Woman Killed, 7 Injured in Wreck

One Person Killed; Seven Injured In This Wreck

Cars Collide Head-On Near Homestead

Blowout Sends Death Car Across Path Of West Bound Auto

By DON OHL, Daily Iowan City Editor
One woman was killed and seven persons were injured about 4:15 yesterday afternoon when two automobiles crashed head-on two miles west of Homestead on highway No. 6.

Mrs. Lizzy Whipple, 55, of Cedar Rapids was instantly killed, when a blowout of a rear tire on the car in which she was riding caused it to swerve across the road in front of a car driven by B. J. Newburger, president of Newman's department store, Cedar Rapids.

Newburger and his wife, passengers of the automobile headed west, were taken to St. Luke's hospital in Cedar Rapids suffering from cuts from broken glass. Newburger was badly cut about the eyes and mouth and had several teeth broken. Mrs. Newburger suffered cuts and abrasions on her legs and severe bruising.

Victim of Shock
Alice Whipple, 20, granddaughter of the victim, driver of the car headed east was uninjured but apparently was suffering from shock. Gertrude Whipple, 31, of Brooklyn, daughter of the victim, was taken to St. Luke's where she was treated for lacerations of the scalp and face.

Amy May Whipple, 8, of Dakota City, granddaughter of the elder Mrs. Whipple, was also taken to St. Luke's where it was reported she was suffering from a bruised back. It was thought, however, that her back might have been broken.

The other two passengers of the Whipple car, Arline Whipple, 16, and Earline Whipple, 6, were taken to Watt's hospital in Marengo, where both were reported seriously hurt.

Seriously Injured
Earline, granddaughter of the victim, received severe scalp injuries and suffered from loss of blood. Her condition was described as serious by hospital authorities. Arline, daughter of the victim, received a fractured clavicle and serious back injuries. Her condition was also reported serious.

According to Highway Patrolman Berl Hallgren both the victim and Gertrude were riding in the front seat of the Whipple car. It was reported that the dead woman was seated in the center and that her head was smashed (See COLLISION page 6)

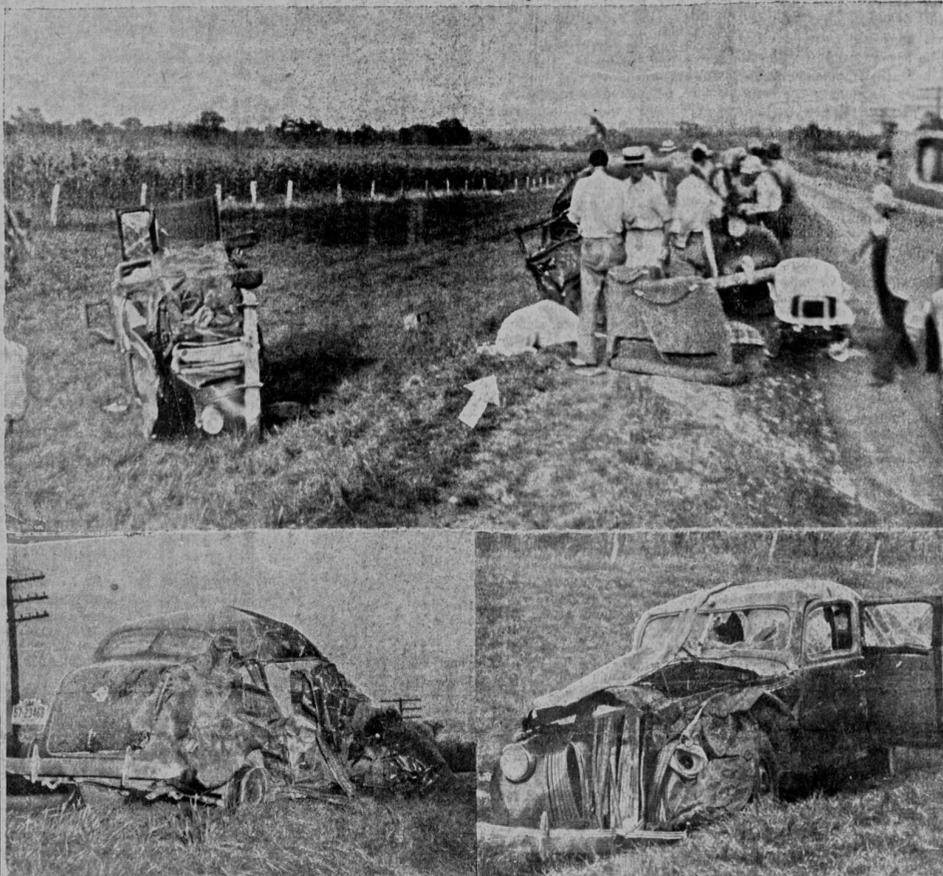

Airplane Gas Shortage Near, Ickes Warns

WASHINGTON (AP)—The mounting demands of embattled Britain and Russia, combined with the expansion of America's air force, brought from Secretary Ickes yesterday a warning that the United States faces a possible shortage of vital aviation gasoline. Only by quickly increasing high octane refining capacity, he said could this threat to the flying forces be erased, and he declared remedial steps were being considered.

The interior secretary, who is also defense petroleum coordinator, disclosed at his press conference that four American tankers plying west coast waters were being turned over to Russia, to increase the flow of aviation fuel to the Soviets.

Such transfer of tankers, he said, might cause a scarcity of petroleum in Pacific coast areas but he added that the "pinch" there probably would not approach in severity the shortage predicted for the Atlantic seaboard.

For the east, where transfer of American tankers to British service brought a petroleum emergency, Ickes told newsmen he had "in mind" two or three plans for compulsory curtailment of gasoline.

In the top picture an ambulance driver and several bystanders are preparing to remove the body of Mrs. Lizzy Whipple, 55, of Cedar Rapids, shortly after an accident two miles west of Homestead yesterday afternoon in which one person was killed and seven injured. The body of Mrs. Whipple (indicated by the arrow) is shown on the ground covered with a sheet. The car lying on its side was driven by B. J. Newburger, president of Newman's department store, Cedar Rapids. The bottom two pictures are close-ups of the two cars after they had been righted and were ready to be towed off by wreckers. The car at the left, the Whipple car, was probably the more seriously damaged. The right rear tire (notice that the tire is off the wheel) is the one that blew out and caused the accident. The other car, although turned over, was not as badly damaged.

Germans Claim Kiev Entirely Surrounded

Set Russian Losses At Over 4,000,000 Killed and Captured

BERLIN (AP)—The German radio last night broadcast a report from the Russian front that German troops had encircled Kiev, the industrial capital of the rich Soviet Ukraine.

The dispatch, from a propaganda company of journalist reporters which travels in the front lines, said infantry units now had reached the most advanced lines of panzer troops, which were said to have approached within 12 miles of Kiev some time ago.

It did not say specifically how tight the reported circle was drawn. The high command contended yesterday that the Germans had driven a wedge to the gates of Kiev.

DNB reports had declared that Russian troops surrounded in the Kiev region faced destruction after falling in repeated attempts to break through the German traps.

The high command recounted at length the past phases of the battle of Smolensk and again listed Russian manpower losses in six figures but kept its silence on what the reported victory cost the Germans or precisely how it will weigh in the scales of this bloodiest of all Nazi campaigns.

"Our losses were moderate, those of the opponent extraordinarily high," was all the communique said of the price the Germans paid.

