Horrors of Nazi Occupation Related by Kharkov Citizens

'For a Mile and a Half There Was Nothing But People Hanging From Balconies By Their Necks Like Washing'

By EDDY GILMORE

WITH THE RED ARMY ON THE UKRAINE FRONT, VIA MOSCOW, (AP)—We are being served here in Kharkov by a blonde Ukrainian woman who hid her husband in his own attic with the Germans in the house daily for over seven months. They are among Kharkov's residents who have suffered. The first two days after the Germans occupied the city (in October, 1941) were the most horrible, inhabitants assert. "For a mile and a half," said Leonid Danilchenko, "there was nothing but people hanging from balconies by their necks like washings."

The Germans, the occupants tell us, carried out most of their executions in public. Alexander Servanov, head of the city Soviet, now is undertaking the tremendous task of getting the city into some kind of shape, but it is going to be difficult.

The great modern building, "house of projects," is a tremendous, gutted structure with just the outside walls and steel frames standing. I have seen lots of blitzed cities in England and this looks like Coventry or Plymouth after a good hammering and burning.

The large and modern "house of industries" was sprayed with gasoline and set afire during the burning of Kharkov Feb 14 preparatory to the Nazi withdrawal. Kharkov's international hotel, which looks a lot like Chicago's Stevens, was burned. There is nothing left but the walls. It was here that German officers had many night dancing parties. It was the Nazi social center.

German Street Names The Germans put up German names for streets on every thoroughfare in Kharkov. They named all kinds of buildings and put up German signs over shops and restaurants.

Only persons who worked for the Germans or their relatives could visit these shops, however, the citizens told us.

The Germans renamed Kharkov's beautiful modern city square, "Grosse Platz." I got this sign as a souvenir.

Lots of streets were put back to what they were under the Czar. Inhabitants asserted that the Germans prepared to leave Kharkov last May when the Russians' guns were heard in the city, but as fresh reinforcement came up they changed their plans.

Kharkov university is about ruined. More than 25 members of its staff starved to death or were shot or hanged, the Russians said.

For wartime destruction, Kharkov must rank high on the world's list.

There was some bombing and shell damage, but most of the destruction was by fire.

Oddly, Field Marshal General Fedor von Bock's headquarters still is standing.

I am sleeping in a building formerly occupied by German officers.

Pardon me if I stop typing to scratch.

To Investigate Deferments WASHINGTON (AP) — The house military affairs committee yesterday ordered a special subcommittee to investigate draft deferments of government workers and workers in war plants operating under government contracts.

20 Handpicked SUI Students— Studying Russian 8 to 10 Hours a Day

By JOHN STICHNOTH Associated Press Writer

Twenty University of Iowa students, carefully selected from a long list of applicants, are studying the Russian language an average of eight to 10 hours a day with a view toward fitting themselves into the nation's war effort.

Enrolled in a course in the Russian language—26 weeks of intensive preparation—the students are being trained for positions with the armed forces and government agencies. They will aid in this country's relations with its Russian ally.

There is such a demand for both men and women who have a working knowledge of the language that several of the students have been offered posts a month before they complete their study and one already is serving with the army, the instructors reported.

Under the direction of Dr. Jack A. Posin, himself a native Russian, the course is divided into two sections, one elementary work and the other advanced. The students receive 18 hours of classroom instruction a week and put in about 50 hours of outside study.

Wisconsin Legislator Lauds Iowa as Big Food Producing State

Murray Cites State Record in Address To House Members

WASHINGTON (AP)—If any one doubts that Iowa is one of the most important food producing states, he should get in touch with Representative Murray (R-Wis.). The Wisconsin congressman told the house he had studied official reports of the bureau of agricultural economics of the agriculture department and had found that in 1941:

Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan furnished more than one-third of the milk produced in the nation.

Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin produced more than 42 percent of the creamery butter.

Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Minnesota produced more than 53 percent of the pork of the nation and Iowa, alone, produced more than 20 percent of this pork.

Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska produced more than 36 percent of the beef and veal of the nation and Iowa, alone, produced nearly one-tenth of the nation's supply.

Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri and Ohio produced more than 25 percent of the chickens and more than 28 percent of the eggs of the nation.

Iowa and Illinois, alone, sell more than 55 percent of the corn that goes into manufactured corn products and produce practically one-third of the corn, in bushels, grown in the entire nation.

Iowa and Illinois produced nearly a third of the oats.

Iowa, Minnesota and North Dakota produced more than 70 percent of the flax of the country.

Iowa, Indiana and Ohio produced more than 87 percent of the soybeans of the nation.

Iowa is reputed to have 25 percent of the A No. 1 farm land in America.

"When you realize that this one state has only 20,000,000 acres of cropped land out of the total 341,000,000 acres in the United States," Murray declared, "the importance of this one state, in food production, is readily appreciated."

