanes hurled high explosive and incendiary bombs on London last night and early today in the seventh consecutive heavy all-night assault on this raid-worn empire capital which has seen bombs fall on the very seats of Britain's monarchy and Britain's government.

Coming over London at about 15-minute intervals in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire, the raiders unleashed a shower of incendiary bombs on the fringe of central London and dropped salvos of blasting bombs on other parts of the capital.

The all-night alarm ended at 5:25 a.m., after having been in effect eight hours and 25 minutes.

The week of raiding has taken an announced toll of more than 1,200 dead and almost 4,900 persons wounded.

The Germans were busy elsewhere in the United Kingdom also.

Early today, a lone plane attacked a Welsh town and hit a hotel. Four people were believed killed.

After subjecting London to the longest day-time raid of the war, the Germans returned last night for their regular battle in the skies with London's reinforced anti-aircraft batteries.

They opened the night attack at 9 p.m. (2 p.m. CST) and hours later they still shuttled high over the city, while below the thundering artillery raised a red dome of bursting shells all over the metropolitan area.

Nowhere was the action so violent as in the center of the city. Both explosive and fire bombs came hurtling down.

Shell splinters from the defenders' fire drummed loudly upon the rooftops.

The day's attack was centered upon the greatest symbols of the empire.

Buckingham palace was hit by explosive bombs; Downing Street, the home of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and the length of Whitehall, the avenue of the kingdom's government, by fire bombs.

King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were in the palace but escaped injury when five bombs fell.

Authorized sources declared that despite this the "retaliatory" attacks on London and other parts of England would continue without let-up, the argument being that Germany still had not evened the score.

The Germans acknowledged that British night raiders swept over northern and western Germany.

Aerial scouts returning from flights over Libya estimated that fascist forces, mostly concentrated at Bardia, 30 miles from the border, now number over 260,000.

Sporadic artillery fire rumbled along the border between advanced posts as the British and Egyptian armies quietly completed preparations to meet any Italian thrust.

Britain recently landed thousands of soldiers to reinforce the 60,000 desert troops in Egypt.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Sidney Hillman, labor member of the national defense commission, informed union leaders today that the commission would require government contractors to observe labor laws, including the Wagner act.

At the defense commission, authoritative informants said that under a policy adopted by the commission such agencies as the army and navy hereafter could withhold defense contracts from manufacturers held to be in violation of labor laws.

A statement on compliance with labor statutes was included in a general policy pronouncement by the commission. President Roosevelt transmitted this general statement to congress earlier in the day.

In a letter to the heads of all labor organizations, Hillman quoted from the statement as follows: "Adequate consideration must be given to labor. This means compliance with the principles on this subject stated by the commission in its release of August 31 . . ."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—For the first time since the outbreak of war, a foreign vessel was barred from American waters today for alleged misuse of the American flag.

The treasury forbade the Panamanian motor vessel "Norseland" to enter any American port, including canal zone and Philippine island ports, for a period of three months.

Coast guard officers, investigating reports from American consular officers in Europe, said they had learned that the Norseland, apparently fearing torpedoing, had the American flag painted on her sides while on a trip from Colombo, Ceylon, to Liverpool, England.

Deny Motions To Germany

German Library Of Information Charged With Code Violation

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—Magistrate Charles G. Keutgen today denied two defense motions for dismissal of penal code violation charges against the German Library of Information, and after a hearing reserved his decision in the action until Thursday.

On a complaint by former Magistrate Joseph Goldstein, Dr. Matthias Schmitz, the library's director, was summoned on charges of violating a penal law by failing to register it as a business corporation. Goldstein recently accused the German library of being a propaganda organization.

Dr. Schmitz' attorney, Emil Morosini, first sought dismissal of the case by contending that the library was a branch of the German government and not subject to New York court jurisdiction. The motion was denied.

Later he asked for dismissal on the grounds that it had not been shown that the library actually had done business in the sense that it sold anything. The court denied the motion and observed that it did not matter whether the literature had been sold or given away.

Goldstein testified that Dr. Schmitz had told him the library was engaged in sending books, pamphlets, treatises and other printed matter to Americans all over the country and that he was "being well paid."

Other decrees calling for an "economic national defense" provided severe punishment for "economic sabotage," for price increases or kindred acts.

General Antonescu, Europe's latest dictator, took that role without organized backing. Whether he can gain complete control of Rumania is said to depend largely on the pro-Nazi iron guards who now are commemorating the death of their leader, Corneliu Codreanu, in 1938, despite a ban on public demonstrations.

(A Hungarian radio broadcast received by the National Broadcasting company in New York said Antonescu had uncovered a projected "putsch" by the iron guard and had freed various anti-iron guard extremists to work against it.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Striking a note of hope for his British comrades-in-arms of 1917-18, Gen. John J. Pershing said today on his 80th birthday that he thought Great Britain could hold out against the German onslaught.

