The Trouble Around Here Is That Too Many Do Just the Minimum

"Hundreds of human beings—students, teachers and just people—are on the campus now. They are seen on every walk, in every room—they crowd the campus and fill the chairs and it all seems pretty confusing right now, doesn't it?"

So spoke the Minnesota Daily a few days ago to freshmen of the University of Minnesota. The same may be said to new students of the University of Iowa. No matter what big campus you may adopt as your own for a collegiate sojourn, the strangeness is there, the feeling of insecurity, the doubt which faces you when, with few or no acquaintances, you drop suddenly into the midst of it.

There's little need for offering advice about what to do about that feeling, because in this case there's nothing quite so fine as day-by-day experience. Learning acquired the hard way is learning not easily forgotten. The first time you learn, after walking across the river, that Macbride hall isn't on the west side, no matter what you thought or anybody said, you'll not forget it.

And within a few weeks, you will feel as "at home" as you did back home, and next year, in the satisfied manner of a sophomore, you can watch other new ones learn it the hard way.

But don't get the idea that orientation into college life means no more than getting acquainted with the people and places here. If you were one of those who came to Iowa expecting hard work, don't let anybody talk you into thinking it's easy. The trouble around here usually is that the talk gets around just how high (or low) the minimum requirement is, everybody gets into the habit of doing the minimum, and things go pleasantly and irrevocably to pot.

But retribution always comes, and usually too late. If you follow that easygoing method, you wake up a bright June morning four years hence wondering where you go from here. It's a pleasant feeling to be able to answer that question. Too many college students can't.

President Virgil M. Hancher voiced the keynote of a distinctly American system of education when he said, last Thursday morning, that "you have come (here) because you believe that there are latent powers within you that need to be developed, because you are now only the promise of what you will become."

How many students graduate from institutions like this each year, still undeveloped. How many graduate, still just a promise, perhaps a dimmer promise, of what they will become.

If you're to avoid that pitfall into which students, oftentimes with the help of the faculty, frequently fall, it's better that you get off on the right foot.

You can expect a great many good things from Iowa, if you're looking for them.

You will make close friends while you are here, and they will mean much to you, and you'll be the happier for that.

You will learn many things of value to you in the business of how to operate in a wider area of society, and you'll be the more solid and capable for that.

You will develop many interests in many fields you haven't appreciated before, and you'll be the more broad, the more interesting as a unit in society for that.

You will discover a far greater and more real world than you've known before, and that will whet your appreciation of bigger worlds, your enthusiasm for newer worlds beyond. And you'll be a more enthusiastic man or woman for that.

These things are good.

But unless you keep your eyes fastened firmly on a goal, unless you develop an awareness in your own mind of where you're going and how you're going to get there—an awareness which projects far beyond your college days—then you're running a chance of being just another "college-trained graduate." There's a decreasing demand for them; the demand will continue to decrease.

Most students when they come to college haven't grown up enough to take themselves seriously. That isn't a sin.

But, heaven help you if, by the time you graduate, you still haven't learned to take yourself seriously!

We're Off on a New Inflation Ride

It seems that everybody in the country wants a ceiling on prices save those who are responsible for seeing that such a ceiling is erected if we want it.

Columnist Hugh Johnson points out on this page today the utter nonsense of attempting to curb the rise in the prices of some commodities while others go soot free. Yet while the business is being bickered over by Washington big-wigs, we're already swinging into what can easily turn out to be the worst boom, followed by the worst depression, this nation has ever seen.

How is it that the very people who'll have to suffer are the ones who willingly lose their shirts while all the bickering goes on? Americans are without question the most adamant race on earth when it comes to being taken for rides, enjoying the rides, and repenting at leisure.

There's More in Phonograph Records Than Anybody Ordinarily Believes

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—More phonograph records are sold in New York than in any city in the world. When you turn to your phonograph and put on a new record you go back to a Frenchman who was kicking around Paris 66 years ago with an idea. . . . This was the first concept of the phonograph. This man was Leon Scott—an odd name for a Frenchman. Somehow, little came of his efforts, and the project failed. . . . Twelve years later Thomas A. Edison secured more concrete results. . . . But when you made a record then, at great expense, you wore it out by playing it. In 1888, Emil Berliner got the idea of pressing duplicates from a master recording. . . . He tried it out, and it worked. Ten years later he was showing his device to an engineer named Eldridge R. Johnson, of Camden, N. J., and in that moment a new industry was born.

Sometime this week the Victor company will manufacture its eight hundred millionth recording. . . . That's a lot of wax. . . . Stacked into one pile, they would reach 1,100 miles in the air. . . . End to end, they would cover 138,889 miles. . . . If you wanted to play them all, the time required would be five thousand, three hundred and twenty-one years.

One of the greatest sellers of all time was a recording of "My Blue Heaven," sung by Gene Austin. It sold 1,000,000 copies. . . . Today, the most popular records seldom hit 500,000. . . . They say Sammy Kaye's "Daddy," Artie Shaw's "Frenesi" and Tommy Dorsey's "I'll Never Smile Again" hit between 400,000 and 500,000 in sales.

Caruso, Paderewski, Sousa, Mengelberg, Gabriilowitsch, Victor Herbert—today these great artists are all dead. . . . If it weren't for phonograph records, their technique, their style, their great mastery would be lost forever. . . . When he was recording Caruso would never drink any cold liquids. . . . Recording engineers used to keep bottles of hot liquids for him. . . . Among symphonies, Beethoven's Fifth, directed by Stokowski, is the best seller of all time. . . . Close to this comes Beethoven's Seventh (Toscanini), and Schubert's Unfinished (Konssewitsky).

