Famous Hollywood Trooper Succumbs After 10-Day Illness

HOLLYWOOD (AP) -- James Cagney, versatile star of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," was declared dead today. Only his brother Lionel and a wife survive. He died Thursday at the age of 41 at his Hollywood Hills home. Mr. Cagney, a native Irishman, was found in his home by his wife. Cagney had been ill for several months with bronchial pneumonia, brought on by a case of pneumonia he had in New York June 7. He returned to Hollywood after his illness but was found dead yesterday at the age of 41. The funeral was held today in New York.

AFI to Invade Europe--Marshall

The American Film Institute, according to reports received here today, is planning an enormous invasion of Europe by the picture industry. The plan, it is said, will be to move into Europe in force, to help battle the Axis by using the medium of motion pictures.

The plan, which is in the hands of the studio heads, will be announced officially soon. It is said that the invasion will be carried out under the supervision of General James Doolittle, who recently returned from a flight over Japan.

U.S. Remains Freer Than Britain

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

And Unlike Other Systems, Our Industry Responds to Reason

The British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), which makes the best speech to the Trade Union Congress of the British Broadcasting Corporation, has been busy making the rounds of every other country. The British government now recognizes the BBC as a public service and is still working on a system of broadcasting. The American government has recognized the British Broadcasting Corporation as a public service and is still working on a system of broadcasting.

The present is only an opportunity of the popular disturbances that have been swelling up to the point of being impossible in one form or another, although they do not seem to amount to much. The British system is so vast, it is difficult to see how.

The new British radio service is being made available to Britain's overseas territories, and official reports state that one production center has broadcast the greatest number of hours in any 100 days of the year. The current program of radio broadcasting now reaches every part of the United States and British colonies. Radio stations are the backbone of this service, and they are often the only means of communication in some parts of the world. But the vastness of the British radio system is a fact, and it is beyond our ability to produce. Money is worth only what the government says it is worth. Therefore, it is difficult to see how.

The network is a good idea, but it is not a real solution of the problem. It is not the solution of the network and everything else.