After being showered with congratulatory messages, decorated by President Roosevelt for an old deed of bravery in the Philippine islands and after making a radio speech exhorting his fellow countrymen to "face the facts" of an imminent danger of war, the "general of the armies" held a press conference.

A reporter asked him if he thought the British would be able to hold out. After a moment's deliberation, he said: "Yes, I think they can."

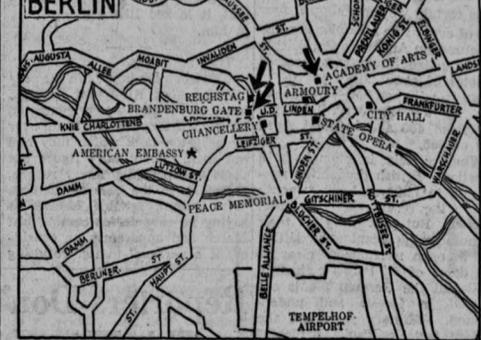

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Germans have tried the invasion several times at different points and each time they failed.

He reported having seen "hundreds of German bodies in the waters near Cherbourg (France)."

The Germans, he said, were constantly practicing for invasion all along the French coast—the practice including maneuvers in which Nazi soldiers in full uniform jumped from vessels and swam long distances with all their equipment.

Other passengers would not comment on the reported invasion attempts, but Dr. Bove's state-

English King, Queen Escape Buckingham Palace Bombing

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP)—The king and queen of England were bombed in Buckingham palace today by a twin-engine German raider participating in the longest daylight attack on London of this total war.

King George VI and his cheerful Scottish queen were not hurt, nor were they cowed.

After the raid, they climbed out of palace air raid shelters, surveyed the damage that five bombs had wrought to royal chapel, inner quadrangle and roadway, and then the king told a thankful war cabinet and people:

"Like so many other people, we now have had a personal experience of German barbarity which only strengthens the resolution of all of us to fight through to final victory." Then, with the queen, he departed for another tour of London's bombed slums.

The little princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, were not in the palace — (it is understood they have been kept away from London throughout the war)—but their mother and father stayed on beneath the royal standard in the massive grey palace despite (See BOMBING, Page 6)

Says Nazis Tried Landings

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 13 (AP)—An American surgeon returning home after spending nearly a quarter-century in France said today that the German army already had made several unsuccessful attempts to invade England from the shores of conquered France.

Basing his statement on personal observation and information from "many French sources," Dr. Charles F. Bove, 52, head surgeon of the American hospital in Paris, declared on his arrival from Lisbon on the American express liner Excambion that "the

Grief Strikes Little Town In New Jersey

KENVIL, N. J., Sept. 13 (AP)—Seven more burned and mangled bodies were dug from the ruins of the explosion-wrecked Hercules powder plant today, bringing to 42 the number of known dead.

On the main street of this typical little industrial town black tar-paper—where windows had been shattered by the blast—hid the interiors of shops, the post-office and stores. Inside small groups spoke in whispers of the tragedy which they referred to as "it" and of those who were not "killed" but "gone."

In the homes the people went silently about their domestic duties. In most of them they were busy replacing window panes, sweeping up debris and striving to bring back to normal houses damaged by the mighty earth-shaking blast. Women wept softly. Men smoked and said little.

"What is there to say," they told the few people they saw. "This is a powder town. Anything is liable to happen here."

Down by the gates of the plant a dozen or more would gather every two hours when reports of the rescue work were brought to them. Three shifts of about fifty men each reported for work as usual during the day. They were set to work digging for more bodies.

General Pershing Asserts That Britain Can Hold Out in War

Hope for the Conquered

Defeated France, with half of its territory under German occupation, may be forced to yield even more to her conquerors unless she meets certain German and Italian demands.

Demobilization of all French troops in North Africa, where a revolt against the Petain regime might throw large reinforcements to the British, has been demanded by Italy.

German demands have been for the surrender of 58 per cent of the livestock in unoccupied France. The livestock was to have been sent to Germany to be slaughtered for meat.

Starvation Specter

The demands were rejected. The Petain government is coping with a serious food shortage of its own and further concessions would not only deprive the French people of food which they badly need but also establish a precedent leading to still more demands. The Italian requests were also rejected.

Italy, should the French troops in North Africa break away from the government at Vichy and join the DeGaulle forces allied with the British, would be menaced from the rear in the event of an Italian drive into Egypt.

The result has been an Italian press campaign against Marshal Petain and his government with hints that a change may be in the offing. Continued annoyance of the German and Italian governments in this manner may mean the end of the leadership of Petain, who may be forced out under the pressure of the axis, and German and Italian troops may extend their occupation to the whole of France.

