S.U.I.'s Step-Children

Major sports and minor sports are the two categories into which athletics are divided at most institutions. Exactly why some sports are designated as major, and other sports, calling for equally as great exertion and skill, are termed minor has never been clearly or satisfactorily explained.

A wrestler, for example, has to train himself to just as keen an edge, be just as fast in his mental processes, be just as well coordinated as a varsity football player.

For another example, a tennis player may be just as colorful a performer, may handle himself with just as much nicety as our best basketball players.

A cross-country runner may wear himself to a crucial point of exhaustion in his event, but he labors in obscurity, while members of the track team each year are lovingly looked after by a fond coach, delicately nurtured by dieticians, conscientiously mauled by trainers.

Today we have the case of the University of Iowa gym team. Members of the team are almost the step-children of the athletic department.

Gymnastics is the last sport that is open to every student who cares to enter, whether he is emphatically an athletic type or not. Since college athletics have come into the era of specialization, there are few sports in which the novice or the handicapped individual may try his hand.

It was only a few years ago that Iowa was champion in gymnastics. That was when such nationally known stars as Eugene Wettstone and George Nissen performed with the team.

Speaking of Religion

A Lenten Feature On Current Religious Thought

Compiled by The Rev. Llewelyn A. Owen, Minister, Congregational Church (With the cooperation of the National Religious News Service)

NEW YORK—Recent assertions of the National Birth Control Federation that only a small minority of Roman Catholics are opposed to birth control were "vigorously" protested here in a resolution adopted by the Supreme Directorate of the Catholic Daughters of America.

The resolution described the Federation's attitude as "a direct reflection upon the Catholic citizenry and especially upon the Catholic womanhood of our country."

Other resolutions adopted by the group pledged aid to men in service and in defense industries and opposed the "ungodly" practice of euthanasia, or mercy killing.

TORONTO—The Social Service council of Canada, representing all churches in the Dominion, has asked the authorities for a speed-up of the procedure dealing with applications for release of internees under the Defense of Canada act.

pride for a student to say, "I am a member of the gym team." Not so, now.

Overcoming Obstacles

The reasons may run from a below-par standard of emphasis upon gymnastics in relation to other Big Ten schools to a completely negative attitude on the part of the student body to the fact that gymnastics aren't a big gate-receiver.

Whatever it is, we're firm believers in the sanctity of sports, major and minor, which create among the members of contestants a feeling of pride in performance despite all the things mentioned above.

And we'd like to see members of a good many so-called minor sports force a little recognition from the opposition, the university and the student body.

P.S. Boxing, a minor sport at Wisconsin, plays to packed houses. Thirteen thousand people attend the intramural boxing finals there this year.

Defense—and State Reciprocity

Movement of national guard and naval forces into training camps away from their home areas has raised a problem many states are solving through recognition of drivers' licenses and automobile license plates belonging to out-of-state trainees.

Since the coming months will see extensive movement of men and, in some cases, families from state to state as training camps are established, such recognition will contribute greatly to better inter-state relations.

Fifteen states at present have followed the precedent set by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana in November in a reciprocal agreement with West Virginia, and later with Mississippi.

Said Governor Townsend to West Virginia: Your guardsmen arriving in Indiana for their military training period will be granted full privileges in the use of their automobiles and drivers' licenses without having to pay an out-of-state fee.

Now that, unquestionably, demonstrates the kind of inter-state feeling which creates democratic union, does it not?

Disappointing Ending For a Spectacular Beginning

NEW YORK—People walking in Madison Avenue the other night began to run toward a reddish-yellow glow that quickly grew into an inferno of crackling flames.

The incident took place just after nightfall, just around the corner from 45th street. Out of 45th and into Madison careened a piece of fire-fighting equipment half a block long.

The firemen all looked at each other in disappointment. The chief climbed into his red comet and rode off. One by one, the mighty hook-and-ladders eased into the side streets and disappeared.

Later I dropped by the Hotel New Yorker to pay my respects to Sam Houston Jones, Governor of Louisiana and a resident of Lake Charles, where I lived for so many years as a boy.

Sam Houston Jones is a spectacular name, and I thought of this while crossing the lobby because with me was Woodrow Wilson Herman, known as "Woody" to you, who is no politician but the leader of a fine orchestra that bears his name.

The governor was in fine fettle and confessed that his first night in town had been devoted, largely, to sitting in on "Louisiana Purchase," that gentle satire on Louisiana politics which has amused Americans from all sections of the country for more than half a year.