Rep. Paul Cunningham (R-Ia.) commented that Iowa is one of the biggest producers, notwithstanding it has had more voluntary enlistments than have come from other parts of the country.

2 Killed, 72 Trapped In Unexplained Mine Blast in Montana

BEARCREEK, Mont. (AP) — An unexplained explosion in the Smith coal mine killed two men, critically injured three and left 72 others somewhere in the deep workings yesterday.

Hope was expressed by Mine Manager Bill Romek the men may have fled dead black damp and barricaded themselves in a section where they may get pure air.

A fully equipped rescue squad arrived from Butte and went into the mine to pierce a cavein and locate the missing 72.

F. D. R. Still Resting WASHINGTON (AP) — President Roosevelt, though improved, cancelled all engagements for a week yesterday to rest up from an intestinal disturbance which has kept him away from his office since Wednesday.

Allies Break Nazi Thrusts, Gain in Central Tunisia As Fliers Hammer Europe

German Ports Blasted Again In Heavy Raids

LONDON (AP) — American Fortress and Liberator bombers bashed the German naval base at Brest on the French coast yesterday while RAF Venturas attacked Dunkerque in continuation of the greatest sustained air assault of the war on enemy installations from the North sea to the Bay of Biscay.

All the big U. S. bombers returned safely from the latest in the series of assaults in which allied planes have pounded the Nazi war machine twice around the clock and more.

The Paris and Calais radio stations went off the air last night, indicating the RAF was carrying the offensive through another night.

The daylight operations followed closely a "very heavy" attack by RAF bombers last night on the battered German industrial city of Cologne.

Squadron After Squadron Squadron after squadron of allied planes shuttled across the channel yesterday as RAF and allied fighters supported the four-motored American bombers in their raid on Brest.

Their target again was the U-boat base at the west coast port, pointing to a sustained allied air offensive to weaken the German submarine fleet and help clear the way for the landings on the European mainland.

Wilhelmshaven, which U. S. bombers struck in daylight yesterday, is another U-boat building center and haven. Cologne, left quaking under last night's avalanche of RAF bombers, also builds submarine engines and parts.

Forced to Use Brest With the Lorient and St. Nazaire U-boat bases largely out of commission from day and night attacks by the allied bomber fleets stationed in Britain, the Germans now probably are using Brest—the third big base in France—to capacity, one British observer said.

Yesterday's American attack was seen by some as a possible opening round of a series of blows on Brest.

It was the third USAAF raid on Brest and the 11th attack there since the start of the war.

In addition to the Fortresses and Liberators engaged in the Brest attack, the USAAF also sent out fighters to help escort RAF light bombers that pestered Dunkerque docks and shipping.

ALLIES THROW AXIS INTO REVERSE

AXIS OFFENSIVE in central Tunisia has been thrown into reverse by British, American and French troops, who have forced Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps to turn back and retreat from the Kasserine Pass, as shown on this map. Meanwhile the British Eighth army is applying more pressure on the axis forces to the southeast in the vicinity of the Mareth Line.

Compulsory Manpower Control Urged by Secretary Stimson

Calls Present Setup Inadequate, Seeks Stronger Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Reporting "increasing evidence of the inadequacy of present controls," Secretary of War Stimson wrote the senate military committee yesterday strongly endorsing a bill providing for the compulsory control of manpower.

In a letter to Chairman Reynolds (D-NC), Stimson said the war department "strongly endorses" a bill introduced by Senator Austin (R-Vt) and Rep Wadsworth (R-NY) and "urges its prompt passage by congress."

This was the first intimation from administration sources of support for the Austin-Wadsworth measure, which would provide primarily for voluntary transfer of workers to essential war jobs but would provide for compulsion if voluntary controls fail to bring about the desired results.

Stimson reported "present or imminent" shortages of labor in agriculture, mining and industry.

"There is increasing evidence of the inadequacy of present controls to achieve a full utilization of our manpower and to solve the labor shortage problem," Stimson wrote Reynolds.

"As a result," Stimson continued, "in several instances where labor shortage emergencies existed it has been necessary to take men from the army to supply labor."

This is a practice that is wasteful and disruptive to the army training program. As a further result, proposals have been made to give blanket deferment to groups of workers thus limiting greatly the manpower pool on which the army depends for its soldiers."

Austin, who made public the letter, said he interpreted this portion of it as opposing proposals by Senator Bankhead (D-Ala) and others to provide for the furloughing of men in the army to do farm work, as well as pending proposals for the deferment of farm workers.

"We must direct adult labor into essential occupations rather than keep the men out of the army who are needed for the job of winning the war," Stimson wrote.

The Austin-Wadsworth bill calls for a national registration of women and provides that these women shall be available for compulsory assignment to war factories and farms where necessary.