Hint of Hope

The pressure on France may be an indication that all is not running smoothly in the axis camp. Germany's food shortage, thought to be adequately taken care of through sources in conquered territories, may be a problem calling for immediate action. It may be the reason for Germany's apparent attempt to end the war with a gigantic attack at England through the air. It is, in addition, an evidence that the food shortage in Europe is real, that there will be starvation in Europe this winter. Germany will suffer least of all from famine; the conquered countries will bear the greater share of the suffering.

The pressure from the Italian side hints at uneasiness over the fact that the British are still presenting formidable opposition outside of their island kingdom. The addition of French aid to British forces in Africa may be disastrous to Italy's African campaign.

The French, at the same time that they are likely to be hardest pressed by the results of axis uneasiness, may draw some measure of comfort from the fact that all is not going well for the German and Italian cause. A British victory is still for them the best hope for a restoration to freedom.

The Cultural Targets

During the four years of the World war many of France's great cathedrals were in the path of the German attack. The cathedrals of Orleans, Amiens, Chartres, Reims, Laon and Soissons, all seriously damaged between 1914 and 1918 have fortunately been untouched in the last year of warfare.

The blitzkrieg through France, in spite of its short duration, has not permitted these historic landmarks of France to go unscathed. The cathedrals of Rouen, Evreux, Arras and Cambrai are virtually destroyed. The Church of St. Maciou in Rouen, the thirteenth-century church in Gisors and the church at Adelys, which was a Renaissance masterpiece were among those seriously damaged.

British Targets

The war today, at a faster tempo than ever before, passes quickly over a greater portion of territory. But time does not lessen the chances of destruction. Bombers drop in greater quantities than ever explosives that are more powerful and more destructive than those of the last war and there are now delayed-action bombs to add to the havoc.

Britain, virtually untouched in the last war, is now becoming the scene of widespread destruction. The cathedrals and public buildings of London and all of England have become targets for nazi bombers.

The seventeenth century masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren, St. Paul's cathedral in London, has become one of the possible targets of destruction. A delayed-action bomb was dropped near the historic edifice and has endangered the building. When the bomb was discovered the area was roped off and precautions were taken by a "suicide" squad of workmen to render the explosive as nearly harmless as possible. Twice in the last week Buckingham palace, residence of the British royalty, has been struck by bombs.

No Fortress

The destruction of such historic public buildings has been expected by the British for a long time. They have known that "this rock, this England" is no longer an impregnable fortress. It is not easy to see these cherished spots come within the range of nazi bombers. It is never easy to witness wanton destruction. This is another part of the price of war; a part that is easier to pay than that which costs lives, liberty and freedom. It may be easier now to sacrifice these aesthetic objects than the factories, ships and industrial weapons which are necessary for an ultimate British victory. But, nevertheless, in them are steeped culture and tradition which can never be replaced and their loss will be keenly felt.

Reflected Glory

Joseph Langland and Judith Mohill, two students who were graduated from the University of Iowa in June, have earned distinction for themselves and their school. They were recently awarded certificates of excellence in the Harper's magazine student writing contest.

Langland had been known on the campus during his two years here as one of its brilliant young poets. He was honored for his poem, "Norwegian in America." Miss Mohill gained distinction for her essay, "Leonardo."

We at the University of Iowa are proud when the talents of those among us are recognized. We congratulate Mr. Langland and Miss Mohill and ask their indulgence while we bask in some reflected glory.

The First Lady's Luggage

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt must be one of those persons who believes in traveling "light." But she traveled "heavier" than she believed through Cincinnati and a Negro porter has brought that fact before the public in a rather embarrassing fashion. Embarrassing, that is, for Mrs. Roosevelt.

The first lady had paid the red cap 50 cents for a 70-cent service at 10 cents a bag. The red cap didn't tell her of her error, though, and she didn't find out about it until she read it in the papers. It all came out at an interstate commerce hearing.

Mrs. Roosevelt is grieved. She thought she had paid for the full service and with enough to spare for a tip. In her column she said, too, that she doubted that the new rule of 10 cents a bag gave the porters sufficient pay.

It all goes to prove that the first lady should count the items among her luggage even if it does pile up so that it resembles the effects of a Hollywood glamor girl.

A Man About MANHATTAN

Two Newspapermen Get Stuck Up by a Cop

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—A couple of newspapermen named Herman Allen and Rader Winget left the office the other afternoon about five, turned up their coat collars to avoid the rain, and strolled across to 52nd street on their way to catch an 8th avenue subway.

Pausing to rest in front of the Club 18, they were momentarily startled out of their wits to hear a big fog horn voice right behind them boom: "Stiek 'em up!"