An authorized military commentator, ridiculing British reports that a million Germans had been slain on the eastern front, said that the Nazi losses "proportionately averaged what they were in the western and southern campaigns."

German sources have placed the number of Russians killed and captured on the entire front at more than 4,000,000.

House May Lower Maximum Service

U.S. May Act In Ship Strikes

High Officials Pointedly Concerned Over CIO Walkout at Kearny

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate last night approved legislation prolonging the active service of draftees, militiamen, reservists and army enlisted men by 18 months with a pay raise of ten dollars a month for all men after they have completed one year in the army.

The bill, hotly disputed for more than a week, went through by a vote of 45 to 30, and now goes to the house where its fate is uncertain. Many house members are reported to favor a less drastic extension of service than 18 months provided in the senate measure.

Until the last minute, administration forces were in secure command of the situation. After defeating proposals for a six-month and a 12-month extension, they obtained approval yesterday of the 18-month period by a vote of 44 to 28.

But then, just before the final ballot, the senate disregarded the desires of the democratic leadership and wrote in an amendment providing for a $10 monthly pay raise after a year of service. (The present basic pay is $30.)

The amendment, offered by Senator Mead (D-N.Y.) was adopted 39 to 34. Just previously an amendment by Senator Johnson (D-Colo.), calling for a 25 per cent pay increase, was rejected 37 to 36.

There was some question as to the effect of the Mead amendment. Some war department attorneys expressed the opinion that as it passed the senate it provided for retroactive increases for men who have already completed more than one year's service in the army.

For example, it felt that an army old-timer who had been in service for 20 years might be entitled to back pay at the rate of $10 a month, for 19 years.

However, the attorneys indicated that such was not the real intent of Senator Mead. There were indications that the amendment might be redrafted, if not deleted altogether in the house.

Accepts Amendments
With the draft extension out of the way the senate completed congressional action on two other defense measures by accepting amendments of the house to bills previously passed by the senate.

Most important of these was a bill revising conditions for reenlistments in the navy, coast guard and marines to provide a $400 cash bonus for immediate reenlistment, double the present bonus.

The second measure extended benefits of federal workmen's compensation laws to men employed on naval bases or other defense projects outside of the continental United States.

Originally, the draft extension measure, with President Roosevelt's approval, called for authority to hold the service men in the army indefinitely. As a compromise the 18-month time limitation was inserted by the military committee, with the backing of the administration floor leaders.

As the legislation went to the house, it provided that President Roosevelt should keep draftees, national guardsmen and reservists in service for a total of two and one half years from the time of their induction.

Soviet Line Holding Savagely

Reds Say Nazi Losses Over 1,500,000 Men

MOSCOW (AP)—The German army that overran most of Europe before tackling huge Soviet forces now has lost more than 1,500,000 men to Russia's 600,000, and the red army is still savagely holding its own on all battlefronts, the Soviets announced today.

German official claims that the Russians had lost 895,000 prisoners and many times that figure in dead and wounded were termed "Arabian fairy tales" designed to bolster falling morale within the reich.

The communique said it was significant that the German people "has far had not been told how many Nazi troops were slain on the plains of Russia."

The Losses
It set forth this table of material losses for both sides:

	German	Russian
Tanks Destroyed	6,000	5,000
or Captured	8,000	7,000
Artillery Destroyed	8,000	7,000
or Captured	8,000	7,000
Planes Destroyed	6,000	4,000

'Velly Grateful, But Will Decline Protection'—Thai

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—"Thailand is extremely grateful to those offering her protection, but begs to decline same with thanks," the official Thai radio commentator declared last night in apparent reference to Japanese allegations of British-American machinations aimed at Thailand.

The commentator, without naming names, said that as reports of possible occupation of strategic bases in Thailand "on the part of those offering protection," Thailand possesses adequate officers and men to look out for her own bases but would appreciate the assistance of friendly powers in the form of war materials which she needs.

(This cryptic comment apparently was both a bid for U.S. and British material aid and a slap at Japan, which has been reported seeking bases in Thailand.)

Rites for Bruno Mussolini To Be Held Today in Pisa

ROME (AP)—Bruno Mussolini, second son of the duke, perished yesterday in the wreck of a new four-motored bomber he was testing in his third war. It was death at the age of 23 for one who, in the creed of his father, had "lived dangerously" since he was a little boy.

With Capt. Bruno at the controls as squadron commander, the new plane, which possibly was to be used by the squadron against Russia, crashed near the airport of San Justo at Pisa. Two others of the crew were killed and five were injured.

A communique said the reason for the crash was not yet known. The plane was coming in for a landing when it crashed.

The crash occurred at 10 a.m. The duke took off in a plane for Pisa immediately with General Piccolo, chief of the air force general staff.

Crews at the field were drawn up in mournful review as the duke hurried past to the Santa Chiara hospital where, with Lieut. Vittorio Mussolini, his eldest son, he viewed Bruno's body.

British Bomb Nazi Airfield In Day Attack

LONDON (AP)—The RAF bombed a German airfield near St. Omer, France, German shipping and other targets near Gravelynes yesterday in two daylight offensive sweeps which cost Britain 10 fighter planes and the Nazis four, the air ministry announced. No bombers were lost.

(German accounts said the RAF lost 24 planes in the channel area Thursday up to 10 p.m.)

The day's assaults followed Wednesday night's storm-defying raid on northwest German industrial centers, during which a British bomber shot down a Junkers 88 officially described as a Nazi night fighter. The twin-engine Junkers 88 originally was designed as a dive bomber, but the Germans seem to have converted it to a night fighter similar to the British Havoc, also originally a bomber.

Bruno was thrice decorated by his country for war and peace time. (See MUSSOLINI page 6)

U.S. Withholds Acceptance Of Vichy Pledges

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States withheld full acceptance of assurances from the Vichy government yesterday until it was clear that the French were as determined to protect their territory from the axis as from the British.

Secretary of State Hull said he had received a French note which was substantially along the lines indicated unofficially in Vichy. The note was reported to have said France was determined to defend her empire in her own way.

Hull appeared to regard the assurances as somewhat encouraging but not sufficiently final to relieve all concern here over the French territories.

Before classing the note as definitely satisfactory, he said he wanted to know more about what was going on in Vichy. Things move so fast, he said, and more or less foggy in some localities that it is important to see the general trend of conditions before discussing them finally.

How Successful States Have Been With Advertising Campaigns—

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third and final discussion based on a study of state advertising and promotion. The story details results of some of the campaigns.)

State advertising and promotion pays dividends in increased tourist trade, new and expanded industries, and new and enlarged markets for agricultural and other products. This was shown in reports by state advertising agencies for 1941—the first full year of operation for many of them—to the Council of State Governments.

In analyzing the reports, the council realized it is hardly possible to measure the effect of state advertising programs and also that the war undoubtedly has had an effect on the general upswing in tourist travel and industrial expansion. The full effect of the war in relation to state advertising may not be shown until the states report for 1941 and 1942, however, the council said.

State advertising and promotion agencies offered the following examples as results of their activities:

TOURIST TRADE: Arkansas Publicity Advisory Commission—More than 5,000,000 tourists visited Arkansas in 1940, and spent an estimated $66,000,000, an increase of $16,000,000 over tourist expenditures in 1939; Louisiana Department of Commerce and Industry—Approximately $65,000,000 was spent by tourists in 1940, an increase of 12 per cent over 1939 expenditures; Massachusetts Industrial and Development Commission—Tourist gain of about 10 per cent in 1940 was recorded.