One of the reasons, doubtless, for the spurt in Beethoven's Fifth is the "V for Victory" campaign of the British, the first four notes of the symphony being in the telegraphic meter of the dot-dot-dot-dash of the Morse code "V". As you must know, Beethoven composed it at the time of Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow, and at a time when he, Beethoven, was almost stone deaf.

As a child Paderewski was advised to abandon the piano and take up the trombone. . . . Even his piano teacher thought his hands were too small to go very far.

So, there's more to it than a wax disc and a pointed needle when you turn to a phonograph these days. . . . It goes back to 1875, and it represents a sort of human symphony within itself of great minds and great ideas and victories and defeats.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q.—When will the "drive" to sell defense savings bonds begin?

A.—There will be no "drive." Many people think of the defense savings program as like the Liberty Loan campaigns of the first World War, which were conducted for stated periods to raise specific quotas. The defense savings program is a long-range, continuing effort to stimulate the public to buy more and more defense bonds and stamps month by month, and is essentially a program to promote mass saving, as well as to provide money for defense.

Q.—What is the new tipping idea spreading among salesmen?

A.—Use of defense savings stamps, which are given to bellboys, taxi drivers, porters, and waiters instead of cash.

NOTE.—To buy defense bonds and stamps, go to the nearest post office, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Stamps are now on sale, too, at most retail stores.

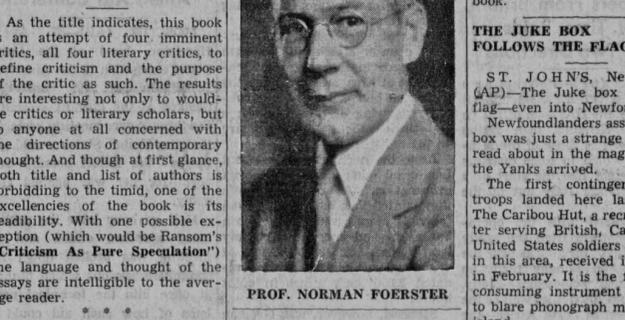

TOMBSTONES MAKE POOR FOUNDATIONS

The New Books—

By JOHN SELBY

THE BOOK: "The Intent of the Critic," Princeton University Press at $2.50. THE AUTHORS: Edmund Wilson, Norman Foerster, John Crowe Ransom, W. H. Auden. THE REVIEWER: Ruth K. Mason.

PROF. NORMAN FOERSTER

As the title indicates, this book is an attempt of four eminent critics, all four literary critics, to define criticism and the purpose of the critic as such. The results are interesting not only to would-be critics or literary scholars, but to anyone at all concerned with the directions of contemporary thought. And though at first glance, both title and list of authors is forbidding to the timid, one of the excellencies of the book is its readability. With one possible exception (which would be Ransom's "Criticism As Pure Speculation") the language and thought of the essays are intelligible to the average reader.

This does not imply that this is in any sense criticism for the masses or that writers have tried to reduce their subject matter to a lowly intellectual level. The book's readability and its chief interest come from the seriousness with which the four critics have approached their task.

Though these men differ in their definitions of critical function, the essentials on which they agree constitute the book's significance. They agree, first of all, on the importance of criticism and the critic. Nowhere in the volume is there an apology for the existence of either the critic or his work. Secondly, they agree that criticism is a definite, specific thing, clearly distinct from art, history or sociology.

Though Foerster and Ransom differ widely in their concepts of the function of criticism, each is clear-cut and concrete in his expression of that concept. One may feel assured, that each of these men, at whatever conclusions he may arrive, will not arrive at them through devious channels of loose generalities or the comparison of incomparables. He will arrive at them by a direct and logical route.

As to the differences of opinion expressed, they are apparent in the titles of the essays. First approach to the intent of the critic is Edmund Wilson's "The Historical Interpretation of Literature." It is the simplest of the essays, but its simplicity is deceptive. More lies behind it than is apparent at first reading. Wilson discusses the history of criticism and the implications of various sociological and economic theories which have influenced literary production. Particularly interesting is his analysis of the influence of Marxism on the historical approach to literature.

And though he makes no specific reference to the literature-as-art-literature-as-propaganda conflict, by inference one may here learn much about his views on the subject.

To this reviewer, Iowa's Norman Foerster's essay on "The Ethical Judgment and the Ethical Judgment" was the most deeply satisfying of the book. Foerster, of course, subscribes to the ethical judgment point of view. And he makes clear, as

Interpreting The War News Nazis Develop New Threat to Russian Lines East of Kiev

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
An ominous new Nazi threat to Kharkov and the Donets basin is developing south of the new line of defense the Russians have built up directly eastward of Kiev.

Hitler's headquarters reports destruction of three additional red divisions, trapped northwest of Dnieperopetrovsk. That marks a new drive opening far south of the Poltava southern flank of the Kiev pocket which the nazis report has now been "mopped-up" with capture of nearly 700,000 Russian troops and enormous war booty. Hitler's bulletin politely credits a share in the new victory to Italian forces operating with their Nazi allies.

