Senate Anti-Inflation Bill Would Set Prices At August 15th Level

Both Houses Hear Measures to Meet F.D.R.'s Deadline

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Divergent measures for dealing with inflation, which may require extensive efforts to reconcile for final enactment, were introduced in the senate and house yesterday in the face of the Oct. 1 deadline set by President Roosevelt.

The senate bill is a broad resolution authorizing and directing the President to stabilize prices, wages and salaries and other factors in the cost of living at the levels of Aug. 15 "so far as practicable" but stipulating that farm prices should not be fixed below parity or the highest market price between Jan. 1 and Sept. 15, whichever was higher.

The house bill, on which farm bloc members of both branches were consulted, would authorize and direct the President to stabilize "maximum salaries and industrial wages" so as to "maintain a fair and equitable relation" between them and crop prices and would authorize (but not direct) the setting of price ceilings on crops at parity or the highest price so far commanded in 1942, whichever was higher.

The house bill also would put a floor under farm prices at parity from the present time until three years after the war by requiring the Secretary of Agriculture to make crop loans and purchases for this purpose. This floor, a feature not in the senate bill, would apply to non-base commodities on which production was encouraged for war needs and to basic commodities "regardless of the purposes for which such commodities are produced or used."

Moreover, the house bill, apparently leaving farm wage rates free of control, stipulated that farm labor costs be taken into account in the determining parity prices, something Chairman Steagall (D-Ala.) of the banking committee said was not done at present. It directed that parity prices be determined so as to include all costs of production, including the cost of labor, with all labor included and the wage rates for hired farm labor.

Acceptable Chairman Wagner (D-NY) of the senate banking committee and Senator Brown (D-Mich.), who sponsored the senate resolution, said the President was familiar with it and indicated it was acceptable to him.

Stegall, when asked whether Mr. Roosevelt approved of the crop price "floor" at 100 per cent of parity, recalled that the President "favors a floor for farm prices but he has not suggested a figure."

The senate banking committee plans to start hearings on its bill today and the house committee will meet tomorrow to consider procedure. The chairman of both committees hoped to report the bills to the floor by the end of this week and have them considered in the respective chamber next week.

The house bill would merely amend the original price control act (and the commodity credit corporation's authority for the crop price floor.) Its terms would be carried out presumably by price administrator Leon Henderson, at directives from the president, without the present restriction that farm price ceiling may not be fixed at less than 110 per cent of parity.

Russians Hurl All Resources Against Nazis

Admit New Caucasus Withdrawals in Face Of German Onslaught

By FRED VANDERSCHMIDT Associated Press War Editor Fighting through their 20th day of assault with an ominous lack of fighter aircraft, the Russians were draining their last resources last night to save Stalingrad. But by their bold offensive action elsewhere, red army and air force alike gave proof that the loss of Stalin's city will mean no collapse of Russia's furious resistance to Germany.

In the unending north Atlantic battle of ships, there were two official reports of U-boat action versus convoy passage, without any immediate connecting link. The Canadian government reported the loss of four merchantmen and an escorting Canadian patrol vessel from a convoy somewhere off the Dominion east coast.

Up Claims The Germans, who first reported attacking a north Atlantic convoy last week, upped their claims to 19 merchantmen, two destroyers and a corvette sunk, and chanted their usual formula: "Only small scattered remnants of the convoy were able to continue the journey."

At midnight (Russian time) the red armies at Stalingrad were reported officially to have repulsed two additional attacks from the southwest of the city, the sector which has been hardest pressed in the last few days.

However, the communique issued at that time acknowledged a German tank advance in the Terek valley of the deep Caucasus, and said the Russians fell back in one sector on the rugged approaches to the Grozny oil fields.

Prior to issuance of the mid-night communique, the Russians' story of the 20th day of Stalingrad storm was one of unyielding resistance on north and west approaches to the city and the slowing up of German penetration from the south.

Merless Attacks But the Russians, exposed to merciless and constant dive bombing and strafing on their high plateau before the Volga, were admittedly limited in anti-airial defense to AA guns and rifles. The Germans, who say they are already inside the southern limits of Stalingrad proper, felt able to claim possession of hills dominating the (See INTERNATIONAL, page 6)

Henderson The senate bill also would probably be administered finally by Henderson but the president would be specifically empowered to take broad action in the war against inflation by means of executive orders and determinations

Farmer Found Dead Of Shotgun Wound Near West Branch

Missing Wife Sought By Police; Wound 'Not Self-Inflicted'

Henry Madsen, 34, was found dead of a shotgun wound about 9 o'clock yesterday morning in his farm home, five miles northeast of West Branch, and police are searching for his missing wife, according to William B. Anderson, mayor of West Branch and member of the coroner's jury assigned to the case.

Madsen was shot in the neck and "died of wounds which were not self-inflicted," Anderson stated. The jury will meet in West Branch this morning at 10 o'clock to deliver an official decision.

