GERMAN SAILORS FEEL WRATH OF BRITISH JACKTARS

THESE GERMAN SAILORS, survivors of the Axis supply ship Atlantis, twice felt the wrath of British seamen, incensed by the depredation of Hitler's wolfpack submarines. They are shown here being taken aboard another German ship after a British cruiser sank the Atlantis in the south Atlantic. Later, this ship, too, was sunk by the British but, according to the German caption on this picture, the men were again rescued, this time by a U-boat which towed them to shore.

Rommel Begins Drive Against British 'Eighth'

Lashes Out Along Mareth Line In Savage 'Delaying' Assault

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA (AP)—Marshal Erwin Rommel's axis forces lashed out savagely at the British Eighth army at dawn yesterday in an offensive against Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery for the first time since the battle of El Alamein in Egypt. After the loss of 21 tanks in the early stages of the fighting the axis army which Rommel had brought 2,000 miles across Libya, in retreat, struck back and pressed its attack. The 21 German tanks were knocked out without loss to the British. Rommel's tanks and infantry attack was described as "in considerable strength" and early reports indicated that fierce fighting was continuing.

Russians Take Gzhatsk, Nazi Defense Point

City's Seizure Blunts Enemy Salient Near Moscow as Reds Gain

LONDON (AP)—The Red army scored its third major victory in a week yesterday by capturing Gzhatsk, 100 miles west of Moscow and the nearest point to the Soviet capital in the Germans' crumbling hedge-hog defense system on the central front. "After storming the town twice," said a special Moscow communique recorded by the Soviet monitor, "our troops captured the town of Gzhatsk. The captured war material is being counted."

Lone American Sub Sinks 13 Jap Ships; Commander Describes Battle Experiences

WASHINGTON (AP)—The navy disclosed last night that a single American submarine has sunk 13 Japanese ships—10 cargo vessels and three warships. The submarine, which was not named, was commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Lucius Henry Chappell, 38, of Columbus, Ga. On one occasion the submarine torpedoed a Japanese freighter and Chappell "promptly squared off for a chase," the navy related, "anticipating that the Jap would either make for the bay or try to beach his ship. To his surprise, the Jap skipper did neither. Instead, the crew of little yellow men began pouring overboard and swimming away like sixty." "We soon learned the reason," Chappell explained. "After a very few minutes that ship blew up with the damndest explosion I ever saw. I guess he was loaded with ammunition." A few months after Pearl Harbor, Chappell and his crew had the experience of having an entire Japanese battle fleet steam over them while they lay submerged and unable to attack lest they be discovered and destroyed themselves. A destroyer came speeding out of a harbor, then another, and another. There were six of them, all in a row. Chappell then committed what he considers a grave strategic error. He closed in for an attack on the destroyers, and thereby missed a chance of the kind submarine men dream about—as presently became apparent. He closed range and was getting ready to pick off one of the destroyers when it spotted him. The destroyer pointed him as a bound points a pheasant, and the whole blamed covey of destroyers bore down on him. "Down we went," the submarine captain related ruefully. "And then," said Chappell, "I had probably the bitterest disappointment of my life." For as they lay there, inert and barely buoyant, with their presence known and six lethal destroyers waiting for the first sign of her on the surface, they heard the throb of propellers much heavier than any destroyer—louder and louder until they must have been directly overhead, then dying in the distance. Again they came, and again and again. An entire Jap battle force passed by them as they lay there and Chappell couldn't move a muscle. When they got to the surface, the fleet was gone and the bay was empty.

RAF Bombs Start Huge Fires at Essen, Nazi Munition Center

Allied Planes Conduct Tenth Straight Raid Over German Areas

LONDON (AP)—Several square miles of Essen, home of the great Krupp armaments works, were fired with angry, bright flames Friday night by British and Canadian bombers carrying the allied aerial offensive against the Germans through the 10th successive night.

Grimy Canadian pilots returning from the "very heavy and concentrated" assault on the enormous arsenals which employ 175,000 munitions makers reported one "colossal explosion" which lit the whole target area and sent flames leaping up hundreds of feet. They said they must have hit a powder factory or an ammunition storehouse in the Krupp works.

The bombs rained down for 40 minutes, and 180 miles away on their return flight, the pilots still could see the flames of their handiwork. The RAF lost 14 bombers.

The air ministry news service said the assortment of bombs included 150 two-ton blockbusters and quoted bombers' pilots who spoke only in superlatives to describe the "huge orange cloud" left hanging in the sky over the main explosion.

One pilot estimated a sheet of solid flame shot 1,000 feet into the air about halfway through the attack.

Some crews estimated the dense smoke column towered up to 15,000 feet over the flames.

The concentrated bombing appeared to have saturated the ground defenses but some planes were attacked by night fighters.

"I saw three terrific explosions that might have been oil tanks," Flight Sgt. R. E. Taylor of Boonville, Ind., a RCAF flier said. "After the explosions I saw billows of red and black smoke that boiled and burbled."

The loss of 14 bombers indicated that the RAF sent more than 300 planes to raze the plants of Hitler's chief arsenal for the 52nd time.

American Fortresses Pound French Coast

LONDON, Sunday (AP)—American Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked targets at Brest and Lorient, Nazi-held French coastal bases, Saturday afternoon, an official announcement said early today.

RAF and allied fighters escorted the bombers. "Bombing results were satisfactory" at Brest where the Liberators struck, and at Lorient, German submarine base, the Fortresses "obtained excellent results," the communique said. Three bombers and two fighters were lost.

Farm Workers to Be Deferred Despite Unfilled Draft Quotas

WASHINGTON (AP)—The war manpower commission told local draft boards last night to keep farm workers in deferred classifications—even if the quotas for the armed forces cannot then be met.

The commission also issued three other new instructions designed to help meet the farm labor shortage: 1. Any man with farming experience who is now in other work should be classified as farm-deferred (class 2-C or 3-C) if he goes back to agriculture as a regular job before notified to appear for induction.

2. State and county war boards of the agriculture department may request the deferment of a necessary farm worker even though the worker himself or his employer do not seek the deferment. The boards also may appeal from decisions of local draft boards. 3. If a draft board finds that a farm worker is not producing enough to justify his deferment it must refer his case to a county war board and allow 30 days for him to be placed in another job before it can draft him.

To gain draft deferment a farm worker is required to produce a minimum output fixed by formulas prepared by the agriculture department. Cases of workers falling to meet these requirements heretofore have been referred to the U. S. employment service. The new order is designed to give local farm boards greater influence.

Meanwhile a house appropriations subcommittee slashed by more than 50 percent the funds sought by the agriculture department to recruit farm labor. The action was aimed not at the recruiting program itself but was designed to bring the administration's program more in line with congressional views.

