ALLIES FIND DESOLATION, HUNGRY POPULACE IN CAPTURED NAPLES

RAGGED, HUNGRY CITIZENS gave the allies a tumultuous reception when they entered Naples. It was not surprising that the Italians were glad to see the Americans and British, because German occupation had wrecked large sections of the city and left most of it without food or water. The ragged women, left, are dredging a sewer for water because the water supply system was destroyed. An American soldier and a Naples policeman, above, are inspecting wreckage in the harbor, where ships were sunk and destroyed. Official U. S. Army Signal Corps radiophotos.

Allied Army Fords Two Italian Rivers In March on Rome

Soviets Repel Counter-Blow By Germans

Nazis Lose 1,800 Men; Reds Add Pressure On Leningrad Front

By EDWARD KENNEDY ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, ALGIERS (AP)—The allied Fifth and Eighth armies have crossed two rivers on which the fiercely resisting Germans are making a stand to impede the British-American drive up the Italian peninsula—the Volturno, flowing into the Tyrrhenian sea 20 miles from Naples, and the Biferno, which runs into the Adriatic. The Fifth army, bringing up reserves to smash at increased enemy opposition along the route to Rome, crossed the Volturno at one point after occupying Aversa and Maddaloni, north and northeast of Naples, and reaching Lago di Patria, a marshy lake 12 miles northwest of the port, headquarters announced yesterday. The exact spot where the Volturno was crossed was not disclosed. The nearest point on the river to the latest reported allied advance is seven miles north of Maddaloni. This is in the mountains, and from there the river winds some 15 miles before reaching the coastal plain, where it widens and forms a good natural barrier.

U.S. Task Force Shells, Bombs Jap Garrison on Wake Island

Carrier Takes Part In Attack Following Strategy Conference

PEARL HARBOR T. H. (AP)—Japanese installations and the garrison at Wake Island were heavily bombed and shelled Tuesday by a strong task force of the Pacific fleet, said a communique issued yesterday by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. The force was commanded by Rear Admiral Alfred E. Montgomery and included an aircraft carrier. The bombardment by naval units began at dawn, said the announcement. No other details were given.

The text of the communique: "A strong Pacific fleet task force, commanded by Rear Admiral Alfred E. Montgomery, U. S. N., heavily attacked enemy held positions on Wake Island with carrier aircraft and ship bombardment commencing at dawn 5 October 1943, west longitude time. Further details are not now available."

This new offensive stroke followed by a day the disclosure from headquarters of Admiral Nimitz that a strategic Pacific conference had been held at Pearl Harbor fleet headquarters recently. It was attended by Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet, Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the south Pacific force, and Admiral Nimitz. Wake Island is approximately 1,000 miles west of the Hawaiian Islands.

This assault on Wake, immortalized in the first weeks of the war by the heroic 16-day stand by a marine garrison of 378 officers and men, was the second navy task force attack on the island base since it fell to an overwhelming enemy force Dec. 23, 1941.

The first attack was made Feb. 24, 1942, by a carrier force commanded by Admiral Halsey.

The statement in the communique that the enemy forces on Wake were subjected to "ship bombardment" indicates that the third in the present series of Pacific raids probably was heavier and inflicted greater damage than the previous attacks on Marcus and the Gilberts.

Aussie Drive Perils Madang

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Thursday (AP)—Australian forces moving down the Ramu valley have reached the village of Dumbo, 50 miles south of Madang, New Guinea, today's communique reported.

This represented an advance of seven miles from Kaigulin whose capture was announced yesterday. The inland drive posed a menace at the next enemy coastal base above captured Finschhafen. Madang's defense outpost of Boga-djim, 20 miles below it, were raided by four-engined bombers which dropped 39 tons of explosives.

Across Vitiaz strait from Finschhafen, P-40s set fires in the dump areas of Gasmata, New Britain, an enemy air base.

F.D.R. Asks Independence For Filipinos

Message to Congress Requests Post-War Economic Stabilization

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt told congress yesterday that the Filipinos, by their heroism and loyalty, had won the right to "complete freedom and nationhood" and asked authority to proclaim the independence of the islands as soon as feasible. In a special message to the legislators, the president also asked that congress provide for economic rehabilitation of the Philippines once the Japanese are driven from them, and made these two other requests:

- 1. That he be empowered to enter into immediate negotiations with President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine commonwealth to "provide for full security for the Philippines, for the mutual protection of the islands and of the United States, and for the future maintenance of peace in the Pacific."
2. That congress provide for "determining the adjustment necessary in the existing provisions of law which govern economic relations between the United States and the Philippines, so as to assist in making the Philippines, as an independent nation, economically secure wherever possible."

The first of these requests suggested the possibility of a treaty of mutual assistance whereby the United States might maintain military and naval bases in the Philippines.