The scene of action is just above the northern curve of the great bend of the Dnieper. Various small streams drain into the Dnieper at that point. They account for that swampy ground in which, according to the German report, the Soviet divisions were outflanked and smashed.

Berlin claimed capture of the Dnieperopetrovsk crossing weeks ago. It did not figure, however, in the vast pincer squeeze which cut off Kiev and brought about its fall. Presumably stiff Russian resistance all along the southern and eastern front of the Kiev pocket has compelled the Germans to widen the scope of their drive toward Kharkov another 100 miles southward.

Russians Claim Counter Attacks
The Russians claim to have made effective counter attacks in the Krasnodar area, halting the Nazi direct lunge toward Kharkov from Poltava. The Germans have gained no additional ground for days on that flank of the Kiev pocket, nor northward in the Gluska sector, so far as is known.

It seems obvious, therefore, that the new thrust marks development of a real battle for Kharkov and for possession of the rich Donets river basin and the city of Rostov, pivot for a German land march into the Caucasus oil fields. The new Dnieperopetrovsk spearhead expands the Kharkov fighting front to nearly 200 miles. The Russians must stem triple Nazi or Nazi-Italian thrusts, all edged with grave flanking dangers for their whole Donets basin defense system.

British Must Take Hand
This triple menace, coupled with

The busiest thoroughfare in town

Lined with bright, exciting windows freshly stocked with today's news, the newspaper is the busiest thoroughfare in town... busier today than ever before.

In some windows you find news of the home town, the nation, and the rest of the world. In some you find entertainment, advice, interpretation. In others you find news of the goods and services offered by manufacturers and retailers.

Every day in the week, every week in the year, you and your family travel this busy street, looking for things that interest you... and finding them in both the news and advertising windows.

Practically everybody in every community walks along this thoroughfare of news and advertising every day... simply because the newspaper is indispensable to everybody everywhere. That's why the 37,000,000 families in the United States and Canada buy, and read, over 43,000,000 newspapers every weekday... over 33,000,000 newspapers every Sunday.

And because everybody is so intensely interested in the contents of the newspaper, it's easy to understand why advertisers, national and local, find newspaper space the most effective medium with which to tell their story and sell their goods.

be inflicted upon Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia.

From France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway and dismembered Yugoslavia — even from within Germany — came a steadily lengthening list of other restless moves against the reich.

The official German Gazette announced confiscation of the property of the Catholic foundation, St. Valentinus Haus, in the Rhineland, because it was "hostile to the state."

Execution of two more men in Paris last Saturday was disclosed by German authorities, bringing to 37 the number shot by firing squads there in intensified efforts to halt a wave of terrorism.

Aneta, free Dutch news agency, reported Netherlands citizens were reporting beacons to guide British bombers on raids into the continent despite strict police measures.

Italy continued to patrol the northeastern Adriatic seacoast where she sent her troops last week after outbreaks of fighting between Serbs and the little army allotted to the Croatian state the axis carved out of Yugoslavia.

Italian Government Suspends All Trade In Clothing, Textiles

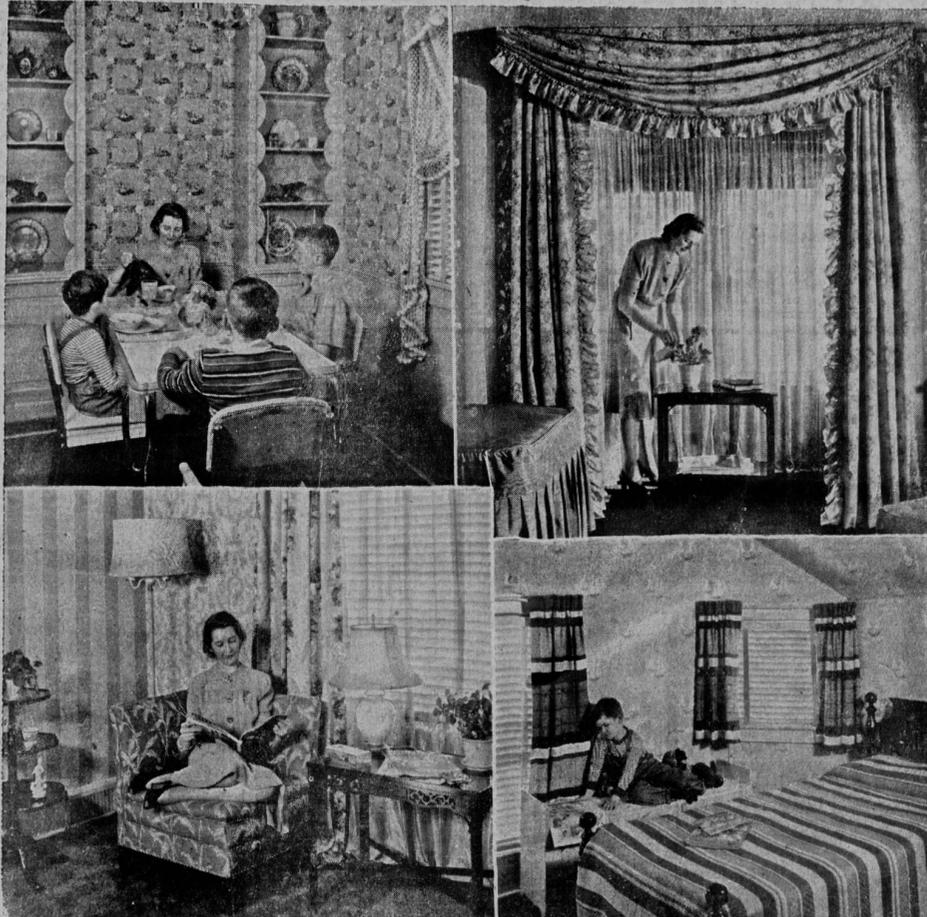

ROME (AP)—The government yesterday ordered suspension of all trade in textiles and clothing and it was understood this was a preliminary to rationing of these goods.