New Mexico State Tourist Bureau—Out-of-state cars entering New Mexico increased from 900,000 in 1935, when bureau was established, to nearly 1,700,000 in 1940; North Carolina Advertising Division—In 1936 the tourist trade was valued at $25,000,000, in 1938 at $64,000,000, and in 1940 at $100,000,000; South Dakota Public Relations Bureau—A 15 per cent increase in 1940 tourists over 1939; Wisconsin Recreational Publicity Division—Non-resident fishing licenses totaled 134,771 for 1940, an increase of 22,000 over 1939. Colorado, Illinois, Kentucky and Oregon also reported increases in the tourist trade.

INDUSTRIAL: Arkansas—At least 174 new industries established in the state and 36 existing industries expanded; Massachusetts—261 new industries and 215 major expansions of existing industries for 1940; North Carolina—239 new industries located in the state during the 1938-40 biennium and 256 additions to existing plants, with new plants representing a capital investment of approximately $32,000,000 and increasing the state's industrial payroll by about $19,000,000 a year.

Pennsylvania Department of Commerce—During 1939 and 1940, 390 new industries were established in Pennsylvania; Louisiana Department of Commerce and Industry—There were 222 new factories or additions constructed in Louisiana in 1940, with a payroll increase amounting to about $25,000,000. Other states reporting new or expanded industries include Illinois, New Jersey, Virginia and West Virginia.

NEW MARKETS: Florida Citrus Commission—Figures covering the first three years of operation of the campaign to advertise citrus fruits indicate an increase of $17 in net returns to growers for each $1 spent in advertising; Idaho Advertising Commission—Substantial increases in earload sales of Idaho potatoes occurred in 13 selected cities used in a marketing survey, and in many of the cities, including Atlanta and Birmingham, the increase more than tripled sales records before the advertising campaign started.

The Waves of Our Population

The recent upswing in the marriage and birth rates for the United States has not caused the population experts of the census bureau to retract their forecasts of an approaching stationary population. The only effects, they say, which the current increases will have will be to delay the advent of a stationary population.

The increases in marriages and births noted in 1940 are to a large extent a reflection of current improvements in job and business opportunities. In general, the marriage rate closely parallels the business cycle; the number of first births, in turn, closely parallels the number of marriages.

Accordingly, an upswing in business conditions is almost immediately followed by an increase in the number of marriages (which raises the marriage rate), and after a lag of about a year, by an increase in the number of births. A downswing in business conditions has the reverse effect. Accordingly, the present boom in marriages and births will last only about as long as the present prosperity wave.

In part, however, the recent upswing in the numbers of marriages and births is also a direct result of the changes that are occurring in the age composition of the American population. Thanks to improved life expectancy and a birth rate that has been falling during the last several decades, there is today, as compared with past periods, an unusually large proportion of the total population in those ages in which marriages and parenthood occur. Census bureau experts see in the present "wave" of population increase a result of the heavy "baby crop" which followed immediately after World War I, and which is now entering the most productive ages.

These facts account for such apparent paradoxes as a 16 per cent increase in the number of families between 1930 and 1940, a decade in which the total population increased by only about 7 per cent, and an increase of nearly 12,000,000 persons aged 14 and over when the total population increase was less than 9,000,000. Most important to forecasts of future population is the fact that during this last decade the number of persons under 14 years of age actually decreased by almost 3,000,000. This smaller group will constitute the reproductive element of the future. Because of its smaller size it will inevitably contribute less to population replacement than the present reproductive group, unless very unusual and unpredictable social and economic changes occur in the future.

Of Speed-Boater Rossie, a Dog, And Conrad Thibault's Discoveries

By GEORGE TUCKER
NEW YORK—His pals are wondering what happened to Count Rossi, the Italian speed-boat fancier and sportsman who won so many cups in America before the war and so many friends. When last heard of he had returned from an excursion to the Red Sea, was in the army and stationed near his home at Turin.

But this was a year ago, and now two events have taken place that bring the Count to the minds of his friends. One was the surrender of the Duke of Aosta at a place called Alagi in Africa a few weeks ago.

Alagi was an important name to Rossi. Alagi and Aradam are twin mountains captured by the Italians during the Ethiopian campaign. The Count named two of his fastest boats the Alagi and the Aradam and won many cups with them in America and throughout Europe. These sleek, speedy craft were powered by motors used by Balbo when he made his spectacular flight from Italy to Chicago during the Century of Progress Exposition.

The other item which recalls the Count is on the blacklist of fascist firms in the Western Hemisphere published by the government the other day. The Count is owner of a great vermuthouse, that, in addition, makes more than 60 other products. Times, as the Count must certainly be reflecting nowadays, have changed.

IT'S THINGS like this that occupy baritone Conrad Thibault on his free days looking up oddities in the history of ancient music. . . The flute, says Thibault, was the favorite instrument of the old Romans. . . They passed a law forbidding more than 12 flutists to play at any one funeral. . . In Wales it used to be against the law for any one save the king and his satellites to own harps.

In our own country the Puritans looked upon the fiddle as the devil's own instrument. . . They frowned on music unless it was hymnal or connected with congregational singing. . . When Gossec first introduced the cornet in Paris the critics denounced it as harsh and unfit to be played in the decent society of oboes and violins. . . After listening to some of these swings bands, I think maybe they had something there.

The actor Burgess Meredith is building a 50x75 foot swimming pool on his country place on Camp Hill Road, overlooking the old Revolutionary battlefield of Stony Point. . . He has quite an acreage there. Recently a friend of mine, one of Meredith's neighbors, was kicking around the grounds and came upon a grave with a headstone that was marked "Hamlet." . . That was Meredith's dog, a Great Dane. . . Now Meredith has another dog, another great dane named "Hamlet."

The late Lou Gehrig had a dog, too—a boxer, and a highly trained mutt it was. Now that Gehrig's life is to be made into a movie, Lou's dog has been "signed" to play the role he played for the last two years in real life. The dog's name is "Kim," after Kipling's hero in the novel by the same name.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON
(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc., reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

Here Is the Back Door To the Nazi World—

WASHINGTON—Sudden hobnobbing of British, Russian and American officials around half the world has been accompanied by British press murmurings about an invasion of Finland, and an open charge on the floor of the U.S. senate that the British have not been fighting with their full weight.

The impression that Finland may be a good point at which to feint has gained military support here. Norway would be the better spot at which to hit hard. Certainly the waters up to the all-winter port of Archangel must be kept open.

But the weakest point of the axis now is not in those areas, but for to the south, along the routes stretching out into Africa and Europe from Gibraltar. There lies the open back door of the Nazi dominated world. A British expeditionary force could clean out all northern Africa without much difficulty. A movement into Spain, although requiring a much more aggressive policy than the British have tried so far, would anticipate the long threatened Hitler venture against Gibraltar. The road from there up into France is still open. Don't forget winters will shortly close the battlefields of the north and open up new ones in the south.

YOU CAN'T STOP INFLATION—

Price restrainer, Leon Henderson, practically admitted before the senate committee that a certain amount of inflation (prices and wages) cannot be avoided even if his price control bill is adopted. He said such things as—inflation is inevitable unless he receives strong controls but then such controls might not be sufficient.

