LONDON (AP) — Britain was cheered last night in the confidence that the Churchill-Stalin discussions in Moscow eliminated all basis for possible Russian reapproaches over delays in opening a second front and bound the United Nations more closely together than ever before.

There was a noticeable absence in the press and elsewhere of speculation on what specific agreements were reached. On the other hand afternoon papers gave prominence to reaction and speculation from other allied countries.

An example of this was the Star's bannerhead: "U. S. says Churchill and Stalin discussed army for Caucasus and the second front."

Still, while the historic four-day conference helped raise British spirits, commentators without exception coupled their remarks with somber warnings that the next 60 days would bring the greatest crisis of the entire war.

Both the Standard and the Star observed that the mistrust between British and Russians should now be removed and added: "There is no excuse left now for agitation and pressure tactics on the subject of a second front."

The Evening News declared that "all vociferous amateur strategists who know when, where and how a second front ought to be opened should now take a prolonged holiday."

Interpreting War News—

Air Raid on Nazis Shows U.S. Bombers Ready for 2nd Front

By EDWARD E. BOMAR
(Wide World War Analyst)

The first American-planned, American-executed bombing blow against Nazi-held Europe was timed perfectly to clear up some currently expressed doubt as to whether the army's heavy bombers are fully suited to the aerial second front.

Without loss to themselves, a dozen four-engine craft raided Rouen in Nazi-held France by daylight, "hit the heart of the target," and met and mastered the latest type German fighter planes.

Their smaller bomb-carrying capacity does appear to make them less useful for mass mauling of nearby continental targets, particularly by night, than Britain's Lancasters, Halifaxes and Sterlings, just as a thoroughbred is less suited to lugging heavy loads than a draft horse.

Will Aid RAF

But the official American idea seems to be that waging war by air on Germany need not be a matter of mere slugging. The prospective role of American heavy bombers is to bring all Nazi-occupied Europe within the range of deadly round-the-clock attack, as well as to add weight to royal air force blows dealt under cover of darkness.

On the eve of the Rouen raid London read criticism that our heavy bombers were deficient in capacity, armor, armament and speed, and therefore American aircraft plants should switch to "new and improved types."

They already have made the transition. Some of the criticism may have applied to earlier versions of heavy bombers, but certainly less so to the latest types dispatched to Britain.

Pending the verdict of further actual results, pertinent performance data on the new B-17E flying fortress and B-24D models can be given without impinging on military secrecy.

Carrying Capacity Less

These planes carry on short missions only about half the eight-ton bomb load of the short Sterling and Avro Lancaster of the Royal Air Force. The Handley-Page (See INTERPRETING, page 5)

NATIVES HELP UNLOAD U. S. SUPPLIES IN PACIFIC

Here are five of eight ships—two destroyers and six large merchant vessels—which were launched in a period of less than four hours at the Todd-Bath Iron Shipbuilding corporation yards at South Portland, Me. It was the greatest single launching of World War II. Pictured are five of the six merchant vessels—left to right, Ocean Traveler, Ocean Stranger, Ocean Wayfarer, Ocean Gallant and Ocean Seaman. Arrival of an American convoy at an unnamed United States base in the southwest Pacific brought hordes of native workmen down to the docks to help unload, above, the vital war material brought from "the states." Now some of these munitions may be in use against the Japs in the Solomons.

Allied Reconnaissance Planes Simultaneously Search Pacific Front

Greatest Stress Laid On Coming Operations In the Solomon Chain

They're Turnips Without Blood--

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Congress Facing Unpleasant Task Of Levying Taxes on the Laborer

WASHINGTON—The CIO, and other professedly liberal elements, are crying out that the new tax bill "soaks the poor," meaning the union war worker. This is somewhat true.

Orthodox liberalism, as professionally conducted in this country the past twenty years, has always cried out against every tax bill on the same grounds, and successfully urged that it soak the corporations and the rich instead.