Plan for Memorial To Five Sullivans Assured of Success

BOSTON (AP)—Arthur W. Sullivan's "dime for a shrine" movement for a memorial to the five Sullivan brothers of Waterloo, Ia., who died aboard the cruiser Juneau in the south Pacific, appears assured of success even before it has been launched officially.

Sullivan, a Bostonian who is register of probate for Suffolk county, said yesterday that his initial announcement a few weeks ago already has started a stream of dimes pouring in from states as far west as Utah and Montana.

He said U. S. Rep. Maurice J. Sullivan of Nevada had accepted the honorary national chairmanship of the movement, which seeks to honor the Sullivan brothers "in an unusual way by erecting a shrine from the dimes of the Sullivans."

Happy Ending in Author Ursula Parrott's Trial as Jury Acquits Her on Three Counts

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Author Ursula Parrott's trial, like her books, had a happy ending with her acquittal yesterday of three charges growing out of smuggling a handsome young soldier from a military stockade where he was a prisoner for being absent without leave.

Congratulated by spectators and the prosecuting attorney, Mrs. Parrott smiled happily, dabbed at moist eyes, and stated she would go back to work on her book, "Sunlit."

Pvt. Michael Neely Bryan, the soldier, who is serving a year at hard labor for the escape, was returned to confinement before the verdict was reached.

It required but 12 minutes for an all-male jury to determine that the 40-year-old authoress whose divorce suit is pending against her fourth husband, was innocent of enticing a soldier to desert, harboring a deserter, and subversive activities by impairing the loyalty, discipline and morale of the armed forces.

Judge Holland told the jury that if the soldier had no intention of deserting when Mrs. Parrott drove

Yanks Seize Kasserine Town As British Shatter Enemy Push

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA (AP)—Veteran British troops stoutly entrenched on the rugged heights near the Bizerte-Tunis bridgehead shattered repeated German armored thrusts along a muddy, 55-mile front yesterday while in Central Tunisia American and allied combat teams captured the town of Kasserine and drove near the Thelepte airport, 15 miles to the southwest.

Throwing about 50 tanks into short, stabbing attacks, supported by probably as much as five battalions of infantry, Col-Gen. Jürgen von Arnim tried but failed to break into the strategic network of roads immediately behind the British line.

From the area of Sidi Nsir, 15 miles northeast of Beja, to Jebel Mansour, six miles southeast of Bou Arada, axis forces stormed forward into devastating fire from British artillery.

Strengthened with new tanks, including the 40-ton Churchills, the British armor quickly counterattacked and allied war planes provided close ground support.

With the fighting still continuing, the number of axis troops taken prisoner, which last night exceeded 400, was mounting steadily.

Six attacks were launched by the enemy early Friday and although all were temporarily smashed the pressure was renewed at two points, field dispatches said late yesterday afternoon.

Along the Mateur-Beja road where 30 tanks and one infantry battalion began the assault, the enemy still was trying for a break-through in the Sidi Nsir area.

In the area of Bou Arada, which is held by the British, the enemy was attempting to dent the line after the British destroyed seven out of 20 German Panzers for the loss of one Churchill.

The northernmost limit of von Arnim's operations was the Mateur-Tabarka road where a column of 700 men was repulsed. The southernmost limit was Jebel Mansour, whose bleak summit has been a long disputed vantage point.

Enemy Drives Back Other enemy thrusts were driven back from the vicinity of Medjez-El-Bab and southward from Goubellat, this latter attack having been planned to link up with the attack northwest from Bou Arada and pinch off a ten-mile British salient.

The prisoners were taken in the Mateur-Beja valley 15 miles northeast of Beja at a point 37 miles southwest of Bizerte. The allied commander said the British destroyed seven tanks at the cost of only one.

"The fighting continues," the communique added crisply.

Far to the south, the British Eighth army veterans of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery wheeled into positions immediately south of the Mareth line without serious opposition. Medium bombers continued to pound the French fortifications and German airports.

The allied pursuit of Marshal Erwin Rommel's severely mauled columns continued west of Kasserine pass. The Germans were reported demolishing installations at the Thelepte airport, 43 miles northwest of Gafsa, preparatory to evacuation.

Army Appoints Zech To Succeed Slaughter

Ursula Parrott

Lieut. Col. Luke D. Zech of the infantry regular army has been appointed by the United States army to succeed Col. Homer H. Slaughter as head of the University of Iowa's military department.

Colonel Slaughter left for Omaha, Neb., Friday night, and Lieutenant Colonel Zech arrived here yesterday morning from Lincoln, Neb., with Mrs. Zech. The new head of the department left his position as professor of military science and tactics at the University of Nebraska, where he also headed the military department, to come here. His two daughters have not yet arrived in Iowa City.

Colonel Slaughter, who has headed the military department since June, 1941, was ordered to duty with the seventh service command headquarters in Omaha, Mrs. Slaughter and sons, Lawrence and Stephan, will join him.