Without precisely admitting it, he is conceding what every authority in the government privately admits now—the economic elevator has just started. Predictions of 10 to 15 per cent further general increase in prices within the next four months are being freely made. This could be stopped arbitrarily, if the administration really wanted to stop it, but political repercussions and economic violence might be more than authorities care to endure. The tendency therefore will be to apply mild brakes, to slow down, but not to stop the trend.

HOW CITIZENS CAN ADJUST—

I asked consumer experts in the government for advice to individuals on how they should alter their living habits to adjust themselves to the price-wage-shortages situation, with the following preliminary results: This could be stopped arbitrarily, if the administration really wanted to stop it, but political repercussions and economic violence might be more than authorities care to endure. The tendency therefore will be to apply mild brakes, to slow down, but not to stop the trend.

It is true women and men will be unable to buy the stockings, ties, etc., to which they have been accustomed, as soon as existing stocks are gone, probably in a few months. Not only will silk hose be extinct but supplies of rayon, nylon and others will be curtailed somewhat, because the army is also using these materials in increasing quantities. The government's advice is to take exceptionally good care of those you have. Wear articles only as necessary. Women who wear slacks around the house, for instance, will not need stockings most of the day.

Instead of aluminum ware and stainless steel utensils, you should buy cast-iron enamel ware and heat-resistant glass ware, they say. While tomato juice will continue to go up, you will be able to get all the fruit juices you want. In place of olive oil (up 200 per cent in price) use the cottonseed and other oils sold under commercial names. Learn canning. Drive your cars at 40 instead of 50, saving tires, gas and brakes. The bureau of standards says oil need not be changed in most motors except seasonally, although it must not be allowed to run low.

Watch closely the labels on everything, as manufacturers are naturally changing their specifications (using cheaper dyes, lighter weight wools, smaller thread cloth.) There will be a sharp shortage in blankets.

For electrical implements as well as clothing and shoes, the advice is to take better care of what you have. Make everything go further. Patch, mend and remake what you have. Get back to the old way of living.

ARMIES TO MANEUVER—

Big army maneuvers are to start in a week or two in various sections of the country from coast-to-coast. What has been done so far this summer was only preliminary. Anywhere from three to ten as many troops will be used in great mass movements in the northwest and northeast than have been used to date. Newsmen will be invited. Critiques will be issued afterward.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Dana Andrews Is A New Star Bet—

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—New star bet: Dana Andrews.

He is 29, six feet, broad-shouldered, the hero of "Swamp Water."

He is no "overnight success." He's been working at Hollywood for 11 years. Everything has happened to him, including being "split" more ways than a watermelon. His contract is shared by two studios. His earnings are split even more—shares go to two business friends who staked his career, to his agent, the residue to himself. "I'm a split personality," he says.

On location down in Georgia he met Varsen Bell, author of "Swamp Water." "You look like a country boy, all right," said Bell.

He also looked like a young army officer in "Kit Carson," like the young plantation man in "Tobacco Road." He was born in Collins, Miss., son of a minister. His home town now is Huntsville, Tex., where he went to college and decided to become a singer. He became an accountant. Steadier pay. But finally he hitch-hiked to Hollywood.

Closest he got to a movie studio was a filling station in Van Nuys. He pumped gas by day and studied music by night. The station owners stepped in, finally, with a deal: $50 a week for full-time study, in exchange for a five-year share of possible later earnings. Two years ago, signing with Goldwyn, Dana began paying off. He's still grateful.

His wife died, leaving him a baby son. Four years later, after signing for pictures, he thought he could bank on the future enough to marry again. Mary Toud, an actress at the Pasadena Playhouse where Andrews often worked, had said "yes" but friends at the studio advised them to consult Goldwyn first. Marriage of a possible romantic lead is serious business to a producer.

They took the advice. As Dana was about to pop the question, a studio fire broke out. Goldwyn ran to the fire, so did everyone else. In the excitement Goldwyn spotted the actor. "What is it? Tell me now!" he yelled over the uproar. "I want to get married, is it all right?" Dana yelled back. Goldwyn beamed paternally. "I'll think about it. Let you know."

They waited. Dana went back. He thought Goldwyn had forgotten about it. "Oh," said Sum. "Yes. Sure—get married." He was under contract to 20th Century-Fox when loaned out for "Kit Carson." He had a big part, but nobody on the lot seems to have seen it. There were some at 20th, including the lady in charge of passes for contract players, who didn't know he was under contract.

He dates his "discovery" on the lot from a test he made supporting Dorris Bowdon—from it came "Tobacco Road," then "Belle Starr," finally "Swamp Water."

"Everybody's so busy, and there are so many of us trying to get attention, you can't blame them for not knowing you're around," he says. "I was lucky."

Japanese residents of the Island of Guam number 326, according to the census. Only 23 of the 785 white population of Guam were born on the island.

The Book Parade

By JOHN SELBY
"LOOKING FOR TROUBLE" by Virginia Cowles (Harper: $3.50)
Perhaps there is something in women's "intuition," after all. One cannot help wondering whether, after making due allowances for the benefit of hindsight, Virginia Cowles was not guided almost as much by the subtle sixth sense credited to women as she was by logic—or even the press of events. For her book has exactly the quality of inevitability which distinguishes good fiction. She is dealing with facts as she saw them, but these facts all sound precisely as if they had been arranged providentially for Miss Cowles' benefit.

And her "Looking For Trouble" is in many ways the best written of all the dozens of books by European correspondents. It would be easy to pick small flaws in it—I was irritated by the parade of her innumerable friendships with highly important people, for example knowing as any newspaperman does that these are exceedingly easy come by in such days as these. Yet it is the use one makes of such contacts that counts, and Miss Cowles of Boston has made the best use possible. She also has made the whole thing into a beautifully drawn panorama of Europe from the year 1936 to the present. And she has written so well that even when she leaves Nuremberg before Hitler's speech on Czechoslovakia you are likely to forget that this was an odd thing for a newspaper woman to do.

Miss Cowles went abroad with very little experience. She went first to Spain, and there she saw the war from both sides. She was in Prague before and after Munich, in the Sudetenland as the Nazis marched in, she was in Russia while Russia was being deceived while Russia was being deceived was being applied to the Italian grape. She saw Berlin on the day the war began, she saw Finland invaded, and was in Paris as France crumbled, and in London later.

There is a good deal of new material in her book, too. I do not mean that she unearthed any new state documents, but that she has added numerous bits of color to pictures we already know—Unity Mitford, for one. And she writes superbly. Her description of the Nuremberg party congress aforementioned is beyond words fine, for one example.

Turning of German Drive South Indicates Reverse at Smolensk

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
The latest chapter in Hitler's amazing story of Russian armies destroyed fails to furnish convincing evidence of smashing German victories but it may explain why the main Nazi attack has shifted southward toward the Ukraine.

It is not yet clear whether the Russians still hold the great bend of the Dnieper—the Orsha-Smolensk-Mogilev triangle. If they do, the Germans' chances of pushing on toward Moscow are not bright. It may have been tough going there that led the Germans to make a radical change in their plans and strike southward below Kiev at Red armies holding the Black sea flank.

The German radio has broadcast a report that Kiev is already encircled. Intimations from Berlin that Hitler has gone to the Ukraine front, southwest of Kiev, bear out his declaration that a turning movement via Byel ya Tserkov to sweep the region between the Dnieper and the Dniester to the Black sea is in progress. It also serves to throw light on the Nazis' failure to widen their boasted gains in the Smolensk area.