They whirled around, hands raised, to find themselves confronted by a big cop. He hadn't drawn his gun but he had slipped the holster around in front and he had his hand on the trigger.

"What you got your hands in your pockets for?" he cried nervously. "You got a gun?"

Allen didn't, or couldn't, answer that one. "No, he hasn't got a gun," said Winget. "How do you know he hasn't?" the cop wanted to know. "I gotta frisk you boys."

Wherefore and with no further loss of time, Allen and Winget got a good going over.

"Okay," said the cop, after identities had been established, "but you boys shouldn't stand around with your hands in your coat pockets."

Seems that a couple of days before a man had been standing on that same piece of sidewalk when a cop asked him what he was doing. The man, a nervous, jittery individual, whipped out a gun and shot the cop six times.

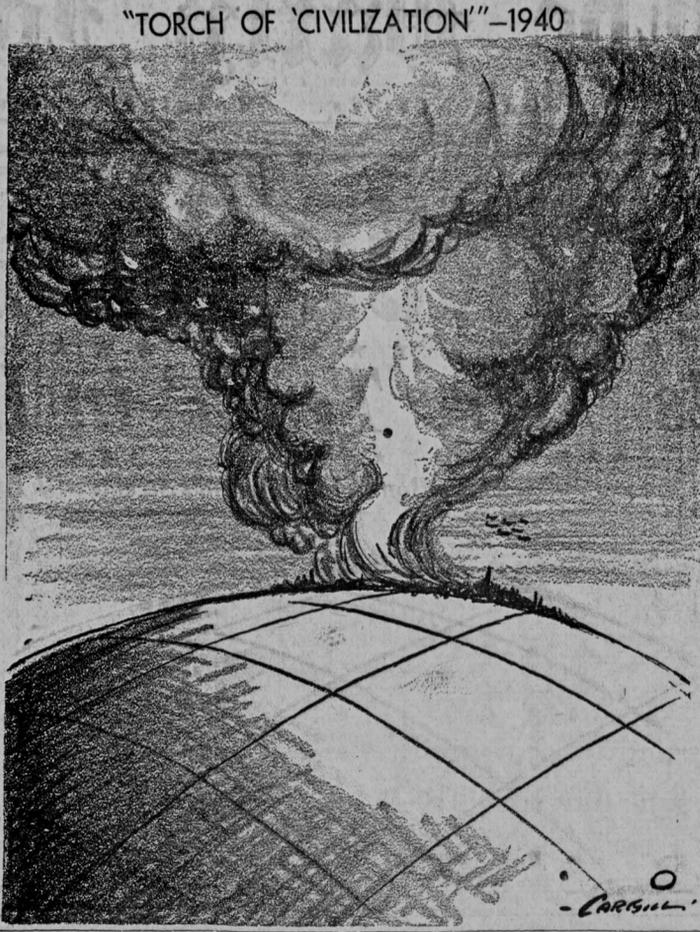

This cop was taking no chances. "I admit I was sore at first," Winget explained later, "but after I got home and had a look at myself in the mirror I didn't blame him much. I had on a brown summer suit, and you know what they look like when they get wet. After another peep into the mirror I took the suit off and threw it away."

Here is a little Broadway drama that doesn't exactly have the happy ending. An enterprising young man wrote to a manufacturing concern and advised them that he had obtained one of their sales films, a motion picture designed to pep up field operatives, and had put it into "one of my Broadway theaters." He said he could get several others in theaters on Broadway.

The firm was amazed and delighted. Imagine having a business film exhibited to thousands of people in Broadway theaters! They sent the extra copies of the film in a hurry.

Then one of the firm's representatives decided he had to go to New York and have a look at this wonderful set-up.

When he arrived he found that his films were in theaters all right—but not movie theaters. They had been put on in the burlesque houses, the manager figuring they were so dull they would clear the house quickly after each show.

Britain Gets 4 of 5 U. S. Planes

WASHINGTON — The government is hesitant about disclosing plane figures but you may count it as certain we have slipped four out of every five new planes manufactured in August to the British. The valiant underdogs received a total of about 200 from us in August, will get 250 in September. By November we will be giving them 400 and by next April 500 or 600.

Whether this is enough is a question. British production ranged up to 1,200 or 1,600 a month before the recent air devastation started. But practically all their manufacturing plants are sitting out in open territory as clear as the dome of St. Paul's cathedral, while all the German plants are massed in forests and underground. Military men call the British factories "suicide plants" for that reason.

Note — The published Van Zandt figures claiming 2,200 planes shipped to Europe covered a period away back to February 1938.

