A CRACK-UP ABOARD A CARRIER

A THRILLING MOMENT is caught by an alert cameraman as the pilot of a Grumman fighter plane makes a bad landing on the United States escort carrier Altamaha, smashes the right wing tip against a battery of 40-mm. Bofors guns and then plunges into the sea. 1—Gun crew ducks as plane wing strikes guns. 2—Pilot speeds plane free of carrier. 3—The plane plunges toward the sea. 4—As the plane strikes the water the pilot prepares to bail out. He was saved. These are United States navy photos.

Battle for Attu Island Nears End As Yanks Blast Hemmed-In Japs

Ships, Planes Support Attack

Stiff Opposition Causes Predictions of Heavy American Casualties

WASHINGTON (AP)—The battle for Attu island has swept into its final phase with American troops attacking Japanese forces hopelessly trapped on the shore of Chichagof harbor, official reports revealed yesterday. Warships and bombers are supporting the assault.

Stiff opposition is being encountered and United States casualties may be heavier than any yet experienced in the fighting, but an early conclusion is expected to the victorious effort to throw the enemy off the island.

The airfield which the Japanese were building on Attu is in American hands. One of the first American projects in development of the island probably will be the completion of this field which would give our forces an air base about 2,200 statute miles from Tokyo.

The field would be useful in helping to cut off the enemy's main Aleutian base on Kiska from reinforcements and supplies and in softening up Kiska defenses for the eventual drive to annihilate the enemy garrison on that island also.

Latest reports on the ten-day old battle came from the navy department and Secretary of War Stimson.

These disclosed that the American forces, under Major General Eugene Landrum, a veteran of Aleutian operations, have executed successive pincer maneuvers to drive the Japanese into their last stand position at Chichagof harbor at the island's north-eastern extremity.

The last move was accomplished Wednesday when our troops captured Saranaga pass opening on the foe's southeastern flank. Tuesday they had completed clearing a pass between Massacre and Holz bays to join American forces advancing from the south with those driving from the north and flank the Japanese on the southwest.

To the north the enemy is fighting with his back to the sea from which naval guns pour shells into his defenses. Overhead, when weather permits, army bombers from Amchitka islands, 233 nautical miles to the southwest, control the air and complete the entrapment.

The navy communique also reported briefly on the south Pacific, stating that on Tuesday night (Solomon islands time) six enemy bombers attacked American positions on Guadalcanal island and in the nearby Russell islands but that there was no report of damage or casualties.

Price Policies Heard By Food Conference

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—A British declaration of support for an international policy of price stability raised talk at the united nations food conference yesterday of a post-war, world-wide "ever-normal granary" system.

Richard K. Law, chairman of the British delegation, told a news conference that his country believed international action should be taken to eliminate wide fluctuations in prices of basic agricultural and non-agricultural products. Such fluctuations, he said, are in time equally ruinous to producers and consumers.

The ever-normal granary idea, calling for storing surplus crops, is aimed at assuring ample food supplies in years of short harvests as well as preventing price depression when crop surpluses exist.

Raids on Burma Increase

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—American airmen have increased their assaults on the Japanese in Burma at the end of a three-month-old British land campaign which upset the Japanese war timetable by stabbing 200 miles into the heart of that enemy-held territory, it was disclosed officially yesterday.

Davies Delivers Note From F. R. to Stalin Former U. S. Envoy Sees Red Premier Personally at Kremlin

MOSCOW, (AP)—Joseph E. Davies handed President Roosevelt's secret message to Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin in the Kremlin early last night.

The president's special envoy delivered the letter after spending some time with Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov at the end of an airplane flight from the United States.

Davies was disclosed to have used the same four-motored plane in which the president flew to Casablanca last January for that allied conference.

(Transmission of the message followed by a day British Prime Minister Churchill's statement in Washington Wednesday that he and the president "earnestly hope that at no distant date we may be able to achieve what we have so long sought—namely, a meeting with Marshal Stalin and if possible with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.")

(President Roosevelt said early this month that only he and his secretary-typist were aware of the contents of the note to Stalin, and declined to say whether a reply was expected. Davies, he said, presumably would become acquainted with the contents of the letter after its delivery, would discuss them with Stalin, and then return home.)

The Russian press gave generous space to the arrival of Davies, who has not seen Moscow since he left his ambassador post five years ago. But there was no speculation about his mission here.

RAF Pounds Berlin--Fourth Raid in Week

LONDON (AP)—On the heels of the U. S. Flying Fortress raids on submarine and shipbuilding yards at Kiel and Flensburg, the royal air force Wednesday night carried the allied air offensive to Berlin for the fourth attack on the Reich capital in a week.

An air ministry communique yesterday said that swift RAF Mosquitoes attacked targets in Berlin, but gave no details. Last night the air ministry news service reported that seven trains on railways between Châlons-sur-Marne and Nancy, France, were shot up by a single Mosquito during RAF sorties over occupied territory last night.

So costly have been the RAF attacks on hard-pressed axis railroads that the enemy has put flak cars, behind the engines on most munitions trains.

All the Mosquito planes returned, and later, during daylight, a big formation of allied aircraft thundered over the channel toward northern France. They were too high to determine whether they were fighters or bombers.

Ikkes Hints at Limit On Use of Gasoline In Middle West Area

WASHINGTON (AP)—New restrictions on use of gasoline in the middle west may be necessary, Secretary Ikkes said yesterday, so that more of the motor fuel can be diverted to the eastern seaboard where supplies are so short that many filling stations display "out of gas" signs.

Ikkes declined to say whether restrictions in the middle west might take the form of a ban on pleasure driving such as went into effect at noon yesterday in 12 eastern states and the District of Columbia.

Thousands Evacuating Homes In Threatened Illinois Region

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An exodus from a stretch of territory along the menacing Mississippi was under way last night as fresh troops were rushed into the battle to hold levee lines against the pressure of rising rivers.

Illinois, southern Indiana and Oklahoma were the chief danger areas on the six-state midwestern flood map while seething streams approached or exceeded record levels.

Already more than 28,000 persons were homeless. Crop and property damage was calculated at more than $30,000,000. Field work in many farm regions of great importance to the food-for-victory campaign was at a standstill. The death list stood at 10. Almost 5,000 soldiers and sailors and uncounted civilians were enlisted in the fight against swirling waters.

Lieut. Col. J. A. Adams, deputy district army engineer, announced evacuation warnings had been issued for the Fort Chartres, Stringtown, Ivy Landing and Grand Tower, Ill., levee areas. But engineers expressed the belief they could hold all other sea walls on the Illinois and Missouri sides of the Mississippi river if crests don't surpass expectations.

Two thousand soldiers from Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and Scott field, Ill., were assigned to bolster levees at Prairie du Pont, Ill., Claryville, Mo., and other nearby points.

A military force and volunteers also labored to build up the sea wall at Beardstown, Ill., where the Illinois river inched up to 26.6 feet, an all-time peak, and a little more than a foot from the top of the dike. The same river was only 6 of a foot under the record level of 27.3 feet at Peoria, where high water forced several plants to close.

Approximately 1,000 additional Illinoisans evacuated. It was estimated that half of the 500 homes in the Richland sector of Peoria were abandoned. Fifty families left lowlands below Peoria, 45 quit Wesley City, 50 departed from Chillicothe. All but a dozen houses in Liverpool were enveloped by the flood at Liverpool and 350 persons were routed.

Official and unofficial observers figured 12,000 were homeless in Indiana, 11,000 in Illinois and more than 5,000 in eastern Oklahoma.