The most recent Hitler bulletin told of German advances on a wide front on both sides of the Orsha-Smolensk road. If that refers to the railroad, however, it implies that the Russians still hold the south bank of the Dnieper from Smolensk to Orsha and the east bank from Orsha to Mogilev. The railroad is north of the river between Orsha and Smolensk.

Main Obstacle
For weeks that Mogilev-Orsha-Smolensk river basin has been the main obstacle to the German advance on Moscow. It sharply limited the strategic value of the Nazi breakthrough from Vitebsk to Smolensk and further east along the Moscow railroad. Red forces holding the great river bend were on the flank of the Nazis' most advanced salient.

If it has not been cleared, a successful major attack on Moscow seems impossible. If the Hitler bulletin means Red forces in the bend have been routed or destroyed, a gateway to Moscow 100 miles wide has been opened through the Stalin line between Vitebsk and Mogilev. If that were so the Germans would hardly forego such an opportunity of dealing new and punishing blows in the vital center.

Russian reports placed the most recent fighting east of Smolensk at Dorogobuzh. That is half way between Smolensk and Vyazma, the most easterly point the Germans claimed to have reached along the main route to Moscow. The panzer unit at Vyazma has been cut off or thrown back toward Smolensk if the Russian version is correct.

Tremendous Force
In any case, there is ample evidence in Hitler's report on the Smolensk battle that the Russians have missed tremendous forces before Moscow. The claim of more

Reveals 'Squeeze Play' Planned To Oust Axis Dominated Airlines

By CORNELIUS V. WHITNEY
(Mr. Whitney, who wrote this story exclusively for Central Press, is chairman of the board of Pan-American Airways, principal competitor in South America of Axis-owned airlines.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Step by step the Latin-American republics, with the help of the United States, are moving inexorably toward the time when Axis-owned or dominated airlines will be "squeezed out" of South America.

With the disappearance of these airlines from the trade routes over the southern continent, Berlin and Rome will lose a vital foothold in the Americas as well as the No. 1 Nazi-fascist artery for the dissemination of propaganda and anti-democratic activities in the western hemisphere.

Only a few weeks ago one of the final steps in this program was taken to rid all the South American west coast of European-dominated airlines and substitute for them services of local or United States air transport. The government of Bolivia expropriated on May 16 the German air line, Lloyn Aereo Boliviano, which had been operating under an exclusive franchise in that country.

Transfer of the German company's bases and routes to American control is a development of particular significance since it separates German and Italian airlines still operating on the east coast from "sympathetic" air connections with the west, where Peru and Ecuador recently set a precedent for Bolivia by taking over German lines in their countries.

Move Against Axis
A long-range program of increased competition and financial pressure against the Nazi and fascist airlines still operating in the Americas is moving swiftly into action with the United States government playing the role of "spark plug" in the plan.

Although this program already has met with important successes in Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, there are still six airlines dominated by Berlin and Rome interests flying without hindrance over strategic routes of South America. The ground and air crews of these planes are well known as spreaders of the Nazi gospel in our neighboring republics over routes that last year totaled 3,700,000 flying miles.

The Italians now operate over the transatlantic route which the French were forced to abandon. This line (LATI) links Rome and Berlin directly with the great capitals of eastern South America. LATI makes the South Atlantic jump from Dakar, Africa, to the Brazilian coast at Pernambuco.

From this point of the South American continent the big German Lufthansa company line, Sindicato Condor, and the other five Axis lines compete directly with America's air services along nearly 20,000 miles of trade routes.

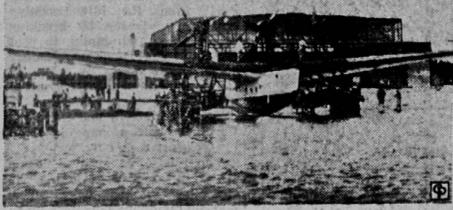

More than 300,000 Russians captured on that narrow front alone shows that. By Nazi yardsticks that would indicate total Russian casualties of close to a million men in the Smolensk sector fighting.

Yet obviously the Russians are still holding there in great strength, too great for the Germans to press on immediately against Moscow. And if the Red forces still hold also the Mogilev-Orsha-Smolensk triangle in the great bend of the Dnieper, and have thwarted any critical breakthrough at Mogilev to widen the base of the Smolensk salient to 100 miles or so, it is for Hitler to turn elsewhere for a decisive victory.

He needs urgently a quick victory of major strategic consequence. It is not yet discernible before Moscow. It could be in the making south of Kiev in the Ukraine.

A modern German Junkers bi-motored transport plane.

The Rohback Romar, largest sistership of the Rostra type of flying boat that makes regular commercial transatlantic flights between Europe and South America.

Members of the civil aeronautics board recently pointed out that the Axis network of airlines in South America is "not a commercial enterprise," but rather a "well-considered instrument of a national policy bent upon the cultural and political domination of the South American continent."

Axis Planes "Spot" Ships
Planes of the German and Italian commercial lines have been used as observers to "spot" British blockade warships at sea for Axis vessels waiting to make a dash through the Allied cordon for European ports.

A major plank in the inter-American program of increased competition against the German-Italian lines is a new airlines credit agency which has just been formed in Washington to finance new lines and the purchase of United States aviation equipment for South America.

This credit corporation will have the power to lend money to private companies in both the United States and South America and to the governments of the other American republics to help build up existing lines and start new ones. President Roosevelt already has allocated an initial $8,000,000 to this agency from his emergency defense fund and an additional $42,000,000 will be made available for aggregate capitalization of the new group.

Above all, the corporation will compete with Axis airlines in South America by offering better credit and delivery terms on all kinds of equipment and airline goods.

House Sustains F.D.R.'s Veto Of Road Bill

Overrides Senate Vote For Authorization Of Appropriations

WASHINGTON (AP)—By a hair-line vote the house yesterday sustained President Roosevelt's veto of the legislation which would have authorized $320,000,000 for defense highway purposes.

The official roll call was announced as 251 to 128, after several members had changed their votes, and it fell only two votes short of the two-thirds necessary to override the veto.

Senators voted Wednesday 57 to 19 to override the veto, but today's house vote killed the legislation.

The president had objected especially to a provision under which $125,000,000 to correct deficiencies in roads would have been apportioned among all the states according to the federal aid act. It had recommended $25,000,000 to be spent in localities where the army deemed the need to be greatest.

The first house roll call showed 252 voting to override and 127 opposing, after Rep. Green (D-Fla.) qualified and voted against overriding.

Veto by One Vote
Speaker Rayburn looked at the power to lend money to private companies in both the United States and South America and to the governments of the other American republics to help build up existing lines and start new ones. President Roosevelt already has allocated an initial $8,000,000 to this agency from his emergency defense fund and an additional $42,000,000 will be made available for aggregate capitalization of the new group.

Above all, the corporation will compete with Axis airlines in South America by offering better credit and delivery terms on all kinds of equipment and airline goods.

Rayburn ruled that no member could vote who was not in the house when the first roll call was completed but those who had been recorded could change their vote.

Fillbuster
Rep. Michener (R-Mich.) told the house that having a recapitulation was "one of the old methods of filibustering" resorted to "so the losing side can

How Does Fishing Appeal to You?

