Imperial German 1941 Front British Unrelentingly Pound Tripoli

Rommel Units Retreat Within 30 Miles of City

Maneuvers Indicate Axis Intends to Move Into Northern Tunisia

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA (AP) — Rommel's continuing retreat to within 30 miles of Tripoli under British Eighth army pressure and fresh advances by German tank columns in central Tunisia were viewed last night as moves intended to prevent the allies from severing communications by which the Africa corps might withdraw into northern Tunisia.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's advance guards in Libya occupied Terhuna southeast of Tripoli and Homs on the coast 56 miles to the east and pressed on to a point only 30 miles from the outskirts of the last Italian colonial port.

Unrelenting pressure from both the coastal and inland British columns was believed preventing German engineers from sowing minefields to retard the British advance and give the Nazi marshal time to make a more orderly withdrawal to strong defense positions.

The German tank advance was in the mountain positions southwest of Pont du Fahs. Hurricane bombers came to the support of the French defenders with a devastating attack with 500-pound bombs on enemy troop and supply columns moving up to support the panzers, RAF headquarters announced.

"Escorted by a strong force of Spitfires who added their fire power of cannon and machine-guns, Hurricane bombers swept down on columns of transports scoring many hits and scattering troops," the RAF announcement said.

One force bombed a house, and in the words of a pilot: "The Germans streamed out of it as the attack was made." The RAF said many casualties were inflicted by bursting bombs. Parking lots where trucks were hidden under trees also were blasted.

Almost continuous bombing attacks on Tripoli kept that city aghast. German radio announcements that it was aflame suggested that the axis public was being prepared for its loss to the allies.

There was, however, no information direct from the front to indicate that Tripoli was as yet being abandoned; in any case, however, the greater issue was how much of his army Rommel (See NORTH AFRICA, page 5)

Finish Illinois, Texas Oil Line

NORRIS CITY, Ill. (AP)—Laying of the world's largest oil pipeline—a 551-mile, 24-inch conduit from Longview in the east Texas oil field to Norris City—was completed yesterday as one of the biggest transportation projects of the war.

Five Enemy U-Boats Bagged Last Month In Southern Atlantic

New Allied Offensive Brings Total to Ten Sunk in This Arena

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Allied forces on the offensive in the south Atlantic have sunk five axis submarines in the last month, Rear Admiral Jonas H. Ingram disclosed yesterday, bringing to 10 the announced total of undersea craft destroyed in the bitter war in these waters.

5 in Past Month
The one-time Annapolis football star, now commander of the United States naval forces in the south Atlantic, announced at a press conference the sinking of the five submarines in the last month. Brazilian Air Minister Joaquin Salgado last year previously had reported five submarines were sunk by Brazilian air forces, the most recent about three months ago.

Some observers here considered that Admiral Ingram's disclosures were timed with Chile's rupture with the axis to give that coastal nation assurance that the axis submarine depredations were being at least partly countered. Chile, which severed relations with the axis Wednesday, has a long and exposed coastline.

Survivors Captured
Within the last few days many survivors of submarines have been captured on Brazilian soil near the coast.

Ingram also said that a German surface raider was scuttled when she was intercepted in these waters and her survivors now are in Brazilian prisons.

Ingram was optimistic over the course of the south Atlantic warfare, explaining that there have been comparatively few sinkings of allied ships.

The admiral told a press conference that the allies have "gotten a high percentage of enemy craft—higher, I believe, than in other zones."

Peg Lived in Flier's Flat—Mrs. Satterlee

Age Dispute Persists As Mother and Sister Testify at Flynn Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The mother of pretty Peggy Satterlee acknowledged yesterday that her daughter, who charges Actor Errol Flynn with rape, at one time was living in an apartment of a veteran R. C. A. F. flier.

She added that "they were not exactly engaged."

The mother, Mrs. Florence Satterlee, identified the flier as Capt. Owen Cathart-Jones, veteran R. C. A. F. aviator and technical adviser on movie flying films.

(Peggy herself, chief complaining witness in Flynn's trial on three counts of statutory rape, testified previously that she lived with her sister, Mickey June, in the captain's apartment when he was out of town.)

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler also drew these admissions from Mrs. Satterlee:

She knew the captain had bought Peggy clothes.

She knew Peggy had given her age as 21 when she obtained a job at a Sunset Strip supper club, when actually she was 15, and had given her age as 18 when she went to work as a nightclub showgirl a few months later.

She insisted, however, that Peggy was born in 1926 and would not be 17 until Feb. 7.

She corroborated Peggy's testimony that a week-end aboard Flynn's yacht left the latter shaken and upset. Peggy charged that it was because of intimacies with the actor.

Mrs. Satterlee was followed to the stand by her other daughter, Mickey June, divorced from Eddie Norris, actor who formerly was married to Ann Sheridan.

She, too, told how Peggy seemed overweight when she returned from the yacht trip. Her direct (See ERROL FLYNN, page 6)

IRON RING DRAWS TIGHTER ABOUT NAZI-HELD EUROPE

How the united nations are drawing an iron ring tighter about Hitler-dominated Europe is shown graphically in the above map. From the British Isles, the RAF, assisted by the United States army airforce and the airforces of other allies, is stepping up raids on Germany, Italy and occupied countries. On the eastern front, the Reds are continuing their advances on all sectors and have also lifted the sieges of Leningrad and Stalingrad. Soviet legions are slowly forming a vast envelopment of Rostov seriously menacing important Nazi communications. On the south shore of the Mediterranean, the united forces of the British and fighting French on the east and the British, French and Americans on the west are forcing the Germans and Italians from the small strip between Tunis and Tripoli.

Eric Knight Among 35 Killed In Dutch Guiana Plane Crash

KNIGHT . . . PLANE CRASH . . .

Iowa Citizens will long remember Maj. Eric Knight, noted author who was reported dead in an airplane crash yesterday on the Dutch Guiana coast, as a colorful teacher and a popular lecturer.

Major Knight served as a guest lecturer at the University of Iowa on several occasions, teaching the Writer's Workshop in the summer sessions of 1939 and 1941, and during the second semester of the 1939-40 school year.