With equal political astuteness, and less success, business has generally cried "wolf" against tax bills, saying each of these would make business unprofitable, cause a breakdown in our profits system.

The wolf, gentlemen, now is here. The liberals do not want to see him, and the congressional taxmakers have become so befuddled at noticing his nose indisputably confronting them, that they have been kicking the subject of needed new war revenue around for six months or more, and are now acting as if they would like to put it all off until after elections.

What has caused the delay in the new tax bill, it is now clear, is that the house ways and means committee and the senate finance committee have discovered that the ten-year-old program of increased taxes on corporations and the rich has lifted these rates to the ceiling. There is just no more blood in those turnips.

Existing taxation, without the new increases of the pending bill, is already forcing down dividends, making even accelerated war business less profitable than normal peacetime business.

If you want any proof of this, turn over to the stock market page and read price quotations and dividends now, as compared with last year, or five years ago. A new and yet unappreciated situation has thus arisen in taxation.

Faced with the necessity of raising more war revenue now, and with maintaining colossal taxes to pay the interest on an expected debt of $200,000,000,000 or more after the war, the congressional taxmakers have found they must go deeper into the normal business profits in the new bill. Confiscation of excess war profits will not furnish enough revenue.

The house committee had to dare to tax more from those reduced dividends you see on the market page today.

The basis of our capitalistic democracy, the one we are fighting for, is profits. A profits system cannot be run successfully without them.

If this were a temporary matter of sliding through a war period without them, it might possibly be done. But as the government is faced with the necessity of continuing this same level of taxes after the war, there can be no doubt that our national future, as well as our current war-production effort, is wrapped up in this tax question.

Everyone knows there is a point at which taxation becomes nationally suicidal, and everyone (liberal and business man) can agree where that point is—the point at which business production ceases to be profitable.

When that point is passed, labor can get no wage increases, the opportunity for work must shrink and the system of production bends and breaks.

The senate committee hearings have shown that point was not only reached but passed in the house bill in many corporate instances. Business men have come to the senate, with their books, for the first time in tax bill history.

Certain examples were recently shown in this column, to which one more recent illustration may be added. One of the last to testify was the Ecusta Paper corporation of Pisgah Forest, N. C.

Its earnings statement showed the house bill would force it to double the price of its product (cigarette paper) next year in order to break even—and if the fiscal year provision of the house bill is maintained, it would have to quadruple its price to meet taxes for the final quarter.

Its profits, before taxes, would be $5,943,738 for this year under the house bill, of which the state and federal governments would take all but $729,711.43, leaving an insufficient amount to meet its annual debt of $1,175,000.

Many of these dangerous defects in the house bill will be eliminated by the senate committee. The withholding tax no doubt will be revised. Credits for debt and interest will be adopted. Some features of the Rumf plan to pay as you go (not all or much of it) will be written into the bill.

A deferred maintenance credit will be allowed for industries like the railroads, burning up their machines faster in war activities than the depreciation allowances recognize. Inventory adjustments may be permitted.

Possibly even the 45 per cent normal or 90 per cent excess profits tax may be shaved slightly (5 or 10 per cent).

The only place, then, where the government can get more money, is from the union worker, the low salaried man, the "poor," if you will.

Congress and its statesmen and politicians, will have to face the bitterly unwelcome and unpopular new facts on taxation—facts which it can already see, but which its prostration on the present bill, shows it is not eager to meet.

A Political Necessity—

There are some 10 million persons who are eliminated from our national elections by the poll-tax. They are 10 million persons who have no voice what-so-ever in the running of our government. The absence of their voting power makes our elections very much less public opinion than they ought to be.

When we accepted the Australian ballot and incorporated it into our election set up we accepted the ballot alone overlooking some other good angles, among which was the Australian poll-tax, or rather, poll-fine. This difference in set up makes a complete change in the election picture. The Australians have nearly 98 per cent of their eligible voters at the polls for every election.