With a partner as lovely as Martha Cooke sitting on the bank with you, fishing might take on more appeal to you fellows who "could never see anything in the game." Martha holds one of the thousands of bamboo poles that are shipped regularly from China to New Orleans, where she's trying her luck. Fishermen along the Mississippi, who think the rod and reel affairs are much overrated, provide a brisk market for these bamboo poles.

Those urging that the veto be overridden contended that President Roosevelt had been misadvised and that the real opposition came from the budget bureau and national resources planning board. Rep. Mott (R-Ore.) said it was "a small group of bureaucrats here in Washington who wish to have complete control of road building."

Rep. Taber (R-N.Y.) a frequent administration critic, contended the funds authorized were far in excess of those needed and urged that the veto be sustained.

Cards Grab Back Lead From Idle Dodgers

SPORTS TRAIL

by Whitney Martin

- That Waiver Rule
- Didn't Stop Yanks
- But Hurt Bengals

NEW YORK (The Special News Service) — It's about time the American league was reconsidering its reconsideration of the rule barring trades by the champion, now that the Yankees are about to take back the pennant they loaned to Detroit last year.

The rule, about the most spiteful, discriminatory piece of legislation ever enacted, was adopted when the Yankees were champions and there seemed reason to believe they would continue to be champions unless they were disabled by a few low punches delivered around the council table.

Great was the consternation when the Detroit Tigers, a meek club which never did anyone any harm, won the pennant last year with a collection of fugitives from a rocking chair in the shade.

Couldn't Hold Together
It was apparent that the Tigers couldn't hold together another season without some fresh stitches where they were cracking at the seams, but the rule was in force, so it was a question of what to do, what to do.

The national emergency, with its by-products of the draft and such, came to the rescue. With very straight faces the league owners solemnly voted to rescind the rule, announcing that inasmuch as the draft had made the player question uncertain, it would be a hardship to impose trading restrictions on any one club.

Which meant, of course, that they didn't have anything against the Tigers and were sorry that the rule against the Yankees had ricocheted, and now that the Yankees were just another ball team maybe it would be best to get rid of such a dangerous device before some other innocent bystander got hurt. In other words, they had shot at the cat and hit the canary.

Too Bad for Tigers
From the Tigers' standpoint, the revoking of the rule came too late to do much good. They already had the Black eye, and there was little consolation in knowing the fist had slipped and it wouldn't happen again.

Now the pesky Yankees are at it again, and the club owners, if they want to take another sock at them, must declare that the national emergency has passed and the rule again will be put in force, or think up some new way to see that there would be no more milk for the kitten which again was growing too fat.

As for Ed Barrow and his Yankees, they can sit back in a corner and chuckle. It is doubtful if the rule ever did hurt them, except in the vague vicinity of their feelings. They, with their elaborate farm system, are about as self-sufficient a club as there is in baseball.

Now It's Too Late
In fact, the rule was a taut rubber band which slipped off the wrong finger and snapped the league in the nose instead of hitting the Yanks in unarmored territory. The other clubs could have used a couple of those men who Barrow slipped out of the league on waivers.

Offhand we can't think of a man on the Yankee roster who wouldn't be welcomed by some club. Now that the rule is no longer in force, and the Yankees are winning another pennant (wanna bet?), perhaps Barrow will forgive and forget and give some of his rivals a chance at players he can't use next year.

But he may be stubborn, in which case the rule will remain effective long after it has been erased from the books. Only it will be reversed. The other clubs won't be able to trade with the champions.

Draft Doctors Say Feller's Perfect Specimen

Break Loose In 11th Inning To Rout Reds

Cooper, Nayhem Stop Bucky Walters, 3-2, As Redleg Rally Fails

CINCINNATI (AP)—The ever-battling St. Louis Cardinals grabbed back in their half, scoring lead from the idle Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday by breaking loose in the 11th inning to rout the Cincinnati Reds and Bucky Walters, 3 to 2.

The triumph gave St. Louis a .6442 percentage compared to .5436 for Brooklyn and lifted the Cardinals half a game in front by won-lost reckoning.

The Reds themselves came within an ace of snatching the game back in their half, scoring one run on Jimmy Gleason's pinch single, but with the tying run on third and the winning run on first, Eddie Joost fouled out to Gus Mancuso.

Up to the eleventh Morton Cooper, who is still recovering from the effects of an elbow operation, and Walters fought each other on almost even terms. The Cards scored one run in the second on Johnny Mize's double and Jimmy Brown's single, and the Reds got it back in the seventh on singles by Frank McCormick, Chuck Aleno and Lonnie Frey.

Mize opened the eleventh with a single and Enos Slaughter sent him to third with a double. Brown went out on an infield play, but Estel Crabtree batted for Martin Marion and singled Mize in. Mike McCormick's perfect throw cut down Slaughter on his attempt to score. Cooper then singled in Crabtree with what turned out to be the winning run.

The Reds' late uprising chased Cooper, but Sam Nahem stopped the Reds short of the game.

Hubbard to Meet Mason City In Legion Finals

ROCKWELL CITY (AP)—Hubbard won the right to meet Mason City today in the playoff for the state American Legion junior baseball title by outslugging Davenport, 11 to 6, yesterday afternoon.

Davenport got away to an early five-run lead but Hubbard tied it up in a big third and moved ahead with four more in the sixth.

Score by innings:

Davenport ... 230 001 000—6 10 5

Indianola, although definitely out of the running for the title, threw the American Legion state junior baseball tournament into a playoff by halting Mason City's previously undefeated team, 3 to 0.

A victory over twice-beaten Indianola would have given Mason City the right to represent Iowa in the regional tournament at La-Crosse, Wis., next week. Now the north Iowa team must go into action today in an effort to reach the regional competition.

Pitcher Goldizen held Mason City hitless until the ninth inning when he gave up two singles.

Indianola scored all of its runs in the first inning when left-fielder Lytton clouted a home run. Mason City will play the winner of the Davenport-Hubbard game in the playoff today.

Score by innings:
Indianola ... 300 000 000—3 4 1
Mason City ... 000 000 000—0 2 3

Hutcheson 20-Gauge Open Race Champ, But Woman Stars

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—S. Lewis Hutcheson, 33-year-old woolen mill operator from New York City and Greenwich, Conn., won the 20-gauge championship, but yesterday's yarn on the seventh annual national skeet tournament belongs to Mrs. M. L. Smythe, diminutive Aurora, Ohio, sharpshooter.

The Buckeye star "shot the works" by entering the open race against the man and came within an ace of taking everything on the first time. She broke 100 in a row—first time a woman has ever broken the "century" with 20-gauge in the nationals and the second score of its kind in all feminine competition.

That score tied her with Hutcheson, who cracked his third straight hundred of the meet, for the wide-open laurels and clinched for her the women's championship, which Patricia Laursen of Akron, Ohio, won a year ago with 94.

The two leaders tangled in the 25-target shoot-off and it was all over on the first one, Mrs. Smythe missing. Hutcheson went on to break the entire string, giving him 125 in a row, while Mrs. Smythe, the cause already lost, missed the seventh and fourteenth also to finish with 22 of 25.

Red Sox Blast Yankees, 9 to 5

BOSTON (AP)—The mid-summer siesta of the New York Yankees assumed the proportions of a slump yesterday as the American league leaders dropped their fifth game in seven starts—a 9 to 5 decision for the Boston Red Sox—and lost their first series since June 18.