Drives to Farm The body was discovered by the father and brother of the deceased, N. P. Madsen and Howard Madsen. When the elder Madsen failed to reach anyone there by telephone, he drove to his son's farm and found the morning work undone.

According to Anderson, Howard Madsen was then summoned and the two of them discovered the body in an upstairs bedroom. They hurried to Anderson's office in West Branch and Anderson then contacted local police officials.

Efforts were still being made last night to apprehend Mrs. Madsen, who left the farm yesterday morning in the family automobile with her two sons.

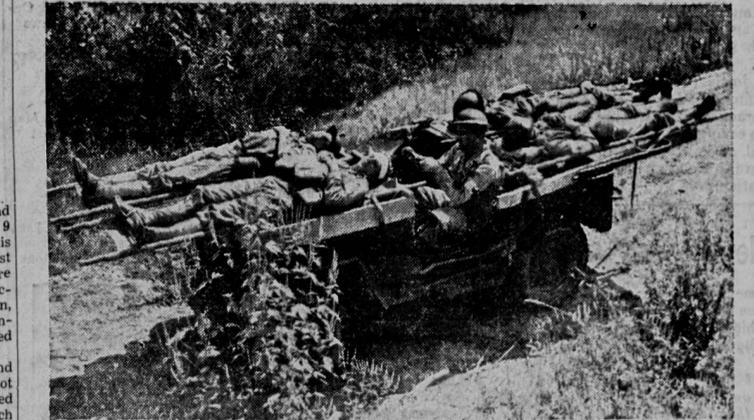

Car Found Anderson asserted that Mrs. Madsen was not very familiar with driving and that the car was found abandoned along the roadside about two and a half miles south of the farm. Neighbors found the two boys later in the morning.

After the car broke down, Mrs. Madsen instructed her two sons to wait for her in a nearby field while she went ahead for help.

Madsen's father and brother were forced to break into the house through a basement window since all doors and windows were locked. No firearms were found.

Other members of the coroner's jury are A. F. Anderson of West Branch and Henry Negus of Iowa City. State bureau of investigation officials are also working on the investigation.

ANOTHER USE FOUND FOR ARMY'S JEEP CAR

One of the outstanding machines of this war is the army jeep car. Its uses are varied and many. The U. S. army medical corps' field service school at Carlisle, Pa., uses the jeep as a stretcher carrier for a number of casualties. The photo shows how it is done. It takes only a few minutes for the conversion. The smaller car can get in and out of places not suited for a large ambulance.

Council Votes Necessary Funds To Clear Ralston Creek Channel

British Push Toward Madagascar Capital

Laval Receives U. S. Official to Discuss New Island Invasion

LONDON, (AP)—British columns progressing steadily into Madagascar were reported last night to have accomplished more than half of their march and to have advanced to within 100 miles of Tananarive, inland capital of the big French island.

Light Opposition Thus far opposition along the roads converging upon the capital had been light and confined more to wrecking bridges than to armed resistance, but on the 4,000-foot plateau around Tananarive, the French were expected to put up whatever real fight they may intend.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, (AP)—Chief of government Laval received the United States charge d'affaires, S. Pinkney Tuck, yesterday for the second time in three days to discuss the new British drive in Madagascar.

It was believed Tuck handed him the state department's answer to representations which Laval was understood to have made Saturday over the Madagascar campaign.

A French communique, meanwhile, attributed the fall of Metanana to the arrival of new British equipment at the battle scene.

Crews to Start Cleaning Creek Bottom Today

The city council last night answered the pleas of the residents of southeast Iowa City and voted to spend all emergency funds necessary to clear the channel of Ralston creek.

Acting on a petition presented by the people of the city whose homes were damaged when Ralston creek overflowed its banks last week, the council resolved that work on the waterway should begin immediately.

Start Today According to City Engineer Walter Buchele, crews will start cleaning the creek bed today, and the work should be completed in about three months.

Approximately 75 citizens from the southeast sector were present at the meeting. They were represented by three spokesmen, Atty. Clair Hamilton, Atty. Pauline Kelly and F. S. Witzigman of the United States department of engineering.

The petitioners made it clear that they did not expect the city to make permanent repairs at this time, but that they did want the flowing capacity of the stream increased as soon as possible.

Five Hindrances The formal petition listed five hindrances to the carrying off of surface water which accumulates in Ralston creek from ordinary rains and freshets. They are: (1) Weeds, willows and brush have been permitted to grow in the channel of the creek. (2) The channel has been permitted to become blocked and filled in many places with brush and rubbish. (3) The points have been permitted to form jetties into the creek hampering the free flow of the water. (4) The bridges have been permitted to become blocked in such a way that the free passage of the water is obstructed. (5) A few of the bridges have such small tubes or openings that the free passage of the water is impossible.