The second would open for revision the economic provisions of existing legislation providing for independence of the Philippines on July 4, 1946. This legislation calls for gradual imposition of tariffs on Philippine exports to the United States until finally the islands would be on the same basis, so far as trade with the United States is concerned, as all other countries. Some Filipinos have questioned whether this would not cause economic hardships making independence undesirable.

In his message, Mr. Roosevelt noted the 1946 date now set for Philippine independence, but observed: "It is possible, however, that the fortunes of war will permit an earlier consummation of this joint will of the American and Filipino peoples."

Yugoslav Army Cuts Trieste-Austria Rails

Rome Reports Large Losses on Both Sides Along Dalmatian Coast

LONDON (AP)—The Yugoslav national army of liberation announced yesterday that, reinforced by Croatian units, it had cut the Trieste-Austria rail line used by the Germans to pour troops and equipment into the Italian battlefield.

The national army's daily communique, broadcast by the free Yugoslav radio, also reported spread of bloody fighting to many parts of Yugoslavia, and the German-controlled Rome radio acknowledged heavy losses of German forces attempting to overcome resistance along the Dalmatian coast of the Adriatic. Rome said Yugoslav losses also were heavy.

Senate Acts to Raise Allotment for Children Of U.S. Servicemen

Measure Will Cushion Impact of Induction Of Pre-War Fathers

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate passed last night by an overwhelming vote a measure designed to cushion the impact of the induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers into the armed forces by approving unprecedented allowances ranging from $20 to $30 monthly for dependent children.

Yielding to the pleas of Gen. George C. Marshall, the army chief of staff, the senate previously rejected by a vote of 48 to 26 any postponement in the further induction of parents.

The vote on final passage of the bill was 69 to 0. The measure finally approved and sent to the house was a revision of a substitute for the original bill by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont). The Wheeler measure would have prohibited further father inductions until Jan. 1.

The substitute, offered by Senators Bailey (D-NC) and Clark (D-Mo) eliminated all but the enacting clause of Wheeler's bill, but the Montanan forced a vote on the father's draft issue by offering an amendment to it.

The final Wheeler move was for postponement of the induction of parents until after determination of the number of non-fathers that could be made available for the armed forces under provisions designed to curtail deferments of federal and industrial workers for occupational reasons.

Opposing the amendment, Majority Leader Barkley (Ky) contended it would postpone drafting of fathers beyond the deadline of the original Wheeler bill although Wheeler argued that this was not the case.

LONDON, Thursday (AP)—Strong German counter-attacks pounded Soviet spearheads in White Russia but made no gains and lost 1,800 men, Moscow announced today in a communique which claimed no important Russian advances and ignored all but the north central front.

The German radio, meanwhile, spoke of new Russian drives developing around the long inactive Leningrad front and said there was increased Soviet pressure both east of Vitebsk and midway between Gomel and Kiev.

No Serious Changes The Moscow communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor, said there were "no serious changes at the front." A supplement at midnight told of fighting around Vitebsk, Mogilev and Gomel in White Russia.

The communique and Moscow dispatches indicated the major part of the Russian summer offensive had reached a halt, perhaps only temporary, at the Dnieper river. The Moscow reports indicated the offensive may start up again after weather conditions improve.

In the Vitebsk fighting the Germans, supported by tanks and low-flying planes, launched four counter-attacks, but the Russians said they were repulsed and several populated places were captured by the Red army. The Russians last were reported 25 miles east of Vitebsk.

Gomel Positions Improved Red army positions were reported improved near Gomel. In one district the Russians slipped around Gomel from an anchor position about 13 miles east of the city.

A German counter-attack was declared beaten back with heavy German losses in the Mogilev area and the Germans were said to have been dislodged from a strongly fortified point on another sector. The Russians have reported taking towns about 45 miles east of Mogilev.

Implications, Reason— Interpreting The War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON Associated Press Analyst

The allied swinging-gate attack in Italy gained another important stride toward Rome when the Fifth army crossed the Volturno, north of Naples. There is no obviously strong natural defense position below the Rome-Chieti highway for a new Nazi delaying stand, and Eighth army pressure up the Adriatic coast is already threatening the Chieti anchor of that line.

The allied crossing of the Volturno means deployment into the plains of the Volturno along the coast and access to the two main highways to Rome from Naples. They fork just beyond the main Volturno road crossing at Capua. The west branch, the ancient Via Appia of classical times modernized for modern motor traffic, runs up the coastal flank of Mt. Lepini through the once dreaded Pontine marshes. The east fork passes inshore of the Lepini hump up the valley of the Sacco. These two roads and the Chieti trans-peninsular highway toward which the Eighth army is surging, are the main road connections south and east from Rome and necessarily must largely grove the allied attack.