Asks Non-Interference With Nation's Farmers

AAA Chairman Urges Hands-Off Policy For Full '43 Production

DES MOINES (AP)—A. J. Loveland, state agricultural adjustment administration chairman, declared yesterday that what the farmer wants most right now is to be allowed to meet 1943 production goals without being subjected to verbal crossfire from rival pressure groups.

If members of the farm bloc, and those who advocate higher prices, continue to cast doubt upon the farmer's ability to produce and his willingness to help control inflation, Loveland warned, he may revolt and take his case directly to the people to protect himself against unfavorable public opinion.

Meanwhile, Iowa Farmer's union and Farm Bureau leaders made new protestations over what they consider the proper future of the AAA to be.

Francis Johnson, state Farm Bureau federation president, asserted upon his return from a trip to Washington that there are indications that 70 percent of the membership of congress now favors repeal of the AAA, but that his group believes the "foundation structure" should be preserved and the AAA organization "streamlined and strengthened."

Sweeping Changes In OPA Practices Outlined by Group

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sweeping changes in policies and practices of the OPA will be urged upon Administrator Prentiss Brown Tuesday by 10 members of the senate finance and banking committees, it was learned last night. The proposals will include: 1. Reduce personnel. 2. Limit the scope of price control to basic commodities only. 3. Abandon attempts to regulate profits. 4. Raise ceilings on farm products.

Two Jap Destroyers Sunk Near Solomons

U.S. Navy Task Unit Bombs South Pacific Coastal Installations

WASHINGTON (AP)—A navy task force stabbing into the outer limits of the Japanese defense zone in the south Pacific bombed shore installations at Vila and Munda in the Solomon islands Friday night, the navy reported yesterday, and sank two large enemy destroyers which tried to interfere.

No U. S. Ships Lost The destroyers were units of a squadron of light Japanese surface forces which a navy communique said "attempted to drive off our bombardment group." A battle resulted. No United States ships were lost. The encounter was the first surface action to develop so far north in the Solomons archipelago. Munda and Vila, which are close together, are about 180 nautical miles northwest of Guadalcanal. There are several flying fields in the Munda area but darkness saved the American ships, officially described as "light surface units," from air attack.

Bag 5 Planes The communique also reported the successful accomplishment of a "convoy mission" in the south Pacific despite the fact that the escorting task force was attacked by seven Japanese torpedo planes. Five of the Jap planes were shot down and not a ship was damaged. The action occurred Feb. 17. Tokyo had claimed that it resulted in the sinking of two American destroyers and one large transport.

Destruction of the two destroyers raised to 62 the number of enemy ships sunk in the Solomons campaign to date. In addition 11 have been reported probably sunk and 116 damaged. Including the five torpedo planes, the Japs have lost 882 aircraft in the Solomons.

Iowa's 1943 General Tax Will Set Record

DES MOINES (AP)—Iowans will pay an estimated record $372,668,000 in federal, state and local taxes this year, an Associated Press compilation showed yesterday. The figures do not take into account possible changes in federal tax rates. Nor do they include estimates as to the yield of the 5 percent victory tax now being collected from paychecks.

Pre-Flight Officials Believe—17-Year-Olds Will Make World's Best Fliers

By JOHN STICHOINOTH Associated Press Writer

Officials at the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school here believe that 17-year-olds, despite the seeming disadvantage of their extreme youth, have all the potentialities of becoming the best pilots in the world.

Basing their opinions on the records of other young men have made while at the school here, instructors in athletic, military and academic departments agree that the navy's new program of enlisting youths of 17 will make available some of the finest flier material in the country.

They hasten to point out that although the young men will be 17 years old when they enlist, they will be well past 18 when they begin pre-flight training. At that age they reach the point of greatest mental and physical adaptability.

Flight Preparatory Between the time the 17-year-old is enlisted by a cadet selection board and his arrival at a pre-flight school where he actually starts the rigorous portion of his pilot training, the youth will be sent to flight preparatory and war training service (CPT) bases. Officers here believe that that intervening period brings the youth to an age which is ripe for the intensive physical conditioning schedule he will undergo at a pre-flight school. In fact, they venture, youths enlisted in the 17-year-old class will have several important advantages over older men during their training period. "When a cadet of the 17 to 19-year-old class enters training for

SUI Gets Approval As Training Center For War Specialists

WASHINGTON (AP)—Iowa State college, the State University of Iowa and Luther college have been approved for specialized war training programs of the armed services, the joint committee for the selection of non-federal educational institutions announced yesterday.

Iowa State was put on the approved list for basic training under the army program, for the war department veterinary training program and for the war department's pre-medical training program. University of Iowa—for the war department medical training program (medical school), for training in basic medical sciences under the war department program (dental school), for the navy department medical training program (medical school), for the navy's dental training program (dental school).

naval aviation he is much closer to regular physical activity than men even one or two years older," Lt. Col. Bernie Bierman, athletic director at the Iowa pre-flight base, declared.

Still Has 'Knack' "From high school or college participation he still has the 'knack' of many sports and his responsiveness stands him in good stead in the physical training he is to receive," the former Minnesota football coach continued. "Fine physical condition—one of the most important things we seek here—is much easier to build and maintain in younger men. Stamina, of course, is always greater in this group and they learn physical co-ordination faster. Mentally, we find the 'teen-age boys are eager, conscientious and have the highest morale on the base."

Iowa Group Protests State Discrimination Against Jap Citizens

Expresses 'Concern' Over Cancellation Of Scattergood Plan

DES MOINES (AP)—A resolution "protesting and deploring" the passage of a resolution on Japanese-Americans by the Iowa house and senate recently was adopted by the Iowa Civil Liberties union at a quarterly meeting here yesterday.

The statement said the action "threatens our traditional national unity by setting race against race." In the same resolution, the union expressed "concern" over the dropping of plans for use of the Scattergood hostel at West Branch, Iowa, for training American citizens of Japanese descent to do farm work.

It reiterated "its stand that Japanese-American citizens should be treated like all other citizens." The resolution referred to the legislature's resolution "calling for the return to concentration camps of young Japanese-Americans whom the United States government has released for higher education."

Another side of the question of placing American-born Japanese on the campuses of Iowa colleges was presented when Earl Roadman, president of Morningside college, Sioux City, revealed that his efforts to have Japanese students at Morningside were stopped by authorities of the army air base at Sioux City.

In a statement to the union, President Roadman wrote that he was "deterred" from placing the Japanese-Americans at his school although it is not a war department policy to keep such students off campuses where the army has training groups.

down the Anglo-American forces and keeping the allied force on this side from stabbing at Rommel's exposed flank.

The Germans have withdrawn from almost all the territory they won in southern Tunisia and American and British troops are once more in the foothills of the secondary Tunisian dorsals at Pichon and Sidi Bou Zid bare by 70 miles from the German desert panzer army's main supply base at Sfax.