RAF Bombers Attack Bremen by Hundreds

Berlin Radio Outdoes Russians Own Report Of Extensive Raids

LONDON, (AP)—The two front air war against Germany and her junior partners achieved its broadest scope thus far when hundreds of RAF bombers assaulted Bremen and other targets in northwestern Germany Sunday night and uncounted Russian bombers fanned wide over eastern Germany, Rumania and Bulgaria.

The Russians specified only the Rumanian oil-producing center, Ploesti, the Rumanian capital, Bucharest, and Koeningberg, East Prussia, as their targets, but axis reports credited even a broader sweep to the red air force.

Left In Flames The Russians said they left Ploesti installations and Bucharest in flames. The British raid on Bremen, Germany's second largest port and an important U-boat hatchery, was compared in unofficial comment to last Thursday's assault by several hundred bombers on Duesseldorf. It was the RAF's 100th call on the big maritime center up the Weser from the North sea.

Strong Force The official report indicated the weight of the attack on Bremen and northwestern Germany by describing the attackers as "a very strong force" and acknowledging loss of 19 bombers.

A thumping finale to the RAF's night operations was provided by bombers which streaked singly across northwestern Germany at night to smash at German factories, transport and personnel.

800 Executed The Germans themselves contributed to the accounts of trouble, reporting revolt in Bulgarian Macedonia and the execution of 800 persons, described as "bandits", captured in Bosnia, mountainous western area of occupied Yugoslavia.

Interpreting The War News Stalingrad Pivotal Point for German Winter Defense Line

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON Wide World War Analyst

Reports that Hitler has designated a trio of his top-flight generals to fashion and equip a winter line for his troops in Russia from the lower Volga to the Baltic sound highly credible.

They tend to explain, also, why he is lavishing his resources in manpower and material, regardless of losses, to take Stalingrad. Even though the city's strategic value as a base for future nazi offensive action would be strictly limited, the bombed and shell battered ruins of Stalingrad could be invaluable as a pivot of a defensive winter line.

Winter Shelters They could be used to improvise winter shelters for powerful forces. And weather-proof shelters for many thousands of men at the apex of the nazi Don-Volga salient must be available if German 1942 gains are not to be risked when winter comes. Caught by as severe a winter as the last in the open steppes of the Don bend and below it, the nazis might be forced to abandon much of the salient so freely watered by German blood to fall back—just as they abandoned wide segments of hard-won territory last year about Moscow.

Bitter Conditions There is no prospect of good shelter for nazi invaders anywhere in the Don bend. Winter conditions there and along the whole length of the Volga are bitter even in relatively mild years. Except for Stalingrad, the Donets basin has the only populous Russian town and cities to provide housing in winter on the scale German forces must have.

The Russian successive stands on the Don and now on the Volga have balked his hopes of a decisive victory that would permit him to turn westward against England or center his winter campaign on Egypt.

The German sweep to the Volga at Stalingrad has left the nazis holding a dangerous salient. They have by-passed Russian-held bridge-heads south of the Don far in the rear.

New 'Victory Levy' Taxes Low Incomes

WASHINGTON, (AP)—A gigantic new revenue bill geared to increase treasury collections to more than $25,500,000,000 annually from corporations and 43,000,000 individual taxpayers won approval last night of the senate finance committee.

In addition to regular individual income levies and surtaxes the measure contains a 5 per cent "victory levy" on individual earnings over $624 yearly.

Believe Enemy Craft Dropped Incendiaries

Find Jap Markings On Bomb Fragments After Forest Fire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Evidence that a Japanese seaplane, possibly operating from a submarine, may have attempted to set southern Oregon forests afire in the first air bombing of continental United States was reported by the western defense command yesterday.

A communique issued by Lieutenant General John L. Dewitt, western defense commander, said that: A small seaplane was observed over the area of Mount Emily nine miles northeast of Brookings, Ore., September 9.

Sub Bombed A submarine was later sighted and bombed about 30 miles off the same shore by an army patrol plane, with unobserved results.

A forest fire was started near Mount Emily and the markings on what appeared to be fragments of an incendiary bomb were Japanese.

Forest patrols, which extinguished the blaze, discovered a foot-deep crater, the communique added, and about 40 pounds of metal fragments and small pellets. The fragments bore Japanese ideographs.

Apparently the Japanese, if they made the attack, selected one of the most heavily wooded sections of the coast, frequently threatened by forest fires.

A few years ago a fire in the same general area swept out of control and virtually wiped out the Oregon coast town of Bandon.

Japanese submarines have twice shelled the Pacific coast—at Goleta in southern California February 23 and near Seaside, Ore., June 22, but this was the first reported attack from the air.

The Goleta shelling caused slight damage to oil well installations. The Seaside shells buried harmlessly in a beach.

S. bases in the Pacific with regularity. This is a U. S. navy photo.

Emphatic End of 'Can't' Chants

Farm Price Problem—

Taking a cue from President Roosevelt, Leon Henderson and Secretary Wickard have started moving against increasing farm prices. Their movements are not fast, but the additional push of public opinion should soon bring a plan from their coalition.