Abolition of the poll-tax should be a wartime MUST. During these days when the lives of all of us are so vitally affected by the decisions of our government we should strive for a complete voice of the people. Every citizen of the country should be given the opportunity to voice his opinion through national elections.

The Australians believe that it is not only the citizen's privilege to vote but also the citizen's duty. They back the idea that a true democratic form of government must be based on public opinion, and that in order to obtain a true picture of public opinion they must have as nearly a complete vote as possible. Therefore, they access a fine of approximately $10 on all individuals who fail to go to the polls and vote on election days. Perhaps the manner of getting the public to the polls is undemocratic, but surely the decisions reached in the elections are more truly democratic than any decisions our elections bring out.

The poll-tax, which keeps a large number of our eligible voters from the polls, is injurious to our democratic form of government and ought to be abolished. On the other hand, the poll-fine would do much to aid our democracy and could well be incorporated into our election system.

For Men Only—

ATTENTION MEN! GATHER AROUND! The world hasn't gone to pot entirely. In this dear country of ours there is still one job that has not been taken over by the feminine population, nor is it likely to be. As long as this last, lone frontier of the greatness of man remains in existence there will be one place where a man can be called a man.

The shortage of man power, brought on by the war, caused a mass movement of women into all jobs and, much as we hated it, we had to admit that they were not only a vital necessity to our production program but in most instances were very capable of handling the work. Yet, having the weaker sex move in on the jobs of the he-men was a blow to our masculine pride—sort-of took all the glory out of being the "bread-winner" when the girls began to bring home the bacon.

So it is with a great deal of pleasure that we spread the good news—they haven't taken over completely.

The "Men" sign still hangs on the entrances to all Iowa fire departments, according to our state fire marshal, and there isn't much likelihood it will be moved during the war despite the inroads women have made in other fields ordinarily reserved for men.

Fighting fire is a tough job that requires husky men skilled in their work and the problem of finding women qualified for such work and training them is so great that such a proposal would be impractical—very heartbreaking words, aren't they?

We bow to the women for what they have done, but inwardly and outwardly—yes quite outwardly—we are thankful that we are to be spared ever hearing "Fireman, fireman, save my husband and child."

Florence Eden Marries Kenneth F. Millsap In Ceremony at the First Methodist Church

Rev. Daniel E. Kerr
Presides Over Double
Ring Wedding Sunday

In a double ring ceremony at the First Methodist church Sunday, Florence Eden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Eden, route 5, and Kenneth F. Millsap, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Millsap of Bloomfield, repeated their nuptial vows.

The wedding service was read by the Rev. Daniel E. Kerr before an altar decorated with white gladioli and asters. Mrs. Eugene W. Scheldrup, organist, and Patricia Miller, vocalist, furnished music for the ceremony.

Bridal Gown

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin, styled on princess lines with a full skirt and long train. From the yoke of lace and marquise, long sleeves extended into points at the wrists. Her floor-length veil of lace and tulle fell from a coronet of rhinestones and seed pearls. She carried an arm bouquet of white gladioli.

Attending the bride was Esther Keir dressed in a pink chiffon gown and a tiara of pink gladioli. Juanita Laven Eden carried the rings in a white aster and Betty Catherine Eden served as a flower girl. Both are sisters of the bride.

Robert Eden, brother of the bride, attended Mr. Millsap as best man. Ushering were Cadet Charles Eden and Cadet Carl Lippincott.

Mother's Wear Green

The bride's mother was dressed in hunter green with matching accessories. Mrs. Millsap also wore green. Both had corsages of gardenias.

Mrs. Millsap, a graduate of Lone Tree high school, is employed at the Hauser Jewelry store.

Mr. Millsap, a graduate of Bloomfield high school and junior college and the University of Iowa, is a graduate student in political science at the university.

The couple will make their home at 702 Iowa.

The plaintiff and defendant were married in Jan., 1938, and separated last April. There are no children.

Attorney for the plaintiff is D. C. Nolan.