The forces used in yesterday's assault were undoubtedly the same ones Rommel had used in his southern Tunisian drive, including the rebuilt German 21st panzer division with its new Mark VI 60-ton tanks and the battered 15th panzer division in reserve. Von Arnim holds the Tenth panzer division probably in position to deal with any blow aimed at dividing the two axis armies.

While Rommel's attack can be construed only as a desperate military gamble to attack one foe while another powerful force is ready to pounce on him, he has much to gain if it should succeed.

If a crippling blow could be dealt to Montgomery's Eighth army the axis would gain weeks and perhaps months in the battle to maintain a foothold in Africa and delay the allied attacks on the continent just that much longer.

The Social Function of a State University. By Everett W. Hall

In a democracy all institutions, governmental, economic, fraternal, educational, should be imbued with a sense of social obligation. This is particularly important in the case of schools. The faith of democracy is largely based upon the assumption that the public is sufficiently intelligent and enlightened to control its own affairs wisely—an assumption that can be legitimately made only where there is a school system designed to serve the needs of the people as a whole. This is true for education at all levels. It is true for privately endowed schools and colleges. But above all, it is true for tax-supported educational institutions. A state university must never lose sight of its obligations to society. It must never become a vested interest in its own right, a mere minority group simply out get all it can for itself.

Everett W. Hall

A clear head, however, should always accompany a good heart. Institutions in a democracy should have clear ideas as to the distinctive contributions they can make to the common good. A state university, imbued with a deep sense of social obligation, should be unclouded in its apprehension of its own peculiar and irreplaceable function in serving society.

I think society is a great loser whenever a state university has confused and contradictory ideas as to its essential function. Just to serve society, in some valuable fashion, is not a sufficiently definite objective. Nor should a state university take over, as its main job, functions to which other institutions are specifically devoted. It should not take, as its special task, the function of the churches—that of spiritual and moral uplift, inspiration to a better life. It should not appropriate, as its definitive objective, the work of technical and vocational schools—that of training for highly specialized jobs, and of research having only immediately practical bearing. Again, a state university should not attempt to take over, as its peculiar obligation, the distinctive function of the small liberal arts college. The characteristic contribution of the latter lies in personalized, general education, in individualized cultural maturation, wholly at the undergraduate level.

What, then, is distinctive of, is specifically peculiar to, a state university, thereby defining its special contribution to society? A state university should above all be a university. Furthermore, a university is a society of scholars, where by "scholars" I mean men who in their own fields of knowledge (whether scientific or humanistic) are recognized to be at or near the top in ability and achievement. It may be thought that I am urging a paradox: A state university's distinctive contribution to society as a whole is to maintain itself as a society of scholars. That this is no paradox but simply an obvious truth, which is only confused thinking and shortsightedness overlooks, is my firm conviction.

There are two aspects to my contention that the distinctive function of a university lies in the fact that it is a society of scholars. Essentially the only place for scholars, in a democratic society, is in universities. There are comparatively few scholars (in my sense) in small colleges. Industry employs a few, in the form of research scientists. These cannot be many who, through inherited wealth, are able to maintain themselves. If it is vital to society, as I believe it is, that scholars be maintained and protected, in their pursuit of knowledge, from immediate economic and political pressures, then it is vital that universities, as societies of scholars, be maintained.

The apparent paradox of this position vanishes when we take the long view. A vast educational system, embracing some one fourth of our total population, requires a top, a top which, through pressing forward the boundaries of knowledge and exploring more deeply the general assumptions of accepted opinions and theories, lends inspiration to lower levels and insures progress, rather than stagnation, critical mindedness rather than indoctrination, to the whole educational system, and through that system to the whole public. View the matter in terms of generations or decades rather than years and the paradox vanishes.

This leads to the other aspect of my proposition. A university is a society of scholars. It is a place where the best minds in different fields may and should find stimulating contact. The great danger of scholarship is isolation—each man pursues some specialized investigations so far that he loses contact with others. This often derogates from his own special studies. It clearly lessens the possible stimulus these studies can furnish to other scholars and through them to the educational system as a whole. A university is a place where scholars in different fields can exchange both specific findings and mutual criticism on general assumptions and methods, thereby fructifying the work of all of them.

This view as to the basic function of a university has important implications for various schools within the organized set-up of the university. It clearly means that a university living up to its social obligation will have a strong, vital, graduate college. Such a graduate college is not a luxury to be condoned but a focal point of the whole university. It is the administrative unit reflecting most directly what is most distinctive of a university.

I do not mean that a university should simply become a graduate college; rather the graduate college should be a center which radiates stimulation to all other branches of the university. Professional schools are properly gathered together at a university not simply because of ease and economy in administration, but because they are not merely vocational and technical. They should be staffed, at least in the main, by scholars who need and give contact with other scholars, and thereby furnish their students with something vastly more important than merely technical training—a critical grasp of the broader bearings of their professions and a contact with seminal minds extending the knowledge upon which those professions are founded. Of course one must not forget that the distinction between pure and applied science is in a sense specious: neither can thrive without the other. Hence work in applied science is not only legitimate but essential in a university, if it is vitally and fruitfully related to investigation in pure science.

But it is in the field of liberal arts, of general education at the undergraduate level, that the view here advocated has the most significant implications. One of the most crying needs of college education today is to do again, in our day of science and specialized knowledge, what was successfully done by the older liberal arts colleges in a different age, namely, to inculcate a sense of relatedness and proportion, a view of life and of knowledge that has some outline as a whole, that gives perspective. This cannot be done by survey courses that give a smattering of this and that, nor by the ordinary introductory courses offered by various departments and designed to start the student on the road toward specialization. It can only be done by teachers who have some sort of perspective themselves, who see the bearings of their subjects upon other subjects because, at their own level of thought, they have had stimulating contact with scholars in other fields. The basis of a truly vital liberal education must lie in a society of scholars, not in curricular reforms, though the latter may furnish helpful tools.

All this implies that the society of scholars constituting a university must have a sense of a dual obligation to society. Besides the obligation of widening and deepening the knowledge at society's disposal, there is the obligation of bringing that widening and deepening process into social availability beyond the limits of the society of scholars itself. There are three chief ways of doing this. First and foremost there is the need of an intellectually vitalizing contact with undergraduate students—some of whom will be the scholars of the future, others will take some of the stimulus of their contact with the society of scholars out into their professional and business associations. Second there is invigoration of teachers lower down in the educational system, who today are too apt to be fed mere pedagogy when they need the stimulus of contact with people who are at the forefront in their respective fields. Third there is the matter of direct contact with the general public, through public lectures, radio broadcasting, forums, and other techniques. The stimulus to think honestly and impartially, to seek relevant knowledge, and to know where to seek it, is of incalculable value to a public which is to govern itself wisely in this age of almost catastrophic change. Such stimulus only comes, in any consistent and persistent fashion, from an institution essentially devoting itself to a disinterested pursuit of knowledge, and moreover only from one which has been signally successful in this enterprise.