The 45-year-old Englishman, whose home is at Pleasant Valley, Pa., was on a special mission for the services of supply at the time of the crash. Serving as a major in the American army, he did much work on military motion pictures. He served with the Princess Pats of Canada in the last war.

Major Knight lived with the late Grant Wood during his stay on the Iowa campus, where he taught creative writing and contemporary literature. According to reports of faculty members who knew Major Knight, students were enthusiastic about the author's classes because he had color and made his subjects exciting.

Allied Planes Blast Cruiser, Merchantmen

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Friday (AP) —

In two widely separated attacks on Japanese ships, allied bombers yesterday hit a cruiser and at least three merchant vessels while ground forces, operating in pouring rain, continued the final bitter stages of mopping up around Sanananda.

At Ambon harbor a cruiser was left listing and smoking heavily and a 5,000-ton merchant ship was hit by a formation of Liberators, all of which returned after downing two out of 20 Japanese fighters and damaging others.

At least two other merchant vessels were damaged in a raid on Rabaul.

On the fighting front at Sanananda, New Guinea, where isolated pockets of Japs still are holding out, 150 of the enemy have been slain.

"Our heavy bombers attacked enemy shipping in the (Ambon) harbor, scoring hits on a cruiser and a 5,000-ton merchant ship," the noon communique stated.

"The cruiser was last seen listing with heavy smoke pouring out. Our aircraft were intercepted by approximately 20 enemy fighters and shot down two and damaged others. All our planes returned."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-five men were killed when a huge American transport plane bound for Africa crashed on the desolate coast of Dutch Guiana in South America, the war department announced yesterday.

It was the worst airplane disaster in American aviation history. Never before had a single crash cost so many American lives.

The victims included: Eric Knight, English-born novelist who wrote "This Above All."

P. E. Foxworth, crack G-man who worked on the Lindbergh kidnaping and the roundup of the eight Nazis who came ashore from U-boats.

William Hodson, New York City welfare commissioner who was going to north Africa as relief director.

Also aboard were 16 United States army officers and one British officer bound for overseas stations, six civilians in addition to those named, and nine members of the crew.

The ship, flying south, crashed on a remote section of the Guiana coast last Friday, killing everyone aboard. The news was delayed because of the time required to reach the scene and determine the extent of casualties and then notify the next of kin.

Major General Harold L. George, commanding general of the air transport command, who made the announcement, said the cause of the disaster was not known but that an army board was investigating.

"I might add," he commented, "that the pilot and crew were just about the best in the business."

Ickes Requests 2,000 Coal Miners Be Sent Into Western States

WPB Asks Manpower Commission to Help Relieve 'Situation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The war production board called on the war manpower commission yesterday for action on a request by Solid Fuels Coordinator Harold L. Ickes that 2,000 miners be sent into five far western states to relieve a "critical situation" there.

W. P. B. Appeal
The apparently unprecedented call by W. P. B. followed an appeal to its labor requirements committee by Ickes' associate deputy, T. J. Thomas, who complained he had sought action from W. M. C. since last summer but so far had "obtained little or no relief."

Ferdinand Eberstadt, program vice chairman of W. P. B., reissued a letter to W. M. C. Chairman Paul V. McNutt backing up Thomas' contentions that:

1. Washington, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming coal needs have become "critical" because of a lack of manpower although the northwest and Rocky Mountain states could produce enough coal to meet their needs if they had sufficient experienced miners.

2. It has been necessary to transport coal all the way across the country from Pennsylvania and West Virginia to meet the fuel needs of these states, laying a further burden on already hard-worked carriers, which Thomas called "stupid and silly."

Upholding Thomas' statement that the situation requires sending a minimum of 750 experienced miners to Washington, 350 to Utah, 450 to Wyoming, 250 to Colorado, and 200 to New Mexico, Eberstadt told McNutt:

"The war production board recommends that the war manpower commission give primary emphasis in its program to the needs of the coal mining industry in these states. It should be added to the list of urgent products."

"It is understood that this recommendation does not contemplate the transfer of workers who are now employed in an industry included in the list of essential activities of the war manpower commission unless they are experienced coal miners."

The WMC said it had furnished "hundreds of men," largely recruited through the U.S. employment service "from Illinois and eastern states," but said "the turnover rate is high, however, and many men have been lost to other jobs."

BURLINGTON (AP)—The death toll mounted to four in the Union passenger station fire here with the recovery late yesterday afternoon of two additional bodies.

The bodies were identified as those of Miss Doris Kenning, telephone operator, and L. H. Hervey of Ottumwa, a civil engineer for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

Wednesday night the bodies of P. E. Carlin, a conductor, and Leo C. Plunkett of Eagle Grove, a telegrapher, were recovered.

All four had been on duty on the second floor of the station when the fire broke out late Tuesday night.

Yesterday, meanwhile, Ed Flynn of Chicago, executive vice-president of the Burlington road, announced that application had been made to Washington to approve materials for use in erecting a new station.

Advancing Red Army Captures Voroshilovsk in Caucasus Push, Threatens Kursk and Rostov

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, Friday — Red army troops striking straight west below Voronezh have reached a point only 85 miles southeast of Kursk, thus threatening the entire Nazi 1941 front extending from central Russia to the Sea of Azov, according to a midnight Russian communique as broadcast by Moscow and heard by the Soviet monitor today.

The Red army already has two columns pushing toward Khar'kov, south of Kursk, another threatening Voroshilovgrad, and several more, including those in the Caucasus, menacing Rostov, the German communications peg for southern Russia.

The latest Russian communique announced the capture of Golofeyevka, on the Yelets-Kupyansk railway only ten miles below the communications center of Staraya-Oskol, and 85 miles from Kursk. Sini Libyagi, 100 miles east of Kursk, also fell to the advancing Red army. The latter town is 35 miles southwest of Voronezh, and 30 miles northeast of Staraya Oskol, which apparently is being enveloped in this latest westward sweep.

Earlier a special communique had announced the fall of Voroshilovsk in the Caucasus. This town is only 40 miles east of Armavir, communications key to the Maikop oil fields farther west. The midnight communique also told of the capture of other localities near Voroshilovsk, including Staromaryavka, 10 miles to the east, and Kugulta, 20 miles to the northeast.