Mr. Baruch Might Be the Man For Other Defense Ailments—

WASHINGTON—In an academic way, without providing a public exhibition, the Baruch report fairly well paddled Mr. Leon Henderson and the other negative-thinking, crack-down, doom-peddlers, who have been filling the air and the newspapers, for nine long months, with their "can't" chants.

Henderson, for instance, has been talking and thinking in terms of 20,000,000 civilian cars going off the road, leaving only 7,000,000 in operation. He is not the worst of the negative necromancers, most of whom have kept their identity anonymous, while publicly predicting government seizure of cars and tires.

They were inclined to look at the motor car through 20-year-old glasses as a luxury. They saw only trouble ahead to be met by further and further denials by the people.

Now comes the Baruch report, like a ray of realistic light. It looks straight at the civilian automobile as a transportation necessity, without which we will lose the war.

It proposes a policy to keep cars running, and holds out hopes that they will continue indefinitely in service, if rubber use is conserved by gas-rationing until synthetic rubber production comes in big.

It is neither rosey nor melancholy. It says we "can."

Unpublished, Unsurprised and thoroughly Commented Upon—

One official exception to this between-the-lines lashing was implied by the report. In general, it took somewhat the same line as WPB Transportation Coordinator Eastman's unpublished and suppressed report on the same problem.

Mr. Eastman is czar over everything on wheels in this country now, including the automobile, although no one seems to know it, particularly the office of price administration. His report was lost in the shuffle of inter-bureau conferences, as well as his authority over motor cars.

The OPA just stepped in and took over. Primarily, Eastman wanted to give gas for essential needs, and he wanted a general overall control plan, such as Baruch has suggested.

The Baruch report thus seemed to point an unobserved finger in the general direction of Mr. Eastman, who already has the authority (he got it by executive order weeks ago), as well as the proper theories, (the Baruch committee had access to his unpublished report), to direct policy-making on auto use.

Of course, the rubber "Czar" Baruch suggested would be a rubber production business man concerned only with that phase.

They are saying national gas rationing will be put into effect in a few weeks, but they mean a few months. Not only the printing of rationing cards will hold them back. They will need a new and different system than that in effect in the east, and it will have to be worked out carefully.

Basically, the eastern system gives four gallons a week to everyone who has a car. This is a passable arrangement in the east, where distances are short, bus transportation good. It leaves enough gas for essential business needs.

Out in the great open spaces, the problem is different. Four gallons is not enough for anyone who must go any place, and too much for the small town residents who live within a few blocks of everything.

Need should be the only yardstick. A new system will have to be instituted for fairer distribution.

A good guess is that this may take 60 or 90 days.

Expect Little Resistance From Automobile Owners—

The announcement of the American automobile association (representative of the motorist) that the Baruch report is a "realistic document" is a fairly good indication that it will meet little resistance from the automobile owner.

The AAA was the first organization to come forward publicly, with a protest against the government tendency to consider the automobile a luxury, and urging an affirmative policy (advocated earlier in this column) to provide as much auto transportation as possible.

Now if Mr. Baruch will only straighten out the confusing draft policy and speeches, and level them down to an affirmative basis of meeting the utmost requirements of civilian life, consonant with the necessity of doubling the size of the army, and do the same thing with the economic policy and production, the whole of war government will be switched from the initial "crack-down, doom is coming" negotiations (which were necessary in the first phase of a hurried war start) to a common-sense, affirmative, efficient, permanent war basis.

OPA is preparing to put ceilings on livestock. Wickard, who is willing to abandon 110 per cent of parity without the good-will of his benefactors as one of the levels to which farm prices may rise before ceilings are imposed, talks of some form of general farm price fixing.

Unless there is a general stabilization of all elements that enter into the costs, including stabilization of wages, livestock ceilings would hurt the farmer and all dependent upon him. Wickard says he probably would not oppose such livestock ceilings but farm organizations and agricultural congressmen have failed to agree with their secretary and are very much in opposition to his current opinions.

Though still in the talking stage, this move against increasing farm prices ought soon to be put into practice. Vote-seeking congressmen from farm communities have turned their heads from all such proposals to date but they'll soon have to listen or be fired upon as anti-administration.

500,000 New Patients—

The government has taken steps to keep ship-shape those 500,000 passenger cars and commercial vehicles now frozen in the hands of dealers throughout the country.

Pointing out that this pool of motive force is the only source of replacements for vehicles that wear out daily in wartime use, transportation agencies have set up 18 maintenance operations to be followed in preserving the precious supply.

Those lush cushions that look so beautiful through the window of closed auto shops will have to be moth-proofed and the engine oil and gasoline will have to be drained from the motors, spark plugs and batteries will be removed and the cars will be put on jacks to take the weight off their priceless tires. Most of us won't get a crack at any of those 500,000 but the few who do will get them in good shape.