Thus the society of scholars constituting the heart of a university must maintain contact, directly and indirectly, with the public. It must not interpret the protection and insulation society offers it as a license to self-compacency and self-centeredness. But nevertheless it must constantly remember, and as constantly remind the public, that the distinctive contribution it can make to society as a whole rests basically on the fact that it is a society of scholars, devoted to the increases of knowledge and to the deepening of comprehension by man concerning himself and the world he lives in. No state university can justify its use of public funds unless it can show it has consistently built its policy on this fundamental truth.

HOLLYWOOD—It was a happy day for the Cagney boys. There was Bill, the younger, sitting broad and grinning in a big leather chair behind a glass-topped desk. There was Jimmy, sprawled on the leather divan, winking at Bill, now and then while they exchanged jibes with each other and John Van Druten, the writer. Such elegance. An executive suite at United Artists. Heavy ashtrays on the desk, leather upholstery, deep carpet—and the red-headed Cagneys in full command.

"We're the happiness boys," said Bill. "We're the Happy Company, aren't we boys?"

"Yeah," said Jimmy. "Bill's so happy that when I come in in the morning I always say what's-the-matter? It's the script, he says. John there has found something that needs fixing. John's chin hangs to the ground. So does Bill's. Then they fix it up, and they're the happiness boys again—for a couple of minutes."

The script is "McLeod's Folly," from a yarn by Louis Bromfield. It's different, they say, from anything Jimmy has done before. He isn't a tough guy, nor a public enemy. He doesn't get framed into a prison jute mill where each dawn he dies, he doesn't fall for a strawberry blonde, and he doesn't win any wars.

"We wanted something different," said Bill. From what they say, they've found it. Jimmy plays a tramp reporter (circa 1905) who wanders into a small town newspaper fight.

I noted that their script, pages of which were spread on Bill's desk, was in various colors like any big studio's but there was still something missing. How about a coat-of-arms, a trademark, like M-G-M's Leo, RKO's radio tower, U's globe, Warner's eagle?

"How about," asked the amiable Van Druten, "an elevator—permanently stalled on the ground floor?"

The Happy Company howled. The Cagney boys, after so, so long at Warner's, are going to have more fun.

The Beveridge Plan--

By PAUL MALLON

It Doesn't Live Up to the Claims

WASHINGTON—The politicians are dusting off a new brand of goods called the Beveridge Social Security plan. Sir William Beveridge is coming to this country shortly to promote it and is already talking to some of our meetings on trans-Atlantic telephone. The London press and radio reporters handled the recent debate in parliament on the subject as if this plan was to answer man's historic longing for safety in life. The state was to care for all his ills, from cradle to the grave, providing disability allowances, medical, and maternity benefits. Anyone who was against the idea was just an old Tory.

Right Thinkers for It
All right thinkers, with the interest of the common people at heart, were for it. That is the picture with which we are presented. What nobody pointed out was that the average disability allowance for a man and wife under this Beveridge panacea was $8.08 a week. This is hardly enough to keep body and soul alive. Certainly it is not social security.

It is just a pleasant standard guard against starvation, and hardly justifies the idealistic advertising that accompanies it. The American system has provided a similar pittance of $22.94 a month average payment for old age benefits, and $12 a week for unemployment insurance.

While all people have paid into the fund, very few people have benefited. Our experience with social security to date has shown it to be mainly a sly method of collecting more taxes.

The Iowa Funds
The two funds in the treasury have collected $7,000,000,000 more to date than they have paid out, but this $7,000,000,000 can hardly be called a fund because it merely represents a debt of the treasury to itself, as the money has been spent on regular government running expenses.

It is doubtful if many people will ever benefit, if this government otherwise provides their lives with a decent living standard. The average good worker will never be out of a job in his life, or should not be. There was never a time in the worst depression when more than one-fifth of the workers were out of jobs. And if the worker is thus provided with a decent living standard, he can make better provisions himself for his old age than the government offers him with its $22.94 a month to live on.

Something Bigger
It is evident, therefore, that real social security calls for something bigger than Beveridge plans. Far more important for one instance, is the price level and the value of the dollar.

The $22.94 a month cure for old age fears, was enacted some years ago with somewhat the same glamor of publicity, prophesying a guarantee of social security for all, at a time when prices of food were just about what they are now.

A greater degree of social security would have been offered if the government had kept prices stable—for more people would have accomplished more security for themselves than is represented by these small benefit payments to the few.

But then you may say: Why not increase the allowances and continue to follow the path of Beveridge and our own current social security system?

They are trying to do that now in Michigan. A proposal is pending to have the state pay a base average of $26 a week for unemployment, plus $3 for each dependent, with a protective maximum of $38 per week.

Tremendous Taxation
That suggests a decent living, but it also suggests tremendous taxation on all the workers and employees to pay to the few who are not good workers, or to those who will be able to make more money staying idle and living off the government than by doing a day's work.

Security is a goal man always has sought and never attained. He will never attain it because it is not an absolute thing. There is no security in nature.

No government or anyone else can guarantee that you will not catch a disease tomorrow, for instance. Uncertainty is an unavoidable factor in human life.

To protect himself, man builds houses of brick and stone, but to maintain these as securities against the weather, he must constantly keep them up, mending, paying taxes on them, buying fuel to heat them. His fight to protect (See MALLON, page 5)

Germans May Quit Southern Tunisia Before Vise Closes

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The axis commander in French Africa must choose, and choose soon, whether to run or fight in the south.

Time and the weather are running against him. Once the British-manned jaws of the allied nutcracker begin squeezing in on him in earnest, it might be too late to effect a disengagement in the south and a retreat northward for concentrated defense of the Tunisian tip itself.

Just how soon the British First Army in the north or the British Eighth Army in the south now feeling out axis strength in the Mareth line will be ready to put on the pressure is uncertain. Weather conditions have hampered the development of an allied attack front on the Bizerte-Tunis sectors. Supply lines running across 1500 miles of desert to Egypt have slowed up a full scale assault by the victorious British Eighth Army in the south.

Both conditions are passing. The end of the rains in northern Tunisia is at hand. British successes in short-cutting supply difficulties in the south to make Benghazi and Tripoli sea-fed advance bases relatively close up behind the fighting front is indicated.

The Nazi supreme commander in Tunisia, whether Rommel or another, is aware of that. He can closely estimate the moment when he must face attack on both ends of his 300-mile long Tunisian coastal strip with his inshore flank in the center again exposed, or run for it, abandoning the Mareth line to concentrate northward.