Other Soviet troops driving toward Armavir are beyond Nevinnomysskaya, 50 miles southeast of that railway junction, and 35 miles south of Voroshilovsk.

The rapidity of the Russian advance on the broad front below Voronezh suggested again that axis satellite divisions—Hungarians and Italians—were being torn to pieces by a Red army displaying its greatest striking power since the war began.

A Moscow radio report recorded here last night by The Associated Press reported that more than 500,000 axis troops had been killed and 200,000 captured since the Russians began their advance on Nov. 19.

In addition, this broadcast attributed to a speech by the Moscow Soviet chairman, Alexander Shcherbakov, said the axis had lost more than 6,000 tanks, 12,000 guns and 3,500 planes in two months.

Russian troops already had been reported within 79 miles of Khar'kov, below Kursk, after the capture of the Valulki-Uzovoz area. Another group making a deep penetration of the eastern Ukraine was operating in the Byelokurakina sector 115 miles southeast of Khar'kov.

Other columns were still south of these, pushing to a point within 20 miles of the great industrial center of the Donets basin, Voroshilovgrad.

Five Witnesses To Testify In Ed Flynn Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five New Yorkers accepted invitations yesterday to testify before the senate foreign relations committee today in its investigation of Edward J. Flynn's qualifications to be minister to Australia, and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia sent word he could appear Saturday.

During the day, Josephus Daniels, former ambassador to Mexico, telegraphed an endorsement of Flynn to the committee.

In addition, the committee asked Assistant Secretary of State Adolph A. Berle Jr. to be on hand for questioning.

The New Yorkers who accepted invitations to testify were: Daniel A. Daly, foreman of a grand jury which exonerated Flynn of wrong-doing in connection with the paving of a parking area at his Carmel, N. Y. country place with New-York-City-owned paving blocks and with city labor.

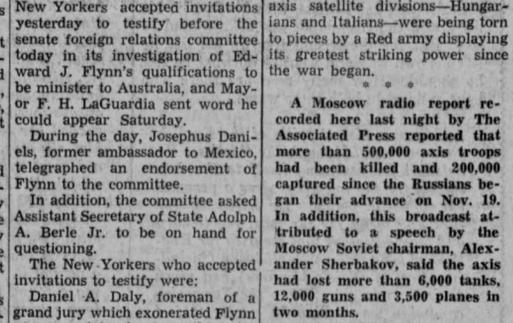

Robert L. Moran, former Bronx commissioner of public works.

Samuel J. Foley, Bronx district attorney who conducted the grand jury investigation.

Paul J. Kern, ousted by LaGuardia as civil service commissioner for New York City.

William B. Herlands, city commissioner of investigation.

To the Late Eric Knight

An Editorial by Paul Engle

In a letter written in 1942 immediately after his return from a trip to England, Eric Knight said, "Let more of us go before this war is over. If we have to, we have to."

Eric always insisted that he was not an Englishman but a Yorkshireman. There is a difference. He had the quick tongue and the lusty humor of the common people of the north country...

All this time he was feeling more and more strongly the will to write seriously. Finally he went to a farm north of New York. A few short stories, and then the great success of "The Flying Yorkshireman," full of a clear warmth of people and a wonderful fantasy.

He was a violent critic of the English government all through the thirties. He hated it for resigning itself to the role of a permanent domestic policy. He hated it for throwing away for the most reactionary and stupid reasons that security for England which a million Englishmen (including two of Eric's brothers) had given their lives to get.

In 1941, during the great bombings of London, he wrote, "Is there a greater tragedy to write of today than the people of England? Was there a people who had less to fatten their fortitude and faith, and who have given back richer return of courage and patience to those who did not deserve such repayment?"

For there are none of you so mean and base that hath not noble lustre in your eyes. And yet victory may sustain the very men who have dived away opportunities, who have sent British boys out with rifles to face mechanized equipment, to face new tactics they did not bother to learn despite Poland and Norway. It was merely this: "Why bother about it. The sturdy British yeoman again, as ever before, will stop it by his courage and the flesh of his body."

But this is too solemn. His political opinions may have been right, but it was his alert and constant humor that made him liked. The smallest incident became, a few weeks later, an involved and reckless story, full of wit and gesture. He was the most natural teller of tales I have ever listened to. And if you were with him, you listened plenty. But you didn't mind. He was good. We met once at the Indian dances at Gallup, New Mexico. He disappeared one night, and next morning when the parade came along there he was, driving an old horse on a derelict Indian wagon, with a Navajo beside him and the back of the wagon full of squaws, children and Eric's typewriter. He had spent the night up in the mountains learning Navajo songs.

It was lucky for us that he came out to Iowa City twice to teach writing. He used no text, but taught by the impressive and simple method of making stories out of his mouth right there in the room. It wasn't how somebody had said writing should be done. It was the act of writing taking place before you. The students knew it was good. They swarmed into his classes, and every day felt the impact of an imaginative personality. He liked Iowa. He always came back. In the last letter I had from him he promised to get out here as soon as the war was over.

By securing such a man as Eric Knight to instruct college students, a man without a college education himself, this university set a precedent which is as exceptional as it is beneficial. His presence here gave an added meaning to universal liberal education.

There was hardly a summer when, some black night, I wouldn't hear a howling and honking down the lane of the farm I live on at Stone City, and Eric would roll in full of restlessness and new jokes (I'm certain they were all his own invention). He always asked to be remembered to all his Iowa friends, of whom there were many.

No man enjoyed living more than Eric Knight. He liked music, farming, singing, eating, drinking, playing polo in New Mexico, talking with anybody, swimming, pushing his three daughters into their own lives, dogs, horses, goats, and above all people. He once said that the most remarkable events of his life were breaking a tough western polo pony, fighting through the third Ypres battle without a wound (when he came out, the regimental cemetery had twice as many names as the regiment had at full strength), and living six months with his mother-in-law.