Only 35,000 new cars are listed on the nation's quota sheet for the present month. A few states have reserves held over from former quotas—all of which will be cleared out during September or will be returned to the national reserve, since no state will be allowed a reserve after the first of October.

Re-Routing Petty Tasks—

Since the days of the spoils system presidents of the United States have found themselves saddled with dozens of petty routine tasks which might have been handled by any one of a hundred of Washington's office holders. They've cut down the time and the efficiency of the chief executives, often to the extent of causing days of delay on truly important matters demanding presidential attention.

Wartime can force a rearranging of these tasks; peacetime could not. With the added load of a thousand and one things being thrown on the shoulders of the president by our participation in the war, he couldn't possibly continue to handle such trivial items as okaying routine salary raises and minor official appointments, the responsibility of his position has caused him to toss aside the presidential right to spoils and to devote himself to more urgent jobs.

The present trend in our nation's capitol is to re-route these petty tasks to the heads of the departments concerned. The trend also, then, is toward a final death blow to the tiny ends of the spoils system that have managed to hang on to a spot in the president's office.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Old Campus Tradition On Hollywood Lot—

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—Another side of Hollywood:

There's one unpretentious little building on the Warner lot to which every child actor—including Miss Joan Leslie, 17—makes regular pilgrimage. It's the least Hollywood of studio structures the movie equivalent of the little red schoolhouse.

There's ivy clinging on the walls (the old campus tradition, no doubt) and there are curtains on the windows and flowerpots on the window sills. There are regular desks with inkwells and attached seats, and there are blackboards. But Miss Lois Horn, who presides, is a schoolmarm with a difference.

The endless variety that so appeals to workers in all Hollywood's crafts and professions extends to the schoolroom. Along with the steady (or contract) children, there are new faces from time to time—the transient child actors. California law requires that all movie children, be they stars or extras, devote three hours daily to letters and lore.

Miss Horn, with assistant teachers as needed, meets the requirement—on the lot, on location, on tour.

She has been a movie schoolmarm since 1931. A native of Chickasha, Okla., she took degrees from the University of Southern California and University of Chicago before teaching in midwestern Los Angeles public schools.

Once she tried studio teaching she stuck to it and has put hundreds of juvenile players through the educational paces. Among them: Mickey Rooney (once she had to punish him for punching a fellow pupil during class), Bonita Granville, Sybil Jason, Dickie Moore, the Mauch twins, the Dead End Kids, Gloria Warren. She rules her classes kindly but firmly—just as if they weren't part of a glamorous factory. And if Errol Flynn, Dennis Morgan, or James Cagney is waiting on a sound stage to kiss Joan Leslie, Joan must still put in her three hours.

Aside from the variety, there's another factor that appeals to the schoolmarm: movie children generally are more on the quiver than the average student.

Teaching is one of the few non-unionized jobs in pictures, but the minimum rate of pay for a regular teacher at a movie studio is $75 weekly. (Assistants, hired on a daily basis, draw $12 a day.) Unmarried, Miss Horn lives with her sister in a Westwood apartment. She is a victory gardener (specialty, tomatoes) and a zealous tire-conservator. She is not an ardent movie fan. She likes to see films featuring her charges but otherwise she shops for the superior child actors. She prefers reading.

Blue-eyed, ash-blond, trim Miss Horn sometimes gets her own handiwork on the screen. For schoolroom scenes they ask her to write geometry problems or French sentences on the blackboards—for the authentic classroom touch. She believes the Hollywood conception of the schoolmarm is authentic too—but behind the times. School teachers in movies, she points out, still wear "those little round white collars," still don't dance or play cards. Miss Horn, you gather, believes that schoolmarms are quite human, quite modern people.

knows whether it is going to be a one-season sensation or not. The burb says, "Today this band has passed Glenn Miller and the rest of them, rating as the Country's Number 1 band not only in musicianship and public acclaim, but in the more substantially proven form of actual financial returns. This band has actually broken the all-time record on every location it's played so far this year."

Bunk! This band had a nice record at Meadowbrook until Kay Kyser beat it all to pieces. Blurb like this alienate people and does a band more harm than good.

"WAKE UP, AMERICA!"

Would Government Control Of Foreign Trade Promote World Peace?

As Debated By Eugene Sitterley
Editor, New Republic

MR. SOULE OPENS: A century ago economists believed that if governments did not interfere with trade, each article would be produced where it could be made most efficiently. Competition would result in a world-wide division of labor which would benefit consumers and expand production. But producers everywhere have induced governments to intervene in their behalf by protective tariffs, exchange control, barter agreements and other restrictions. There are also cartels and private monopolies to reduce production and maintain prices.

As long as we have unregulated private capitalism it is hopeless to try to abolish these barriers. But the war has shown us that government control of foreign trade interest rather than for private profit can be used to increase production and distribute goods where they are most needed.