By every rule of military logic the latter should be his decision. His chances of prolonged resistance to limit or prevent effective allied use of the Mediterranean narrows until axis defense positions along the north shore of that sea are well developed would be better with all his forces grouped in northern Tunisia than with them dispersed to guard more than 300 miles of front vulnerable at many points.

By a prompt retreat northward to Sousse on the east coast, the Nazi commander could shorten his front to 100 miles or so and still cover all of the Tunisian tip. An air line from Cape Serat, west of Bizerte on the north coast, to the vicinity of Ben Fische on the east (See INTERPRETING, page 5)

The Cagney 'Happiness Boys' Start Work for the Happy Company

By ROBBIN COONS

"We're the happiness boys," said Bill. "We're the Happy Company, aren't we boys?"

"Yeah," said Jimmy. "Bill's so happy that when I come in in the morning I always say what's-the-matter? It's the script, he says. John there has found something that needs fixing. John's chin hangs to the ground. So does Bill's. Then they fix it up, and they're the happiness boys again—for a couple of minutes."

The script is "McLeod's Folly," from a yarn by Louis Bromfield. It's different, they say, from anything Jimmy has done before. He isn't a tough guy, nor a public enemy. He doesn't get framed into a prison jute mill where each dawn he dies, he doesn't fall for a strawberry blonde, and he doesn't win any wars.

"We wanted something different," said Bill. From what they say, they've found it. Jimmy plays a tramp reporter (circa 1905) who wanders into a small town newspaper fight.

I noted that their script, pages of which were spread on Bill's desk, was in various colors like any big studio's but there was still something missing. How about a coat-of-arms, a trademark, like M-G-M's Leo, RKO's radio tower, U's globe, Warner's eagle?

"How about," asked the amiable Van Druten, "an elevator—permanently stalled on the ground floor?"

The Happy Company howled. The Cagney boys, after so, so long at Warner's, are going to have more fun.

They have a regulation conference room, complete with center table, and all the furniture covered with Jimmy's cast-off sweat-shirt, trunks, and other athletic impediments. Gold shares, generally rated as "peace" issues, found favor and improved modestly. Rails slipped at the last but rubbers, coppers and steels held their own or advanced fractionally despite pressure or profit cashing and weekend balancing of commitments.

Prof. Erich Funke Talks on Broadcast Of Conference Here

German Instructor Says War Wakened U.S. to Languages

"The key to the soul of a nation is its language," Prof. Erich Funke of the German department said at the conference on language and literature, broadcast from the senate chamber of Old Capitol over station WSUT yesterday morning.

Stating that the war has made us wide awake to the value of foreign language study, Professor Funke explained the values of both modern foreign and classical language study today. An understanding of the languages of our allies is an absolute necessity for coordinating strategy, he said.

The decline in the study of the French language has been a great mistake, Professor Funke declared. The French are a great people, he said, and represent a great culture. They are fighting on our side as well as waiting for the day when they will throw off the yoke of dictatorship.

The emphasis in the study of foreign language has decidedly shifted to the practical, Professor Funke went on. Pronunciation, conversation and military terminology are now being stressed, and the language courses have been speeded up, he pointed out.

Catherine R. Miller, instructor in French at Muscatine junior college, also emphasized the value of instruction in French. Stating that the method and type of instruction should be suited to the needs of the pupils and the times, she pointed out that the teacher should realize the changed conditions under which they have to teach, and adapt their methods of instruction accordingly.

Prof. Dorrance White of the classical languages department told the conference that there is a need to vitalize the study of Latin and relate it to the war. Quoting a letter from Marian Butler, a Texas Latin teacher, he showed that Latin may be connected with the study of European migration, life lines, invasions and the equipment of ancient and modern warfare.

"The focal point of the world in which we live is still man," said Prof. O. E. Nybakken, also of the classical languages department, pointing out that there is a close correlation between language and thought. One of the best and most efficient ways to get meaning is by translating, and by doing this, the pupil is perfecting himself in the art of expression. Latin is an excellent medium for this, especially for beginning students, he said.

The teacher must impress upon the pupils the dignity of man as such," Prof. M. F. Carpenter of the English department said in discussing the necessity for the study of literature.

Professor Crawford in Charge Other speakers at the conference were Prof. Juan Lopez-Morillas of the Spanish department, who discussed the problem of the minority Catalan group in Spain, and Lola Hughes, instructor in dramatics and speech, Iowa City high school, who discussed problems of play production during wartime.

Prof. Bartholow V. Crawford of the English department was chairman of the conference. Suggestions concerning the radio conference will be welcomed by the extension division.

Peerce to Sing At Concert in Iowa Union

Jan Peerce, Metropolitan opera star, appearing in Iowa Union tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, will present a musical program including numbers by Handel, Mendelssohn, Rachmaninoff, Donizetti and Brahms.

Peerce made his debut on the Metropolitan opera stage Nov. 29, 1941, in Verdi's "Traviata." It was a supreme conquest for the 35-year-old American singer, whose voice via the airwaves was familiar to millions throughout the country.

Press Comments The San Francisco News wrote of his western performance: "The greatest tenor there is today"; The Seattle Star wrote: "His solo stumped him indelibly as great," and the San Francisco Examiner saluted Peerce with "Hats off to a great new tenor, who is without a doubt the best on the American opera stage!"

Following the singer's appearance at the Metropolitan, Olin Downes reported in the New York Times: "Peerce's audience was delighted and with good reason." Henry Simon in PM said: "His Met debut completely justified the stories of his west coast triumphs." Peerce began his singing career with a dance orchestra, averaging 40 songs a night. His concert career began in 1936, and five years later he appeared in the Metropolitan Opera house.

Red Cross Receives $10,000 During Week

Mrs. M. E. Taylor Says Response Good To Local Campaign

More than $10,000 was contributed by residents of Johnson county during the first week of the Red Cross war fund drive, Mrs. M. E. Taylor, general chairman, announced yesterday.

Officers, personnel and cadets of the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school have contributed $1,627 of this amount, Mrs. Taylor said, but these returns are far from complete. Lieut. W. T. Swenson is chairman of the drive at the navy base.

Telephone reports indicate that the response to the drive is wonderful," Mrs. Taylor reported. Contributions have been very generous, but they must continue to be so, she stated.

North Liberty, during the first week of the drive, reported that the amount collected there represented more than twice the donations of last year.

The campaign for the university is being organized by departments and solicitation will begin there this week. F. L. Hamburg is in charge of this section of the drive.

Prof. Lulu E. Smith Will Speak to Club

Major de Seversky To Talk Here Friday

Author Thinks U.S. Has Still to Realize Its Real Air Power

"The United States has not realized its real air power," declares Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky, who is scheduled to speak in the main lounge of Iowa Union at 8 p. m. Friday.

"We have primarily army and naval aviation used as auxiliary weapons. These are subject to and restricted by army and navy officials whose traditional thinking hampers the full use of our power as a separate strategic element."