The Universities After the War

... by Hardin Craig

(Hardin Craig, author of the following article, was formerly head of the English department at the University of Iowa, and now holds the position of visiting professor at the University of North Carolina. He will teach here this summer in that capacity. A distinguished scholar in every sense of the word, Hardin Craig has served on the faculties of Princeton, the University of Minnesota, the University of Chicago, and Stanford university. He was in the army during the first World War, and therefore he has reason to know something not only about the mission of a university teacher in his relation to returning soldiers, but also about what are likely to be the attitudes, the hopes, and the purposes of the soldiers who will attend the universities after they come out of this war. This article is reprinted from the Chapel Hill Weekly, The Editor.)

I know there are many pressing problems before our universities at this time, particularly problems connected with our immediate adjustment to the war. I believe there is something important to be done by those of us who will continue to work for the university during the struggle. I recognize the necessity of taking special action at this time, and I have nothing but encouragement and admiration for those of our faculties who are now laboring for current practical welfare and for our security in the days to come.

By and by the soldiers will come back. I believe this because I once saw them come back, indeed, came back with them. Our students will return to the universities probably pretty much as they did before. They came back then in large numbers, and for four or five years our classes were full of men who had been under arms. But the students who returned were not entirely the same students who went away, and those who return to us will not be exactly the same students who have recently left us. Instead of boys they will be young men who have had experience with actual affairs. I shall never forget the interest I felt in teaching them after the first World War. They were not cleverer than other younger students, but they had a gratifying appreciation of actual values. They knew when things were valid and not mere entertainment and idle talk. We may expect a similar attitude on their part when they return again. It is a mistake to think they will have much to teach us, but they will certainly insist on our teaching them a great deal and, in general, things of actual value.

We have now a lull in the university world in the midst of this disturbance. Our students are fewer and the mill is grinding less brisk. We might and should I think use this interim for the purpose of taking stock, or determining our course, or getting our house in order, or any way you wish to phrase it.

The problem in American universities has been, not so much how to train and instruct students, as how to get them to study, how to secure and hold their attention in the midst of countless diversions, many quackeries, and a disposition toward idleness. The intellectual life of our student bodies has been, I think most of us would admit, on a low level.

There are two general courses of procedure. The first is a description of the remedies we have tried to apply during recent years, and the second is an old principle which has been forgotten, or nearly so. I shall state them both.

1. Improve our methodology. Do more careful and skilful teaching. Plan courses of study more scientifically. Get acquainted with students. Hold many conferences. Introduce tutorial methods into our instruction. Devise ways by which students may express themselves.

2. Let members of university faculties devote themselves to research, productive scholarship, so as to gain and maintain intellectual leadership in their respective fields.

I offer diffidently the following criticisms of plan one. Expert teaching is desirable, but not so necessary in dealing with mature men and women, and our students are for the most part mature men and women, and something which will induce students voluntarily to apply their own powers in the pursuit of something they wish really to possess. Of course students should be treated well. Our present attitude toward them is by and large extremely cordial. The great intellectual leaders I have known in the university world always knew their students. There may be some who do not, but it does not greatly matter, provided they are leaders. The proper treatment of students may be taken for granted along with good manners, a clean and properly dressed person, and the ability to speak in such a way as can be understood. It is possible that in some institutions we have gone too far in the matter of advising students, holding conferences with them, and mothering them, and have wasted a good deal of time which might better have been spent in study on their part and on ours. So far as teaching modern students to express themselves, it is a much over-rated device. Our modern students are not as a class bashful. Certainly they are not so in the west. If any of them are found on observation to need encouragement, they should by all means receive it. When a student has something to say, and it is our business to see to it that he acquires something to say, let us by all means give him a chance to say it. Let us go further and provide him with practical advice on the handling of his material and his manner of delivery. This is a different thing from the turning of our classrooms into bicker sessions.

Even if we felt sure a priori that our salvation lay in a greater socialization of our universities we have back of us enough unsuccessful experience to make us question, if not abandon, the idea. I do not mean to be pessimistic, and yet I must honestly say that in my observation and experience the intellectual interests of our students have been growing fewer during the last fifteen years. I do not speak of their characters or dispositions or personal refinement, but confine my statement to their intellectual interests. If these interests have not been diminishing, at least we can say that they have not, as a whole increased as much as we hoped that they would. We have probably not been able to establish as completely as we should what Professor Don Cameron Allen recently referred to in a letter as the "professional attitude." Allen has recently migrated from Drake university to the Johns Hopkins university. He spoke of the gratification he felt in the professional attitude he observed in his students at the new place. I knew what he meant. The Hopkins in spite of difficulties breeds and maintains that attitude. I have reason to think that it exists in other institutions. It was very strong at Chicago in my day. I found it in German universities years ago and at Oxford. I do not think we have very much of it in American universities.