It seems obvious, that it was the fast-paced Eighth army leap-frog advance on the Adriatic flank of the allied line that forced Nazi retreat from the Volturno as the seizure of Fog-gia had previously forced enemy evacuation of Naples. That is the genius of the allied battle plan in Italy as it has yet unfolded. With the Fifth army at the hinge, the Eighth army is the swinging gate that constantly threatens to trap a considerable enemy force unless the Nazis keep retreating.

The report of heavy Nazi-British fighting along the Biferno river fails to indicate definitely the scene of this action. It seems likely, however, that it is along the upper river. If so it indicates that the Eighth army has made a sharp advance along its center and left flank as well as along the coast.

That implies that an Eighth army swing directly toward Rome via the Rome-Foggia highway, the only main road available for the purpose, is developing. It is clear that any substantial further British advance above the Biferno must threaten the Nazi right flank before the Fifth army with reinforcements must have been thrown in against the Eighth army on the Biferno to hold until the escape from Volturno could be carried out. The allied swinging-gate technique has again proved successful in Italy and greatly minimized the probable casualty cost of a frontal drive by the Fifth army up the short western routes toward Rome.

A Case for Fraternities—

A good many unwarranted attacks have been launched against the fraternity system on this campus the past few years. These attacks are unwarranted because they are striking at the effect; not at the cause.

The general run of this criticism centers around the obvious fact the fraternity system concentrates on social life... that it steers clear of academic pursuits as much as possible...

The crux of the problem is that there is too wide a breach between students and faculty... between social and academic life.

are in the closest possible harmony with the faculty.

Members of these clubs, so far as I am able to discern, discuss and argue such intellectual subjects as literature, world politics, drama, education...

They do this at the dinner table. Their professors are invited over and they participate in the discussion. Dating, the speed of cars, the price of liquor—except the intellectual approaches to all three, if there are any—are verboten.

In this manner the mind is kept always at razor edge... the whole thinking process is stimulated.

To my knowledge, very few American universities have approached this European attitude toward learning. Two outstanding examples are Harvard and Chicago. (The graduate schools mainly.)

Could such an attitude be built up in fraternal organizations at Iowa?

No, I don't think so. Not unless the level of the average student were raised. And that would necessitate elimination of all mediocre elements.

At least 50 percent of Iowa students during normal times fall into this category. They are usually the ones with money. They are usually the ones who join fraternities and sororities.

Thus, while a portion of the group may have intellectual possibilities, it is dragged down by the dominating portion which does not.

But you can't blame fraternities for causing the faculty-student, academic-social breach. They are partly responsible, yes. They could do a better job than they have done. They could make an honest effort to become better acquainted with the faculty if they wanted. The trouble is that most members, in their drift through college education, don't want to. They want to have fun.

The mediocre elements—the lachardaisical, non-intellectual attitudes—are the result of our social system... poor high school education... just plain lack of brains.

Students attend Oxford and Chicago to learn something. Their minds are above average. There is no academic slag.

And this attitude is reflected in their social clubs. The social clubs don't cause it.

Deal with the cause and the effect will take care of itself. If the materials in a building are of low quality, naturally the building will be of low quality.

I would hate to see any attempt to abolish fraternities on this campus simply because a portion of the construction materials were damaged in shipping.

Oct. 7, 1941...

President Roosevelt told reporters that new orders of the government of Panama forbidding the arming of ships flying that flag made rapid revision of the American neutrality act more urgent than ever.

Earlier in the day the president was reported to have informed congressional leaders, mostly from the senate, that the act should be revised to let armed American ships carry supplies into British and other belligerent ports.

An editorial quoted Senator Taft of Ohio as saying, "The American nation today is not united. Lack of unity would be a serious danger if the nation is forced into war. The failures in the program up to date have resulted from lack of organization and administrative ability rather than from a lack of unity."

Iowa's varsity team continued its second day of rest following the strenuous Michigan game, while the reserves were put through an extended workout by Coach Eddie Anderson.

A $25,000 atom smasher had just been completed in the physics department with Prof. G. J. Plain in charge of construction. Experiments in the next few days were to be confined to voltage tests, department authorities had announced.

Oct. 7, 1938...

Homecoming got underway on this morning in 1938. The Alpha Xi Deltas led in the badge-selling race with a total of 3,618 sold to date.

A parade of all university students and marching music groups was to culminate in a huge mass meeting on Old Capitol steps.

A group of high state officials led by Governor Nelson G. Kraschel had arrived from Des Moines to attend the game.

Mrs. Louis Pelzer, local director of the American Art week announced that two contests for art students and amateur artists were to begin. The Western Union Telegraph company was offering $350 for the best heading design for souvenir telegrams from either the New York or San Francisco World Fairs.

Fashion note: The latest thing in jewelry accessories was the charm bracelet.