Those who were lucky enough to know him will remember his ringing voice and his mobile face and his active hands. Many more will remember the squat, big-shoed, rustily dressed figure of Sam Small, the Yorkshireman who learned to fly, sitting on the top of the Chrysler building, convincing his wife that he had always loved her. And when he has persuaded her to swing off into space with him, she says, "Aye lad, there's off to be a bloody splash below if it makes a mistake." They will remember, too, the end of "This Above All," where the girl "began walking home in a night that was alive only to flame and to noise. . . And she was somehow proud to be in it and a part of it. For she knew she was hearing a sound that no men had heard for long centuries—the roar of London, her back to the wall, defending herself."

One last thing his life proved—that Englishmen and Americans can get along. Surely if a Yorkshireman and a town of Americans in Iowa can like and admire each other, their two countries can do the same. It makes one feel a little better about his death (no, not a little better, but a little less sad) to think that by his writing and by his character he made that fortunate association more certain.

Son of a Quaker father killed in the Boer war and a mother who left him to go to Russia as governess in a Russian nobleman's family, he came to America and, like so many immigrants before him, left it richer for the living he did here.

We can learn from his final end as much as from the days of his life and the work of his mind. For it is certain he met the flaming instant of death with clear determination. And if it had to be, then I am sure he was not displeased that it came in an American plane.

it will not accept the spending tax, and does not believe it would raise the money anyway. In lieu of it, a sales tax probably will be adopted.

The preponderant guess is that the nation's pocketbook will be tapped for less than two-thirds as much as Mr. Roosevelt wanted.

Defensive Political Gesture—Frank Walker's choice as Democratic national chairman was a defensive rather than an offensive political gesture.

Of far greater note is the unannounced fact that the whole Democratic national committee staff from top to bottom, including the office boys, has been quietly fired. Mr. Walker will start from scratch.

Interpreting The War News

Vital Mediterranean Struggle Must Be Fought in Tunisia

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

With a British-Free French trap forming by a juncture of the British Eighth army and the French from Lake Chad southeast of Tripoli, Marshal Rommel can hope to reach Tunisia only, with a handful of the men and equipment with which he once menaced Alexandria.

Crucial Battle of Tunisia—The crucial battle for control of the Mediterranean must still be fought in Tunisia. Whatever Rommel can salvage of his African corps to join forces with Nazi defenders of the vital Bizerte-Tunis triangle of the Tunisian hump would bolster axis lines against the hour of all-out Anglo-American-French attack in the north, perhaps within a month as the rains cease.

Only a Defensive Element—In the 1,200-mile Nazi desert trek from El Alamein in Egypt to the Tunisian border, every foot of the way harried by allied air strafing, however, the army must have suffered terribly in casualties, equipment and morale. The best proof that it no longer can be regarded as a striking force, but only as a defensive element in the final crucial fight, lies in the fact that it dared not stand to face the British again once the Alamein breakthrough was achieved. The most logical explanation of intensified axis pressure on the French-held southern flank of allied lines in south-central Tunisia which have been bent back in places is that it is an effort to keep Rommel's narrow escape corridor along the Tunisian coast open. That again indicates that the Nazi high command has ordered a concentration of all its forces remaining in Africa on the Tunisian hump to stand siege.

Hitler Strengthens Tunisia

Sacrifice of even southern and south-central Tunisia as well as the last of Italian Africa, once Rommel escapes into northern Tunisia, is implied. Pressed by ever widening Russian attacks to find manpower to meet all front line emergencies, Hitler appears to be taking a majority of his personnel and equipment from Tripolitania to stiffen the Tunisian hump siege lines.

Hades Will Have An Ultra-Modern Office By ROBBIN COONS HOLLYWOOD—Mr. Ernst Lubitsch, the tongue-in-cheek man, has the interesting task of defining in pictures what people mean when they say something "looks like Hell" — or "H—" as the Hays office would have it.

For "Heaven Can Wait" the opening scene is set in Hades' reception room, where the hero (Don Ameche) seeks admittance on the score of his very enjoyable life on earth. It develops that the management has no record of any outstanding crime of his, and he is requested politely to cite a few particulars about his stay on earth. That's how they flash back to the hero's life story—with the audience in suspense until the end as to where he will spend the hereafter.

Hades has been camera-explored many a time, and had a good close-up view in "Dante's Inferno" of several years ago. It's generally seen as the conventionally flaming, smoky cavern, with devils cawing among the howling damned. But Lubitsch probably is the first to visualize the reception room.

"We've about decided to create a room in very striking colors, furnished like an ultra-modern office," he says. "Yes, an office. That should meet many people's conception of what Hades must be like. Yes? No?" Well, since he asked us . . . yes, and no. We're always glad to help out on these things . . . But heaven, we find, is much simpler. It's just a matter of so much cracked oil and dry ice. To Fred Ponedel, it is.

Fred is the powder and effects man at Warner Bros. Fred had to produce a little bit of heaven for the finale of "Thank Your Lucky Stars." Fred worked his magic, and pretty soon there were scantily clad maidens reclining in luxury on billowing clouds.

Fred took no bows for the maidens, who came from the casting office, but he was right, pleased with his clouds. They floated around so gently you couldn't see (or at least the camera couldn't) that each angel had a substantial perch on which to stay aloft.

Except for her fighting romance with Tim Holt in "The Magnificent Ambersons," Anne Baxter's "Crash Dive" love affair with Tyrone Power is her first on the screen.

"I've been just an old man's darling up to now," she said, "and I guess I'll continue to be one for the duration at least."

The old men? Wallace Beer, Monty Woolley, John Barrymore and Jack Benny. Mr. Benny, the Great Lover, will be consoled if he remembers that Miss B. is only 19 herself.

F. B. Request Will Not Be Granted

Mr. Roosevelt's request for $16,000,000,000 more in compulsory savings and taxes will not be granted by congress. No one sees how such a figure can be met.

FDB presumably based his proposal on expectation that the treasury will again propose a vast spending tax (a levy on everything you leave after paying your income and other taxes) together with a plan to raise $16,000,000,000 through compulsory savings (taking bond purchases out of your pay envelopes).

Congress is in the mood to go along with a compulsory savings plan, perhaps not to as great an extent as Mr. Roosevelt wishes, but

Butterbaughs Given 10 Years

Plead Guilty Before Judge Harold Evans On Forgery Charges

Delmar Butterbaugh, 19, was sentenced to 10 years in the men's reformatory, and his wife, Georgia Fay Butterbaugh, 17, was sentenced to 10 years in the women's reformatory after pleading guilty to charges of forgery before District Judge Harold D. Evans yesterday.