Is it not true that this professional attitude on the part of the student is the immediate result of such an attitude on the part of the university teacher? If the university teacher knows his stuff, if he believes in it enough to work at it (instead, let us say, of working at direct social betterment), will not his students, because of his example, his earnestness and his achievements, also believe in the subject enough to work at it? The answer is that students have always done so and always will do so. If this is true of the individual teacher, is it not true of the institution as a whole? The result of a widely current set of such attitudes we might describe as an atmosphere. Students and teachers alike will be industrious in their studies and we shall have an intellectual atmosphere.

This principle seems to be illustrated in the histories of great universities and in the histories of universities not now great which have had periods or episodes of greatness. Many universities in our country have acquired the necessary equipment for greatness. They have buildings, libraries, laboratories, faculties made up of doctors of philosophy, and everything needed except industry and perseverance. They are often ready to go, but cannot start their wheels. A pressure from the community is brought to bear on them and they resort to the projects of specialists. They institute all sorts of devices pertaining to moral suasion — educational methodology, student guidance, social improvement, what not. Whereas they need to have their faculties go to work as "faculties."

This may not be a panacea, but there is so much evidence to support it that it seems to be one, and why should it not be? The intellectual leadership of society, the progress of the arts and sciences, the correct transmission and interpretation of the traditio, the invigoration of the mind of the age—these things, or rather this thing is the function of the university. If we do not believe in our vocation enough to work at it, we are either unfaithful servants or persons wandering in the forest who have lost the true and only way. The tragedy of it is that in our moral solitude we spend hours in interviews and conferences which ought to be spent in study and thought, in scholarship and research. It must be said to the discredit of our present system that it has probably spoiled a great many of our younger men. They have not only been overloaded with teaching, but have been so involved in methods and regulations that they have no time to study. They have had also too little encouragement to do so. The shrewder ones have realized that social and not scholarly activity is the road to promotion, and since social activity is much easier than the labor of learning and the work of creation, they have grown ignorant and lazy. The point is of course that they would make much better teachers if they were making progress in the mastery of their subjects.

Standards are being deliberately left out of account in this discussion. At any given place they might or might not be worked out and applied in either system. This paper is meant to be a comparison between two possible ways of inducing students to study.

It is necessary and becoming that in a case of this kind we should be reasonable and practical. We should, for example, inquire what we mean by scholarship and research. After the hasty American fashion these words have been narrowed if not distorted in their meanings. Research has come to mean discovery of new knowledge; whereas research is properly an individual matter. It is the exercise of an inquiring mind, and the principle of research applies as truly to a college freshman as it does to a doctor of laws. There is a big element of luck in all discovery, and we cannot compel men to have good luck. The field has also a great deal to do with it. In the older well worked disciplines discovery is not easy. Each situation also controls the possibilities of making actual contributions to the sum of the world's knowledge. In certain places and situations the thing may be well nigh impossible of achievement, but the power of the individual scholar to know his subject and to make his unique contribution to the interpretation of that subject is nowhere limited, nor is the possibility of keeping abreast of the advancement of his subject in any way hampered.

Then again we have made an absurd union between scholarship or research and publication. These things have no necessary relation to each other, and the marriage is so obnoxious to the minds of all reasonable university men that scholarship and publication should be divorced. It is true that it is useful to have work published and rendered available to other scholars. It is also true that we university teachers usually belong by nature to the expressive type of humanity and that certain of us are made happy by seeing our names in print. But not all of us. Let no man of intellectual integrity be clubbed over the head by the crude notion (or even requirement) that he must publish such and such a number of articles or lose his standing. There was something gratifying about the career of the late Vernon L. Parrington, which is not unparalleled. He went for five and twenty years or more without publishing any articles in learned journals. He was a man published Main Currents in American Thought, the best book that had been published in his field for more than a generation. He was not a man who popped off short articles in learned journals. He was a man who had a great book gestating within him. He recorded in a great work the significance that his subject had had for him. University teachers should have the freedom to work at something of deep as well as of current importance, and, if they do not get their books finished before they die, it is just too bad; but meantime, while they worked and thought, they have been scholars in society and beacons of light in the generation.

Scholarship has also come to mean something dry or something so trivial or so highly specialized as to be unintelligible or insignificant. When these charges are true, and they are not true nearly so often as they are said to be, it is the fault of the scholar and not of scholarship. Unless scholarship as a whole makes life better, more intelligible, and even more interesting, it is not worth fooling with. But it does as an occupation do just these things. Fortunately life is a very varied thing, and interests are very catholic. One should not dogmatize on the subject of what is interesting or important. There is a certain wholesome glow and touching human sympathy in the old story of the philologist who in his lectures had approached a climax and a great new division of his subject. He began his lecture with the words, "Gentlemen, the Dative!"

There is one other popular misinterpretation of our proper activities. The scientists, for example, have been pestered by those who think that research in science should always be directed toward something of a practical and remunerative nature. This idea is so puny and contemptible that we may pass it over without remark.