Despite recent distribution of identification cards for purchases of these goods, the communique said, the Italian public had been buying more of them than was normal and necessary.

It said, "In order to avoid socially offensive, anti-economic hoarding, the guilds ministry has decided to block all sales of textiles, clothes and underwear so as later to order their rationing."

Germany Sink British Destroyer BERLIN (AP)—DNB reported today that German planes sank a British destroyer last night off the English east coast.

Anderson Home Is Gay Banter of Color

Dr. and Mrs. Eddie Anderson, 828 N. Gilbert, have recently redecorated their large, rambling house on the outskirts of Iowa City. The editors of "Better Homes and Gardens" liked the new version of the home so well that they are featuring it in the October issue of their magazine. Mrs. Anderson is shown, upper left, having a late breakfast with her three sons, Jimmy, Jerry and Nick. The breakfast room is gay with a blue linoleum floor banded in yellow and white. Gray cupboards lined in blue make an attractive background for odd pieces of pottery, and the white cable net curtains give a touch of airiness. Upper right, Mrs. Anderson is fixing flowers in the bay window of her room. The curtains in the master bedroom are celanese and the draperies are pale yellow flowered in powder blue and rose. These charming colors make this one of the most attractive rooms. The carpeting is deep burgundy, the paper is gray-blue, and the spreads are blue moire. In the living room, lower left, three walls reflect the paper used in the hall, but the fourth is broadly striped in two rosy tones. The draperies are rose, blue, yellow and wine. Powder blue upholstered pieces accent the rose carpeting. Jimmy, lower right, likes to look at picture books in his room which carries out the patriotic theme in red, white and blue striped spreads and curtains. The paper in his room is sea blue dotted with white sailboats, and the window seat with built-in cupboards is just as useful as it is attractive.

Panama Student—'Guinea Pig' From 'South of the Border'

Fernando Tapia Typifies Latin American 'Good Neighbor' Relations

By RUTH MASON

"I'm a guinea pig, but I like it," is Fernando Tapia's cheerful analysis of his position on the campus. "I'm sort of an experiment in international relations."

Tapia's statement is correct. The freshman from Panama differs from the majority of other foreign students on the campus in that he is here not only as an individual training for a professional career, but as a representative of Latin America's closer relations with the United States.

Sponsored by an Iowa organization formed by six of Des Moines' civic and fraternal groups, he has been sent here to learn American ways from first hand experience and at the same time to give American students a better understanding of their south-of-the-border neighbors.

He and university authorities hope to accomplish this joint purpose by arranging for him to live in Wilson house, boy's cooperative dormitory.

Here he shares a room with two Iowa students, Richard Day of Brighton and Howard Elmore of Lanyon, and earns part of his expenses by working.

Work, he explains, is no novelty. He earned a semester of junior college credit in Panama by selling shoes.

His first few days at the Wilson house he worked as janitor—which position Tapia renamed "sanitary engineer." "If you call yourself a janitor, it's only a job; but a sanitary engineer—that's a position. There's a lot of difference."

Since school started, he has been promoted to dishwasher. And he aims still higher. "I'd like to be a cook," he says. "After all, it's only fair to let me do a little experimenting, too."

Apart from Wilson house, he expects a good deal of his knowledge of America to come from regular class work and associations with students and faculty members. Unlike many foreign students, Tapia has no language handicaps.

"It's a strange thing," he commented. "I think I can read English better than Spanish. You see, I went to a United States government high school."

Tapia was not entirely unprepared for the University of Iowa. He had a second-hand knowledge of SUU from one of his high school teachers, Mrs. Elinor Robson, an S. U. I. graduate. It was partly through Mrs. Robson's influence that Tapia came to Iowa. She inaugurated the original plan which the Des Moines organization adopted—that of financing the education of a Latin American student at an American university. Mrs. Robson recommended Tapia on the basis of his high school record.

If the Des Moines group feels its initial experiment is successful, it plans to sponsor other Latin-

Lynch.

Percussion
Dorothy O'Hearn, Janice Bardill, Glenn Pryor, Thomas Turner and Barbara Burgess.

"An experiment in international relations" are the words Fernando Tapia, freshman from Panama, uses to describe his position as a student at SUU. Tapia's education is being sponsored by a Des Moines organization interested in furthering closer United States-Latin American relationship as well as better understanding between university students of the two countries.

Louis Hands Nova TKO in Sixth Round

Floors 'Yogi' For 9-Count By Hard Right

Birth of Action For Five Rounds Draws Hoots From Crowd

By SID FEDER
POLO GROUNDS, New York (AP)—In one fearful explosion of fistic dynamite, Joe Louis leveled the California oak, Lou Nova, in six rounds last night to turn back the 19th challenge to his record reign as world heavyweight champion.

He did it in a different way than everyone expected he would. He was supposed to take considerable time bringing down the powerful giant with the Yogi habits. Nova was to absorb the blasts time after time, possibly be knocked down several times.