Governments which are dedicated to raising standards of living everywhere can and should control international cartels in the interest of consumers, stimulate world production by an international program of road construction, housing, public health and other projects. They can substitute planned control to expand trade for the harmful intervention which have so long restricted it. Control is inevitable, but we can use it to better purpose.

MR. SITTERLEY CHALLENGES: The perversion of international trade to national interests in the last twenty-five years cannot be laid at the door of free enterprise. Ingenious world government control fashioned the channels of trade to exact economic servitude as the penalty of the vanquished. Tariffs for the protection of labor at home became retaliatory weapons—exchange control added destructive force to the battle for economic supremacy. Barter agreements were the invention of totalitarian governments with complete export control, not the designs of private capitalism. It has never been demonstrated that government control of foreign trade can operate in the public interest to promote world peace.

MR. SOULE REPLIES: How would Mr. Sitterley deal with the cartels restricting international trade in rubber, tin, quinine and with dozens of other commodities except by governmental control, applied internationally in the interest of consumers? How would he persuade Argentina, for instance, not to make barter deals with Great Britain unless some other way can be found of assuring Argentina a market for her beef? Tariffs and exchange blocking are not the product of original sin on the part of politicians, but are responses to economic pressure. The only possible solution is to plan trade internationally, instead of continuing international competition. For this purpose positive governmental action is indispensable. MR. SITTERLEY OPENS: Foreign trade is a peace-time function of private enterprise. It needs a proper world frame-work in which to operate—not political control. The interchange of the world's goods is the greatest single force for world peace when that trade is allowed to function in private hands. Yet, it is the basic cause of all wars when used as an economic weapon by governments.

There is need in this country for the development of a strong national foreign-trade policy in the interest of private business. There is also a great need for sound peace-time thinking if the economic ills of the last quarter century are to be avoided. But the devious embrace of government control of our foreign trade serves only to eliminate the vital function of private enterprise from world markets and concentrates political power at home.

Those who seek to transplant war-time foreign-trade controls to peace-time, ignore the fact that goods are sold abroad—especially those in which we excel—by the same competitive methods we witness here, not by charts, curves, and directives.

Let governments provide the world with workable channels of trade, eliminate the misdeeds of the last peace-time, and foreign trade in the hands of free enterprise will adequately serve the peace in a post-war world.

MR. SOULE CHALLENGES: Mr. Sitterley writes as if harmful interferences with foreign trade were contrary to the wishes of private enterprise. Yet the reverse is the fact. Producers have long used governments to protect their markets or obtain new ones. Protective tariffs are a familiar example. The same is true of exchange blocking measures, cartels and commodity agreements. Germany used such devices to force other nations to buy goods from her producers. So did Britain. If this is the cause of war, private enterprise itself is responsible.

The only solution is international control exercised, not in the interest of national profit-seekers, but of consumers everywhere.

MR. SITTERLEY REPLIES: Condemning free enterprise as an exploiter of the consumer is a spillover red herring. Mr. Soule seeks to compromise fact with fancy and blame free enterprise for the destructive acts of European governments who sought to control international trade by commodity agreements, cartels, etc., in the interests of economic nationalism. Mr. Soule forgets that while private cartels are easily controlled by law, the record shows that government cartels are international dynamite.

If experience tells us anything, it shouts that the creation of sound channels of international commerce in which private enterprise can trade in a free world is the very essence of a lengthy peace.

Nell Giles to Address U.W.A. Meeting in Macbride Tonight

Speakers to Explain War Work Program To College Women

Nell Giles, noted journalist and author of several books for college students, will address university women at a meeting sponsored by U. W. A. in Macbride auditorium at 7:30 tonight. At this meeting, the part college women can play in the war effort will be outlined.

Miss Giles, who has spent two years touring college campuses and studying pre-war work among college women, is stopping here on her return to Boston, Mass., from a coast to coast trip.

Popular Author
She is the author of such books as "Susan, Be Smooth," "Susan, Tell Stephen," and others. One of her most recent articles, which appeared in a current magazine, concerns the W.A.A.C.'s.

In addition to Miss Giles' talk, the U. W. A. war work program for the coming year will be explained.

Mrs. A. C. Trowbridge, chairman of Johnson county Red Cross, will speak on plans made for university women to partake in Red Cross work under local community supervision rather than as a separate unit.

Women's War Work
Listed among women's war work activities for university students are first aid classes, junior Red Cross work, hospital and camp entertainment, clerical and staff assistance, canteen work and short courses in the use of surgical dressings.

Another course which is pertinent to present world affairs and for which many students have already signed is "The World Today," now offered jointly by the history, political science, sociology and economics departments here.

Physical Fitness
This year's physical fitness program will be promoted on a voluntary basis through the influence of the students themselves, rather than by compulsion.

Mary Louise Nelson, A4 of Laurens, president of U. W. A., will preside at the gathering.

The meeting and program are under the supervision of Helen Focht of the office of student affairs, adviser for U. W. A.