Moose Women Launch Home Survey Today

To Determine Needs For Care of Children In Workers' Homes

Members of Women of the Moose will begin a neighborhood-to-neighborhood survey of Iowa City today to determine how many mothers or fathers are in need of a means to care for their children while they are engaged in defense or other kinds of work.

Announcement that the survey would get underway today was made by Mrs. J. D. Boyd, chairman of the research committee of the Johnson county coordinating council, which is directing the project.

After the survey has been completed, which is expected to be the end of this week, members of the organization will meet to discuss their findings. If a need exists for some means to care for these children, an agency or agencies will be established in Iowa City patterned after those which have been organized in other communities throughout the nation.

The Women of the Moose are conducting the survey under the supervision of three committees, according to Mrs. Walter E. Riley, senior regent of the group. Chairmen of the committees are Mrs. Helen Bontrager, social service; Mrs. Libbie Novy, homemaking, and Mrs. Clara Hoffman, child care and training.

Mrs. Boyd pointed out that an entire series of sessions of the child development and parent education conference held in Iowa City recently was devoted to the problem of "Young Children in Wartime."

At this gathering, Mrs. H. K. Painter of Minneapolis, Minn., where Dean Kuever is attending a pharmacy convention.

Postmaster General Condemns Unpatriotic 'Stoppages of Work'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Referring to "selfish stoppages of work," confusions, interruptions and insufficiencies in the war effort, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker called on Americans last night to identify those persons responsible "by their fruits rather than their words."

In his address prepared for the sixteenth annual convention dinner of the supreme council of Knights of Columbus, Walker lashed out at what he called "the utterly unpatriotic ambitions of persons or groups, who with mincing words about national interests, foster their own designs while our people engage in a death struggle with foreign enemies."

"It is not democracy," he said, "that causes the confusions and stoppages which slow the onward rush of our overwhelming triumph. Such things are caused by the contemptible spirit of personal and group dictatorships. And you know who these persons are: You read the news of the day. Watch their actions and disregard their wordy explanations."

Police also reported that Dean Carl E. Seashore, 815 N. Linn, and Leland K. Hurd, 1024 E. Market, were fined $1 and costs yesterday for minor traffic violations.

Next day, he tackled the hedge—ran into a hornet's nest. Disgusted, he went horseback riding . . . and fell off.

Police Court Fines

L. Orr, T. Trosper

L. K. Orr, route 7, Iowa City, was fined $5 and costs in police court yesterday for speeding, and Offie Trosper, Negro, 916 Maiden Lane, was fined $5 for disturbing the peace.

Police also reported that Dean Carl E. Seashore, 815 N. Linn, and Leland K. Hurd, 1024 E. Market, were fined $1 and costs yesterday for minor traffic violations.

The fish and game office reported yesterday that cannery workers are paying $375 a ton for the prized white-meat fish, and that one San Diego fisherman had received $600 for a day's catch. Another pocketed $2,700 for a week's work.

The "freeze" will remain in force until October 31 by which time it is expected army and navy requirements will have been filled. Sales of other makes and models are not affected by the order and may continue under rationing regulations as before.

Army and navy requirements for four-door models were estimated at about 28,000.

* One of Baseball's
★ Immortals — Bobby
★ Lowe, Second Base

NEW YORK—You can start a mild argument almost any time by mentioning that Joe Gordon is a better second baseman than Bobby Doerr, or vice versa, and somewhere in the argument the names of Nap Lajoie and Eddie Collins and Charley Gehringer will be dragged in somehow. Never a word about Robert L. "Bobby" Lowe.

That is not too surprising, as Bobby Lowe was playing second base when most of the current fans were playing with rattles. He was just a name to us, too, until H. H. Scott of Newark, Ohio, suggested hopefully that Lowe deserves a spot in the hall of fame. Mr. Scott sent along a record of some of Lowe's feats, with the comment that Lowe's deportment was in keeping with his excellence on the field, and that in his 18-year career in the National and American leagues he never once was fined or thumbed out of a game.