Heber (Dick) Newsome, the rookie righthander who has become the Red Sox ace with 13 victories, muffled the bombers on eight hits and gave Joe DiMaggio his 15th blanking of the year, although Joe got credit for driving in three of New York's runs on long fly balls.

Johnny Sturm and Rob Rolfe divided six of the Yankee safeties between them.

Ted Williams, who had three hits for the day, smacked his 22nd homer in the second inning.

Senators Tally 2 In Ninth to Nip Athletics, 5 to 4

WASHINGTON (AP)—Safe blows by Jake Early and Roger Cramer, coupled with three walks and an outfield fly, brought the Washington Senators two runs in the ninth inning for a 5-4 win over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Sam Chapman, who drove in all the losers' runs, sent the A's into a 4-3 advantage going into the ninth.

Sid Hudson worked eight innings for Washington, yielding four runs and five hits. Walter Masterson, who relieved him, was credited with the win. Lester McCrabb held Washington to seven hits until the eighth when he was removed in favor of Tom Ferrick who was charged with the loss.

S. J. Woolf Interviews the Great—

ARTISTIC JOURNALIST

—As He Sketches Their Picture

NEW YORK (The Iowan's Special News Service)—On the night of April 3, 1936, when Bruno Richard Hauptmann was electrocuted for the Lindbergh baby's murder, a little man with bushy gray hair and hornrimmed glasses was among the witnesses to emerge from the death house into the glare of the Kleig lights in the street outside the prison walls.

As reporters dashed for typewriters and telephones across the street, he ran to a waiting taxicab up the block and was sped through the streets of Trenton, N. J., to the Pennsylvania railroad station.

The man barely caught the train to New York. Once aboard he opened a portfolio, brought forth paper and began sketching the fateful scene he had just observed for the Daily News.

That probably was the strangest assignment S. J. Woolf ever had in his long career of sketching and interviewing people for newspapers and magazines. One familiar factor was missing—the interview.

Woolf has sketched and interviewed probably more people of prominence than any other man alive—United States presidents and university and corporation presidents; cabinet members and justices of the supreme court; European statesmen and diplomats; churchmen, actors, poets, scientists, lawyers, composers, musicians, sociologists, athletes, generals and admirals; and the wives of famous men.

Woolf's experiences in recent weeks—since he has been visiting the great for the Iowan's Special News Service—are typical of his whole career.

The day before John G. Winant stepped aboard a clipper plane to return to his post as United States ambassador to Great Britain, he paused an hour in a work-crammed day to give the only interview of his hurried trip home to Woolf.

The tall, deliberate ambassador talked with Woolf in a New York hotel room. Intensely aware of the international implications of anything he might say, the ambassador insisted that his remarks be written down word for word. Later, he called Woolf by phone to change a single word.

Woolf interviewed Senator George of Georgia and Secretary of Agriculture Wickard at succeeding hours. George presented him with a large bag of Georgia peaches.

Woolf just had time to leave the peaches in a safe place before meeting the secretary.

"I almost came to see you with a bag of fruit under my arm," he told Wickard.

"Why didn't you?" asked the secretary. "I'm always interested in any kind of fruit."

"I was afraid," replied the artist, "that you'd start hunting for Japanese beetles in the bag."

Woolf tasted the sly humor of Harvard's President James Bryant Conant in Massachusetts hall, the oldest building of America's oldest university.

In a Washington apartment whose walls were covered with prints of flowers and birds, he found James Clark McReynolds, who had won something of a reputation for gruffness as a justice of the supreme court, a man who talked with great humanness of the orphaned children he was supporting.

Woolf's life has followed no formal pattern. He was born on east 64th street a little over 61 years ago when goats grazed in Central park and New York was a city of horse cars and pleasant tree-lined streets.

Peter Flynn, an official of the local union, said the chief point at issue in the strike was "a modified 'union shop,' but L. H. Korndorff, company president, called the issue the union's demand for a union shop.

On this trip Woolf made a dozen or so other sketches, including Churchill, Ramsay MacDonald, David Lloyd George, the German crown prince, Mussolini and others. One of them was George Bernard Shaw and since Shaw is a ready talker, Woolf wrote the things he said.

And the Times printed the interviews. After that the going was easy.

AFL spokesman said the teamsters were picketing the yards because the company rejected a demand for an increase from 72 cents to $1 an hour.

It was not disclosed what occurred at the conference with the management which preceded the CIO union's order for a return to work at the Brooklyn yards.

A cruiser, the Atlanta, six destroyers, three tankers and two cargo vessels are on the ways at Kearny. The Atlanta was scheduled to be launched Saturday, but Korndorff said the launching would have to be postponed.

Pan-American Fiesta to Open Annual County 4-H Club Show

Latin-American Theme To Be Predominant Feature of Exhibits

Highlight of the annual Johnson county 4-H club show to be held in the Iowa City armory August 13 through 15 will be the Pan-American fiesta.

Scheduled for the opening day of the 1941 show, the scheme of the fiesta will be centered around a plaza pool, eight by 10 feet, which will be surrounded by tropical palms and flowers and Latin-American birds.

Featured amusement and tricks for the evening will allow visitors an opportunity to try their skill at cowboy lasso stunts, corn games and card tricks.

Deadline for entering pies in the Johnson county pie-baking contest is 10 o'clock this morning.

Pies will be judged immediately after the last entry in order that they may be displayed at the nutrition school to be held in the community building at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

There are no entry fees. Pies must be in one of five classes, apple, cherry, any berry, peach or apricot and raisin or mince and must be baked with lard.

Earl G. Miller Asks Check On Liquor Stores

DES MOINES (AP)—Secretary of State Earl G. Miller yesterday asked Chairman M. L. Curtis of the liquor control commission for a list of liquor concerns doing business in the state of Iowa.

Miller said he wanted the list in order that he may check and verify whether these companies are properly qualified to do business in Iowa.

The question of requiring liquor firms selling to the liquor commission for a list of liquor law to do business in the state long has been debated but not settled.

Outside corporations which do business in Iowa are subject to commission to qualify under Iowa law without having qualified as foreign corporations.

Miller said he doubted whether this penalty could be collected from the liquor firms, inasmuch as it has recognized their right to do business by buying from them through its own agency.

Many of the firms have signified their willingness, however, to pay the $25 registration fee, he said, a penalty of $100 for each day if they qualified, it would be an advantage to any Iowan who might have a claim against one of these concerns, as the action then could be brought in an Iowa court.

Members of the exchange board will be Mrs. Carlyle Erb, Iowa City, Joe G. Raim, Solon, and John O'Connor, Lone Tree.

Flower vendors will be Vlasta Frus, Charlotte Yoder, Carolee Yoder, Marilyn Meardon, Patricia Pechman, Geraldine Johnson, Betty Urbanek, Carolyn Werbach, Dorothy Kessler, Faye Baldrige and Virginia Kessler.

Mrs. Kenneth Wagner is chairman of the fruit women including Mrs. B. L. Hotz, Mrs. C. C. Erb, Mrs. Mable Meier, Mrs. Edward Burke, Miss Geraldine Herring, Pauline Leeney.

Mrs. Kenneth Wagner and a staff of 4-H club boys and girls will maintain a Pan-American tourists' bureau.

The decoration committee in charge of the Pan-American day is composed of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Hudson, Iowa City; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor, Lone Tree; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Novy, North Liberty; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schuessler, Lone Tree; Mr. and Mrs. James Lacinia, Jr., West Branch; and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Werbach, Lone Tree.