A record-shattering crest of 47.5 to 49 feet was forecast for Muskogee, Okla., where the Arkansas river flood stage is 28 feet, two inches. The Oklahoma board of agriculture placed crop losses to date at $25,000,000, while property, road and rail line damage was fixed at $5,000,000. The army moved 1,800 from two threatened towns.

The Verdigris river levee broke at Coffeyville, Kan., driving 2,000 persons to higher ground.

Conditions improved, and many factories resumed operations, in northern and central Indiana, but communities in the southwestern portion of the state braced to meet oncoming crests of the Wabash and White rivers.

Levee breaks sent the Wabash gushing across thousands of acres in the Terre Haute vicinity and over 22,000 acres around Vincennes.

Allies Bag 73 Planes, Lose Four, in Attacks On Sardinia and Sicily

Axis Anti-Invasion Posts Hit in Heaviest Post-Tunisian Raid

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA (AP)—Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's strategic air force announced yesterday the destruction of 73 enemy planes during heavy raids Wednesday on Italy's anti-invasion outposts of Sicily and Sardinia. The allied cost was four aircraft.

This 18-for-1 victory took a tremendous bite out of hurriedly-assembled axis air strength on the two islands, and was the most sweeping since German and Italian airmen were chased from the Tunisian skies just before the enemy army's collapse in North Africa.

29 Planes Downed Twenty-nine planes were shot down in bitter dogfights ranging from sea level to 24,000 feet and 44 others were blasted to bits on airfields on the two islands.

For the first time since the fall of Tunisia German and Italian airmen rose in great strength, but failed to ward off the allied raiders whose explosives ripped apart airport buildings and set fires amid parked aircraft.

The biggest blow was dealt by Flying Fortresses. Sailing over Milo airfield near Trapani on the western side of Sicily, the big bombers destroyed 37 parked planes and blanketed the field and installations with bombs.

50 Fighters Attack Then 50 axis fighters jumped the Fortresses and their escorting Lightnings. Ten of these enemy planes were shot down and at least three others were damaged in a 20-minute running battle which raged out over the sea toward the Egadi islands.

Among the axis victims sent spinning into the sea were Messerschmitt 109's, Focke Wulf 190's and Macchi 200's. Official sources described the engagement as "several long and gruelling dogfights" and one returning airman said:

"Everyone was mixed up, and it seemed as though each P-38 (Lightning) had a Messerschmitt on its tail and another P-38 shooting it off."

Italian Communique The Italian high command in a communique broadcast by Rome claimed 14 allied planes were destroyed during the attacks which were acknowledged to have caused "some casualties and small damage."

Axis planes were said to have torpedored and probably sunk two medium-sized allied ships off the Algerian coast and heavily damaged a third 10,000-ton vessel. The ports of Sfax, Tunisia and Oran, Algeria, also were said to have been "effectively attacked by axis bombers."

Coal Strikes Spread As WLB Approaches Decision on Demands

WASHINGTON (AP)—Strikes began to spread again in the coal mines yesterday, even as the war labor board aimed for a clean-up decision which may give an indication by Tuesday whether peace or turmoil shall follow in the mine wage controversy.

The miners' chances of getting WLB approval of their demands for a flat $2 a day increase are not generally regarded as bright, but a majority of the WLB's fact-finding panel is reported to favor their call for extra pay to cover all the time they spend underground.

Even the United Mine Workers leadership concedes that nothing is due under the Little Steel formula as it now stands. The miners want to discard the formula but even under existing stabilization rules they are necessarily precluded from obtaining some concessions other than a straight wage boost.

There have been these definite stands on the government side of the controversy: 1. A statement by Secretary Ikkes, as federal boss of the mines, that "any contract must have approval of the war labor board." 2. A WLB description of Lewis' attitude in ignoring it as one that "challenges the sovereignty of the United States in time of war and gives aid and comfort to our enemies."

Army B-24 Bomber Crashes Into Gas Storage Tank, 12 Die

CHICAGO (AP)—A B-24 army bomber rammed into the world's largest illuminating gas storage tank yesterday with a burst of flame that transformed the gigantic structure into a roaring inferno that killed 12 fliers aboard.

The 500-foot tank surmounted by a 50-foot air beacon was destroyed in an inferno so intense that authorities feared the bodies in the wreckage never would be recovered.

The four-engined Liberator bomber left the Ft. Worth, Tex., army air field yesterday morning on a routine flight. Witnesses saw it flying low from the northwest, skimming over the office building of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company office at 3625 W. 73rd street, on the southwest side. It rose slightly, then crashed into the side of the 20,000,000 cubic foot tank.

Some witnesses said the bomber bounced over the rim atop the tank and disappeared in the flame and smoke, but George A. Ranney, gas company chairman, reported it apparently struck about 100 feet from the top of the tank.

Shortly after the crash the flames had burned the tank down so low that the hole in its side could not be seen. The front section of the bomber pierced the steel side of the tank and sections of the wings and tail were scattered throughout the enclosure around it.

One body, strapped into a parachute, was thrown outside the tank. The tank, which cost $2,000,000 when it was built in 1923, is situated in a sparsely settled section of the southwest side. Nearest homes are a quarter mile away yet in one the heat of the fire became so unbearable the children were moved to other quarters.

U. S. Treasury Orders Paper for Tax Blanks

WASHINGTON (AP)—Hope for a break in the pay-as-you-go income tax deadlock was revived last night, and it was disclosed that the treasury had ordered 120 carloads of paper to prepare forms for putting a current tax system into effect July 1.

A senate-house conference held its first meeting in an effort to iron out differences between the two chambers. Democrats and Republicans alike voiced optimism at the prospect that the committee would find a compromise between the senate's modified Ruml skip-a-year bill and the house-approved measure abating the 6 per cent normal and 13 per cent bracket surtax on all 1942 incomes.

BOMBED MOHNE DAM LOOSES FLOOD ON GERMANS

THROUGH A 200-FOOT GAP, blasted in the big concrete structure by British bombs, millions of gallons of water pour from the wrecked Mohne dam, above. Reports following the bombing of this dam in the Weser valley and the Eder dam in the Ruhr valley said that a state of siege had been proclaimed and that German war industries had been seriously crippled.

opened, denied yesterday that the bombing of vital German dams had originated from suggestions by private citizens. Declaring that "misleading statements had appeared" about the origin of the raids, the air ministry said "it was true that an attack on the dams was suggested on several occasions by members of the public, but the operation did not in fact originate with any such suggestions."

"All objectives of importance to German war production, including the dams, have long since been methodically examined by intelligence and planning authorities with a view to attack at the most favorable moment."

Whether this denial will have any effect upon German plans for retaliation is doubtful. The Germans are thirsting for revenge, and since they have vent their feeling upon the Jews for years over less important incidents, it is certain that they won't change their minds now. Thus, as the result of this seemingly humorous allied propaganda blunder, the Polish Ghetto in Warsaw will be minus several hundred more inhabitants next week at this time.

Questions to Ask a Mirror—

How much time did I waste yesterday in foolish or unnecessary arguments? Was I too positive and dogmatic in my opinions? Now that it is over, is there any chance that the other fellow was right? Did I talk so much yesterday that I prevented talk by others from whom I might have learned something? Who of all persons I saw yesterday did I find most pleasing and agreeable, and why? Was I impressed by pompous, pretentious people or by the quiet, unassuming type? What part of my expenditures yesterday were for articles that I could easily have done without? Did I go out of my way yesterday to do anyone a friendly turn? Did I get more pleasure out of overcoming the other fellow in some transaction and making him miserable, or from giving in a little and putting him in good humor?