Eut Joe was stubborn enough to believe his right hand gunpowder was mighty enough to do it in one short vicious explosion. And he was as right as law.

For after stalking the blond giant for five rounds, with the action so dull that a near capacity crowd in this big Bronx ball park hooted and shouted at times, the Brown Bomber took the brakes off in the sixth, floored Nova for a nine-count with a terrific right hand shot, and then belted him into bloody submission before Referee Arthur Donovan stepped in and mercifully ended it.

The time was two minutes and 59 seconds of the sixth round, and marked the end for a time, and possibly for keeps, of Louis' great ring career.

Dull Fight
For five rounds this was the most uninteresting Louis the faithful ever have seen. He spent half a minute on occasions without throwing a punch.

Since the big cosmic punch and dynamic stance man challenging for the throne elected to fight a counter-punching kind of duel, the action was about as heated as the weather. And it was so chilly that gloves, sweaters, blankets and coats were all over the ring-side and still the folks shivered.

For five rounds Louis just shuffled in and stalked his opponent. There was one brief moment in the fourth round when Joe had his fireworks popping and Nova's knees sagged. But that quieted down, and it was quite obvious Joe was intent on just one thing—throwing and landing the Sunday punch, the one big one that he was confident would lower Lou.

Occasion Comes
Finally, the occasion came, midway of the sixth round, Nova made the mistake of lowering his long left just a trifle, and the greatest puncher the ring ever has seen wound up that high hard one and pitched. Nova went down as if he had been hit by a locomotive on the loose instead of a fist.

He lay there against the ropes, then pulled himself up at the count of nine, badly hurt. Joe charged in for the kill. He threw everything into every punch and chased the staggering Nova from rope to rope.

A lightning left hook tore open Nova's right eye. Blood streamed down as he fell back against the ropes in a neutral corner. His hands lowered. Joe, on top of him, was about to let him go a blow that might have done him real damage. Then Donovan stepped in and called a halt, a moment before the bell sounded to end the round.

Thus the bomber, reverting to the one-punch-to-wreck-'em tactics he employed against rock-like Paulino Uzcudun back in 1935, turned back the challenge that was regarded as the greatest, the strongest and the most determined he ever has been called on to face in building up the longest string of successful title defenses in ring history.

Fulfilled Ambition
Now he has fulfilled one ambition—to join the army with Fistic's most prized crown still on his head. He starts doing his fighting for Uncle Sam late next month, and tonight may have been the last time he will put on the gloves in title competition.

Joe himself doesn't know if he ever will be in there again with the thousands roaring a tune to his dynamite delivery. Promoter Mike Jacobs and Joe's managers, Julian Black and John Roxborough, have the complete say about that, and they are not saying just now what's cooking in the future pot.

Physically there was little to choose between these two warriors tonight. At 202 1-4, Louis was one-quarter of a pound lighter than the sturdy student of Yogi. Both were in the peak of condition. Both were ready, and even Nova admitted afterward it was just a case of "I forgot to duck."

"I've never been hit that hard before," the ex-California collegian said in his dressing room as his handlers doctored his cut. "You

Intramural Program Will Maintain Pace Of National Defense

Seventeen Activities Scheduled This Year; Boxing Added to List

In the face of the present drive for national defense, the University of Iowa is planning to do its part by the expansion of physical education opportunities for all men in the university, and in conjunction with this move, the university intramural program will assume greater importance than in previous years.

Pat Boland, director of intramural activities, announces that the intramural directors and team managers of fraternities will meet this afternoon at the fieldhouse to discuss plans for the program this year. Wednesday afternoon the team managers of dormitories will meet, and cooperative dorm managers will convene Thursday afternoon.

Seventeen Activities
At least 17 different activities will be featured in this year's setup: touch-football, basketball, volleyball, indoor relays, softball, golf, badminton, squash, fencing, swimming, track and field, ping pong, horseback, tennis, handball, canoeing and boxing. Bowling may also be added to the schedule.

Boland encourages students living in town to form leagues, and take an active part in the program. Formation of more town leagues would do a great deal in building up and adding prestige to the intramural organization.

Trophies will be given to winning teams in the varied contests, and trophies and medals will be awarded to individuals comprising the championship teams.

Started in '04
The University intramural program, as it operates today, was originated in 1904 by E. G. "Dad" Schroeder, although the idea of intramural contests dates back to 1867. In the 1904 schedule, only three activities were offered.

Since that time the organization has flourished considerably, 72 organizations being entered in the 18 different sports of last year. With the continued cooperation of social and professional fraternities, Hillcrest, the Quad, cooperative dorms, and the entrance of new volunteers, especially in the form of town leagues, the intramural activities should assume a much more prominent position on the campus this year.

One Man's Opinion
That was strictly one man's opinion, however, and many ring-siders were inclined to believe he would have a tough time overcoming Billy Conn, who all but took the title away from Joe last June.

For Lou had every chance in the early going. Louis was slow, he covered up time after time when Nova feinted in his direction, and so intent was he on bringing the California clouter down with one punch that at times he swung wild punches and left himself open.

Afterward, Joe insisted that "Lou ain't the fighter Billy Conn was."

"I saw the opening in the fifth round," Joe explained. "I threw a punch then, but it missed. I knew I'd get the opening again, so I just waited until it came. He never hurt me."