Extra Mileage Eleven Ways to Save Gasoline Listed

Want to get a few extra miles per gallon of gas with that car of yours?

Well then follow the 11 tried-and-true ways to stretch your gas mileage which were compiled recently by Delmar G. Roos, the engineer who designed the army's fuel-saving Jeeps.

His rules should be observed very closely by all car owners as gas rationing approaches. They are:

- (1) Avoid using the choke, especially in warm weather.
- (2) Accelerate gently; "pumping" the accelerator wastes fuel.
- (3) Don't hold the car in second gear; shift into high at about 25 m.p.h.
- (4) Don't exceed 35 miles per hour; speed is the greatest "gas eater."
- (5) If your car has gone over 5,000 miles, have the valves, compression and spark settings checked by an expert service man.
- (6) Be sure wheels are properly aligned, thus eliminating gas eating resistance.
- (7) Don't drag your brakes.
- (8) Don't leave the engine running when parked.
- (9) Keep the carburetor in top condition.
- (10) Keep the spark plugs clean; dirty plugs can waste 10 per cent of your gas.
- (11) Keep the tires inflated; car well lubricated; radiator filled; and get a tune-up every 60 days.

Veterans Elect Commander

Jesse L. Richardson Will Head Disabled American Veterans

Jesse L. Richardson, route 6, was elected commander of the reorganized local chapter of Disabled American Veterans Sunday afternoon at the Johnson county court house.

Other officers elected were R. P. White, senior vice-commander; Frank R. Novotny, junior vice-commander; Wilfred L. Cole adjutant treasurer; H. Earl Benson, who explained the claims which members may make for hospitalization, fees and grants.

The chapter received its new charter and heard R. L. Whelan of Cedar Rapids, department commander of the D. A. V., tell of the increasing national activity of the organization and the widened scope of its purpose.

Other speakers included Abraham Pilicer of Cedar Rapids, past department commander now chairman of the state department of the D. A. V., who spoke briefly on "Americanism," and Eddie Bleghid, department adjutant and national rehabilitation officer of the veterans' hospital in Des Moines, plained the claims which members may make for hospitalization, fees and grant.

W. J. Scott of Marion described last week end's "Billy Reed Day" activities, held in Marion for the former American volunteer "Flying Tiger" who recently returned from China with the distinction of having shot down 11 Japanese planes.

Guests at the meeting included Ernest Greenwood, commander of the Cedar Rapids chapter and Mr. and Mrs. Art Paget of Davenport. Paget is the third district commander and Mrs. Paget is president of the Davenport auxiliary.

The D. A. V., once known as the Disabled Veterans of the World War, has recently been authorized by an act of congress to include in its membership any disabled service men of the present World War. The first such case to arise in World War II occurred in the Cedar Rapids chapter 10, involving a sailor from that city.

First regular meeting of the newly organized group will be next Wednesday evening at 7:30 in the Johnson county court house in Iowa City. Regular meeting nights will be the second Wednesday of each month.

Draft Officials Meet At County Courthouse

200 Attend Session; State Head Commends Boards and Personnel

"The aim of the selective service boards throughout Iowa is to make every man inducted into the army feel that he has been treated fairly," declared Brig. Gen. Charles Grahl, state selective service head, at the regional draft board meeting held yesterday at the Johnson county court house.

Approximately 200 draft board officials from southeastern Iowa met at the all-day session to hear a discussion on agriculture and industrial deferments led by General Grahl, Lieut. Col. Ralph Lancaster, Lieut. Col. Frank Hallagan and Major Oliver Bennett, all of the state draft headquarters at Des Moines.

The 3-A class, which consists of men with dependents, was also reviewed at the session.

General Grahl commended the draft boards of the state, the government appeal agents, and other personnel connected with the program.

HISTORIC RAILS AID WAR EFFORT

Gov. Herbert B. Maw of Utah, L. P. Hopkins, superintendent of the Southern Pacific railroad, and E. G. Schmidt, assistant to the president of the Union Pacific railroad, pull up the last spike from the famous rails that joined the lines of the two railroads at Promontory, Utah, 73 years ago. The rails of this section of the line, now abandoned, will be converted into materials for war.

Telegraph Officials Announce Withdrawal of Flat-Rate Wires

No special rate holiday or social greetings, tourate or reservation messages, or sing-o-grams can be sent after midnight Friday, the local Western Union telegraph company announced yesterday.

All flat-rate telegraph services in the nation will be cancelled to prevent any possible interference with the handling of vital war communications.

As early as March 10, L. G. Frutig, national manager stated: "Western Union told the war production board that it would cancel any of these services if they threatened to interfere with government war messages."

"As long, however, as Western Union could handle these special messages without any danger of delaying war messages, the company has refrained from discontinuing them because they gave pleasure to so many people and thereby contributed to public moral."

Frutig said that the company will regret taking the step, but that they feel their patrons will understand the necessity for the alteration during the emergency.