Mrs. Butterbaugh was paroled to the custody of Sheriff Preston Koser and will be held in the county jail until costs and the amount of the forged checks are paid.

The couple was apprehended in Iowa City shortly after the holiday season. They had passed numerous spurious checks in Iowa City and Cedar Rapids stores written on Wellman and Swisher banks.

The clue through which authorities were able to track the couple down was a telephone number given as reference.

The total of checks passed in Iowa City was $98, but this was probably not complete, County Attorney Edward F. Rate stated.

The couple was held in the county jail on a $2,000 bond. Atty. Ingalls Swisher was appointed counsel for the couple.

Pennsylvania Coal Miners Call Off Strike

WILKES BARRE, Pa. (AP)—Striking Pennsylvania anthracite miners, obeying President Roosevelt's order to "return at once to their job of producing vitally needed coal," yesterday ended their 22-day strike for a $2 a day pay increase and a 50 cents a month reduction in union dues.

Of the 12,000 miners idle Wednesday, all but 2,400 were back at work by or shortly after noon deadline fixed by the president. The White House said President Roosevelt was "confident that comparatively few who have not returned to work will join their associates in the mines."

White House Secretary Stephen Early said Mr. Roosevelt, "gratified" by the miners' response to his back-to-work appeal, felt confident when he issued it Tuesday that they would "abide by the national no-strike policy for the duration of the war."

The only collieries continuing the strike, which was denounced from the first by the united mine workers of America, were the Susquehanna Collieries company's No. 7, with 1,000 workers, and the Payne Coal company's Exeter, with 800.

The Exeter miners insisted that a turbulent session today that they had not received an order over the president's signature and they voted to stay out until the ultimatum is delivered to them by a White House representative.

Last night, however, it was announced the Exeter local will meet again Sunday. The Susquehanna local is scheduled to meet today, possibly to vote on joining the back to work movement.

The miners who ended their walkout did so with no assurance that either of their demands would be granted at once, but several locals served notice that they would be pushed.

Visual Instruction Bureau Provides State Film Service in War Information Program

Film fare in quantity perhaps unequalled in any other state is being offered to Iowans through an experimental program sponsored by government war information agencies and carried out by the university and Iowa State college at Ames.

Under an experimental plan devised by the university bureau of visual instruction, a continuous supply of government furnished films is making the rounds of the state. The films circulate on regular routes, starting from the university, in the southern and eastern part of the state, and from Ames in the northwestern region.

The 16 mm. sound films include newsreels, movies of Latin American countries and pictures covering interesting phases of the allied war effort.

A recent release, "Campus on the March," portrays the contributions of American colleges in the war. The films are supplied by the office of war information and the coordinator of inter-American affairs.

Another experimental distribution program is being carried on in Texas though as yet not on the scale under way in the two states carrying out the experimental programs.

"The idea is to get these films before as large a part of the public as possible," says Lee W. Cochran, director of the bureau of visual instruction. "Films have become a major medium for giving the public war information, and we're helping the government find out how we can best reach the greatest number of people."

A pioneer in the field of providing films for the public, with a library of approximately 1,500 subjects which have made the work an increasingly large-scale affair, the university extension service is finding its previous work overshadowed by the proportions of the new set-up.

"These films are also available to organizations or schools not on the regular circuit," Cochran emphasizes. "There is no rental fee, and the only charge is the government-established service fee of 50 cents per subject. Any group can provide an interesting program for its meeting, and at the same time help along the job of disseminating war information to the public."

Despite the importance of this work, the regular services of the bureau of visual instruction are continuing. The department not only supplies instructional films to schools of the state, but cooperates with various departments of the university in making such pictures.

Latest of such films is a 16 mm. sound color production called "The Right to Hear," to be released soon. It was produced for the university department of otolaryngology by the bureau.

* Babe Ruth Mentioned
* By Writer to Tour
* U.S. Service Camps

NEW YORK (AP) — Taking the short cut:

The release of Paul Waner and Johnny Cooney by the Braves puts a blanket over the idea that this year will be the year of old men and callow youths in the majors. And it might discourage some retired veterans from trying comebacks. The Braves must be hoarding players somewhere if they can afford to drop two such draft-proof gems. Corp. Harold M. Wade, writing in the Narragansett Bay Defense Digest, suggests that baseball should sign Babe Ruth as a good-will ambassador, pay him good money and send him to service camps and stations throughout the country. He points out there are many thousands of boys in the armed services who never have seen the Babe. He is just a legend to them. Corp. Wade has the idea that Ruth could spend an entertaining half hour telling stories of his career, and that the boys really would be delighted. It's a suggestion worth considering.

Boxing Comeback Seen After War

BATON ROUGE — Big Ed Khoury thinks amateur boxing will make a terrific comeback after the war. Here's why:

- (1) Youngsters will want to copy the fitness of war veterans who by dint of instruction in boxing, judo and wrestling have become handy with their muscles.
- (2) Men who had difficulty whipping themselves into shape for military service will see to it that their kids grow up tough — and stay tough.
- (3) Those in the services will come by a greater understanding of boxing through their instruction, and a lot of new fans will thus be borne.

Khoury, coach of seven South-eastern conference championship teams and two runners-up to the national intercollegiate crown, knows the game from the canvas up. A former L. S. U. heavyweight he fought 100 fights with only five setbacks.

He points out in lean post-war times the nation's colleges will be looking for "cheap" sports. "It doesn't cost much," he says, "to buy a few pairs of cotton pants and some gloves. Boxing is the cheapest of all sports to conduct."

Equipment Job Huge

2 Men Handle All Navy Athletic Gear At Pre-Flight School

The traditional cares of an athletic equipment manager, for the issue, maintenance and accounting of his wares, fade in comparison with the problems of Lieut. C. A. Temerario and Lieut. (jg) Hugh Mullen, in charge of athletic gear at the Navy's Pre-Flight school here.

The scope of their responsibilities takes graphic form in the estimate that in the eight months of the Iowa Pre-Flight unit has been in operation they have outfitted the equivalent of 300 small college football squads. That figure is derived from the weekly turnover of aviation cadets taking football as but one of ten required sports activities, for each of which equipment must also be issued.