Pulled Out in 1907

Lowe's long career carried through that gaudy era, the gay 90's, and overlapped the early 1900's. He closed his career in 1907 as utility man with the pennant winning Detroit Tigers, and that town must have made quite a hit with him as he still lives there.

That was just one of a half dozen pennant winning clubs, however. He was with the Boston National league club when it topped the field in 1891-92-93-97 and 98, and it was with the Braves that he turned in his more notable feats.

The feats are the more notable because they were turned in at a time the ball had more turtle in it than rabbit, and a home run really was something.

Here are a few of Lowe's performances as listed by Mr. Scott:

Hit four home runs and a single in one game for a total of 17 bases, with two of the home runs in one inning.

Batted over .300 from 1893 to 1897 inclusive, with the dead ball.

Made six hits in six at bats for a total of 10 bases.

Made six runs in one game, a feat shared by only five other players.

Made 210 hits and scored 156 runs in 1898.

Led all shortstops in batting and fielding in 1891, and all second basemen in the same departments in 1900.

Played 34 consecutive games without an error, accepting 165 chances.

Topped in hitting and fielding such contemporary second basemen as Bid McPhee, Kid Gleason, Fred Dunlap, Fred Pfeiffer, Tom Daly, Joe Quinn, Dick Padden, Louis Biebauer, Harry Richardson, Johnny Evers, Larry Doyle, Dutch Shaffer, Billy Colbert, Dan Murphy and Yank Robinson. Topped Miller, Huggins, Claude Ritchey, Hobie Ferris, Geo. Cutshaw, Billy Hallman and J. Williams in hitting.

With Lajoie, Collins and McPhee he played most of his years at second base.

"Quite a Gent"

It is apparent that Lowe was quite a gent in his day, and Mr. Scott says that many sports writers and other baseball followers have rated Lowe, Fred Tenney, Herman Long and Jimmy Collins of the old Braves, the greatest in-field all time for hitting, fielding and brains.

John McGraw also was quoted as saying shortly before his death that Lowe and Long made up the greatest second-base, double-play combination, which was quite a compliment coming from McGraw, as his Baltimore Orioles were bitter rivals of Boston.

So the next time you hear anyone arguing the respective merits of Joe Gordon and Bobby Doerr, just toss in Bobby Lowe as an antidote. He's backed by an 18-year record.

Marty Brill, Loyola Coach, to Be Inducted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marty Brill, former Notre Dame football star now coach at Loyola university here, said yesterday he had been notified by his draft board to report for induction August 28.