In every major phase of the present war, he points out, at Narvik and Dunkerque, at Crete and Singapore, in the Coral Sea and at Midway, it was the air factor which decided the outcome.

Therefore, it is time to realize that we have another great area to cover and to conquer—the "air-ocean." Even the strongest armed forces and overwhelming naval tonnage will not protect any country from air attack. Nor does the major believe that any great land offensive will succeed without initial air supremacy.

His book, "Victory Through Air Power," published by Simon and Schuster, is a plea for a separate air force with authority to develop its own strategy and its own equipment.

Carry More Explosives "The planes which raided Coventry," he pointed out, "dropped 250 to 500 German planes to do this. In the recent raid on Rostock, the British employed three flights of 50 planes and dropped 1,000 tons of explosives. It is conceivable that in another year, or less, advances in aviation will enable us to drop 1,000 tons of explosives on enemy objectives with as few as 20 planes.

"It can readily be seen how rapidly aviation in this country is going ahead, and none can overestimate the potential genius of the American mind nor the speed which we can attain if we set our minds to it. What is needed above all is a wider recognition of the decisive role of aviation, and an autonomous air-power organization to exploit fully every ounce of the potentiality of aviation."

Major de Seversky, who is regarded as the leading voice in air power in this country, was educated in the Russian naval academy. A flying ace in the last war, he is now a naturalized American and holder of the amphibian speed record as well as a leading plane designer and inventor. His book is regarded as the most important single contribution to a popular understanding of air power that has been made in this war.

University Symphony Orchestra to Play Cycle 'My Country' at Concert Wednesday

The cycle, "My Country," composed by Bedrich Smetana will be performed by the University Symphony orchestra, conducted by Prof. Philip Gresley Clapp in Iowa Union Wednesday at 8 p. m.

The cycle consists of six numbers, which are based upon traditional Bohemian legends, and the music contains many traditional folk melodies from Bohemian life.

Founder of Czech Music Smetana, (1824-1884), founder of the National School of Modern Czech Music, was opposed by his father in his choice of career as a musician. The composer came to Prague, the capital and music center of Bohemia, in 1843, with 20 golden florins (about the equivalent of eight dollars in our money). He spent months of severe trial and virtual starvation, from which his health never more than partially recovered.

From 1844 to 1848 he held a position as music master in Count Thun's family, where he gave five hours of instruction daily and had the remainder of time free for study and composition. In 1848 he received an official permit to establish a school of music. Liszt supplied the necessary funds, and also did other kindnesses for Smetana.

Conductor Smetana held a conductorship in Gothenburg, Sweden, until 1861, and from this time until his hearing failed, he was conductor at the National Opera house in Prague.

Smetana wrote several operas, of which "The Bartered Bride" has proved a great favorite in this country. In 1874, in spite of nearly total deafness and rapidly failing health, Smetana completed the first two movements of the cycle, "My Country"; the finals was completed five years later.

Seldom Performed in America The completed work was performed only once during the composer's lifetime. Frequent performances were given in Bohemia for some time afterward, and the cycle was heard occasionally in continental Europe until recently. Seldom has the entire work been performed in this country, the most recent performance having been given in New York City, Oct. 26, 1942, by an orchestra from the Philharmonic, under the baton of Herman Adler.

Tickets for the concert will be available beginning today in Iowa Union.

The Metropolitan Opera company in Boston at the Metropolitan theater. He sang the tenor roles in "Rigoletto" and "Traviata." Several years before he had appeared in this same theater in a five-a-day vaudeville show with the late "Roxy" Rothafel.

This year Peerce is making a concert tour of 40 cities; the Metropolitan Opera house has doubled the number of his performances from last year, and he is currently heard weekly on the "Great Moments in Music," network program.

February Sale Of War Bonds Exceeds Quota

Johnson county war bond investors bought $221,761 worth of war bonds during the month of February, exceeding the county's monthly quota by $13,761, according to Frank D. Williams, county war bond chairman.

"War bond sales for January also topped the monthly quota and based on the sales for the first two months of 1943, Johnson county is off to a splendid start," Williams said.

The county's quota for 1943 is $2,490,500, while the monthly quota for war bonds is $208,000. Actual cash purchases are the basis for monthly sales of war bonds, and advance pledges made in a given month for future purchases are not counted.

City high's high-powered five advanced to the district tournament here last night by trouncing St. Mary's, 52-26. The Hawklets jumped into the lead at the start and continued to increase their advantage throughout the game.

Bucky Walter had his best night of the year and dumped in 17 points to lead the City high scoring, but Dave Danner with 14 counters and Bill Sangster with 10 also contributed to the Little Hawks' total.

Co-captain Mel Smith was the standout performer for the hard-fighting Marians as he led the scoring with 10 points and controlled rebounds off both baskets.

Sangster tallied eight of his points in the initial period to get the Hawklets away to a 12-4 advantage at the close of the quarter. Sangster injured his shoulder midway in the quarter, but returned to the game after a short layoff.

The Ramblers kept high-scoring Danner scoreless in the first period, but in the second quarter he began to roll, and along with Walter led the scoring during that period.

City high led, 27-14 at the half, and Danner and Walter scored all but one of the Hawklets' points during the second quarter.

Smith did his best to put St. Mary's back into the ball game in the third period, but Walter and Danner kept up their scoring.

Smith scored five points during the period, but City high kept pulling away, and increased its margin to 42-23 at the start of the last period. The final quarter started slowly, and Danner's free throw was the only scoring throughout the first four minutes.

The Hawklets outscored the Ramblers, 10-3, during the period, with the reserves playing the last few minutes for both teams.

Except for the work of Smith, the taller City high team controlled the rebounds, and St. Mary's usually was limited to one shot at the basket before losing the ball. The Marians also had trouble in coping with the fast break of the Hawklets.

Coach Fran Merten's shift of Walter to forward seems to be paying dividends because Bucky has developed into a high scorer forward to team with Danner. Dick Lewis also has shown a marked improvement since being moved back to the guard post, and he and Sangster played well together last night.