Interpreting THE WAR NEWS by Glenn Babb

Greatest Battles Will Be Fought in Russia In spite of all the conjecture as to where and when the western allies will invade Hitler's Europe, the likelihood remains that this year, as in 1941 and 1942, the greatest land battles will be fought in Russia.

Prime Minister Churchill in his speech to congress Wednesday threw out a timely reminder that the eastern front remains the primary land front. Any other that the British and Americans may establish will be second in size of forces involved as well as in time. Putting these factors in their proper perspective, Churchill said there is little doubt that Hitler "is reserving his supreme gambler's throw for a third attempt" to break the Red army.

The evidence increases that in spite of the invasion threat the Fuehrer is marshalling all possible resources for another smash at Russia. Major operations have been postponed this spring later than last—when the Germans attacked in the Crimea on May 8—but it appears impossible that the first real blow can be delayed much longer.

We still are without any trustworthy indication as to whether the Germans or Russians will attack first, but it is likely to be Hitler, since a greater need drives him. He cannot afford to wait; Stalin can. The German leader's best hope of survival is to knock out the Red army now. On the other hand the Russians may decide that the best defense would be to attack first, as they did in the Kharkov area last May.

The British prime minister, whose information doubtless is of the best, estimated that axis forces held on the Russian front were 190 German and 28 satellite divisions, 218 in all. That, allowing for corps and army troops, air forces, other auxiliaries, would mean some 4,000,000 men or more, probably still the most formidable aggregation of land forces in the world. Confronting them probably are Russian armies of at least equal size. There is no chance that the western allies will land anything comparable in Europe this year or be able to divert anything like such a total of the enemy.

The flower and the bulk of the German army remain in Russia, and other land campaigns of the coming summer and autumn probably will be regarded from the strategic point of view as diversions. They will be designed to carry out the British leader's statement that "we must do everything in our power that is sensible and practicable to take more of the weight off Russia in 1943."

This is a vague way of putting it, and may have been read with some disappointment by those who hope for a major second front in Europe this summer. However, it should not be assumed that Churchill was telling everything he knows about the second front. His vagueness might well be part of the allies' psychological war, intended to deepen the enemy's confusion concerning our real aims, perhaps to lull him onto false confidence and tempt him to leave the defenses of Europe's southern and western coasts to the Italians and other satellites and second string German forces.

Black Market Jeopardizing Food Situation, Cutting Army Supplies, Quartermaster Says

CHICAGO (AP)—Major General E. B. Gregory, the army's quartermaster general, said yesterday the nation's food situation would be improved "very materially" if people would stop patronizing black markets. He asserted no rationing system could work in competition with a black market and recommended stern measures be taken against persons involved in black markets. "Some people should be put in jail," he stated. General Gregory's remarks were made at a press conference held in connection with his appearance at a food conference sponsored by the Grocery Manufacturer's Sales Executives, Inc., of Chicago. The quartermaster corps was cooperating in the meeting. The quartermaster general said the army was feeling the pinch of black market leaks and had been unable to get as much meat, poultry and potatoes as it wished for its soldiers. He reported the army currently was having this difficulty in the Alabama potato market. "The army complies with all price ceilings," he said. "But when others do not, it can't get all the things it needs." General Gregory said the army temporarily had cut down its purchases in line with its policy of adjusting its use of food to the overall situation. Today soldiers are getting about eight ounces of meat a day, he said, adding that that amount was about half of what the army originally figured as its basic allowance.

Blunder Over the Dam—

British propagandists (and news agencies) had themselves in hot water for a while after the bombing of those two German dams. In their enthusiasm they announced that a Jewish refugee had concocted the whole scheme as a means of getting back at the Germans. The British press then went into detail about how this man worked with military experts to perfect a mine which could be floated into the mechanism of the dams.

When the Nazis learned of this, they of course screamed for vengeance. The obvious target for retaliation was the Jewish population of the occupied countries, what there is left of it. German reports indicated that hundreds of Jews would be massacred to "get even."

Yank Fliers Planned Attu Attack

Some prices were increased, some decreased and the average left about the same. Enforcement may be improved by the action, but not prices. The particular brands of canned goods hit by decreases seem to be those in the chains, and this should help the independents, but the aid received by the consumer is not yet apparent.

Consulted First By the Experts

WASHINGTON—American fliers of rather low rank counseled the strategy for taking Attu first and then going back to Kiska. The high command here is understood to have asked fliers on the ground in Alaska for suggestions on strategy and their recommendations were followed. This is how a democratic army functions in contrast to Hitler and other totalitarian military regimes.

The importance of the islands as bases for invasion upon the Japanese mainland may be slightly over-estimated in the public mind. They are good submarine bases, but, due to weather conditions, are not satisfactory air bases.

The Japs have been building fields on both Kiska and Attu, however, and the one on Attu is large enough for bombers. They could not have been used to attack the United States, being too far away, but would have launched bombings of Alaska.

No One Knows What They Are Doing About Prices—

They are doing a lot of things to prices here, but no one seems to know just what, and somehow, no matter what they do—threaten, point-ration, freeze or promise—every time you go to a store with a market basket, food seems to cost a little bit more. A flood of publicity about the new dollar and cents ceilings, roll backs, subsidies and mandatory margins, has created the impression that the cost of eating has declined, but the evidence to sustain such a conclusion is still lacking to consumers.

The experts are as confused as everyone. For instance, OPA first fixed margins of profits on various foods on chain stores, some of which were mandatory and others optional. Then they made all margins mandatory on the old basis of March, 1942, but raised some margins. That was on Monday. Two days later, on Wednesday, margin reductions were ordered.

The statisticians of the chains figure the reduction will cut them to such an extent in meats, canned fruits and vegetables, cereal, rice and sugar as to make their business unprofitable. Yet somehow nothing you buy seems to be any cheaper. However, OPA promised another meat roll-back decrease June 1, based on subsidies which the government will pay out of the treasury to the meat packers. A cursory check of the effect of the 300 food ceilings ordered by OPA ten days ago, indicates these did not roll back anything.

In the chains beef consumption this April was off 70 percent from last April; processed foods, 50 percent; meat, 60 percent; butter and cheese, 50 percent; sugar, 25 percent; coffee, 33 percent. Much of this reflects curtailment due to point rationing, but some of it is also due to black markets in meat, poultry and potatoes, and the transfer of business to smaller stores.

The point rationing system seems much too complex for the average housewife, and buying is not being done on an efficient basis, in the opinion of all authorities. The government has made buying and living too complicated for average intelligence. No one, in or out of the government, seems satisfied with the condition, but it looks like we will have to go on with OPA, order by order, mistake by mistake, correction by correction, until some semblance of efficiency evolves out of the chaos through the leveling process of time.

WAACs Are a Year Old "STEP SISTERS" BIRTHDAY

WASHINGTON—The "step-sisters" of the army are a year old this month and in spite of their phenomenal record, their treatment at the hands of the army still is a great disappointment to those who have backed them from the start. The Women's Army Auxiliary Corps was first established in May, 1942, with a set limit of 25,000. They were not to be members of the regular army, subject to benefits, actual army ratings, overseas service, etc., which applied to the men in training. Within a few months, the value of the service was so apparent that the legal limit was raised six-fold to 150,000. After nearly 11 months, less than half of that quota (or only 60,000 WAAC officers and noncommissioned personnel) are in training or in service.