MAINE VOTE DAMPENED

The Maine republican sweep was actually 50,000 votes less than the highest republicans privately had hoped. The weather and a local political scandal apparently kept the total from reaching those truly sensational proportions. Rain hampered casting of the farm vote which is considered practically all republican. A malfeasance case likewise dampened some enthusiasm.

But this makes the net result stand out even bigger when you consider that the London people spent a quarter of a million dollars in Maine in 1936 and the Kansas candidate made two speeches there. This time much less national pressure was exerted.

WILLKIE IN A TREND

A wise old republican warhorse of many past campaigns, commenting on the Maine result and differences within the republican organization has told his colleagues:

"Politics is guided wholly by trends. If you are in a trend you can make a hundred mistakes and they will not make any difference. If the trend is against you you can do everything right, and still lose. The Maine result showed only that Willkie was right when he said he was in a trend. With the weather and a scandal against us, little money spent and practically no organization, we couldn't lose."

STEMWINDING AMERICAN HISTORY

Mr. Roosevelt would not have paid for the labor speech broadcast. He told correspondents 48 hours beforehand it would be on "American History." Broadcasting companies had been informed by presidential secretary, Steve Early, that no one could tell whether it was political in nature and, therefore, the companies decided not to charge for it.

But Early saw the text of the address four hours after that decision and he dashed to newsmen ordering them to kill his earlier announcement. He told them that while the speech might look like "American History" to Mr. Roosevelt, it looked like a stemwinder to him.

The battering down of Utah and Arizona landmarks in the senate, Senators King and Ashurst, impressed congressmen generally, much as if they had been run over by a 70-ton tank which they had not seen. They can't figure out these unexpected primary results, especially in the case of Ashurst. The Arizona senator himself is saying he saw defeat coming last March and apparently he considered it a personal matter resulting

Reporters Don't Go to Front In This War--It's Everywhere

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP)—In the kind of "total war" raging over Britain today, The Associated Press employees don't have to go to a distant front. The front comes to them. It's their office and their doorstep, their automobiles or the bus or taxis they're riding in. It's everywhere they move.

When you're in London you're inescapably a part of it. Everywhere you hear stories. Edwin Stout, Winterset, Ia., Associated Press reporter, said: "The war's getting my mind and my knees. I spend most of the night running up and down stairs from our office shelter in the basement to the roof where I take looks at the raids."

Stout is a University of Iowa alumnus and a former Daily Iowan employe.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Stage Flops Mean Little to Stars

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — It is a favorite generally around here that one stage flop necessarily embitters an actor against the footlights, but John Garfield is at least one exception.

Young Garfield knew his share of stage flops before he became a movie star. In that light his flop in "Heavenly Express," his latest stage venture, had little more significance to him than a flop of pre-movie days.

That goes for all the movie lights who have returned to the stage—for Frederic March who picked a bad one before he picked a good one in "The American Way"; for Frances Farmer who did all right in "Golden Boy" but not so well in "Thunder Rock"; for Katharine Hepburn who took a merciless roasting for "The Lake" but made her critics eat their words when she picked "Philadelphia Story." It goes, too, for the catastrophic "Romeo and Juliet" of Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier.

All a Broadway flop means for a movie star—aside from the hurt and temporary loss of prestige—is that the particular star in the particular play he selected was not acceptable. It does not follow that the star is doomed to failure forever, nor that he must be "cured" (as if a real ham could ever be cured) for all time.

Another conclusion to which we often jump is that Hollywood always is stupid because so many potential stars are passed up here and later grabbed because of their Broadway fame. This happens time and again, and who am I to say that Hollywood is exempt from stupidity? But when you regard Broadway as a showcase and a training school, you can see that Hollywood has its reasons for "suddenly awakening" to the hitherto neglected charms of a Mary Martin or a Betty Grable.

No housewife ever bought a can of soup that wasn't advertised and displayed on the shelves. No housewife ever bought a soup twice that was canned prematurely, minus seasoning and full flavor. And Hollywood passes up talent that is half-baked, unper-ected, inexpertly displayed.

Why not try it here first? Hollywood does—sometimes. For the rest, Director John Cromwell has the answer:

"The screen doesn't always give a girl a chance to prove her worth. She too often is typed after a single success. On the stage she can round out her experience with varied types. Hollywood's instructors are competent but can't give sufficient time to any individual."

Director George Cukor tells it on himself that he passed up Bette Davis in her early stage days because she couldn't act. The truth probably is that the Bette of that era really couldn't act. That is true of many another player who "failed" in Hollywood and later was wooed to return after a stage hit. Part of the time, at least, the rejected ones upon going to the stage learned things about acting that they never knew before.