The bomber admitted, too, that the reason he was so slow to untrack in the early going, in addition to the cold, was that Nova fooled him by the way he elected to fight.

For days at his training camp, Lou came out of conferences with his cosmic punch (Joe calls it the comic punch) to brag that he would wade right into the mouth of the cannon and carry the fight to the headman. Fortunately for him he didn't carry out the boast. If he had, the roof might have fallen in a lot faster, the way Joe was pitching.

Champ to Sponsor
'Joe Louis Fund'
NEW YORK (AP)—The Department of Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches announced last night that Joe Louis would "put up one more fight"—against race prejudice and intolerance, by sponsoring a Joe Louis fund for the department.

Louis had written friends, the department said, that he expected to be called soon to military service and that this might cause his retirement from the ring.

"But before I retire," he wrote, "I want to put up one more fight—the best of my career—to help my people."

"The hardest fight I ever had was against prejudice and intolerance. My people know what I mean. They are all fighting their way up, and I want to open the door of opportunity a little wider for them. I propose to start with my own contribution."

Coach Brechler Announces Loss of Two Regular Rivermen for Conference Opener

Stimmell Brothers Unable to Participate in Tilt With Comets

U-High's Coach Paul Brechler announced yesterday the loss of two of his regulars, Glenn and Calvin Stimmell, for the rest of the week and for the first conference game of the season Friday afternoon with West Liberty at Iowa City.

Due to the death of their brother, the fullback and left guard positions left open by the Stimmell boys' absence is causing Brechler a real headache.

At present, Helm, reserve fullback, and Jack Shay, regular quarterback, are likely candidates to fill Glenn's backfield position. Earl Carson or Bill Cobb will undoubtedly fill Calvin's guard post.

Brechler feels that since these circumstances have arisen, it is an excellent chance to use sophomores and give them experience if they produce during the week's drills.

At present only two seniors are regular players for the Rivermen. The question of a quarterback is Coach Brechler's main worry. If he shifts Shay to fullback, then he faces the problem of picking another quarterback.

Although the odds of a victory over the Comets Friday afternoon are somewhat uncertain, pep and a desire to win was shown on the practice field yesterday afternoon.

Coach Brechler put the Rivermen through offensive drill most of the practice session, trying to smooth out a few of the rough spots that showed up in the Teachers high game last Friday. A few new plays were worked in with the old. Both the double wing back and the T formations are used by U-high in an effort to hit upon a working combination.

Cormack Looks For Better Combination
Coach Herb Cormack made a few changes in his City high line-up last night at practice and tried out several new combinations hoping to find a more powerful one than was put on the field last Friday night at Clinton.

The Little Hawks came out on the long end of a 14 to 7 score against Clinton but didn't show up too well. The line was especially ragged both on offense and defense. The main weakness proved to be the guard positions through which the River Kings plunged time after time and finally scored.

No real heavy work was in store last night but with only two days of practice left before the McKinley encounter Thursday night, a heavy scrimmage is scheduled for tonight's practice and undoubtedly Cormack will try out several

'Bums' Work Out in Bomberland

Huge Yankee Arena Just Another Park To Flatbush Flock

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers took a look yesterday at the massive concrete Yankee stadium where they will open the world series against the New York Yankees Wednesday and none of them died of fright.

This was an encouraging indication of the tremendous struggle to come, because some of the National league clubs that have left their little parks to do battle with the Bombers in past series have rattled at the knees on their first look at the big arena towering three tiers high and holding 70,000 persons.

The Dodgers had their little difficulties as Dodgers always do—things like Kirby Higbe losing his way under the stands between the field and the dressing room, pitchers refusing to jog around the outfield because it was too big and sluggers not hitting anything into the stands except fouls.

Dodgers Dominant
But the Dodgers didn't give up, as they didn't give up during the regular season. They stretched a one-hour workout into two hours.

It was all good clean fun, with the reporters pointing out the distant reaches of the bleachers, where Joe DiMaggio or Charley Keller or some of the other Bombers had landed particularly potent and famous home runs. And the Dodgers described the mighty clouts that recently have been delivered by Camilli and Reiser and others.

There was a lot of wrangling about the merits of the two parks. Yankee stadium measures 367 feet from home plate to right field, 461 feet to centerfield and 415 feet to left field while the same corners of Ebbets field are 297, 400 and 357. But the Brooklyn park has a wall and screen 40 feet high from the rightfield foul line to the centerfield stands and the grandstand in leftfield is about 20 feet from the level of the field. The Dodgers declared these barriers would make home runs just as hard to get in their park as in the stadium, where the rightfield and leftfield walls are only four feet high.

Yanks Work Out
The Yankees also worked out yesterday but they wrapped their practice up short and snappy and with little talk. They wore their old white, home uniforms while the Dodgers wore their new blue-trimmed traveling grays, bought for the series.

Manager Joe McCarthy did not come out on the field. He sat in his little office adjacent to the dressing room and puffed thoughtfully at a cigar. He said he expected both Red Rolfe and Keller to be ready to play, but that if Rolfe for any reason was not, then Frank Crosetti and not Gerry Priddy would be stationed at third base.

Keller, the Yanks regular outfielder who hurt an ankle just after the team clinched the American league pennant, said he was all right except that he couldn't stop short when running.

McCarthy said he would announce his starting pitcher for the first game at today's final practice. It was commonly agreed that this would be the veteran Red Ruffing. Durocher said he might not name his until the day of the game, but here too there was little question that it would be Whitlow Wyatt, his drawing Georgia ace.