Nazis Try New Drives in Russia

Arrows on the above map indicate new drives launched by the German armies in a desperate effort to crack the Russian defense lines on the eastern front. While Moscow admitted that a German salient had been formed in the direction of Kholm between Leningrad and Smolensk, Berlin claimed advances along the Moscow highway east of Smolensk and successful attacks 50 miles south of Kiev.

despite attempts of German parachute troops and air-borne light tanks to take it.

Increasing numbers of 45-year-old German reservists and 17-year-old Nazi cadets have been thrown into the battles, sapping the manpower of Germany, the Soviets said.

As for German claims that the red air force no longer is a menace the communists said their planes continued to bomb German airdromes and mechanized units, and that 39 German planes were shot down Wednesday to a loss of 19 red aircraft.

"The German high command's reports on the results of six weeks of war are Arabian fairy tales," the Soviet information bureau communique said.

It pictured the German people as plunged into "despondency and confusion" from reports penetrating Germany about tremendous losses at the front, from the food situation and from dislocation of German industry.

"Fascist propaganda endeavors by false reports of military operations on the eastern front to raise the spirit of the German soldiers and population," it said.

"Concealing from the German population the real losses suffered by the German army in the war against the U.S.S.R., Hitlerite propaganda is treating the population to ridiculous nonsense."

It said that the German command attempted to account for heavy losses and failure to advance quickly by creating a "legend of the existence of a powerful fortified Stalin line" wherever Germans met stiff resistance.

"However, no special 'Stalin line' ever existed or exists," the communique continued. "It was invented by the Germans to justify their tremendous losses."

The Red army garrison at Smolensk, which the Russians declare has been withstanding siege for three weeks in the greatest battle to date in the Russo-German war, was reported today to have been still holding the fort as recently as Aug. 2, in direct contradiction to the German high command's declaration that the city fell July 16.

against the upper windshield and top of the car.

Both cars were practically demolished. The Whipple car was smashed the whole length of the right side and the Newburger car was pushed in on the left side.

As near as the accident could be reconstructed by patrolmen, the Whipple car, heading west, swerved almost cross-wise in the road to the north side of the highway where it collided with the Newburger car, which was headed east. The force of the collision turned the Whipple car so that it faced west and rolled the Newburger car about 30 feet into the north ditch where it stopped on its right side. The Whipple car remained upright.

All four side windows of the Newburger car were smashed and covered with blood and the left side of the windshield was broken. The front seat of the car was thrown about 20 feet out of the car. The inside of the car was covered with slivers of broken glass and blood.

The Whipple car, although remaining upright, was probably more seriously damaged than the other car. The whole side of the car was pushed in and part of both the front and rear seats were torn loose. Most of the windows of the car were broken and the

The other car was the one in which the woman was killed. It was reported that her head was smashed against the front windshield and top of the car. She was riding between her grandfather, who was driving, and her daughter. A daughter and two grandchildren were riding in the back seat.

Hostess at Tea and Luncheons

Flowers add sparkle and color to the table at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Nall, 348 Hutchinson. As a last minute duty, Mrs. Nall is arranging the flowers before she serves an informal luncheon. She is one of the many Iowa City hostesses who is serving her favorite recipes at a Bundles for Britain chain luncheon.

Pie—that's the interest of the day! But with all of the local attention being given to fruit pies, let's turn our thoughts to the lighter variations.

Mrs. V. W. Nall, 348 Hutchinson, suggests a recipe for Cream Pie which has been in her family for four generations. She puts the rich creamy filling in a Never Fail Pie Crust.

Never Fail Pie Crust
1 cup of flour
2 heaping tablespoons of lard
3 tablespoons of water
Pinch of salt
Pinch of baking powder
Sift the flour, salt and baking powder. Work in the lard with a fork or cut lard into flour with two knives. Sprinkle a very small amount of water on mixture at a time, stirring with a fork. Do not stir mixture after all the water has been added. Place dough on bread board which has been sprinkled lightly with flour. Roll to desired thickness and place in pie tin. Bake at 425° F. for 15 to 20 minutes (until browned).

Maple Porcupine
1 cup of Log Cabin syrup
1 package of gelatin
1/2 cup of cold water
4 egg yolks
1 teaspoon maple flavoring
1 pint of whipping cream
Dissolve gelatin in cold water. Warm the syrup and add the gelatin. Slowly add gelatin mixture to well beaten egg yolks and cook in double boiler until the mixture coats the spoon. Remove from fire and cool. Add the flavoring and whipped cream slowly. Pour into mold and allow the mixture to set. When ready to serve, unmold and stick almonds into the sides and top of the mold. Fill center with whipped cream and serve.

Mrs. Nall hesitated to give me her recipe for party cakes. "The recipes I've given you are so rich, but Angel Food Whipped Cream Cake is attractive," she said.

Angel Food Whipped Cream Cake
Make one plain Angel Food cake according to your recipe. Then, using the same recipe, make a second cake substituting 4 teaspoons of cocoa for 4 teaspoons of flour.

When the cakes are cool cut them cross-wise in half. Place the top of the chocolate cake on the lower half of the white cake and vice versa. Between the layers and over the cakes put the following mixture:

Filling
Whip 1 pint of cream stiffly. Melt and cool 1 plain Hershey bar. Add the chocolate to the cream with 2 tablespoons of powdered sugar. Spread thickly between layers and over the cakes.

"One recipe for which I really have lots of requests is Chocolate Roll," our hostess admitted. "It's very rich, but it makes a wonderful variation for parties or special menus."

Chocolate Roll
1 cup of powdered sugar
6 eggs
3 tablespoons of cocoa
1 tablespoon of flour
Pinch of salt
3/4 teaspoon of vanilla
Beat egg yolks until light and foamy and add sugar and cocoa and remaining ingredients. Mix well and fold in the 6 egg whites that have been beaten stiff. Bake in a large pan that has been buttered and covered with wax paper. Bake 25 minutes in an oven at 325° F.

Take from pan while it is still warm and put on a cloth which has been sprinkled with sugar. Roll the mixture quickly. When cool unroll and spread with 1/2 pint of whipped cream that has been sweetened with sugar. Re-roll and cover with icing.

Chocolate Icing
2 cups of powdered sugar
4 tablespoons of softened butter
1/2 teaspoon of vanilla
Pinch of salt
3 heaping tablespoons of cocoa
To the above ingredients add enough strong hot coffee to blend the mixture and beat well. After putting icing on Chocolate Roll, sprinkle chopped pecan meats on top. Put roll in refrigerator until ready to serve.

"You can make almost any quick bread you prefer from this recipe for Quick Family Rolls," Mrs. Nall asserted.

Quick Family Rolls
1 yeast cake
1 cup of lukewarm milk
1 egg
1 teaspoon of salt
3 tablespoons of sugar
3 tablespoons of melted butter
2 1/2 cups of sifted flour
Crumble yeast into milk and add the remaining ingredients. Mix well and let rise for 1 hour. Make into rolls and let them rise for 2 hours. Bake the rolls for 15 or 20 minutes at 400° F.

"This makes a delicious Cinnamon roll. Spread melted butter on the dough after you roll it out. Mix sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle over buttered dough. Roll it up in the dough and slice. Let the slices rise and bake 15 to 20 minutes at 400° F."