Red-Hot Tigers Mangle Yankees, 8-0

Tommy Bridges Blanks Champs With Six Hits

Greenberg Blasts Out 33rd Homer of Year During Detroit Spree

By DALE STAFFORD
DETROIT, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers, baseball's hottest team in the September pennant run, all but chased the New York Yankees out of Briggs stadium today with a 16-hit fusillade that brought an 8 to 0 victory over the world champions.

Bridges Stops Yanks

Tommy Bridges, the 33-year-old Tennessean, limited the Yankees to six singles.

It was Detroit's eighth victory in the last nine games and the fifth straight over its foremost pennant challengers—the Cleveland Indians and New York.

In the last three games the Tigers have belted the opposition's pitchers for a grand total of 48 hits. Today's blows included Hank Greenberg's 33rd homer of the season and his seventh in nine games, a double and three singles by Rudy York and three singles each by George (Birdie) Tebbets and Barney McCosky.

A crowd of 25,514 watched the one-sided affair. The victory kept the Tigers still a half game up on the Indians, who shut out Boston, 1 to 0, at Cleveland.

Three Games Ahead

The Tigers are now three full games ahead of the Yankees, whose belated rush has been stalled by three consecutive defeats. Detroit has beaten New York 14 times in 21 games this season. Tomorrow the clubs end relations for the season and the Tiger management predicts a crowd in excess of 40,000.

In scoring his 11th victory of the year, Bridges started most unimpressively, the Yanks getting to him for three solid hits in the first two innings. Thereafter New York didn't get a runner beyond first base.

Marius Russo, who had won seven straight games, was battered for eight hits and six scores by the mighty Detroit run-producing machine before giving up with none out in the fourth. Steve Sundra and Bump Hadley shared the relief assignment and both were shelled aplenty.

Tigers Waste No Time

The Tigers wasted no time at all in licking the Yankees today. In the first inning singles by McCosky and Greenberg, a walk to Charley Gehring and York's double produced three runs.

Greenberg led off with a 415-foot homer into the right center field stands in the third.

In the fourth Tebbets and Bridges led off with hits and Russo was lifted. Sundra struck out Dick Bartell but McCosky planted a single in center field that scored a pair of runs.

The Tigers wasted two blows in the fifth but used hits by York, Tebbets and Bridges to get a run in the seventh.

The last Tiger score came in the eighth on a walk to Gehring and singles by York and Frank Higgins.

Little Hawks Overwhelm Lone Tree in Opener, 38 to 0

By MERREL GOLDBERG

It was Iowa City all the way as Coach Herb Cormack's Little Hawks swamped a game, out-weighted Lone Tree eleven on Shrader field last night, 38-0.

Forrest Broders opened the game with a bang when he recovered his own kickoff, which was fumbled by Holdeman of Lone Tree. Johnnie Schuppert next swept through tackle to pick up a first down. Then it was Bob Towell, Schuppert and Bert Miller in quick succession carrying the ball up to the goal line. From there it was an easy job for Towell to chalk up Iowa City's first touchdown. Fetig's try for extra point was wide.

Iowa City's kickoff to the invaders was taken by Holdeman who was hit hard by Don Montgomery, City high guard. After several unsuccessful attempts, Lone Tree punted to mid field. On the next play flet-footed Bert Miller raced around right end behind beautiful blocking for another marker for the Red and Whites. The kick was wide again.

Iowa City's kickoff was received by Holdeman who returned the ball to his own 27 yard line. Again the visitors were forced to give up the ball as Stock kicked to his own 40 yard marker. On the first play Towell carried the ball off left tackle for a touchdown, only to have the play called back for holding. As the first quarter ended, Schuppert successfully heaved a pass to Jack Fetig. With the second quarter only a few minutes old, Schuppert tossed a beautiful pass to Miller making the score 18-0. Bill Sangster's attempt at conversion failed.

The Red and White's fourth touchdown came after Sangster's pass to Lemons was good. Fetig finally plunged the ball over after a series of line plunging plays. Sangster again missed the extra point to make the score 24-0.

Iowa City got underway again in the middle of the third quarter with some beautiful passing by Sangster to Schuppert bringing the ball into plunging distance for Jack Fetig. Montgomery dropped kicked the extra point, making the score 31-0. The final score of the game came as Sangster threw a long one to Paul Ware. Montgomery's kick made the score 38-0.

Two guys who will play a lot of football for Iowa this fall and who, because they are counted on as about the most dependable Hawks outside of Capt. Mike Enich, are Ham Snider and Charles Tollefson. The two Iowa guards may not be great players, but they are worth a spot on almost any man's ball team.

Tribe Wins On Two Hits

Milnar Gets Victory; Boston's Jim Bagby Loses Heart-Breaker

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13 (AP)—Young Jim Bagby threw a sterling two-hit performance at the pennant-hungry Cleveland Indians this Friday the 13th and still dropped a 1 to 0 decision.