By way of summary I should say that for practical purposes a scholar may be described as one who has an adequate and persevering mastery of his subject.

Our interests on this occasion are really in what our universities are going to be after the war. We have, some of us, a period of relative leisure in which to make up our minds about what we mean to do. As best I could I have told you that I think we ought to begin now to work very hard at our subjects. I believe that, if we do this, the results will be that we shall be of great use to our soldier students when they return to us. They will want the very truth of the matter about, let us say, chemistry, history, and political science. Some of them may wish to work out careers in the field of the interpretation of literature. They will wish to find men who are masters of these subjects and an atmosphere in our universities which is seriously intellectual. Let us therefore work at our subjects and not waste our time in trying to prepare beforehand for unknown and unpredictable events or in vain attempts to adjust social relationships. I believe also that any institution which follows this policy will make itself great among the universities of our country.

What I have had to say concerns a certain rather large academic group to which I myself belong, a group which will remain at the universities until the war is over. I have suggested on the basis of experience after the first World War that this body of university teachers may inherit, not from choice but from necessity, a very serious responsibility when the students return in full flood to the universities, the responsibility, namely of determining what the universities are to be like after the war. On the basis of a philosophy of higher education to which I adhere very strongly I have tried to describe a policy which has historical validity as well as immediate utility. What I have recommended is not a reaction but a restoration and revival. I hope that we shall retain all of the merits of recent discovery in educational methodology and use them in the discharge of our proper and original function in civilized society. I have had no particular university in mind while I spoke and no particular university teacher in mind except myself.

Interpreting the War News

Chinese See 'Roads from Tokyo' Vulnerable for Air Attack

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Implicit in Chinese agitation for quickened allied aid, headlined by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek's Washington appearances, must be a Chungking conclusion that there is an exposed flank of Japan's conquest zone which can be hit and hit now with telling effect.

The first lady of China did not deal with strategy, only with urgency for more planes, guns and fighting equipment. Her brother, Foreign Minister Soong, has now come much closer to indicating just what chance Chungking sees to deal Japan a blow without delay and without requiring any major change in the clearly indicated Anglo-American purpose of hitting first in Europe.

Soong holds that with "less than 1,000" allied planes based in China, Japan can be driven out. It seems obvious, however, that to fuel, supply and maintain any great air force in China by air transportation, the only present means, would be a big undertaking.

It is to reopen the Burma route for supplying China with more fighting equipment as well as to regain possession of Burma oil fields to cut allied transportation difficulties that General Wavell with American air help has started his Burma campaign from India. That bids fair to be a slow process at best. Apparently it does not satisfy Chinese strategists.

Assuming that any substantial part of 1,000 long-range allied bombers were based in north central China and could be maintained there for offensive operations, certainly Japanese traffic in the China sea would be in peril. Strike a circle of 1,000-mile radius from deep in the center of the great eastern bulge of China that juts into the China sea and not only all Indo-China, Malaya, the Dutch Indies and the southern Philippines, but part of Japan itself would fall within it. All would be in allied air range. The Japanese Gibraltar of Formosa is within easy bombing range of many good Chinese air bases or suitable sites within that eastern bulge never threatened by the invader.

Chungking has President Roosevelt's word for it that the concerted attack upon Japan when it comes will not be an inch-by-inch, island-by-island affair; but by air "over China—and over Japan itself." Just how that is to be done was discussed at Casablanca and later at Chungking conferences attended by General Arnold, his British opposite number, and the Chinese generalissimo. Mr. Roosevelt has said there are many roads to Tokyo and that (See INTERPRETING, page 5)

Major Alexander P. de Seversky, distinguished pilot, plane designer and author of the best-seller, "Victory Through Air Power," will be the next speaker in the university lecture series.

Considered one of the greatest experts on the tactics and strategy of aerial warfare, Seversky will lecture here March 12, at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Iowa Union.

He holds numerous world speed records, and in 1940 he was presented with the coveted Harmon trophy by President Roosevelt for his outstanding achievements in the field of aviation.

Major Seversky served with the Russian air force during the first world war and was chief of pursuit aviation of the Baltic sea. Through his daring exploits he became the leading Russian ace of the naval air force and received many honors, including the gold sword and the Order of St. George, the highest military award given by Russia.

His book, "Victory Through Air Power," has been considered the most important book on air power that has been published since the beginning of the war.

EDITOR OF LAW REVIEW

Mildred Daum, first woman managing editor of the Law Review, is shown at her desk.

Woman Editor of Iowa Law Review Sees New Era Dawning for Modern Portias

By ROSE MARY RANDALL

"A new era in the law has dawned for women," declared Mildred Daum, L2 of Buffalo Center, probably the first woman chosen to serve as managing editor of a law review, when she was asked her opinion on the position of modern Portias during and after the present war.