The longevity of their equipment is a point of particular pride to Temerario and Mullen, who point out that not a single piece of football equipment, as an example, has had to be discarded as worn. Constant checking in the regular process of issue and reissue of gear, with prompt attention to repair needs, and thorough cleaning at least once each week for all equipment is their formula for extending life of sports uniforms and utensils.

Four machines, for darning and sewing knitted goods, leather and canvas, come in for heavy use. Leather shoes are cleaned and oiled weekly, with particular attention paid to worn cleats. Inflated balls are cleaned and polished frequently, their air pressure checked no less than weekly and held uniform.

Original specifications of material also contribute largely to the longevity of gear, it is pointed out by Temerario and Mullen. Prime example is a reversible "T" shirt, in reality two shirts of different colors sewn together. Not only does the dual color scheme serve a variety of purposes in managing the selection of competitive sports teams, but the normally limited life of the "T" shirts is infinitely multiplied, not 100 shirts out of 6000 in constant use having had to be discarded despite the hard usage they suffer in the intensive Pre-Flight routine.

Blues Tangle With Anamosa

U-High Five to Try For Victory No. 5 In Game Tonight

U-high's undefeated Bluehaws travel to Anamosa tonight in an attempt to stretch their victory string another notch.

The Blues' hopes soared yesterday when Bud Halvorsen made his appearance in practice for the first time this week. Halvorsen teamed with Smith and Jim Williams in the guard positions and appeared fit for the contest.

Coach Louis Alley's quintet has collected four straight triumphs to date and will be after their fifth in a row when they tangle with the Anamosa aggregation. It is apparent that the Bluehaws expect a battle from the dangerous opponents, as was seen by the reactions in practices this week.

In their last time out the U-high five polished off Monticello, 38-26. The Blues were not in top form but this week Alley has been ironing out some of the difficulties and the squad as a whole appears in good condition.

In yesterday's drill Coach Alley juggled his lineup and had Smith playing at forward, Harold LeGrande at center and Capt. Jack Shay at Don Wagner's post.

This gave an indication that if the situation deems it necessary Smith and Shay would be moved to the forward posts and LeGrande would be put in at center.

Jim Rasley was connecting in fine fashion on his shots and the lanky Bluehawk forward should play his best game of the season. Shay looked especially good under the basket and the first stringers had no difficulty in breaking through the zone defense thrown up by the second rate squad.

The starting lineup should be Rasley and Wagner at the forwards, Capt. Shay at center, and Smith and Williams or Halvorsen at the guard posts.

The ten men making the trip are: forwards, Wagner, Rasley, Carrol Yoder and Leonard Meyers; centers, Shay and LeGrande; guards, Smith, Halvorsen, Van der Zee and Williams.

Intramural Basketeers Enter Second Round

Social fraternities entered the second round of intramural basketball play last night as three sections battled on the fieldhouse gym hardcourt for higher positions in an elimination tournament to determine an all-university champion.

Delta Upsilon fought hard all the way to eliminate Phi Kappa Psi by the score of 13 to 6. The winning quintet held the Phi Psi's scoreless in the final quarter to pile up the victory margin. Bud Houghton, Phi Psi forward, captured high scoring honors by accounting for all of the losers' points.

Chesley had little difficulty in stopping Jefferson, 26 to 14, as Al Strohm and Bob Opehm sank three baskets apiece to lead Chesley's scoring power.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS
Co-op Dormitory League
Chesley 26, Jefferson 14.
Town League
Scheaffer won from Totten on forfeit.
Dean won from Spencer on forfeit.

Fraternity League

Montgomery to Start In Riverside Contest

St. Pat's Last Game Before Wednesday's Battle With St. Mary's

Mike Montgomery, sophomore guard, will be in the starting lineup replacing the injured Billy Connell as St. Patrick's cagers tangle with St. Mary's of Riverside tonight in the south side gym.

The game will be the last for the Irish before their big intra-city battle with St. Mary's of Iowa City next Wednesday night.

Connell, co-captain and key man in the Irish attack, will be withheld from the game to let a back injury heal before Wednesday's game.

Forwards Jim Russell and Earl Murphy, center Bob Connell, and guard Don "Red" Gatens will round out St. Pat's starting five. Phil McLaughlin, high scoring sophomore, will be held in reserve for either a front or back court position.

With their record now standing at six victories in nine starts, the Big Green team will be trying to repeat an early season victory over the Riverside squad. The Irish emerged victorious in an overtime battle in the earlier game at Riverside.

Probable starters for the visitors will be J. Kron and Rotenburger at the forwards, Yeggy at center and E. Kron and Skubal in the back court.

Coach Cliff Krita has spent the past week trying to develop an offense without Billy Connell. Krita tried to hold Connell out of last Monday night's game with St. Pat's of Cedar Rapids with disastrous results as the C. R. team pulled one of the season's biggest upsets.

Krita also announced last night that the annual Diocese tournament will be held at Davenport February 8 and 9.

LITTLE HAWK CAPTAIN

Capt. Dave Danner, pictured above, undoubtedly will take this pose more than once tonight to toss one in over the heads of the rangy Davenport guards. The big senior forward captured an all-state basketball berth last season, and is seven points behind Bill Pender, leading conference scorer, from Dubuque. Danner also was given a second team all-state end position in football last fall.

Dodgers Buy Wagner, Cooney After Discharge From Braves

NEW YORK (AP)—Paul Waner and John Cooney, two of the oldest players in the major leagues and both former Dodgers, were brought back into the Brooklyn fold yesterday by Branch Rickey less than 48 hours after they had been released by the Boston Braves.

The Dodgers president announced his action at a press conference along with an assortment of other information which included:

1. George Sisler, one of baseball's all-time great first basemen, will be a scout for the Dodgers in a new plan that will carry the search for talent to youthful sandlots.

2. Pitcher Louis (Bobo) Newsum came here to see Rickey last Sunday, looked in good condition, and promised to win 20 games.

3. Pitcher Hugh Casey, who had announced his intention of enlisting in the coast guard, replied to an inquiry from the club that he had signed a contract with the U. S. Navy.