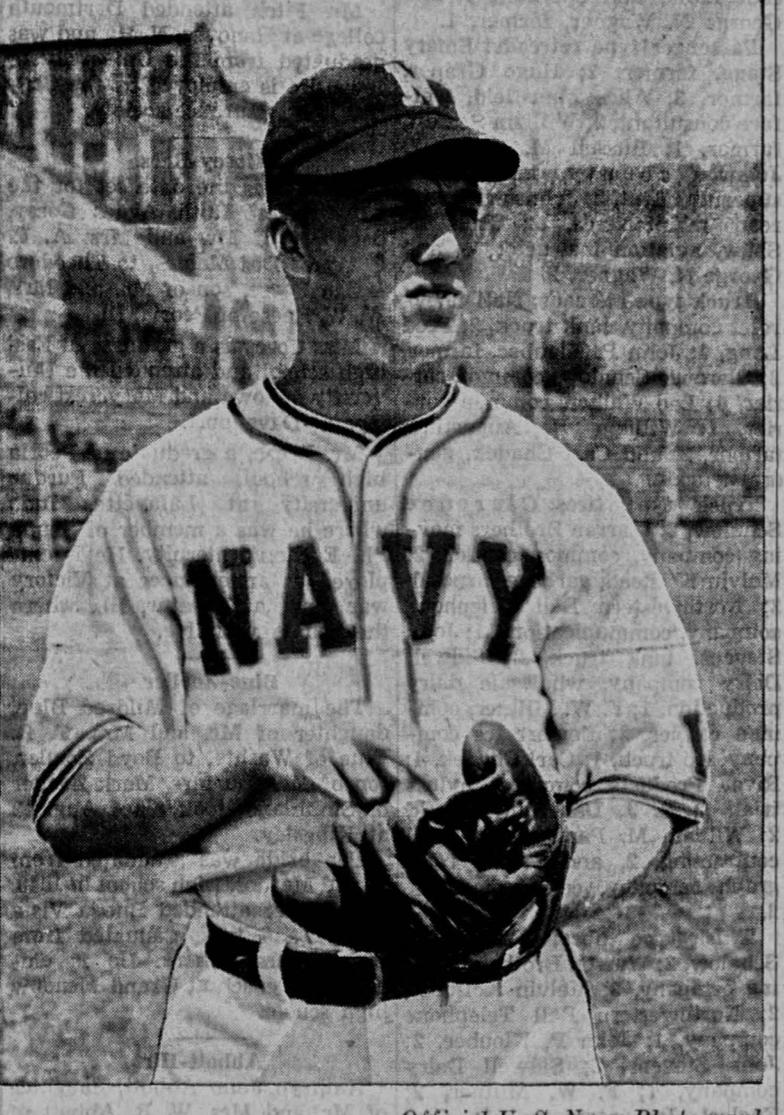

Brill, 36, is married and has a three-months-old daughter.

Brill, a Philadelphian, played at the University of Pennsylvania before going to Notre Dame and winning fame—climaxing his playing career with the brilliant 1930 team that ended the late Knute Rockne's last season of coaching with an unbeaten record.

After graduation, he was assistant to Lou Little as coach at Columbia. He spent eight years at La Salle college, Philadelphia, before coming here in 1940 to succeed Mike Pecarovich.

Halifax is credited with a five-ton maximum.

Able to speed better than 300 miles an hour, they probably are faster than their British counterparts, and range hundreds of miles farther.

The two American heavyweights are armed with .50 caliber machine guns instead of the British .303 caliber weapons, fired from power-driven turrets covering all angles of approach, and thus hit harder.

Can Take It

Their ability to take punishment has been dramatized repeatedly since Pearl Harbor, particularly in the Pacific, where flying fortresses have fought off swarms of Japanese fighters and reached their bases with two engines dead and wings riddled. In Europe several were lost months ago in the experimental daylight bombing of Nazi warships in French harbors, but were described as early types and there appear to have been unusual and mitigating circumstances.

Although northern Europe's uncertain weather limits the field of American perfected precision daylight bombing from high altitudes, visibility improves inland on the continent.

Designed primarily to keep any foe far from United States shore, to blast ships and other specific targets from high altitudes with the aid of a perfected bombsite, these American planes can range easily more than 1,200 miles from their bases.

Thus as more go into action, no part of axis-held Europe, from Norway's north cape to Rumania and Italy, can expect to be free from attack.

Brazil severed relations with the axis last January, and since has arrested hundreds of axis spies.

The president promised that persons who had given information on the sailing of the latest ships lost would be put at hard labor on roads in the interior. He ended by urging the crowd to return home with hope and tranquillity.

But the temper to Brazilians was indicated by a crowd of 500 that gathered before the United States Embassy, cheering President Roosevelt, Ambassador Jefferson Caffery and the United States and shouting for united action by the American nations against the axis.

Another crowd converging on the municipal theater was told by Police Chief Alcides Goncalves Etchegoyen that the government was taking measures in response to the sinkings.

Yet another took Brazilian flags from in front of two pro-axis newspapers and marched to the press. The "spender"

In a busy mart like New York it is commonplace to go home with a few "queer" nickels in your pocket. The funny thing is that millions of people take them and pass them along without ever realizing they have been transmitting counterfeit money.