Mere infants compared to the WAACs are the WAVES, SPARS and the Women's Marine Corps auxiliary, yet these services already have enlisted a far greater percentage of the total male personnel than the army. The women in the naval services, however, have the same ranks, pay, benefits, and spheres of action that the men in their respective services have. Where the fault in the WAAC situation lies is hard to say. On file at army headquarters here are more than half a million requests for WAACs to supplement and supplant the army's manpower. An army officer returned from overseas told me recently that overseas generals have requested assignment of nearly 20,000 women to overseas divisions—nearly one-third of the total now in service or in training—yet only a few so far have been assigned outside the borders of the continental United States.

WAACs are being given training which would equip them for service in combat areas, although not, of course, as combat troops. They are being taught the use of small arms, machine guns, anti-

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

Mr. Charles Laughton Says He Is the Victim of a Gross Canard

HOLLYWOOD—Mr. Charles Laughton, he would have it says looking for things to hold over you. I go home and I hear it, 'Now don't you be acting Captain Bligh around here!' or 'Slop being that schoolteacher, Charles!' or 'You dragged in dirt on your shoe, Charles—you stop acting that Australian character and pick that dirt up and take it out!' The woman would be Elsa Lanchester, Charles' wife, and we must hear from her on the subject sometime. Maybe we—and Charlie too—will hear as soon as this reaches print. It's frightening when you think of it, but Alfred Hitchcock is disappearing at the rate of three and a half pounds a week. From a starting bulk of 293 pounds, he has lost 30 pounds in some eight weeks, and expects to continue the process—not, we hope, to the point of complete self-obliteration. Some have thought his losses due to worry over his reputation as a master of movie suspense and the ordeal it faces: in his film "Life Boat" he must get suspense out of nine people in a 26-foot boat for nine reels. Hitchcock denies any such worry, seems jovially confident. The real cause, he says, is a protein diet—chicken, fish, steak (when he can find it),—and definitely not "The Man from Down Under."

THE BOOK PARADE

By JOHN SELBY "Shortcut to Tokyo; the Battle for the Aleutians," by Corey Ford (Scrappers; $1.75). The only difficulty with Corey Ford's "Shortcut to Tokyo" is that it reads exactly like a little book expanded from a set of articles in a slick magazine, and that is precisely what it is. It is therefore uneven—the sections lifted directly from the magazine smacked of the editorial mind, convinced that its readers want their backs slapped into a pulp; the other sections read quite well indeed. This is what I mean—Mr. Corey is telling the story of the Aleutians campaign, up high on the globe, out of sight and too often out of mind. He works up a vast enthusiasm over the boys doing the job, and certainly that is proper. It is, his book proves, a worse job than most other fronts provide, largely due to the worst flying weather the globe produces. When the fog does not hamper operations, the wind does, and unfortunately the weather makes from the Jap end of the archipelago, so that the Japs always know when to expect the Americans, and can prepare. But scattered through the text are such typical paragraphs as this: "I know how it is. I've lived with these men; I know what it's like, day after day. They are not heroes. Don't call them heroes; they don't want that. They are not Intrepid Birdmen, or Rover Boys of the Air or Supermen; they are ordinary guys, doing a job, getting cold and wet and lonely and not liking it any better than you would. Heroes are glamorous; heroes don't have wet feet. . . . There's more, but we'll skip it. In spite of his doggone-it-beys-it's-a-hell-of-a-war mannerisms Mr. Corey does provide information. He tells how the men live up there, what they do, how they fly their missions, what the results are. He also includes, for good measure, some things out of the past to make our faces red. There was the Japanese Tokyo-United States flight in 1931, for example. The plane never made the flight, but we gave permission for our little buck-toothed brethren to land observers all along the chain of the Aleutians. The observers took fishing tackle with them. There were no hooks on the tackle; only a stout cord and a heavy weight.

Six Former University of Iowa Graduates Announce Recent Engagements, Weddings

Announcement has been made of the recent engagements and weddings of six graduates of the University of Iowa.

Keat-VanHorne
Word has been received of the marriage of Clarice Keat, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Keat of Manning, to Gene B. VanHorne, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. VanHorne of Perry. The wedding took place May 2 in the Chapel of the Dawn in Santa Monica, Calif. The Rev. Eugene F. Gates officiated.

The bride was graduated from Manning high school, attended Iowa State Teachers college in Cedar Falls and Electrical Radio and Television institute in Omaha, Neb.

The bridegroom was graduated from the University of Iowa. At present he is employed as a research technician with Douglas Aircraft company in Santa Monica.

Anderson-Cole
Dr. and Mrs. V. R. Anderson of Manning announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Marilyn, to Dr. C. M. Cole, son of Mrs. E. G. Cole of Dallas, Tex. The wedding will take place June 13 in Manning.

The bride-elect was graduated from Manning high school and the University of Iowa, where she was affiliated with Gamma Phi Beta sorority.

Dr. Cole was graduated from Dallas high school and from Southern Methodist university in Dallas, where he was a member of Delta Chi fraternity. He was graduated from the University of Iowa college of medicine, where he was affiliated with Phi Beta Phi medical fraternity. He is now serving as an intern in Dallas.

Griffin-Green
Announcement has been made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Mary Gertrude Griffin, daughter of Mrs. William Griffin of Riverside, to Lieut. Roy G. Green of Camp Perry, Ohio. The wedding will take place tomorrow in St. Mary's church in Riverside.

The bride-elect attended Clarke college in Dubuque and was graduated from the University of Iowa, where she was affiliated with Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Lieutenant Green was graduated from Drake university in Des Moines and received his M.A. degree from the University of Iowa. He is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity and is now stationed with the ordnance department at Camp Perry.

Green-Brinkmeyer
Laura Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Green of Lone Tree, became the bride of Harold E. Brinkmeyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Brinkmeyer, also of Lone Tree, in a double ring ceremony in the home of the bride's parents, May 15. The Rev. Henry Duhan officiated.

Mrs. Brinkmeyer was graduated from Lone Tree high school and the University of Iowa. Mr. Brinkmeyer was graduated from Lone Tree high school and is at present in the signal corps reserve, attending a signal corps radio school in Des Moines, where the couple will make its home.

Bride, Bride-Elect Honored At Showers

Mrs. Roy Todd, a recent bride, and Mary Mercer, a bride-elect, were honored at showers this week.

Dorothy Hardin and Ruby Gillespie entertained at a miscellaneous shower May 19, honoring Mrs. Roy Todd, the former Blanche Buresh. The post-nuptial courtesy was held in Miss Gillespie's home, 408 E. Fairchild street.

A spring motif was emphasized in the refreshments and in attractive bouquets about the house. Guests at the party were Elizabeth Grimes, Mrs. Irene Fousek, Mrs. Clara Switzer, Mrs. Annette Bliss, Helen Lewis, Geneva Prybil, Nell Puterbaugh, Mrs. Glenn Griffith, Mrs. George Ivorsky, Mrs. David Stochl, Verna Crook, Mrs. Roy Vesely and Isabelle Jensen.

A personal shower and bridge party was given in honor of Mary Mercer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Mercer, 709 South Summit street, in the home of Sally Wallace, 810 N. Johnson street, last night.

Miss Mercer will be married in June to Cadet Stanley W. Sayre of Corpus Christi, Tex.

The table was covered with blue and centered with white candles and green dolls and white candies. Decorations featured a story book theme.

Guests included Mary Mercer, Mrs. LeRoy Mercer, Ruth Smith, Barbara Smith, Ann Serup, Dorothy Gay, Virginia Ann Wells, Elinor Goodwin and Mrs. Ben Wallace.

In peacetime the United States imports 30 million pounds of low-grade olive oil for commercial purposes.