4. First Baseman Babe Dahlgren has been sold outright to Indianapolis of the American Association.

5. Leo Durocher, still undergoing a checkup at Mayo clinic, will remain the Brooklyn manager right up till he is called for military service, if he is.

Rickey revealed that there had been considerable competition for the services of Cooney, an all-around player who some years ago was a pitcher and even now, at the age of 41, can do a good part-time job in the outfield or fill in at first base.

So far as he knew, Rickey said, there had been no bidding for the services of Waner, 40-year-old outfielder who played 15 years for the Pittsburgh Pirates and led the National league in hitting three difficult seasons. Waner wired, offering terms, and Rickey consulted Durocher by telephone at Mayo clinic. It was Durocher who de-

Hawklets Meet Davenport Five

Game Here Tonight Crucial League Tilt For City High Quintet

City high will try for its fourth conference victory here tonight when the Mertenmen clash with the Blue Devils of Davenport. If the Little Hawks knock off the Imps, it would mean Iowa City stays in third place, but Dubuque would automatically take over first and Davenport would drop to second.

If such is the case tonight, City high's chances at the loop title are increased. Dubuque and Davenport still must suffer another defeat each and City high must win the rest before the Red and Whites can make any championship claims.

This means a lot of "ifs" on Iowa City's part, but upsets these days are not uncommon. Right now the problem on Coach Fran Merten's mind is to stop Davenport tonight.

Iowa City is handicapped by the loss of Dale Sleichter, who has completed eight semesters of high school and isn't eligible for further conference competition. Several boys have tried this week at his forward post, but none seem to have as good a basket eye.

Davenport also has ineligibility woes. Roger Crow, Imp high scorer, and Wayne Kelling are in the same fix as Sleichter. Both boys have been mainstays of the Blue Devil team and played prominent parts in the 36 to 21 loss Iowa City suffered in its first game with Davenport earlier this season.

Dave Danner, Bob Roth, Buckley Walter and Bill Sangster are sure starters for the Hawklets, but it's a question whether Dick Lewis, Curly Brack or George Mellicker will complete the quintet.

Davenport's probable starting lineup is made up of one senior and four juniors—Eugen Baker and Bob Gilde, guards; Bob MacFargart and Bob Schulz, forwards, and Bill Paulsen, center.

According to Coach Merten, the game originally scheduled with Williamsburg tomorrow night has been cancelled and Iowa City will travel to Charles City next Friday for a non-conference tilt.

Allied Planes Swarm Over Nazi-Held Coast

Plaster North France, Lowlands With Bombs, Destroy 3 Nazi Craft

LONDON (AP)—Swarms of RAF fighters and bombers, including two squadrons of the United States army air forces, swept northern France and the lowlands yesterday without loss in raids on Caen, Cherbourg, Flushing and an airdrome near Le Havre. Three German planes were destroyed.

Heavy Ground Fire
Several German planes crossed the southeast coast of England last night and were met by heavy ground fire. There were no immediate reports of bombings.

The U.S. planes were part of an escort for Ventura medium bombers and Bostons which bombed the German airfield at Caen and the Trieucville airport near Le Havre, the air ministry said.

Other Bostons battered the docks at Cherbourg and at Flushing in Holland. Le Havre and Cherbourg are major French channel ports and Caen lies inland about midway between them.

Offensive Sweeps
Many squadrons of Spitfires also carried out offensive sweeps over northern France.

Canadian, New Zealand, Polish, Czech, Norwegian and Fighting French pilots participated with the Americans and British fliers in the raids.

The air ministry disclosed that the new Hawker Typhoon, a faster fighter with longer range and better armor, has come into service and destroyed five of the 14 Nazi craft shot down in the defense of London Wednesday. The death toll at the London school the Germans blasted rose to 44. Another raider that approached the southeast coast during the day was shot down into the sea and two were destroyed Wednesday night.

The Typhoon is known to make more than 400 miles an hour and is armed with cannon and machineguns. Its 24-cylinder Napier-Sabre engine generates 2,400 horsepower. The Typhoon was designed by Sidney Camm, creator of the Hurricane. It can "climb like a rocket, going almost straight up with a full warload."

48,000 Enemy Troops Penetrate Into Yunnan

CHUNGKING (AP)—Forty-eight thousand Japanese and Thai troops have penetrated a few miles into Yunnan province in an effort to dissipate Chinese strength and because of Japanese fears of an allied invasion of Burma, a Chinese spokesman said yesterday.

Thirty thousand Thai soldiers made up the striking force, the spokesman said, and the enemy apparently is trying to capture the Chinese bases of Nankiao, Fohai and Cheli just north of the border of the northern Shan states.

Meanwhile the spokesman said the 24-day Japanese campaign in the Tephich mountains of Hupeh and Anhwei provinces had been a failure, with the Chinese regaining all the points the enemy had occupied and inflicting 5,000 casualties on the enemy.

know whereof they speak, the final phase of this war should be marked by a tremendously stepped-up U-boat attack on allied sea communications. New swarms of submarines, hunting in multi-packs, are predicted as the winter wanes.

Fight to Finish

If that British forecast is sound, it follows that retention of the Tunisian hump toe-hold in Africa to the bitter end is an essential element of revised axis strategy. Axis domination of the Mediterranean waistline is a major factor in maintaining the terrific strain on allied sea communications. Removal of that obstacle must be the primary motive in Africa, whatever the future of Africa as a springboard for second-front attacks against the continent of Europe.

The Germans know it, and are prepared obviously to pay a heavy price to hold northern Tunisia until the bigger and better U-boat campaign gets in its work.

NORTH AFRICA—

was going to be able to take into Tunisia itself. Over the line of his retreat in western Libya allied fighter-bombers heavily strafed his troop and transport columns and night fighter planes took up where the day squadrons left off.

The axis Mediterranean ship lanes, too, were under a running campaign of attrition, Cairo headquarters announcing that two more enemy supply ships had been sunk and two others badly damaged.

In all these far-ranging operations under the allied Cairo command only three allied planes were lost.

At the Tunisian end of the north African theater, General Eisenhower's headquarters announced a series of air attacks on axis vehicles and infantry in the fighting areas southwest of Pont du Fahs in support of the French ground forces.