5th Month of Axis Cooperation Promises Troubles for Laval

Germans Want More Workers and Pierre Has Rivals at Home

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS
BERN, Switzerland, (Wide World)—Pierre Laval starts his fifth month as pilot of the French government at Vichy today with his energies devoted to pouring more French labor into Germany, and to consolidating his won political power at home.

Difficulties beset him in both his major tasks.

On the one hand, he has not produced nearly as many workers as the Germans desire.

Competition for Laval

On the other, two men with whom he once collaborated closely, Marcel Deat and Jacques Doriot, are conferring on the formation of a "popular" party. Doriot hopes to assume leadership of the new group and has often expressed his willingness to become premier. He proposes a degree of collaboration with Germany which he implies will surpass that of Laval.

The difficulties of combating sabotage and subversive resistance, especially in the occupied area of France, and problems of providing sufficient food for the country are other political factors confronting Laval.

Nevertheless Laval—during these hot days in Vichy appearing always in white, his white tie contrasting sharply with his tanned face—has made progress in the eyes of the axis.

He has started workers on the way to Germany, and has promised more. He has cleared away any doubt which may have existed when he took office with the flat declaration, "I salute the German victory," and he has maintained this attitude this far without bringing about a break in relations with the United States.

Another aspect of Laval is suggested by the Catholic newspaper Courrier de Geneve, which observed that for two years "France has followed Marshal Petain as a flag. Laval has affirmed an dthe Marshal confirmed that perfect solidarity exists between the chief of state and the chief of government." This explains the almost totalitarian authority with which Laval operates.

Berlin suggested, when Laval first took office, that his first task should be in the economic field, particularly the stimulation of factory production. This Laval has undertaken.

He has been energetic in recruiting workers for Germany, stimulating public interest in exchanging laborers for war prisoners in accordance with a plan offered by the Germans. Laval has gone beyond recruiting of purely technical workers for the German armament industries to include, as Press Chief Jean Luchaire announced, "All superfluous" employees of newspapers and publishing plants to assure release of war prisoners who are needed urgently in France for agricultural work.

One big "if" persists for Laval. The reaction of the French population in the event of British military action on the continent.

But Laval is aware of his responsibility toward the Germans in this respect. Through subordinates he has warned that "the whole country would be held accountable for imprudent actions of individuals." He is taking steps to see that his program of collaboration isn't spoiled by French support of a second front.

tanks "fulfilled their order to halt the enemy by all means."

(The Berlin communiqué stressed "hard defensive battles" against great Russian pressure in the Vyazma and Rzhev salients on the Moscow front, and said 1,068 Russian armored vehicles had been destroyed in this fighting since July 30).

The Russian communiqué covered the red army's offensive northwest and southwest of Moscow in a single paragraph which said: "On the northwestern front engagements of local importance took place. Soviet troops launched several attacks and inflicted considerable losses on the Germans in manpower and material."

However, Moscow radio broadcasts later in the day said the Russians had started heavy new attacks on the Leningrad front, advancing under an artillery barrage and pressing the Germans back near a railway line.

Red Star, the army newspaper, reported Timoshenko's counter-thrust southwest of Stalingrad, where the Germans have driven beyond Kotelnikovsk, 95 miles from the Volga city named for Russia's premier. The newspaper said the repulse of the Germans there improved the Russian defense stand and destroyed hurriedly prepared German positions.

The tempo of the battle was increasing at Voronezh, more than 250 miles northwest of the Don bend fight. Izvestia said Rumanian and Hungarian troops had been hurled into a fierce attempt to regain positions on the west Don bank which the red army recently regained.

Navy Officials Arrive Here for Inspection Of Pre-Flight School

Commanding officers and other officials from five midwest navy aviation training centers arrived at the University of Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school yesterday for a tour of inspection.

The cadets who graduate from the Iowa base will enter one of these schools for their actual flight training.

The second regimental review in a week, involving all of the 1,285 cadets at the Pre-Flight school, will be staged this morning on the Iowa athletic field in their honor.