"We can appreciate some of the things they said about the state," Sam Houston Jones commented dryly. "They could have said more. But I thought it was lots of fun."

Governor Jones' mission in the metropolis is one of business. Louisiana, he says, is interested in three types of industry—national defense, chemical, petroleum. One of his chores is to attract new industries in these categories.

The Reason for That 7 Billion Request

WASHINGTON—A somewhat clearer outline than has been announced of Mr. Roosevelt's lend-lease intentions, was furnished these congressional appropriators called to the White House.

Second, and most important, the sum would shock the world into an appreciation that the United States meant business. Particularly it would bolster British morale.

Mr. Roosevelt also intends (the congressmen understood) not to take back any second-hand equipment in replacement of what he sends over.

The $7,000,000,000 figure was apparently a compromise arithmetically reached by the president between those who thought $10,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000 would be a bigger shocker.

ENCOURAGING ANSWER—Most encouraging news was told the congressmen in answer to a question by Representative May of Kentucky. Mr. May asked if our defense production will be high enough within six months to provide for our domestic defense needs.

MR. NYE SLIGHTED—Inconspicuously snubbed by the reunion was the isolationist, Senator Gerald Nye. To restore good feeling after the sharp debate, Mr. Roosevelt instructed his congressional leaders to arrange this conference with ranking members of the house and senate appropriations committees.

THE STRIKE BUSINESS—Mr. Roosevelt was inaccurate when he announced defense strikes had not involved more than one-fourth of 1 per cent of the defense workers.

ODDS AND ENDS—Senatorial colleagues consider Senator Byrnes a cinch for the supreme court vacancy, but believe the appointment may be delayed.

Community Chest To Decide on New Constitution in April

When the general council of the Iowa City Community Chest meets next month it will decide upon a constitution drawn up and recommended by the board of directors which met Thursday night.

The proposed constitution is divided into two sections defining the membership, meeting times and duties of both the general council and board of directors.

The council membership will consist of one representative from 33 organizations, to be selected by the respective groups about March 1 every year.

The delegates will be summoned to a general assemblage on or about April 1 every year by the president of the board.

At this meeting directors' reports, suggested amendments to the constitution and plans for the year will be heard.

Nine board directors will be selected for one year terms by the council.

The board will be required to meet one week after the council meeting to elect its officers.

Duties of the board will include naming the chairman and setting the time for the annual Community Chest drive.

The document also states that board members must submit reports of the year's activities along with financial statements of receipts and disbursements when the general council convenes.

Community Chest funds help support the local Boy Scout and Girl Scout organizations and maintains the Recreation center, Social Service League and city hall rest rooms.

Unemployment relief is another beneficiary listed.

HEATH HENS

The Last of the Heath Hens

Just a Lonely Bird Whistling to Some Little Birds That Weren't There

In the early morning of a bright spring day a lone heath hen flew to the top of an oak tree and called loudly in his peculiar booming whistle.

He ruffled his feathers and whistled again, then listened, cocking his head to one side, for an answering call or challenge.

The heath hens, pictured, are on display in the university museum, along with specimens of other extinct birds.

Director H. R. Dill of the university museum, explained that an effort has been made, especially in the last 10 years, to collect specimens for the university museum from species of birds that are now vanishing, and to make restorations of those already extinct.

The extermination of the heath hen began with the arrival of white men to America, and as early as 1839 it was reported extinct on the mainland of North America.

For many years the island of Martha's Vineyard, located off the coast of Maine was the feeding ground of the vanishing birds. Every spring they came to booming fields, their traditional mating ground.

The number of birds quickly dwindled until on this spring morning in 1929 the sole survivor boomed from the top of an oak and listened in vain. Nowhere in the world was there a living bird of his kind to answer.

One morning in 1933 the bird did not appear as usual for his grain. The last of the species had vanished—his fate unknown. Never again was one of his kind seen alive.

Court Denies Defense Move

Stops Gillam-Schmidt Move to Suppress Evidence From Raid

Overruling of a motion to suppress evidence obtained in a raid in July, 1939, brought by Atty. Edward L. O'Connor, counsel for Charles Gillam and Ivan Schmidt, was made yesterday by District Judge James P. Gaffney.