American and British bombers assaulted enemy communications and military camps.

"Our bombers," Eisenhower's report succinctly remarked, "were attacked by enemy fighters and got two of them."

It was added that four axis bombers had been destroyed on the nights of Jan. 19-20 and 20-21 and that in all these actions only one allied plane was lost.

KNIGHT—

genial, entirely unacademic in his nature, Major Knight was a master of the various English dialects, a typical Englishman in speech and manners, who would have been called "typically" anything.

A professional writer of first class ability, Major Knight met with his biggest success in 1941, when "This Above All," a poignant novel about a British army deserter, was published. Acclaimed as the first great novel to come out of World War II, the book was made into a movie by 20th Century Fox last year.

Nothing for himself? Although the core of most of Knight's novels was his anger at Britain's complacent, bad leadership prior to the war, he was devoting all his efforts in 1942 to war work, and declared that he would write nothing more "for himself" until the war was over.

Major Knight worked in several English factories during his youth, getting a good picture of the working class. In America he wrote for various newspapers and magazines.

When asked by 20th Century Fox for facts about himself, he said, "No, I won't write my biography, because biographies are the bunk. A man is nothing. But what he works at—if that is good and he believes in what he is doing and sweats at it—that is everything. Say anything about what I write but not about me." Major Knight was born of Quaker parents in Yorkshire, England, April 10, 1897. He married Jere Knight, noted author, speaker and woman of the world, in 1932. His three daughters, Betty, Mrs. Charlton Newborn, III, and Mrs. Frank Moore, were all by a former marriage.

Expect Avalanche of Petitions From Election Aspirants Today

Only Four Candidates Have Filed to Date, City Clerk Announces

An avalanche of petitions and affidavits was anticipated today by City Clerk William Nusser as the last day during which candidates for offices in the forthcoming municipal elections might file appeared with only four statements received.

Those whose statements have been entered are: William J. White, Democrat, for city assessor (re-running); George P. Dvorsky, Democrat, for city treasurer; A. C. Harmon, Republican, for alderman of the fourth ward, and Sam Whiting Jr., Democrat, for alderman-at-large.

Positions for which candidates have not yet filed are mayor, police judge, park commissioner, aldermen of the first, second, third and fifth wards and one alderman-at-large.

Mayor Henry F. Willenbrock announced yesterday that he would submit his petition for re-election sometime today. He will be seeking his third term as mayor.

Political circles forecast that Max Boone, Democrat, would re-run for alderman of the first ward, Frank Unrath would seek Democratic nomination for fourth ward alderman and Jules Casper, Democrat, would run for alderman of the third ward.

Strand Theater Manager Dies

Arch R. Zimmer, 52, manager and part-owner of the Strand theater here, died of heart trouble last night at 9:30 in University hospital. He had been ill only a short while.

Although he had been a resident of Iowa City only a year, Mr. Zimmer has gained a great deal of prominence in local business affairs. He came here from Kansas City, Mo.

In Iowa City he lived with his wife and daughter, Nan, a freshman in the college of liberal arts here at the university, at 1310 Yewell street. He was a commissioned officer in the field artillery during World War I.

Surviving are his widow and two daughters, Nan and Laura, now residing in Kansas City.

Sergeant Kids Callers; Assemblyman Missing

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin's "missing assemblyman" is missing $100 a month.

Frederic Woodhead, Waukesha county member, did not report at the opening legislative session—nor since Secretary of State Fred R. Zimmerman learned yesterday he was in the army.

Zimmerman wrote Woodhead suggesting he file his oath and either ask leave from legislative duties to stay in the army or obtain leave from the army to attend legislative sessions.

Until he makes up his mind he can't draw his salary.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — There'll be another Sergeant at the Salina, Kan., army base.

Frank H. Sergeant of Eugene, Ore., who puzzles telephone callers at Gowen Field barracks by greeting them with "Private Sergeant speaking," will be transferred to Salina to rejoin his twin brother Phillip, also a private.

The transfer order came after the twins' mother wrote President Roosevelt that they never before had been separated.

Tells Rotary Group Not All Bottlenecks Due to Labor Strikes

Prof. Walter L. Daykin of the college of commerce discussed "Labor Problems in Wartime" at a luncheon of the Rotary club yesterday noon at the Hotel Jefferson.

Calling work stoppages our "chief problem," since this is "a war of industries," Professor Daykin denied that bottlenecks had been due entirely to strikes in 1941, when labor problems, and especially strikes, were "played up."

As to the belief that all bottlenecks in 1941 was caused by strikes, "nothing could be farther from the truth," Professor Daykin asserted, explaining that less than one percent of the bottlenecks had been due to strikes.

Stoppages, however, became "a very grave problem." Two lines of action were open for the government—"radical" anti-strike legislation or the establishment of a labor board with extensive powers of arbitration.

The latter course was adopted and found shape in the national war labor board whose jurisdiction extends sometimes even to such fields as hotels, bus lines and the like.

Outlining the functions of the board, he declared: "With all the machinery that we have to settle disputes, no strikes should arise now."

examination was brief, but on cross examination Giesler asked her whether she knew Cathcart-Jones. When she said she had known him "a year, off and on," the attorney asked:

"While your parents were away, was Mr. Cathcart-Jones visitor at your home?" "Yes," she answered, "once or twice a week."

Subsequent testimony brought out that the captain had, on a few occasions, loaned the girls money and that he bought Peggy a dress, some slacks and shoes.

She also acknowledged that Peggy generally gave her age as 18, sometimes 21, but never to her knowledge—as 15.

Objects to Question

Another attempt by Giesler to learn whether Mrs. Satterlee had bought Peggy a new wardrobe in Santa Barbara—two days after the yacht trip—was met with state objections. A similar question to Peggy was objected to, successfully.

Peggy herself also took the stand for the third day.

She put a date—July or August of last year—on an operation which she said was performed, and which the state stipulated was an illegal one. The time was nearly a year after she says Flynn, romantic movie adventurer, twice seduced her aboard his yacht. But a prosecution effort to establish the elapsed time between the two events brought quick objection from Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler. Judge Leslie E. Still upheld him.