"We shall still keep in effect the low rate expeditionary force message, to and from members of the American armed forces overseas and the low rate cable money order service to these forces," he said.

Although many holidays and special occasions fall on Sunday or times when the other telegraph traffic is low, it is necessary to conserve the time of the workers for the handling of vital war telegrams. The shortage is not in facilities, but in trained personnel.

The following holiday greetings will be discontinued: Christmas, New Year's, Thanksgiving, Easter, St. Valentine's day, Father's day, Mother's day and Jewish New Year greetings sent as special rate messages.

In addition to sing-o-grams and reservations telegrams for travelers, the following social messages can no longer be sent at special rate: birthday, anniversary, births, weddings, commencements, kiddiegrams, bon voyage messages, pep telegrams to school teams and messages from resorts and national parks.

The following services will be discontinued, however, for all business and social purposes: telegrams, day letters, overnight telegrams, serial telegrams, timed wire service, teletext service, telegraphic money orders and government, press and commercial news services.

meanwhile, the Germans were making feverish "winter line" preparations. Three nazis generals were engaged with the fortification of this line and the clothing and housing of the German garrisons against the well-remembered ravages of the Russian winter.

The Italians announced that seaborne troops, supported by 'chut-nights, had tried to land Sunday night from the sea west of Tobruk, 300 miles behind the Egyptian battle lines. Rome said this attempt was beaten off, despite heavy bombardment cover from RAF planes and from British cruisers and destroyers.

A later British admiralty announcement in London today confirmed the commando-like raid on Tobruk, which appeared to be an attempt to disrupt the flow of axis supplies from Europe to Africa. A small British army force supported by light naval units and heavy RAF attacks landed and "inflicted casualties and damage on the enemy before withdrawing," the communique said.

The British acknowledged losses, but did not give their extent. Rome claimed that two British warships were hit, and that one later sank.

Moscow dispatches said the Russians' lack of fighter plane support at Stalingrad was a matter of grave concern to the U.S. officers in Moscow who are trying to get aircraft to every Russian front.

Childrens' Aid Asked In Scrap Metal Rally

Effort Being Made To Discover Amount Available in County

Every child in Iowa City is urged to participate this week in a "Kid's Scrap Metal Rally," Jack White and Dale Welt, co-chairmen of the Johnson county scrap metal drive, announced yesterday. Prizes will be awarded to those children who bring in the largest amount of scrap.

Any material collected should be brought to one of the local junk dealers or to the city scales for weighing Saturday, White said. Successful rallies of this type have been conducted at Oxford and Lone Tree.

Cards are being mailed by the committee to Johnson county farmers in an effort to determine how much scrap metal is still available in the county and how it may be obtained. Farmers are asked to fill out the reply card and return it to the committee immediately. The committee will arrange transportation for any amount of metal in excess of a ton.

The Johnson county AAA cooperated with the committee in the mailing project by furnishing a mailing list of 26,000 names and donating its secretarial services in handling the mailing. The return cards, properly filled out by the farmers will be returned to the AAA by the post office.

Enlisted Reserve Men Feted by Elks Club At Farewell Dinner

Approximately 35 Johnson county enlisted reservists who will leave for service tomorrow were feted by the Iowa City Elks at a dinner and "get-together" last night in the Elks' clubhouse.

Special guests at the banquet were Brig. Gen. Charles H. Grahl, state director of selective service, Lieut. Col. Ralph Lancaster, Lieut. Col. Frank Hallagan and Maj. Oliver Bennett, all of the state draft board.

Other guests were Lieut. Col. Will J. Hayek, Lieut. Walter Kelly and members of the Johnson county draft board and the Lee county No. 1 board.

With Atty. William R. Hart presiding, the draftees were introduced and addressed by the state officials.

This dinner inaugurated a series of events planned by fraternal, civic and service groups of Iowa City in honor of draftees.

V.F.W. Plans Hour Parade Here Sunday

The route of the hour-long parade which will precede the dedication of the Johnson county veterans of Foreign Wars honor roll next Sunday afternoon was disclosed by Edward L. O'Connor, general chairman, yesterday.

The organizations taking part in the parade will form on N. Clinton near Jefferson and will march down Clinton to College, proceed east on College to Linn go north on Linn to the City hall, west on Washington back to Clinton and south again to College and pass by the reviewing stand.

Among the groups scheduled to march are the Red Cross nurses, the boy scout troop, the Grenadier marching team of the Moose lodge, the drill corps of the Women of the Moose, the Eagles lodge marching unit, the Veterans of the Spanish-American war, the Johnson county Veterans of Foreign War, the University high school band and several other marching groups and bands.

The formal dedication ceremonies will take place after the parade and will include the unveiling of the honor roll, the raising of the flag as the band plays the National Anthem, the introduction of several prominent guests, a vocal solo, a patriotic address by Col. H. H. Slaughter, head of the university military department, a memorial service for Johnson county's war dead and the distribution of souvenir booklets to the families of all in the service.