Gillam and Schmidt are charged with maintaining liquor nuisances. In the motion, Attorney O'Connor claimed the search warrant obtained by Harold W. Vestermark, then county attorney, from T. M. Fairchild, justice of the peace, was wrongfully and illegally secured.

The defense attorney also contended that the method used in obtaining the warrants was contrary to the Iowa constitution. Judge Gaffney, in his ruling, stated that because the record shows that approximately 20 months elapsed since the search and seizure under said papers, the burden of proof is upon the defendant to purge himself of the defalcation exercised by him in attacking the information and the search warrant.

According to the court, the trials will be held next week. Atty. Clair E. Hamilton was named special prosecutor for the cases since County Attorney E. A. Baldwin defended Gillam and Schmidt in their first trials.

Drama Rules Supreme!

Divorce Granted In Equity Litigation In University Court

"Shirley R. Harris" was granted a divorce from "Bruce David Harris," otherwise known as Frank Thompson, L3 of Denison, in an equity case in university trial court this week by Kenneth M. Dunlap, local attorney who presided as judge, as unadulterated drama held forth in the court room.

Harris, a victim of psycho-motor epilepsy, was charged with inhuman treatment of his wife in the form of mental cruelty, an unsympathetic attitude in the home, constant nagging and complaining, and frequent intoxication.

"Medic" Testifies. "Dr." George Wilkinson, M4 of Laurel, testified to the illness of Harris. He said the latter was not responsible for his actions during one of his spells. Wilkinson said that quite often victims of this illness were mistakenly thought to be intoxicated.

John P. Mansfield (L3 of Ogden), "a local bartender," said he had taken Harris home from his cafe in what he believed to be an intoxicated condition "more than once."

The "other man" in the divorce case, Hugh McCoy, L3 of Oskaloosa, went on the witness stand as "Ben Allen," a writer of philosophy and an intimate friend of Mrs. Harris.

Counsel for the plaintiff were Fergus Kenyon, L3 of Ft. Dodge, Gad James, L3 of Iowa City, and George Soumas, L3 of Perry. The defendant's attorneys were Daniel Macken, L3 of Iowa City, and Lorraine Lisle, L3 of Hastings.

Witnesses 'Colorful' Another witness for the plaintiff was Harold DeKay, L3 of Sioux City, who as pastor of the church which Mrs. Harris attended, testified to her good character and her fitness for having custody of her two-year-old daughter.

Lorna Murphy, L2 of Elkader, "an old school friend," and Louise Van Syoc, A4 of Milo, "a neighbor," testified in Mrs. Harris' favor.

Retail Stores Will Advance Opening Hour After April 1

Most Iowa City retail stores will start opening at 9 a.m., one half-hour later than the present opening time, after April 1, Leslie A. Moore, retail trade division chairman for the chamber of commerce, announced yesterday.

A special committee has contacted the retail stores and found that practically all of them approve the new opening hours, although a few, that specialize in early morning trade with students, have outside contract work or provide special services will continue opening at the regular time.

Very few people shop before 9 o'clock, Moore said, and since a shorter working day will enable clerks to give better service most stores have heartily endorsed the new hours.

A list of the stores using the new hours will be published Thursday, Moore said. He requested that any firms that desire to open at the new time and have not been contacted, get in touch with the chamber of commerce office.

Window signs, announcing the change of hours, will be furnished to all stores that have agreed to open at the new time, Moore said.

Alumnus Wins Music Award For Symphony

Robert O. Barkley of Wilkesburg, Pa., who received his B.A. degree here in 1923 and his M.A. here in 1935, won second prize last week in a symphonic composition contest, sponsored by Hans Kindler, conductor of the National symphony orchestra of Washington, D. C.

The composition which won for Barkley was the second movement of his "Southern Iowa Suite," entitled "Sunday Evening in Bloomfield." Dedicated to Prof. Philip Greeley Claop, head of the music department, the suite was composed as Barkley's thesis for his M.A. degree.

Barkley is at present director of music in Wilkesburg schools and directs the choir in the Methodist church there. He has done considerable composing and is now planning a series of musical portraits of prominent Pittsburgh people. The suite has been added to the repertoire of the National symphony orchestra and will be played first by that organization. It is in three movements, the first being a cornshucker's dance. The second is "Sunday Evening in Bloomfield" and in it the sextons of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches try to out-rival each other. The last movement is an Iowa county fair and, according to Barkley, "everything happens there."