Former Baseball Star Dies of Pneumonia

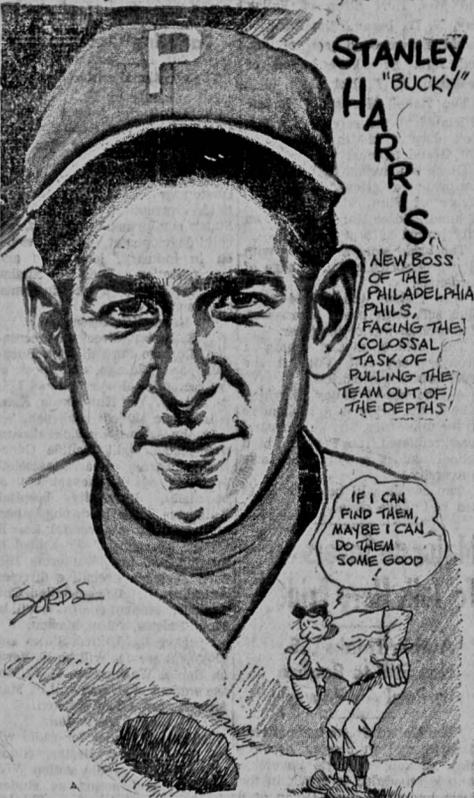

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Shortly after renewal of a movement to place his name in baseball's hall of fame at Cooperstown, James J. (Jimmy) Collins, credited with revolutionizing third base play, died yesterday of pneumonia.

The 73-year-old Collins, manager of the 1903 Boston Red Sox, first team to win a world series, had been hospitalized since Feb. 24.

An original nominee for baseball's hall of fame in 1935, Collins failed to receive sufficient votes. His candidacy, however, gained wide support the last few months.

He spent 19 years in professional baseball, 13 of them in the majors where he played with the Boston Braves, the Red Sox and the Philadelphia Athletics. He was the first to play away from the bag and to develop a defense against bunts.

Hawk Malmen Finish Fourth; Miller Barely Loses in Final

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—Indiana won the Big Ten conference wrestling meet yesterday, piling up 28 points and producing individual champions in four of the eight weight divisions.

Michigan was second with 22 points and two individual champions and Illinois and Purdue were tied for third, each with 19 points and one title-holder.

The individual champions crowned in today's final matches were: 121 pounds—Richard Kopel, Michigan; 128 pounds—Robert Bruner, Indiana; 136 pounds—Chester Robbins, Indiana; 145 pounds—Manly Johnson, Michigan; 155 pounds—James Wilkinson, Indiana; 165 pounds—Tom Smerdel, Illinois; 175 pounds—Harry Traster, Indiana.

Heavyweight—Frank Ruggieri, Purdue. Other teams' totals were Iowa 12, Northwestern 10, Chicago and Minnesota 5 each and Wisconsin 3. Ohio State did not enter a team.

Only two of the 1942 champions were in action in this year's meet and both retained their crowns. Johnson of Michigan took his 145 pound title match today from Rolie Rayburn of Illinois, 3 to 1, and Frank Ruggieri of Purdue scored a 6 to 4 decision over Illinois' Alex Agase in the heavyweight division.

Teams were awarded six points for each first place and four for each second. Victories in yesterday's consolation finals were worth two points apiece and each fourth place netted one point. In addition one point was awarded a team for each fall scored by one of its wrestlers in Friday's preliminaries and yesterday's finals.

Thus Indiana rolled up 24 of its winning quota of 28 points on victories in the championship finals alone. The only fall recorded in the

Joe Medwick Signs 1943 Dodger Contract

NEW YORK (AP)—Joseph Michael (Muscles) Medwick, whose holdout struggles with Branch Rickey assumed epic proportions when both were with the St. Louis Cardinals, has come to terms with the Brooklyn Dodgers this winter without a murmur of protest.

The former general manager of the Cardinals conferred with Medwick in St. Louis a few weeks after Rickey had become president of the Dodgers and yesterday Rickey said Medwick had written him, "The talk you had with me was the best I have ever had in my life."

Rickey said Medwick's letter expressed a determination to regain the good will of both the Brooklyn players and fans this year by having his best season and to this end he had worked all winter to get into condition.

Irish Win, 49-47

NEW YORK (AP)—Rice Institute, co-champions with Texas of the Southwest conference, yesterday was invited to compete in the National Invitation Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden March 18-22-27 and 29.

Whitehill, who played under Bucky at Detroit 13 years ago, had his best season in 1933, when he won 22 and lost eight for the pennant winning Washington club. He hurled a 4-0 shutout in the world series that fall.

Ohio State Dethrones Wolves in Swimming

Hawkeyes Finish 4th With 11 Points; Relay Team Performs Best

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—With Keo Namaka setting a new Big Ten record in the 440-yard free style, Ohio State's Buckeyes won the Western conference swimming championship last night, and ended Michigan's four-year reign as title-holder.

Scoring 66 points to Michigan's second-place quota of 61, the Buckeyes sewed up the championship in the next-to-the-last event of the night when Namaka, stocky Hawaiian boy from Maui, T. H., swam the 440 free style in 4 minutes, 47.4 seconds, nearly five seconds better than the listed record of 4:52.1 made in 1938 by Tom Haynie of Michigan.

Ahead 60 to 51 going into the last event, the Buckeyes yielded the 400-yard free style relay to the pressing Wolverines, but took third themselves for six more points and a clean-cut title.

The two-day competition, in which a total of four records were produced, was strictly a duel between Ohio State, coached by Mike Peppe, and Michigan, directed by Matt Mann.

Minnesota was third with 14 points, Iowa fourth with 11, Purdue and Indiana tied for fifth with eight apiece and Northwestern next with four. Illinois, Chicago and Wisconsin failed to place.

Michigan trailed only 48-47 with two events left when Namaka won the 440 free style in record time and two of his teammates took second and fourth to the Wolverines' third and fifth. That virtually sewed up the crown for the Buckeyes, and their third in the final event did it.

Last night's summaries in the Western conference swimming championship: 100-yard free style—won by John Patten, Michigan; second, Merton Church, Michigan; third, Ernest Vogel, Indiana; fourth, Mark Follansbee, Ohio State; fifth, Robert Acker, Minnesota. Time 52.7 seconds.

220-yard breaststroke—won by James Skinner, Michigan; second, Elroy Heideke, Purdue; third, Emil Mamaliga, Ohio State; fourth, Irving Einbinder, Michigan; fifth, Ben Hayes, Ohio State. Time 2 minutes 24.3 seconds.

440-yard free style—won by Keo Namaka, Ohio State; second Jack Ryan, Ohio State; third, Walter Stewart, Michigan; fourth Don Coolahan, Ohio State; fifth, John McCarthy, Michigan. Time 4 minutes 47.4 seconds.

400-yard free style relay—won by Michigan (Merton Church, Robert West, Ace Cory, John Patten); second, Minnesota; third, Ohio State; fourth, Iowa; fifth, Northwestern. Time 3 minutes 34 seconds.

Results of yesterday's bout for third place: 121 pounds—Bernard Conrad, Iowa, defeated Nick Karralis, Minnesota, 7-4.

128 pounds—Arthur Nethercot, Northwestern, defeated Woodward Warwick, Michigan, 6-2.

136 pounds—Chester Robbins, Indiana, defeated Don Nettesheim, Purdue, 9-5.

145 pounds—Joe Abdo, Minnesota, defeated Richard McKinstry, Iowa, 2-0.

