Nazi morale Down Another Note

Several weeks ago in this column we predicted that "Hitler or at least the Italian leader, Mussolini, will be out of the war within six months." Actually, the Italian people fell when their morale sagged to the lowest ebb. The government's surrender is nearly certain.

It was then still true to say exactly what we had written because the Italian people will not easily accept the short and abrupt capitulation that will probably be forced upon them by Marshal Badoglio. The Italian people have fought well, and the Fascists are all for fighting. But the Italian people have suffered so much that they may well decide to play the game as the Italian papers say. It seems quite likely that Mussolini himself will lose his position, but that will be by a fait accompli, made by Marshal Badoglio.

Actually, then, the fall of Italy is near.

Fighting Still Expected in Italy

Nazi will Attempt to Flee

By J. B. WORTHINGTON

Nazi and Italian papers admit that a number of German troops have crossed into Italy, especially the southern part. It is feared that Austria will be invaded and that Italy and Germany will form a continental battlefront, already shown in the northern area, and that Italy will be in the event of an attack.

But rewards of both sides will be of little use to the German military strategy in the Mediterranean theatre.

Reports from the front line show that the Germans are already in the northern part of Italy, and that the Italian soldiers are beginning to capitulate.