Pharmacists Study Growth of Medicinal Drug

Belladonna, Cut Off by the Central European War, the Object of Research

By JEANNE STARR
Growing of more vigorous plants with special medicinal properties is now being attempted by the pharmacognosy department in the college of pharmacy here, since supplies of the plants have been cut off by the European war.
The experimental work is under the direction of Prof. Louis C. Zopf of the college of pharmacy's drug service and is being conducted by Larry M. Wheeler, G of Iowa City, and Kenneth H. Stahl, G of Nacahusa, Ill.
Gains Recognition Special attention has been given to the belladonna plant, which is being used to provide an experimental study of the effect of various nutrients, vitamins and hormones on the production of the active constituent of the plant.
This research work is particularly timely because of the extensive use of this vegetable drug, which has previously been imported from Central Europe, with especially good qualities coming from Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.
The college of pharmacy officials, working in co-ordination with the botany department, are interested, primarily, in planting a sufficient amount of belladonna plants to give up an adequate yield of seeds for further production.
Since it has become almost impossible to buy belladonna seeds during the present day crisis, the college will provide the university with the drug.
New Research Planned This summer research work in actual field growing will be undertaken. Such an experiment will afford a means of studying cultivation and collection methods as well as an opportunity to study the soil effect upon alkaloidal yield. There will be also an experimental culture in the pharmacy-botany plant garden.
The alkaloidal content of belladonna is apparently at its peak during and immediately following the time of blossoming. When the material is harvested, the leaves alone can be collected, or the leaves and certain small stems gathered.
Since there is a definite shortage of this particular drug today, obviously, as much of the plant will be collected as is feasible to use. It is interesting to note that even the roots contain some alkaloids.
Requires Cultivation Although considerable quantities of the drug were grown in the United States; last year, it, like many other vegetable drug plants, requires special cultivation and considerable labor.
The reason United States has become dependent upon Europe for our supply is the factor of cost of growing and collecting. Many of the important vegetable drugs are grown in small garden plots in Europe and are hand cultivated. Drugs derived from belladonna are important in many disease situations, and in cases of gastro-

Blast Kills 50, Injures 500 In Seville, Spain

SEVILLE, Spain, March 14 (AP)—From 17 to 50 persons were killed, more than 500 injured and 300 left homeless today by a gigantic explosion which destroyed the Santa Barbara powder warehouse, wrecked an entire suburb and blasted out doors and windows even in the center of this ancient city.

The Spanish Cifra news agency and private reports agreed that 50 were dead, but a government statement issued tonight at Madrid said this figure was "grossly exaggerated" and that not more than 17 were dead. It confirmed the estimates of those injured, however.

The explosion was ascribed to the dropping of a case of explosives by a workman, this blast touching off all the warehouse stores.

The workman's accident not only cost his own life but those of his wife and seven children. Their nearby home was demolished. Five soldiers guarding the privately-owned powder and dynamite warehouse were among the dead.

Soldiers joined police in digging victims from the wreckage.

The city slaughterhouse, near the disaster area, was turned into a relief center for the homeless and the injured.

The factory, which belonged to the Union Espanola De Explosivos, was said to contain blasting materials for mining and industrial use.

The written consent would be binding on the applicant during the extent of the license, two years under the Iowa law.

The motor vehicle department today reported that 1,033,197 Iowans have obtained 1939-41 drivers licenses and 68,969 have obtained chauffeurs licenses.

The revised measure, reported out by the judiciary No. 2 committee also provides:

That mere operation of a motor vehicle on the highways "by any person shall constitute consent on the part of such person" to an intoxication blood test and the use of the result of such an analysis in the trial of a case.

Observers interpreted this section as applying to out-state motorists using Iowa highways.

the most vital points in the Nazi war machine — Hamburg, the greatest German port, the shipbuilding center of Bremen, the German naval base at Emden — were hit in overnight attacks, along with vital objectives in the occupied Netherlands.

The assault on Hamburg was described officially as the heaviest in all the long series delivered on that major city. Bomb explosions and great fires were declared to have left the shipbuilding yards, the docks and warehouses in a red chaos; to have added rubble to that left in a similar raid the night before.

Bremen and Emden were struck with less fury, the ministry stated.

In Holland, the ministry's bulletin said, two Nazi airdromes were bombed and—in Rotterdam—"huge fires" were left in a series of oil storage plants.

To the north, off the Norwegian coast, a German supply ship was said to have been hit squarely on the stern and other Nazi vessels in that area machine-gunned.