The reason was Al Milnar. The big Cleveland southpaw granted the Boston Red Sox three singles but kept them scattered to give the Indians their third straight triumph.

Weatherly Scores

Roy Weatherly scored the solitary run. Opening the third inning, he singled through short-stop on the first pitch. Jeff Heath followed with a one-baser to right which put the fleet Cleveland center fielder on third.

Lou Boudreau, next up, grounded into a double play at second and first. Weatherly scored while it was being manufactured.

Bagby, son of the Jim Bagby who pitched the Indians to their only championship 20 years ago, settled down and stifled Tribe war clubs the remainder of the war, but it was a losing cause. Each pitcher fanned four and walked two, Bagby getting Ray Mack on strikes three times.

The only blows off Milnar, who now has won 16 and lost eight, were Jimmy Fox's' single with two out in the first, Joe Cronin's one-baser to center to lead off the eighth and Roger Cramer's single with one down in the ninth.

In the last two sessions, Milnar really pitched his way out of trouble. He killed Boston hopes in the eighth as Bobby Doerr popped to Beau Bell and Charlie Gelbert fled to Weatherly. Gene Desautels, catching again in a lineup switch which sent Fox back to first base, walked, but Bagby could do no better than force Desautels at second.

Foxx Pops Out

In the ninth Foxx, after a dangerous line drive to right field which was barely foul, popped to Boudreau and Ted Williams fled to Weatherly.

That made it 14 victories in 21 starts for Cleveland against the Red Sox, with one more game remaining.

It was the third defeat in a row for the Red Sox. In the two days of the Cleveland series, the normally slugging Red Sox have made a total of exactly six hits in 18 innings.

Giants Jinxed By Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 2

The Dodgers, paced by the fine pitching of rookie Ed Head who chalked up his first major league victory—and by a six run outburst in the sixth inning—made it three straight over the Pittsburgh Pirates today by an 8-2 score.

Carl Hubbell was touched for the loss, his 10th of the season as against 11 won, and two errors by his pal, Mel Ott at third base cost Hub two of the runs scored against him, giving rise to the jinx belief.

Johnny Vander Meer, making his second start since his recall from Indianapolis, turned wild in the third inning and had to be relieved by Witt Guise, 32-year-old rookie. He gave up in the sixth when Joe Beggs came in to earn his eighth straight victory.

Bucks in Siff Drills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Only the tackling dummy were unlucky yesterday on Friday the 13th as Ohio State university's football squad seasoned up for scrimmage today. Coach Francis A. Schmidt put his western conference champions through a stiff four-hour drill on blocking and passing. Thornton Dixon, veteran tackle, complained of a sore leg and joined end Frank Clair on the bench, but the injury was regarded as minor.

BY WILLIAM B. ARDERY
CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie carried his presidential campaign into the industrial sectors of this democratic controlled city today, promising his audiences that if he were elected "there will be more and more jobs, and, as the years go on, higher and higher wages." The republican nominee told crowds at the stockyards and in nearby Cicero that "if you elect me president I shall promise you the moon but I shall promise you jobs in honest work, honest industry."

Referring to Mayor Edward J. Kelly and Pat Nash, leaders of the local democratic organization, Willkie shouted to his listeners in the stockyards: "I say to you, Mayor Kelly and Pat Nash that when I am president there will be no income tax settlements."

"A lot of people better do all they can to beat me, because the penitentiary doors are going to open for some of them."

Willkie told a second stockyards crowd a few minutes later that if he were elected "a lot of political bosses will be in Joliet or Leavenworth or some place where they won't bother you any more."

When Willkie said in a third short speech that he intended "to build things" if he were elected a heckler shouted "like you built Commonwealth and Southern." (The utility company which the nominee formerly headed.)

Turning, Willkie demanded "Who is the fellow?" Someone shouted, "Me," and the candidate asserted: "It sounded like Mayor Kelly and Pat Nash. If I am elected president you won't hear of them much more."

Willkie contended that President Roosevelt "has promised labor everything except jobs." One of the stockyards crowds boomed when Willkie mentioned the president's name.

"The failure of the last seven years has been a failure to put people to work," Willkie asserted. "No talk about the European situation can cover it up."

"The only jobs being produced today are being produced by Hitler."

The nominee added that Hitler was responsible for additional American employment in defense industries.

Several times Willkie was applauded when he asserted that "if I am president I will never send an American boy into the shambles of any European war."

The candidate's 40-car motorcade wended through the loop, where crowds lined the streets. Ticker tape and scraps of paper showered down from skyscrapers.

Mrs. Willkie joined her husband in their open car, and while the nominee waved his gray felt hat she plucked roses from two big bouquets and tossed them to the crowd. Bystanders scrambled for the flowers.