155 pounds—Kirk Perry, Illinois, won by forfeit over Jack Shepard, Iowa.

165 pounds—Sigmond Golonka, Indiana, defeated Hugh Mack, Michigan, 1-0.

175 pounds—John Greene, Michigan, won a referee's decision over Harris Stageberg, Iowa.

Heavyweight—William Ivy, Northwestern, defeated William Aidsworth, Minnesota, 4-1.

Rice Invited
NEW YORK (AP)—Rice Institute, co-champions with Texas of the Southwest conference, yesterday was invited to compete in the National Invitation Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden March 18-22-27 and 29.

Whitehill, who played under Bucky at Detroit 13 years ago, had his best season in 1933, when he won 22 and lost eight for the pennant winning Washington club. He hurled a 4-0 shutout in the world series that fall.

The addition of Whitehill, who lives at Cedar Rapids, completes the new field management installed by the Phils' new owner, William D. Cox, of New York. Harris last week retained Chuck Klein as player-coach and Friday Harold Anson Bruce, 37, was signed as trainer to replace Leo "Red" Miller.

Big Ten Puts Service Teams In Grid Plans

CHICAGO (AP)—After two days of trying to arrange football schedules to meet a curtailed travel program and to accommodate service teams, Western conference coaches and athletic directors adjourned yesterday with a general pattern in mind but in agreement, that finishing touches must be worked out individually.

Announcement that admission to games played at military stations would be free to members of the armed forces, prompted Major John L. Griffith, Big Ten athletic commissioner, to urge that as many games as possible be played at the camps.

He told Big Ten delegates and representatives of Marquette, Michigan State, Notre Dame and Pittsburgh, that army and navy teams were willing to pay expenses of colleges for home contests.

"But the service clubs," he added, "also want to play some games away from their camps to build up their athletic funds. Naturally, scheduling problems have been created—but one thing is certain, there will be games at service camps."

Major Griffith said the nine Western conference schools playing football and four independents had pledged to play at least one game at military camps.

"But they are not necessarily confined to Great Lakes, Camp Grant (Ill.) and the Iowa Pre-Flight school," he said. "Fort Knox, Camp Custer and other bases supporting grid teams must be considered."

The schedule problem revolves around non-conference games previously contracted by Big Ten schools. Minnesota, for instance, is slated to play at Pitt—and this and other such contests cannot be written off without the consent of both parties.

Rail restrictions raise a question about three Notre Dame games with Stanford at Palo Alto, Calif., and Carnegie Tech and Southern California at South Bend.

Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame believes travel may make these games impossible. However, he is hopeful of continuing the annual game with Army.

If vacancies appear on the Irish schedule, they could be filled by Great Lakes and Iowa Pre-Flight, thus completing an 11-game chart such as last year's.

Amber Light Captures Featured Derby Race

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—Amber Light a front running speedster owned by the Dixiana farms, scored a nose decision over the highly regarded Calumet farm's Ocean Wave yesterday in the $15,000-added Louisiana derby. D. F. Whitaker's Pop's Pick was third, three lengths back.

The chestnut son of Red Sunset by Pilate, second choice of the crowd of 8,000, made the mile and an eighth in 1:52 3/5, fair time for a slightly off track. He returned $9 for $2 to win in the mutuels.

Johnny Longden came down from Oklawaha park at Hot Springs, Ark., to ride his third Louisiana derby winner. He had scored in 1938 on Rushaway and in 1939 on Wise Fox.

Ocean Wave, spotted top weight of 128 pounds, pocketed the light's six precious pounds. With Wendell Eads in the saddle Ocean Wave was established a 2-5 favorite.

The finish behind the first three was in this order: Valdina farm's Valdina Way, Coldstream stable's Reaping Glory and Woolford farm's Legislator.

 A sweeping axis retreat from the south behind an east-west line anchored in the mountainous country between Bou Arada and Robaa and similarly bolstered to the east in the hills along the east coast below Bou Fischea would seem to offer opportunity to stand siege. The front would not run more than 125 miles or so. It would be ideally served by the road and rail network centering in Tunisia and fanning out to reach any part of it quickly.

 There has been no authoritative estimate of axis strength in Tunisia since Mr. Churchill's figure of around 250,000 men all told was published. Since then further reinforcements have no doubt arrived but further losses also have been incurred, particularly in tank strength indispensable to an axis attempt at maneuver operations in so large a field as that over which its forces are now deployed. Concentrated to the north behind shortened lines, that army would certainly be more effective for a prolonged fight when the final battle is joined.

vide himself with security, therefore is a continuous struggle, which is never over.
Questionable Method
 It is not likely that man will ever devise a means for completely overcoming the hazards of life. Certainly the kind of security that the political hucksters now are crying is a questionable method which has not performed the feats claimed for it and can never do so.

Certainly also, governments can provide a greater security to a greater number of people by different means, such as maintaining a stable value of the dollar, preventing inflationary price and wage increases, and maintaining good business conditions which will furnish continuous employment.

I.C. Debaters Place Second In Forensics

Davenport Takes 1st In Southeast District Meet With 50 Points

Davenport triumphed and Iowa City took second place in the debate section of the Southeast district forensic tournament for high schools which was completed yesterday at City high after four rounds of debate.

The final standings and points of individual team ratings are: first, Davenport with 50 points; second, Iowa City, 47 points; third, Burlington, 46; fourth, Ottumwa, 44; fifth, Newton, 38; sixth, Mt. Pleasant, 34, and seventh, Muscatine, with 33 points.

City high will go to the state contest with Davenport and Burlington to represent the southeast district.

Davenport, Burlington and Iowa City also topped the extemporaneous speaking list, while Davenport obtained a second place in oratory, which was won by Oskaloosa, a school that did not enter the debates.

Arguing the establishment of a post-war federal world government, City high put in Bob Knowlton and Bob Tyndall on the affirmative side with Dick King as an alternate, and Bonnie White and Jim Bauer handling the negative with Don Winslow as an alternate.

Owing to the fact that alternates were used extensively by all teams throughout the tournament, individual speaker ratings could not be established.

In retrospect, as one of the judges commented, the tournament was a successful display of verbal might, with the debating having been done on a considerably higher plane than at the Iowa Nine meet which was held here some time ago. The southeast district contests began Friday afternoon and ended at noon yesterday with the announcement of the debate results.

This bulletin lists recommended varieties of vegetables, amount of seed needed, planting schedules and methods of disease control. County Agent Emmett C. Gardner's suggested plan for a garden 30 by 50 feet in size will also be available.

A Currier girl told a Tri-Delt... A Tri-Delt told a Pi Phi... a Pi Phi told a Theta... and so the rumor spread... that one of the newest and smartest spring styles was the combination of butcher linen jackets with print jersey skirts... pretty and practical...