Meanwhile tickets for the first game at the stadium tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. (Central standard time) were the worry of a lot of people. Even the players were being rebuffered in their efforts to get a few more for their friends.

Police were posted at the stadium in preparation for early arrivals in the line that will form for 28,000 unreserved and bleacher seats going on sale the day of the game.

Frye in Sweatshirt
George Frye, who suffered a charley-horse in the Drake game, spent the afternoon jogging around the field in a sweat shirt to loosen up his leg. Tom Farmer was severely shaken up during the scrimmage and retired from the field. He was reported all right after practice, however. Ed Thomae, who has been sharing the first-string end job with Bill Parker, watched the whole session from the sidelines.

Perhaps equal to the showing 15 yards was added for unportsmanlike conduct.

Meantime Referee "Red" Friesell, whose leg was broken in the first quarter, was reported resting comfortably at Temple hospital.

Anderson Begins to Rejuvenate Reserves In Hard Scrimmage

Stauss, Staak Take First-String Jobs

Dr. Eddie Shakes Up All Three Lineups; Kennedy Misses Drill

Dr. Eddie Anderson began the process of rejuvenating his reserve material in practice yesterday, driving his second- and third-stringers through a rough one and one-half hour of scrimmage while a jumbled first team raced through an intensive signal practice.

Wholesale Shakeup
These newcomers replaced Al Coupee, who was calling signals for the third team, and Al Urban, who only rated a second-team tackle slot. The shakeup continued all down the line, with little Ben Trickey working at second-team quarterback, Al Mannino and Jim Davis at ends, Bob Knowlton teaming at tackle with Urban, Don Tuedell and Del Dickerhoff at guards and Bob Lauterbach at center.

It was the toughest scrimmage of the year that Anderson dished out to his gridders yesterday, with the second team coming through in the last half hour to show the best offensive form of any team this fall, and even giving a great demonstration of stonewall defense.

Gruelling Scrimmage
It was tough and go from start to finish, with first one team and then the other starting from the ten-yard line and attempting to march the length of the field. In that last half hour, the second-stringers scored three straight touchdowns without releasing the bell. Then, just to prove the point, the same team gave the third team the ball on its own 5-yard line, and except for one thrust by Coupee, protected its goal line for 15 consecutive plays.

"Just put in your stories that it'll be work, work, work, and more work out this week, at least until these fellows learn what this game is all about," Anderson said.

Jack Kennedy, who displayed great running form in last Saturday's game, failed to show up for

SIOUX CITY (AP)—Jack Kennedy, University of Iowa halfback, who arrived here Sunday to visit his mother, said yesterday evening that illness prevented him from returning Sunday night to Iowa City and taking part in yesterday's grid workouts.

Kennedy was reached at his home last night just before boarding a train for Iowa City.

He explained that he had been feeling "under the weather," a leg injury suffered in Saturday's game with Drake and a headache contributing to his condition.

Anything that could be snatched for a souvenir was taken. The flowers from the players' jackets were torn to bits and scattered among the crowd.

The police, apparently mistaken in their first estimates of the crowd's size and fervor, guessed the number in the throng from one to two million.

Some of the marchers were suspected as coming from other areas. Somehow, by almost a fatal mistake, a man mixed with the throng expressed the belief that the Yankees (another baseball team the Dodgers must play this week) might have a chance.

Seconds later 42 disbelievers were pried from his frame.

of the team against Drake in bringing this rough stuff on the team, was Line Coach Jim Harris' scouting report on Michigan, which was anything but promising.

"I'd rank them one-two in the conference with Minnesota this year," said Harris. "They have a sweet team, and they told me that's the best line at Michigan since Crisler has become head coach."

Wolverines Tough

60,000 Brooklyn Fans Parade for Heroes, But Almost Stop Practice

BROOKLYN (AP)—They had a typical Brooklyn parade yesterday—those beloved bums, the honor guests, almost didn't get there.

The baseball Dodgers stretched their practice in love, tomblike Yankee stadium an extra hour and squeezed across the bridge and to the front of 60,000 proud citizens for a parade in shiny automobiles and new uniforms at the last second.

Marching and dancing, the scheduled line of 12 abreast sometimes erupted into 15 or 20 but never stopped chanting "Beat the Yankees." Policemen, on or off horses, joined in and some who tried to open pathways for children got only kicks on their shins for their trouble.

One man of 60 fainted. Only the Dodgers rode. The dignitaries and notables walked. But who in Brooklyn outranks a Dodger?

Peewee Reese and Pete Reiser seemed the special objects of the crowd's affections. Dolph Camilli and Cookie Lavagetto, in the car ahead, rated almost as much attention.

The fans pressed tight against the cars and the more agile jumped upon the running boards and bumpers. They tugged at their heroes' coats and arms.

Anything that could be snatched for a souvenir was taken. The flowers from the players' jackets were torn to bits and scattered among the crowd.

The police, apparently mistaken in their first estimates of the crowd's size and fervor, guessed the number in the throng from one to two million.

Some of the marchers were suspected as coming from other areas. Somehow, by almost a fatal mistake, a man mixed with the throng expressed the belief that the Yankees (another baseball team the Dodgers must play this week) might have a chance.

Service Men to Be Admitted Free Here

Service men in uniform will be admitted free to all athletic contests at Iowa from now on, the board in control of athletics announced yesterday.