The Navy Pre-Flight school band will play at the review and an exhibition of precision marching will be given by a crack platoon of cadets.

The officers visiting the station are: Lieut. Comdr. George A. T. Washburn, commanding officer and Lieut. Irving E. Sommermeyer, superintendent of flight training NRAT at Glenview, Ill.; Lieut. Comdr. James W. Williams Jr., commanding officer at Norman, Okla.; Lieut. Charles W. Mitchell Jr. of Norman, Okla.; Lieut. John H. Gregg; Lieut. Comdr. Philip T. Stonemintz, commanding officer, Naval Reserve Aviation base, Peru, Ind.; Comdr. Rufus C. Young, commanding officer and Lieut. Bruce Caldwell, welfare and athletic officer, Naval Reserve Aviation base, Grosse Ile, Mich.; Major Charles E. Adams, USMCRC commanding officer, Marine detachment, Grosse Ile, Mich.; Lieut. Clarence A. Muhl, officer in charge at Lambert Field, St. Louis.

Draft Official Warns Men With Dependents To Be Called Soon

BOSTON (AP)—A spokesman for Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey's national selective service board told the army and navy legion of valor reunion yesterday that a general draft of married men under 46 years of age with dependents will come "in the not too distant future."

In an address before the 52nd annual reunion, Ted Luther, public relations director for the board, said that the nation's reservoir of 1-A men "was practically exhausted," and that it now would be necessary to obtain soldiers from 1-B and 3-A classes.

The number of dependents each man had "might influence" the order in which he would be called, Luther added.

briefly and sources here said they believed his conferences with Joseph Stalin in the Kremlin were concerned, in part, with the desert warfare and the axis menace to Suez.

There have been reports recently that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has been feverishly moving up men and supplies in an effort to counteract the growing British and American supplies.

The war office made public two other vital changes in leadership in the middle east: Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery, former commander of the south-eastern command in Britain, succeeds to the field command formerly held by Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie as head of the eighth army in Egypt; and Maj. Gen. Herbert Lumsden becomes commander of the 30th corps, succeeding Lieut. Gen. W. H. E. (Strafer) Gott, recently killed in the desert.

The war office did not mention a new assignment for Auchinleck, who was commander when the big axis offensive forced the allied armies out of Libya and for a time menaced Alexandria. Auchinleck had commanded in the middle east since July 2, 1941, when he succeeded Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, who was assigned to India. Last June 25 after the axis seized Tobruk and continued to advance he personally took over from General Ritchie.

Recalling Alexander's fondness for fierce attacks, many sources here believed there would shortly be extraordinary action on the western desert.

HORSE CARTS BRING NAZI SUPPLIES TO SEVASTOPOL

Freeing trucks for duty on the active battle fronts, the Germans are employing horse-drawn carts to get their supplies into the battered seaport city of Sevastopol, which the Germans captured after subjecting it to a three-month aerial and artillery bombardment.

AIR FORCE

Flying Fortress attack by daylight on Rouen, France, Tuesday, would be followed by steadily mounting and closely coordinated American-British aerial effort.

While the "center ring" in this deadly air circus is this island, the RAF and U. S. army air force also are chopping away at the axis in the middle east. There American headquarters find an oasis each week end when a battalion of girls moves around the dance floor with medium bombers joining the big four-motored Liberators in attacking Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces while United States fighter pilots were serving with RAF desert squadrons.

Dispatches from Cairo last night reported new American army contingents, including aviation ground staffs and other units, being debarked in the middle east.

Initial bomber and fighter attacks in Africa had been held back until sufficient ground forces and reserves were on hand.

American air officers said the expansion of the United States airforce now will be exceedingly rapid.

British informants have expressed belief that the German air force gradually is being forced to withdraw forces from Russia as the RAF blows become more intense, and American bombers increase their activity.

These experts look for a 100 per cent air war game over this island and the continent between the RAF-American forces and the Germans as soon as winter closes down on the Russian front.