Willkie told reporters that he was so impressed by his reception here that "it brought tears to my eyes."

While on the platform in Cicero, Willkie asked the crowd whether he was still in Chicago and received a negative reply. He grinned and shouted "Then to hell with Chicago. We are out of sight of Kelly and Nash."

Willkie addressed a throng late in the day from a platform in a field near the far south side's teeming steel mills.

"This has been a great day," he stated. "I suppose I've seen almost a million people in Chicago today. It has given me an emotional uplift that is almost overpowering."

On the roof of a garage about 50 feet from the rostrum was a red, white and blue sign lettered: "Roosevelt and security."

Judith Mohill, Langland Get Certificates

Two University of Iowa students, graduated with B.A. degrees in June, have been awarded certificates of excellence in the Harper's magazine student writing contest held recently.

Honored with the awards were Judith Mohill of New York City and Joseph Langland of Spring Grove, Minn.

Miss Mohill, who received her B.A. degree in psychology, was awarded the certificate for her essay, "Leonardo."

Langland, who has been a student here for the past two years, was honored for his poem, "Norwegian in America." He attended Santa Ana junior college, Santa Ana, Cal., and taught for two years in a rural school in Winneschick county, Minn.

Miss Mohill, born in New York City in 1919, attended Waltham high school, after which she entered Hunter college. In 1937, she received a scholarship from Sarah Lawrence college, Bronxville, N. Y. She plans studying for an M.A. degree in English at Columbia university.

The contest was open to undergraduate students in American universities, normal schools, colleges and junior colleges during the school year of 1939-40.

May Ride On Willkie Special

Four Johnson County Republicans Receive Invitations to Affair

Four members of the Johnson county republican central committee have been invited to ride on the Willkie special train from Muscatine to Washington, Ia., tonight when the presidential candidate passes through Iowa en route to Coffeyville, Kan.

Included in the delegation will be Mrs. George Hunter, chairwoman of the county central committee, Mrs. William Weber, Willard W. Watters and L. E. Brinkmeyer.

In addition to this official delegation, Atty. Edward F. Rate, county republican chairman, said yesterday that many local residents are expected to go either to Muscatine or Washington where the candidate will make 10-minute platform speeches.

The special train is scheduled to make a stop in Muscatine at 7:20 tonight and is due in Washington at 8:20. Willkie will make a half-hour address early this evening at Davenport.

At Last! High Reading Friday Normal

Iowa City's high temperature reading for yesterday was exactly normal as reported by the weather bureau observation station last night but the low mark for the day was a full 10 degrees below the normal low.

High reading was 78 degrees and low mark for the 24-hour period ending at 7 o'clock last night was 44 degrees.

A year ago yesterday a heat wave was sweeping Iowa City as the mercury topped 94 degrees and went to a low of only 69.

According to the weather bureau, no frost has been recorded in Iowa City yet this fall in spite of the extremely cool nights.

of them asked the gateman on his way in.

"You needn't come to work today. Go back home," the gatekeeper told him and the man turned away.

But at Dover General Hospital the scene was nearly unchanged from that of yesterday when the disaster struck. Doctors and nurses still worked at top-speed to save the lives of 85 burned and mangled men there. Two doctors and two nurses, on duty since the blast, worked on through the day without sleep.

The people found some small reason to be thankful in a report furnished by William C. Hunt, in charge of the company's explosives department. He disclosed that 6000 pounds of nitro-glycerine, buried near one of the buildings that blew up, had not been detonated.

"Thank God it didn't," Hunt said, "I wouldn't want to be anywhere nearby if it were only 100 pounds."

The area surrounding the plant was a shambles. Trees were denuded of limbs, bark and foliage. Railroad tracks were torn loose from ties. Corrugated steel roofing was blasted to shreds and power house pipes were torn loose from boilers.

In the center of the blasted area, a 50-foot steel skeleton-remnant of what had been a rectifying tower—sagged and swayed. Over all was the odor of alcohol used in processing powder.

New damage to houses nearby was disclosed today. Residents of six frame houses, 1200 yards west of the plant, reported that pieces of steel girders, some weighing 500 pounds, had crashed into their homes and property.

"My house was hit 50 times by what looked like pieces of shrapnel," Lewis White, who lived in one of the houses said. He pointed to one piece of steel weighing about 150 pounds which had plowed two feet into his lawn.

The only casualties were three palace plumbers, who were injured slightly while at work in the south wing of the palace.

In all, five bombs struck the edifice. But half a mile away, across St. James', park and the horse guard's parade, other incendiary bombs were showered on the government offices lining Whitehall. Still others fell in Downing street, blind-end lane off Whitehall where Prime Minister Churchill lives, but did no damage.