"Not only in the field of law, but in other fields as well, the fine service of women during the war has broken down the prejudice against their employment, and I think the worst of that prejudice is gone for good," she said.

Even when men in the armed forces return, "they will not necessarily displace the women," she said. "Law offices do not have the rigid organization of industrial concerns—they are very elastic."

As an added basis for her optimism, Miss Daum pointed out, "Women have made good in the legal services of the government in a big way, and an expanded governmental service is going to continue. They have won their place and are not likely to lose it."

"In New York it has been quite common for men on the leading law reviews to accept at Christmas time places in leading law offices for the following fall, but my understanding is that New York has been very forthcoming in this matter. This goes beyond the New York practice and is evidence to me of the extraordinary demand for recent law graduates, including women, caused by the war."

Pointing out that her own experience was not unique she said that there were four women graduated in law last spring and not only were all four offered good legal positions in the government at Washington, but the statement was made that they would take as many as the college could send.

"Many women have done well in the practice," she replied in answer to a question on the success of women in law. "A notable example, of course, is Justice Florence Allen of the United States circuit court of appeals. The probable field has offered special opportunities for women. No better training could be had for executive positions or for social work."

In regard to whether women have the so-called legal mind, Miss Daum stated, "A goodly number of them have made the order of the Coif, the legal Phi Beta Kappa. They say that Mrs. Lois Griffen of the class of 1942 had the highest grades of any student, man or woman, in the last 33 years."

"A girl should not study law unless she has a better than average mind, for when all is said and done, the man has certain advantages in general practice. But it does not make her anti-social. Quite the contrary, the number of law graduates who marry and marry well is, I believe, quite up to the general average."

To Broadcast Language Meet

Two Hour Program Will Replace Annual School Conference

Hawkeye Cagers Drop Ohio State, 43-41

Rally to Earn Close Victory

Lundstedt Scores 18 Points to Lead Iowa; Play Without Subs

By DON SLVE
Daily Iowa Sports Editor

Playing the entire game without a substitute, Iowa's fighting Hawkeyes defeated Ohio State's cagers, 43-41, last night to give the Iowans their third conference win.

All five Hawks should get credit for the victory but Bob Lundstedt played his best game of the year to pull the game out of the fire, and totaled 18 points for the evening. Ben Trickey scored 12 points and needs only 10 points in tomorrow night's game against the Bucks to break Tom Chapman's record of 155 counters in 12 Big Ten games.

Iowa jumped off to a 7-0 lead and was ahead at the half, 27-22. During the latter part of the second half the Hawkeyes tired and Ohio State assumed a 37-36 lead with eight minutes left in the game.

Lundstedt dropped a free throw, Trickey a basket, and Al Wise, Buckeye forward, a basket to make the count even at 39 apiece. Lundstedt dropped another charity toss but Wise swished a long one to give Ohio State the lead with two minutes left.

However, Lundstedt drove in from the side to give Iowa a 42-41 lead, and Big Jim O'Brien added a free throw to make the final score 43-41. The Bucks took several hurried shots in the remaining seconds but failed to hit.

Ohio State used eight players in trying to wear down the Iowa iron man five, with Wise leading the invaders by scoring 14 counters. Dick Shriver started a one man rally for the Bucks at the start of the second stanza by dropping three straight long shots but later cooled down.

During most of the games the Hawkeyes controlled the rebounds but as the battle wore on, the Buckeyes outplayed the firing Iowa five and had many shots at the bucket.

Tomorrow night Ohio State will try again to stop the Hawks in the last game of the season but if Seniors Trickey and O'Brien, and the rest of the fighting Iowans have anything to say about it, the Bucks will be beaten.

Illini Cagers Break Scoring Mark in Win

Garner 86 Counters In Defeating Wildcats To Remain Unbeaten

CHICAGO (AP)—Illinois shattered the Western conference scoring record for points in one game by wallowing Northwestern last night, 86 to 44, before an all-time high Chicago stadium crowd of 19,700. The game virtually assured the Illini of an undefeated season and a second straight Big Ten cage title. They end their season Monday against Chicago.

The bombastic Illini wiped out the previous scoring high of 74 points made two weeks ago by Wisconsin against Chicago, and rang up their 11th straight conference victory.

Illinois piled up 40 of its points with ease in the first half, slamming to a 40-23 halftime lead. After the intermission the Illini shook the basket nets so frequently they led by 70-31 with nine and one half minutes to go.

As Northwestern took a badly needed time out the fans stood and screamed an ovation. Illini on the bench waved four fingers indicating to their playing mates they had four points to go to tie the record.

Russ Wendlund delayed the record a moment by sinking a basket for the Wildcats. Then Gary Andy Phillip, already a champion individual scorer, dropped in two quick baskets, his sixth and seventh of the game. They tied the record. Otto Graham made a free throw for Northwestern and then Ed Parker, subbing part of the last half for the ailing Gene Vance, flicked a free throw that broke the record. Illinois led 75-34—and breezed up 11 more points in the closing 6 1/2 minutes.