Off the Frisian islands, off the North sea coast of Holland and Germany, a 3,000-ton German supply ship was sunk by a torpedo launched by a British plane, the ministry added. She was hit in bright moonlight and went to the bottom while the British machine still circled overhead, it said.

pedo launched by a British plane, the ministry added. She was hit in bright moonlight and went to the bottom while the British machine still circled overhead, it said.

In these raids, which extended over many hours, the loss of six British planes was acknowledged.

The last waves of British bombers visited Hamburg after 4 a.m. to "give the fires already set a new start," the air ministry news service reported.

Most of the bombs, however, were dropped from 10:30 p.m. Thursday to 1:30 a.m., Friday, and after that, official accounts said, "so much damage had been done that it was difficult to pick out details on the ground because of the glare of fires and the smoke over the city."

"Along both banks of the Elbe and all amongst the intricate network of docks, harbors and quays, warehouses and factories were blazing," the air ministry's reporter said.

than Great Britain, Greece and China, the president did not specify any by name but his comment was in response to press conference questions on the possibility of help for Turkey and Yugoslavia.

Using only an alphabetical description for countries which he called A B C D, Mr. Roosevelt declared that any nations which are not now resisting aggression and which might decide to do so would come under the terms of the new legislation.

The act itself authorized the president to help "any country" whose defense he "deems vital to the defense of the United States."

Efforts to limit the aid under the "bill to Britain, Greece and China were successfully opposed by administration leaders in congress on the ground that such amendments might discourage other countries from resisting axis pressure.

The significance of the president's comment was mainly in its timing. Yugoslav leaders faced with German demands, were still struggling for a solution short of the complete capitulation won from neighboring Bulgaria and Rumania.

Their decision held fateful consequences for hard-fighting Greece, already a lease-lend beneficiary.

Turkey, an ally of Britain, apparently was waiting for Yugoslav's answer before determining just what action to take in event of a German attack on Greece.

It Happened at the Beaux Arts Ball

Daily Iowan Photos by Clyde Everett

★ ★ ★ Early Man Was Nomad

Most amusing—most beautiful—most original—Out of 150 couples three were awarded the long-awaited prizes for costumes. Seen above with their judges, Emil

Ganzo and Fletcher Martin of the art department are the prize winners; Blair Hart, G of Delevan, Mich.; Helen Miles, G of Beverly Farms, Mass., judged most amusing; Betty Walling, G of Iowa City and Marion Brown, most beautiful, Ganzo and Martin. Seated in front are Dorothy Young, A4 of Annawan, Ill., and Joe Cox, G of Indianapolis, Ind., winners of the prize for the most original costumes. Cox was general chairman of the Beau Arts Ball.

★ ★ ★ Barbaric Dress Popular

Stylized masks and barbaric costumes were selected by Mr. and Mrs. Gail W. Martin when they attended the Beaux Arts Ball in the lounge of the Art building last night. Martin is a graduate assistant in the art department. The Beaux Arts Ball, well attended by art students, is presented annually by the university school of fine arts, including the art, music and dramatic arts departments.

★ ★ ★ But Dr. Boas Never Came

Rumors that the National Association of Anthropologists was sending an expedition headed by Dr. Franz Boas to Iowa City for the Beaux Arts Ball did not materialize last night. Judging from the costumes, however, it seems that the association missed a chance to capture some excellent specimens for its museum. Typical of the cave men and women are the two shown above, left to right, Kenneth Bakehouse, E1 of Sigourney, and Lida Slemmons, A2 of Iowa City.

★ ★ ★ Ball in Full Progress

With the music of Larry Barrett's orchestra in their ears and the Beaux Arts Ball in full progress, Sue Christy, A3 of Bloomfield, and Jack Bickenbach, A2 of Independence, found the party of the lounge of the art building and depicted the Egyptians, Biblical scenes, American Indian and Africans as they probably never appeared. "Primitive" costumes or formal attire were chosen by guests at the party.

★ ★ ★ When Savage Meets Savage

When savage meets savage—that's the Beaux Arts Ball! There may have been lapses in time and geographical position for these two couples to meet in the art building, but the meeting was pleasant, all the same. Seen above are Helene Ioeiger, N1 of Ellsworth; Bob Hess, A2 of Iowa City; Lida Slemmons, A3 of Iowa City; and Ken Bakehouse of Sigourney, as cozy as you please.