GUEST EDITOR

Ruth Shambaugh, A3 of Clarinda, will spend June in New York City, where she will work on the August "college issue" of Mademoiselle magazine as one of about 12 guest editors. Miss Shambaugh was a member of this year's Mademoiselle college board, consisting of fashion representatives on campuses across the country. She was one of four winners in a hat design contest sponsored by the board, and won a first award and an honorable mention in other contests.

Leisure Hours Are Now "Victory" Hours

Coeds Trade In 'Coke' Dates, Bull Sessions For Local War Work Service

By SUE ONO
It'll be "Leisure Hours for Victory" for University of Iowa women, during the summer session. Time has become democracy's most precious commodity and each hour spent must be of "productive" value.

As a suggestion for a leisure-time service, the local Red Cross chapter stresses the great importance of completing necessary quotas of surgical dressings. University women who have free afternoons are asked to devote a part of their time to rolling bandages.

Red Cross work rooms at 630 East Washington street are open from 1:15 p. m. to 4:15 p. m., Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays. If evenings hours are more convenient, one can serve from 7 p. m. until 9:30 p. m., Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in the city hall. Each volunteer is asked to bring a hair net and something to cover her dress. Finger nail polish must not be worn.

Knits and Kits
The Red Cross makes sure that all knitted garments go to those men who need them most. Here's an opportunity to make a tangible contribution to the comfort and safety of the fighting front. Yarns are available in the Red Cross office in the Community building. If a co-ed can't knit, it doesn't mean that she's blackballed from contributing something to the comfort of the armed forces. We have been told that there are never too many kit bags in the army and they're easy to sew.

Ask and Receive
Materials and instructions can be yours for the asking. One has only to worry about following directions correctly.

Perhaps you are qualified to become a nurse's aide. The shortage of nurses has been felt acutely in the hospitals and there is an increasing need for trained nurses' aides. An 80-hour course is offered free to those who are able to pass physical examinations. The course can be completed in six to seven weeks.

Something About a Uniform
Do you like to entertain the boys in uniform? The chance is yours every Saturday afternoon from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. Sign up with the U. W. A. to become hostesses for a day at the open houses held in the main lounge of Iowa Union. The men hail from Pre-Flight, Pre-Meteorology and other service units on campus.

The Hospitality club calls for more dancing hostesses to provide entertainment for the men in the armed forces. Dances are held in the large ballroom of the Community building every Saturday afternoon from 2:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.

'Tough, But— Oh So Gentle'

The old theory that army sergeants are tough, rugged, and inhuman has been given good cause to be dispelled in the last few days by the staff members of the permanent personnel of the Pre-Meteorology school.

An unknowing mother robin has done more to soften the hearts of these men than all the anonymous stories of kind hearted non-coms in the archives of United States army history.

It seems that she has built her nest on the fire escape of the third floor of East hall directly across the court from the Army headquarters office for the Pre-Meteorology school. One of the sergeants confided yesterday that he and another of his comrades had taken time from their liberty to dig worms somewhere in the vicinity of East hall and had at various times fed these tidbits to the patient little mother and her eager young.

Mrs. Robin seems quite content with these arrangements and has become the mascot of the headquarters office.

Iowa, Northwestern Radio Debate Tonight Changed to 8 O'clock

The time of the Iowa-Northwestern debate has been changed from 4 o'clock this afternoon to 8 o'clock this evening because of transportation difficulties.

The debate will be broadcast from the studios of WSUI from 8 until 9 o'clock. Raymond Woodward and John Forester, Northwestern speakers, will defend the negative side of the question "Shall Russia and the United States enter into a permanent military and economic alliance after the present war?" and Iowa's representatives, Gordon Christensen, A3 of Iowa City, and Kenneth Thompson, A4 of Cedar Falls, will uphold the affirmative.

First Speaker Chosen For "Talk of Hour"

Vojta Benes, Czechoslovakian senator, is the first speaker scheduled to speak before the "Talk of the Hour" club, the Rev. James E. Waery, president of the organization, announced yesterday. The tentative date for the meeting has been set for Wednesday, June 2, at 8 p. m., in the auditorium of City high school.

Iowa Law Professor To Head Conference On Family Relations

Prof. Paul Sayre of the college of law will be the presiding officer of a series of talks on wartime marriages to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, today as a part of the three day national conference on family relations.

He will also lead Sunday's meeting of the advisory council, board of directors and committee chairmen.

Professor Sayre is the founder of the national annual conference. The first one was held in September, 1938, when 130 educators and other persons interested in all phases of family relations met in New York City. Membership has now risen to several thousands.

Professor Sayre was elected first president of the group, but he resigned the office the next May. He is now a member of the board of directors.

This year's conference was originally planned for Dec. 27-30, 1942, but was postponed because of travel difficulties until government permission was given to go ahead.

First Summer Play By University Theater Planned for June 7

Although the country's military needs broke up the play, "George and Margaret," which was scheduled for the end of May, the University theatre has now had in rehearsal for a week, a mystery comedy entitled, "Ladies in Retirement."

Prof. Vance M. Morton will direct the production, which is scheduled to be given June 7-12. Prof. Arnold S. Gillette is designing the setting, and lighting will be under the direction of Gary Gaiser.

The cast of characters includes: Lucy Gilham, Margaret Hill, A4 of Ada, Okla.; Lenora Fiske, Dorothy Grundy, A2 of Dysart; Ellen Creed, Elizabeth Buckner; Albert Feather, Tom Mahan, A1 of Iowa City, and Ross Vaughn, A1 of Mason City; Louisa Creed, Betty Jeanne Reed, A4 of Wausau, Ill.; Emily Creed, May Baker, A4 of Park Ridge, Ill., and Sister Theresa, Lorraine Hawbecker, A4 of Storm Lake.

The play has been popular with community and summer theater audiences throughout the country and was recently made into a movie.

Firm Will Now Hire Women Accountants

The Chicago firm of Price, Waterhouse and Company, certified public accountants, are adding women to its auditing staff for the first time in its history. These additions are not made as a temporary wartime measure, but with the idea that the positions will be permanent.

Recent college graduates and women graduating in the next three months who have majored in accounting or who have had sufficient accounting to enable them to report for work this summer, will be given whatever apprentice training necessary, and receive a starting salary of $150 a month.

Recent college graduates and women graduating in June, who have had no accounting training, will be employed June 21, 1943, and sent immediately to a 10-week intensive training course in accounting and auditing under the guidance of Northwestern university in Evanston. They will be paid a salary of $10 a week during the period of the course, plus tuition and an allowance not to exceed $16 weekly for room and board.

On successful completion of the course, the firm may require the employee to report for work at its office at a salary of $135 a month until March 31, 1944, and $150 a month for the balance of the year.

These salary figures are based on a 40-hour week. Time and one-half is paid for all overtime work. Anyone interested in obtaining more information on these positions may call at room 9, office of student affairs.

Phillies Shut Out Chicago Cubs in Double-header

Take Sweep Of 4 Games

Phillies Now Stand Third Behind Half Game Behind Cardinals

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Those rambunctious "new deal" Phillies ran their winning streak to five straight yesterday by handing the Chicago Cubs a pair of shutouts, 3 to 0 and 2 to 0, in a doubleheader before 3,429 at Shibe park.

The double triumph, coupled with Brooklyn's win over St. Louis, put the fourth place Phils only half a game behind the third place Cardinals. It also gave the Phils a clean sweep of the four-game series with the Cubs, who now have dropped nine in a row.