White Sox Establish Title to 13 Baseball Stars From Waterloo

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago White Sox have established title to 13 ball players of the Waterloo club in the now defunct Three Eye League.

Only five of the youngsters are available for immediate service—pitchers Jack Teagan, Gerald Rifenburg, Emil Bornet and Donald Spyster, and shortstop Mike Lazorchak. The remainder of the players are serving in the armed forces and will be placed on the Sox honor roll.

With suspension of the Three Eye league for the duration of the war, it became necessary under baseball law for Waterloo to sell all its baseball personnel or have them declared free agents. The Sox purchase was made to protect their interest in the farm hands.

The eight men now in the services are catchers Richard Skale and Joe Harney; pitchers Michael Bajo, Kenneth Manus, Dick Bonnie and Nicholas Popovich; second basemen Bernard Bengston and outfielder Ray Darlstrom.

Former Iowa Great Given Coaching Job

MORAGA, Calif. (AP)—Lieut. Emerson W. (Spike) Nelson, former head football coach at Yale and onetime star tackle of the University of Iowa, yesterday took over the job of football mentor at St. Mary's Naval Pre-Flight school, while Lieut. Charles Gehring, once the most valuable American league player, became its baseball coach.

Gehring said he would organize a baseball team immediately and seek games with all nearby college, university and other teams of equal caliber.

Nelson said his immediate duties were to put the flying cadets through the compulsory two-weeks of football training.

Nelson succeeded Lieut. Commander Gerald (Tex) Oliver, formerly of the University of Oregon, who has been assigned to duties with the air force of the Atlantic fleet.

Great Lakes' Cagers Edge Gophers, 46-41

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Great Lakes Bluejackets won their 23rd consecutive basketball game last night, defeating Minnesota 46 to 41 but they had to play through a five minute overtime period to gain the victory.

The Gophers nearly pulled the game out of the fire as Dick Burk, substitute forward, sank a basket from far out on the floor with only 10 seconds left to go, which tied the score at 36.

Collins Better BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Jimmy Collins, 73, baseball star of four decades ago and one of the game's greatest third basemen, rallied yesterday in his fight against pneumonia.

Budge, Judnich Report MONTEREY, Calif. (AP)—Two more widely-known names in the sports world—Donald Budge, noted tennis star, and Walter Judnich, hard-hitting outfielder for the St. Louis Browns—reported at the army's induction center here yesterday.

Dodds held a lead of a good 15 yards over Earl Mitchell of Indiana at the half-way mark with the Dixon another 10 yards back. The New York university Negro moved up to second place four laps from home but he still was 18 yards off the pace at the end of the third quarter, where Dodds was caught in 3:05.1. Stretched out far behind, burned out by the fierce first half pace, were Don Burnham of Dartmouth, Mitchell, and Pvt. Bobbie Ginn of Stinson Field, San Antonio, Tex. Ens. Walter Mehl of the Iowa Pre-Flight school dropped out.

Dixon Defeats Dodds In Featured Mile NEW YORK (AP)—Frank Dixon, New York university freshman, stood up under a burning first-half pace by defending champion Gil Dodds and then came from behind with a blazing last lap kick to win the featured mile championship of the national AAU indoor track and field meet in 4:09.6 at Madison Square Garden last night.

A crowd of 14,000 thrilled as Dodds, defending champion from Boston, ripped off the first quarter in 59.6 seconds and whirled past the half-mile marker in 2:00.8—probably the fastest first half clocking ever made in major mile competition.

'Y' Field Secretary Speaks on Problems Of Racial Relations

Although the law is on the Negro's side, the problem of race discrimination is much more satisfactorily solved by more diplomatic methods than by the use of legal pressure, which should be used only as a last resort, Yolanda Barnett, new national field secretary of race relations of the student council of the Y. W. C. A., believes.

Miss Barnett led the Inter-racial fellowship discussion Friday evening in the Roger Williams center. She described instances in various cities in which such tactics as the circulation of petitions among white people had done away with discrimination, without arousing antagonism.

Any Negro movement must have the support of a white group to succeed, she said. Also discussed at the meeting was the problem of Negroes on campuses, particularly the policy of excluding Negroes from dormitories and from membership in honorary fraternities. Such policies of administrative groups are often only policies and not rules, it was brought out.

Miss Barnett also met with the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. cabinets and advisory board members Friday afternoon, when the group discussed conditions on this campus and compared them with situations on other campuses.

Miss Barnett, who has been visiting southwestern and middle-western colleges since last September, when she began her work with the Y. W. C. A., was formerly a junior high school mathematics teacher in Louisville, Ky. She attended Ohio State college.