The action was made possible at a recent meeting of the Big Ten in Chicago, when it was announced that the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue had decided there would be no tax on such free admissions.

Service men need only an identification card from Athletic Director E. G. (Dad) Schroeder, but must be in uniform.

Prasse to Coach Freshman Ends

Erwin Prasse, captain and end of the 1939 wonder team "Iron Hawks," and one of the few men to win nine major letters at Iowa, will serve as assistant to Bill Hofer on the freshman team this fall, coaching the ends, the athletic board announced yesterday.

Prasse returned to school this semester to complete his work toward a degree, which he will receive in February. For the past two summers he has been playing professional baseball.

About 60 Candidates Report to Bill Hofer For Fresh Football

A squad of about 60 candidates responded to Coach Bill Hofer's first call for freshman football practice yesterday afternoon, with the first workout consisting mostly of conditioning drills.

Included in the roster were the names of several all-state players, most of whom participated in the recent all-star game in Des Moines.

From this week on, the squad will probably act the part of the team which the varsity will meet on the succeeding Saturday.

Drake Gridders Rest Up

pecial mention. "Westfall" mused Harris, "well, he's just Westfall, only better than ever. He's got more responsibility and carries the ball more, and that's bad."

So the program for the Hawks this week will be work, as Anderson said, add more work, to shake the team out of the doldrums and to prepare it for Michigan's Mighty Wolverines.

If Hitler has no designs upon the sovereignty, upon the security and upon the territory and institutions of Latin-America, why does he set up foci of infection to spread his poisonous doctrines throughout the constitutional systems and the life of our Latin-American friends and neighbors?" Meantime, a question much discussed informally at the capitol was whether the United States should send its entire munitions production for the next three or more months to Britain and Russia.

Chairman May (D-Ky) of the house military committee said he thought it would be a wise move. "If Russia goes down it will remove the last obstacle to Hitler's invasion of Britain," he told reporters.

Commander of British Navy Unit Recalls Battle of Crete

Captain Henry McCall Relates His Experiences in Fight With Nazis

NEW YORK (AP)—A lean-jawed British seadog sat in his cabin aboard the cruiser Dido and recalled that he had to steel himself with memories of German "actions" before he led his flotilla into the slaughter of 2,500 Nazi soldiers trying to land on the island of Crete from small wooden fishing boats.

He was Capt. Henry William Urquhart McCall, commander of the 5,450-ton Dido, flagship of a group of three cruisers and four destroyers ordered to keep the nazis from landing in Crete.

"This mass murder we engaged in was the most repellent thing I ever had to do," he said. "This was the sort of situation I'd always dreamed of as being ideal—to get in amongst the Hun and give him his own meat—to be able to pay the enemy back in his own coin."

"When it came to the point one had to steel oneself with memories of many of their past actions and to keep in mind that they were then intent on forcing a landing against our sorely-pressed garrison in Crete."

Pressed to tell the memories flashing through his mind before he gave the order to fire on 50 defenseless caiques (Greek fishing vessels of about 100 tons), a half dozen steamships and an Italian destroyer guarding the convoy the night of May 21 last, Capt. McCall said: "I thought of a dive bombing attack on a hospital ship a few days previously—a ship Italian aircraft had previously spared—of fishing vessels and lighthouse keepers being machine-gunned in the North sea—of helpless merchant ships being sunk in the Atlantic with no possibility of their crews being saved—of the blitz I saw on London."

This drama of the sea occurred 15 miles north of Crete after the British left Greece and were trying to hold the island stronghold without the aid of air power.

Capt. McCall's ship was on patrol when the squadron sighted the enemy convoy, flying Greek flags, trying to reach land under cover of darkness.

"We at once altered our course into the middle of them and opened fire, switching on our searchlights to pick up the targets about a mile away," he related.

"The Italian destroyer was sunk almost at once—blown up. We saw no more of her (the British never learned her name as there were no survivors). "It was then just a case of steaming through the convoy and picking up the steamers and caiques with searchlight rays. At one time the water appeared strewn with German soldiers wearing full equipment and life-belts. The air was filled with shrieks and cries for help but of course we were unable to stop. Not a man was saved."

He said best guesses were that half the convoy went down with about 2,500 men and that another 2,500 reached their Greek base with a "tale of terror that was excellent propaganda" for the British.

Not a man reached Crete by boat, he said.

After this show, the Dido transported soldiers from Crete to Egypt amid the heaviest rain of bombs in history.

To illuminate the pathway of our people give a light that is flickering and dim," Hutchins said, adding that "the universities, instead of leading us through the chaos of the modern world, mirror its confusion."

Speaking at a convocation at which the university awarded 35 honorary degrees to some of the outstanding scientists of the United States, Latin America and Europe in concluding the celebration of its 50th anniversary, Hutchins declared that institutions of higher education will have "to recapture, revitalize and reformulate for our time the truths which gave purpose and significance" to the founders of the University of Chicago.

"We are in the midst of a great moral, intellectual and spiritual crisis," he added, "to pass it successfully or to rebuild the world after it is over we shall have to get clear about those ends and ideals which are the first principles of human life and of organized society."

During the half century of the university's existence "confusion and bewilderment" have replaced "the simple faith" of John D. Rockefeller Sr., and the others who founded it, President Hutchins said.

After 50 years of progress scientists and educators must admit "that the beacons established