Four-hit pitching by both Charley Fuchs and southpaw Al Gerheauser, backed by opportune hitting and good fielding, was the spark that enabled the Phils to chalk up their longest winning streak in seven years. Back in August, 1936, they managed to win six straight.

City High Golf Team To Compete at Ames

The City high golf team, winner of the Mississippi Valley conference golf tournament and runner up in the district meet, will compete in the state final golf tournament tomorrow at Ames, Coach Fran Merten announced yesterday.

Only four of the seven man squad will play in the state finals. Gene Mathes, Jack Whitsel, Bill Sangster and Bob Devine will make up the Hawkit team. Mathes won medalist honors in the Valley meet and Whitsel took third place individual honors in the district meet.

The City high relay team will also compete in the final track tilt.

Wrigley said that Clarence Rowland, president of the Los Angeles baseball club, carried on the negotiations with Novikoff through instructions by the Cubs' general manager, James J. Gallagher.

Navy Personalities . . . New Loken

Lieut. (j.g.) Newt Loken, instructor in the gymnastics department of the Navy Pre-Flight school, recently won second all-around honors in the National A. A. U. gym meet in New York. The career of this gymnastics artist, claimant of National Intercollegiate and Big Ten all-around gymnastics titles, who has gained widespread fame as one of the nation's most outstanding athletes, began Feb. 27, 1919, in Breckenridge, Minn.

This year he led a Seahawk varsity team to an easy win over his alma mater, Minnesota, in the only gym meet of the season. Three weeks ago, Lieutenant Loken returned to national competition and won the second all-around honors in the National A. A. U. gym meet in New York. A first place in the long horse, a second in free exercise and a third in tumbling led to the famous Seahawk, but he trailed Arthur Pitt, Swiss Turners, N. J., for the all-around crown. Due entirely to his efforts, because he was the only representative from the pre-flight school here in the meet, the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school was awarded third place in the final team standings.

After graduating from high school, he entered the University of Minnesota, was again successful in cheerleading and climaxed his gymnastics career by winning the Northwest class A title, the Big Ten all-around crown and finally the coveted National Intercollegiate championship. Shortly after this, he was featured in Life magazine.

Waner on the Way Down but Is First Person to Admit It

NEW YORK (AP)—Sometimes the last person to realize he is slipping is the gent whose head is about to nudge the ice, so it is a relief to meet an athlete who not only knows he isn't the athlete he once was, but admits it. He is Paul Waner, the 40-year-old Brooklyn outfielder, who says frankly that as long as seven or eight years ago he began to feel he was slowing up. Either that, he says, or they had moved first base a step farther from home plate when he came to bat, as the bouncers he used to beat out he wasn't beating out any more.

He's had plenty of chance the last few years to ponder the process of gradually slowing up, or down, and he's formed his own opinion as to why baseball players voluntarily retire.

"They get disgusted with themselves," he says. "They find themselves missing line drives they used to take easily, and are nipped at first on infield balls they used to beat out. They also get charley horses and lame muscles more easily. Me, I don't get tired. I just get stiff (don't get that wrong, please) all over and would like to take a long walk afterward to limber up. I do notice I don't have the hitting power I used to have."

Big Poison, who, from a weight standpoint, has been smaller than Little Poison the last few years, always has prided himself on his eyesight, and not without reason. He's one of the few players who can foul off balls practically at will, waiting for a pitch he likes.

"Just yesterday," he was saying the other day, "I had two strikes on me and saw one coming. I didn't like, but which might catch a corner, so I fouled it off. I turned to Babe (Pinelli) and said: 'That would have been pretty close,' and he said yes, he would have had to call me out on it."

Waner says he isn't afraid of getting hit by a pitched ball while wearing glasses, because he knows how to get out of the way of bad pitches.

"I think 50 percent of the ball players don't know how to duck," he says. "I'm perfectly relaxed up there. Sure, I've been hit on other parts of the body. But I think I could stand up there all day and let them throw at me and never get hit in the head. The only time I ever was beamed was once back in 1925."

The trim little guy never seems to look at a pitcher when standing at the plate. He'll gaze down the left field or right field foul line, or toward shortstop, and you think he doesn't know where the ball is coming from and is preparing for any emergency.

As a matter of fact, he looks at the pitcher as briefly as possible. "In that way you don't get confused by their windup," he explains. "They can jump up and down and tie themselves into knots as far as I'm concerned. After all, I'm not trying to hit the pitcher. I'm trying to hit the ball."

Waner's philosophy has changed in recent years. He admits that early in his career he thought mostly of his base hits, and would sit down each night and figure out his average. Now he doesn't think about his average. If he can get one hit that will help to win a game he figures that's better than getting four for five when they don't count. He's strictly a team man now.

A great little guy is Big Poison, and one of the most remarkable athletes in the game. We're for him 100 percent.

Iowa City High Athletes Given Annual Awards

Navy Meets Keokuk In Season's Opening Home Game Sunday

New faces in the squad of the Navy Pre-Flight baseball team will mark the Seahawks' first home game of the season, when the Keokuk Goats journey to the Iowa diamond Sunday to meet the pre-flighters.

The departure of aviation cadets Bob Yanke and Joe Alix this week upon completion of their training at the pre-flight school will bring either Paul Kramer or Gene Bauder to the first base position left vacant by Yanke and Hal Sherman to the pitching mound. Kramer has been playing right field, but may come into the infield for the game Sunday. Bauder has not played in a regular game this season.

Sherman will assume the pitching burden for the Seahawks this Sunday, which he inherits from Alix, who hurled the cadets to brilliant victories in their first two starts of the season. Sherman pitched one inning of the first game with the Cyclones at Ames, and demonstrated ability to carry the torch on the hill.

Otherwise, Lieut. (j.g.) L. C. Timm, new coach of the Seahawks, will put onto the field the same team that has been spotting the fences in the last two games with extra base hitting. Bill Welp will be on the receiving end of the battery, Forest Fellows will hold down second and Bob Kennedy, who played brilliantly in the game last Sunday with the Muscatine Indians, will be at his usual third zone corner. Hal Youngmans, able young cadet shortstop, will complete the infield. Bud Flanders, Verne Sanderson, and Joe Ely will chase the long ones in the outfield.

Several cadets newly entered in the pre-flight school have been added to the Seahawk squad for later replacement use. Among those bidding for spots in the lineup and showing promise, according to Lieutenant Timm, are Jack Krukis of Detroit and Harold Haggerty of St. Louis. Both have shown good form around first base. A prospect for the pitching staff is Quenton Evans of Detroit.

TIME OUT

by Dolores Rielly

"It's going to be fun to get back to the old gym again," was the remark made by Coach David Armbruster some time ago—shortly before the army specialist training unit's athletic program was to go into effect in the reserve library building, which was once the university gymnasium.

Coach Armbruster, who is now supervising the physical training phase of the A.S.T.P., joined the physical education faculty here in 1916. At that time the present fieldhouse had not yet been built and all of the men's indoor physical education program was taken care of in what is now known as the reserve library building.

Three Major Changes

He has seen the physical training and conditioning "trend" undergo three major changes. In recalling the athletic program of World War I, he said that gymnasium apparatus and calisthenics made up the greatest share of the toughening program. The war was followed by a more "informal" type of physical training, in which the different games and sports skills took the fore. Stress was laid chiefly on skills—the real conditioning was for the most part, lacking. In other words, the peacetime program was not "tough" enough for a wartime program, as Americans were soon to find out. At the outbreak of World War II, therefore, entered the concentrated form of conditioning and toughening that we have today in the army and navy.

New Phases in Program

Coach Armbruster pointed out that, through experimentation and wide research, many new phases have been introduced into the athletic program. They include the obstacle course and the newly emphasized stress on swimming and aquatics of all kinds. Another innovation in the physical training of the men in service, especially, are the various tests and yardsticks used to measure the degree of physical conditioning and development. During the last war, Armbruster said, some tests were used by the army, but they did not compare in any way to the ones used today.

Revised Interest

A revived interest in physical training has been more and more evident in the past two or three years. The period after the last war saw a definite slump in really intensive physical training and conditioning. People became more interested in various types of games and sports skills—baseball, football, basketball, boxing, wrestling, golf, tennis, and so on. As a result, the only muscular development and general conditioning that was gained was that which was derived by the people who actually took part in the game.

Lack of Toughness

As far as actual physical training was concerned, people lost their desire for calisthenics, gymnasium apparatus work and the like. The game idea was more appealing; people avoided any other kind of training whenever possible. In fact, most of our university men and women, for example, took two years of "physical education" because it was required. Now, since the war emergency has come upon us, this lack of real toughness and endurance has caught up with America, and physical education authorities, who stressed this thing all along, have come to the front with the program we have today.

Will Not Happen Again

Will the same thing happen when this war is over? It is Coach Armbruster's observation that it will not. He believes that people have been educated to their own physical needs and that, as a result, they will want to keep fit. This includes the women as well as the men. He believes that women will want to keep on a par with the men. They, too, are now taking more interest in physical training than ever before.

In the general conditioning program, more stress will be placed on the value of aquatics from now on. For example, "After the war is over," Armbruster observed, "more people are going to see that children are taught to swim." He believes that school boards will cease to consider swimming pools a luxury. This war has taught people that it is just as important to learn to swim as to learn to walk.

Now that the standards of real training and conditioning have been set up, Armbruster believes that American men and women will want to maintain those standards.

Prof. Norman Meier Says War Training Belongs to Colleges

Democracies, as a rule, are never adequately prepared for the demands of a major war and the burden of training men lies with the colleges, Prof. Norman C. Meier of the psychology department believes.

The task of mastering specialized skills, services and knowledge to help bolster the inadequate supply of trained men should be started at once by high school graduates. The universities have arranged to make this possible by planning curricula and emergency schedules, which include the University of Iowa's freshman summer semester from June 7 to Aug. 28 in liberal arts, engineering and pharmacy.

"Planes cannot reach their objectives, guns cannot find their targets, communications cannot be maintained, armies cannot be supplied, and missions cannot be successful unless there are men trained in science, mathematics, meteorology, geography, economics, accounting and engineering," Professor Meier said.

He continued, "The major supply of those intellectually capable of mastering such training in a minimum of time will have to come out of the graduating classes of our high schools. It should require little exercise of wisdom and self-interest for any high school graduate of 1943 to see that his immediate duty is to acquire as much of these needed and usable skills as time permits."

A sample survey has revealed that despite many farm labor shortages, Johnson county farmers have undertaken production involving about 10 percent more work than last year's peak production, according to Emmett C. Gardner, county extension director.

The survey indicated that some of the labor resources on small farms are not being used to full capacity and that a number of farms might be able to furnish part time assistance to neighbors, which, in some cases, is already being done.

With no out-of-county labor in sight, it will be necessary for farmers to make the best possible use of their land, equipment, labor saving shortcuts and man power, Gardner said. Farm labor reserves, including town people and high school boys, will be enrolled for part time work and may be called upon during the peak labor demand.

Some farmers feel that if we have normal weather conditions, they will try to get the job done without calling on these reserves unless an emergency arises, Gardner reported.

Farmers Undertake 10 Percent Increase In Work Over 1942

The Johnson county civilian defense council was recently enlarged to include the mayors of all towns in the county.

The names of the following mayors have been sent to Gov. B. B. Hickenlooper for approval: R. M. Work, North Liberty; H. W. Sievers, Lone Tree; J. W. Nesmith, Oxford; Ralph Springmire, Tiffin; F. J. Bittner, Solon; Richard B. Falls, Hills; W. H. Dvorak, Swisher; Wilber J. Teeters, Iowa City; Harold Breece, Coralville; and Lee Koser, University Heights.

The further addition to the council of Irving B. Weber and Jessie B. Gordon was also suggested.

DEVON CHURCH—NAZI AIR TARGET FOR THE DAY

STANDING ALONE and atop a hill, this Devon, England, church could not be mistaken for other than what it was—yet German Focke-Wulf bombers deliberately circled the religious edifice at roof level and dropped bombs on it. Then they bombed the vicarage in the rear in which a four-year-old girl refugee was killed. Note the church's old cemetery in foreground.

Restaurants, Hotels Must File Price Lists By May 31 Deadline

May 31 has been announced as the deadline for the filing of price lists by all restaurants, hotels and other establishments serving foods and drinks. Such lists must be filed with the local rationing board.

An order issued by the office of price administration requires every proprietor of an eating or drinking establishment to file a true copy of each menu, bill of fare or price list in use during the week beginning Sunday, April 4, 1943, and ending April 10.

Relief From Rain Forecast

Bring on the picnics, the outdoor excursions — apparently, sunny days are ahead. At least, the weather man is expecting warm weather, sans showers today.

Relief from the deluge of damp days is especially good news to Iowa Citizens who have been in jaincoats through most of the month of May.

Streaks of clear sky in the east yesterday morning had forecast fine weather, but instead came a shower with a precipitation of .47. By 11:30 a. m., however, the skies cleared again and pedestrians saluted forth in spring suits and bright colors. When, at 5:30

Pi Beta Phi Offers Therapy Scholarships To College Women

Ten $400 scholarships for the study of physical therapy are being offered to college women by the Pi Beta Phi sorority. The study of this subject will prepare women for positions in military hospitals as physical therapy aides.

The stipend of $400 may be used by the beneficiary for tuition or living expenses, since some of the approved schools offering the course charge tuition and others do not.

Juvenile Delinquency Problems Discussed By Mayor, Agencies

To meet the delinquency problem now facing Iowa City, heads of juvenile agencies and recreational organizations conferred with Mayor Wilber J. Teeters yesterday. The necessity of coordinating these agencies for unified action was pointed out by Mayor Teeters.

Neighborhood organizations to provide clubs and social activities for adults and children was the suggestion offered by J. E. Frame, head of the recreation center. He hopes to include in this plan a program whereby school buildings may be utilized.

"The community building with its recreational facilities for youngsters is too centralized. There should be a council in every neighborhood to reach them day and night," he emphasized. An attempt to deal with the teen-age problem has been made with the establishment of a recreational council whose members include a girl and boy from each school, but this, also, is too centralized, Mr. Frame said.

The necessity of providing swimming facilities was acknowledged by boy scout and girl scout leaders as well as other recreational advisers, but the problems confronting officials in the provision of such facilities to adequately meet all the needs of Iowa City children are as yet too numerous to allow any definite measures to be taken.

The group will meet again Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in the mayor's office.

Rural Scrap Drive Planned for County By Salvage Officials

Herbert C. Plagman, Des Moines, executive secretary of the War Production board for Iowa, was in Iowa City Thursday conferring with the Johnson county salvage committee, of which Judge Jack C. White is chairman. Plans were discussed for organizing a rural scrap collection.

A tin can drive is being planned by the committee for the near future, probably next week. Definite announcements concerning it will be made later, Judge White said.

Memorial Day Plans Will Be Concluded At Library Tonight

Arrangements for the Memorial day commemoration, May 31, will be concluded by the Memorial day association tonight at 7:30 in the board rooms of the public library. Committees from Iowa City patriotic groups will present their reports to Chairman Cromwell Jones.

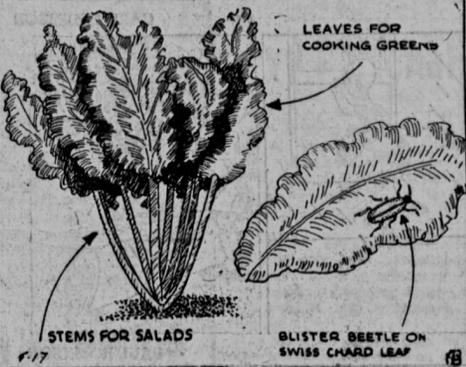

At a meeting held two weeks ago, it was decided to adhere closely to the program followed last year, although tentative plans for the current year include the participation of military units stationed here.

An invitation has been extended to civic and fraternal organizations to send representatives to tonight's meeting.

Helps and Hints For—Your Victory Gardens

—By Louise Zimmerman

Green vegetables must not be omitted from the Victory garden, for they provide valuable vitamins. Among the popular greens is Swiss chard, which is actually a variety of the common beet, although it does not develop a root as does the beet, and is grown principally for its leaf.

Swiss chard can be sown as soon as the ground can be worked. The rows should be from 18 to 24 inches apart, and since the seed clusters contain several seeds each, they should be thinly planted. When the plants are four inches high, they should be thinned to two inches apart. The thinnings may be used for greens.

Swiss chard has been called the "cut and come again" vegetable, for while the outside leaves are removed to be used for greens, the plant continually sends up dozens of new center shoots until frost comes. The leaves, when the size of spinach, can be used as spinach. Some people prefer to allow the leaves to grow until very large, in order that the leafy portion can be cooked as greens and the thick, fleshy stalks or midribs prepared like asparagus.

Swiss chard is sometimes attacked by blister beetles, which will completely skeletonize the leaves as they feed together in swarms. Spraying the plants with pyrethrum as soon as the beetles appear is effective, providing the insects are hit by the spray which kills by paralyzing them. Repeat the spraying as new beetles appear.

Another important green vegetable is spinach. It thrives in all soils, but only during the cool season. Spinach seeds are planted to 1/2 inch deep, and as they grow, the plants should be thinned to stand four to six inches apart. When planted in good soil, spinach will be ready to use in four to six weeks.

Among the new varieties of spinach, viking is an outstanding one and very tender. It is a type easily washed clean of sand or grit in preparation for the table.

New Zealand spinach has rapidly gained favor, for it does not mind hot weather. Because it can be cropped continually during the growing season, and is always tender, and because it is productive during a long season, only a small amount of garden space is required for the New Zealand variety.

The raw, leafy vegetables must not be forgotten, either, and lettuce will surely have a place in the Victory garden. Bibb lettuce will be planted by many people this summer. It is a head lettuce, and, although the mature head is small, it is very sweet and tender. This variety does best in cool, weather and therefore should be used early in the season, and then planted again in August to mature in the autumn. Since Bibb lettuce has a small head, the plants can be as close as eight inches in the row.

One effective method of keeping lettuce growing and tender even during hot weather calls for a "shade strip," which is merely a simple frame covered with burlap or cheesecloth placed over each row. Other methods are to plant the lettuce in the shade of trees or a building, or in a section of the garden where it will be shaded by taller plants.

Former Students—Serving the Nation

—Former Iowa Citizens

Delta Sigma Delta, national dental fraternity, has not only many recent graduates of the University of Iowa in the service, but also several ex-faculty members. Lieut. Col. J. V. Blackman, who received his D. S. degree here and also was in the operative department as a member of the dental faculty, is stationed at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., where he was sent after his enlistment Aug. 18, 1942.

Colonel Blackman was awarded a decoration for bravery while serving in the air corps as a bomber pilot in World War I. After the armistice he was transferred to the dental reserve corps. He is an active member of Delta Sigma Delta here and also a member of the supreme chapter. Mrs. Blackman and their two daughters, Phyllis and Virginia, reside at 1121 Kirkwood court.

Another member of Delta Sigma Delta who was graduated from the university here and was on the dental faculty is Maj. John C. Brauer, who with his family is now in Washington, D. C.

While at the University of Iowa, Major Brauer was head of the department of preventive dentistry and director of the bureau of dental hygiene. He is a former instructor at the University of Nebraska, professor of pedodontics at Atlanta Southern Dental college and director of the DeLos L. Hill Junior Memorial children's clinic of Atlanta, Ga.

Deputy of the local chapter of Delta Sigma Delta, Major Brauer has received his A. B., M. S., D. D. S. and F. A. C. D. degrees.

Red Cross Workers Of Johnson County Attend Conference

Eighteen Johnson county Red Cross workers attended the one-day conference of home nursing and nurses aides at the Roosevelt hotel in Cedar Rapids Wednesday. Problems and policies of the Red Cross were discussed at the meet.

Miss Eula Stokely, head of volunteer services in the middlewestern section, directed the conference of southeastern Iowa workers. Dr. Dawson Grim, chairman of the Linn county chapter, introduced Miss Stokely and Miss Mary Alexander, assistant director of the nursing service for the middlewestern region.

Miss E. Magnuson emphasized the ideals and goal of the national Red Cross, which is to have one member in every home taking the home nursing class in order to be prepared for any emergency of the war.

The conference was divided into two sessions: from 9:30 until noon and from after luncheon until 3:30. During the afternoon round table discussions were held in each of the two main divisions of the conference. Iowa City women who attended were: Miss Lois Corder, Mrs. Howard L. Beye, Mrs. C. I. Miller, Mrs. Dean Lierle, Mrs. Fred Pownall, Mrs. Arthur Maris, Mrs. N. G. Alcock, Mrs. L. E. Clark, Mrs. C. L. Gillis, Mrs. Philip Jeans, Mrs. E. D. Plass, Mrs. Verna Free, Mrs. H. S. Ivie, Mrs. Mildred Johnson, Mrs. Jean Koebner, Mrs. Lorna L. Mathis and Mrs. E. W. Chittenden. Mrs. Ed Mitner of Solon also attended.

Applications for ration book No. 3 are now being sent out by the local post office, according to an announcement made yesterday by Postmaster Walter J. Barrow. The post office department is distributing application blanks to all patrons in offices and homes by city and rural mail carriers and through lock boxes and call boxes. Iowa City distribution began yesterday, and will continue through June 5.

The postmaster is furnished with a supply of blanks by the office of price administration in Washington, D. C. Anyone not receiving an application blank through the regular sources can stop at the general delivery window of the post office, where a supply will be kept. After June 5, all applications must go through the local ration board.

Old Age Assistance Reaches $23 a Month Average for Iowans

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa's average old age assistance grant jumped to $23.23 a month for those approved the first ten days in May, informed state government sources said yesterday.

The April average was reported by the state social welfare board to have been $22.45 and the May 1 figure to have risen to $22.57.

Aged assistance grants have been tending upward since the welfare board ordered higher food allowances because of the increased cost of living. Also a factor in the increases was the removal by the recent legislature of the $30 ceiling on monthly pension payments.

The legislature, however, did not expand the annual aged assistance appropriation of $8,500,000 a year.

Meanwhile the number of persons on the aged assistance rolls continued to decline, dropping to 54,174 May 1 compared with 54,396 April 1. The total is approximately 3,000 under the peak reached in 1941. Demands for employes in all forms of economic endeavor because of the war has provided many old persons with jobs or has stepped up the incomes of children to a point where they are better able to contribute to the support of their parents.