Dean Stoddard of the graduate college called upon Iowa Citizens to use prevention not cure in the fight against delinquency in an address before the co-ordinated council of Iowa City welfare agencies. The Dean recognized two kinds of delinquents, one which was the victim of community forces and the other which was mentally deficient and would tend toward delinquency in any surroundings.

"Around The Town" by Merle Miller devoted itself to the Homecoming celebration, saying, "and there they were shouting and waving their arms and worrying about the football team, about beating Wisconsin... just as if the game had anything to do with Homecoming. Any fool knew that it was only an excuse for coming back..."

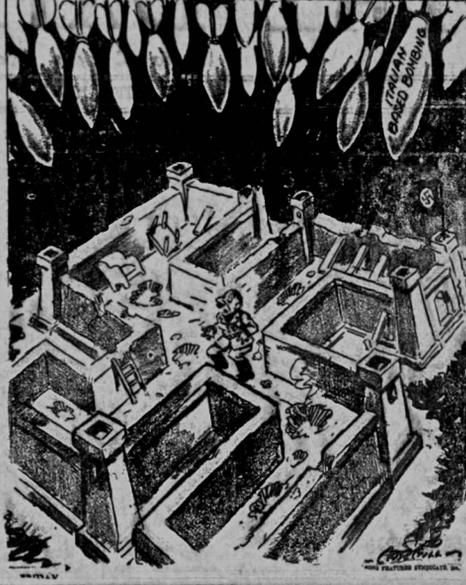

Oct. 7, 1933...

A crowd of 10,000, the largest non-conference crowd in the short history of the new stadium was expected for the Iowa-Bradley Tech game.

Virgil Tacy, LI of Council Bluffs and John Harrison, AA of Oakland, were to represent Iowa against Bates college, Me., in a nationally broadcast debate for the east-west championship of the United States. Tacy was a member of the debate team which the year before had met Trinity college of Dublin. Previous to that he had appeared against Oxford university.

Harrison had won the Frank Lowden prize for excellency in debate and was president of the intercollegiate debate team. Johnson County Treasurer W. S. Smith announced that tax collections for the fiscal year were much better with some 4 percent more taxes already paid than in the same period a year before.

The Tale of Johnny Greco, an Independent Actor Who Doesn't Like Pictures By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—This is the tale of an independent actor, a chap who wants no part of pictures. His name is Johnny Greco, aged about two years, and he put a crimp in the style of Henry King, the director. King was back on the sets for added scenes for "The Song of Bernadette." When Johnny was ensconced in the royal sick-bed, Henry King stepped confidently forward. "Look up here," he directed the boy, "where my hand is. Maybe I'll pull a rabbit out of the air." Johnny looked, not amused. King tried a few other soothers, finally asked: "Johnny, what do you want?" "I want you," said Johnny gravely, "to let me alone!" A while later, Johnny became tractable, did his chore, and went to sleep. But how many actors have yearned to tell directors exactly that? David Hempstead, the producer, called on Ginger Rogers with a script. She liked it—not oddly, because Dalton Trumbo had written "Tender Comrade" with her in mind. So they began talking about leading men, and Hempstead suggested Robert Ryan. "Never heard of him," said Ginger. "What's he done?" They dug up Ryan's first screen test, in which Bob pushed a smaller man all over the screen with considerable violence. Ginger said no. "He's too big and burly. They'd expect him to eat me up." For seven days they interviewed prospects to no avail. Then Ginger dropped in at Hempstead's office and found him reading a pile of comment cards from preview audiences from Pasadena. "Want to read them?" Ginger read. Pasadena liked Ryan. As she laid aside the last card Hempstead reminded her: "This is our last day to find a leading man." Ginger nodded. "How about Ryan?" "You said he was too burly," said Hempstead. "Anyway I think he's going in the army." "Couldn't he just wait three weeks?" she asked. "I'll see if we can find him." Hempstead instructed his secretary to comb Hollywood for Ryan. The "combing" took two minutes. Ryan walked in, right away. In two more minutes he was set for the role. "How about the army?" Ginger asked. "I'm in, but I don't go for three weeks." "Isn't that lucky," said Ginger. "As just thought. They certainly located you in a hurry just now." "I wasn't far away," Ryan smiled. "Maybe—right next door?" she asked, and he nodded. "Been waiting there long?" "Seven days," said Ryan.

Nazi Strategy in Italy: 'Delay'

Attempting to Hold Our Pace Down

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Nazis have placed enough troops south of Rome to make us fight for every inch of our northward advance.

They have had about eight divisions around and south of the city. The bulk of this force has been digging in just north of Naples around Gaeta on the Mediterranean coast and selecting defensive positions across the peninsula to the Adriatic in such a way as to offer determined resistance along that line in a final fight for the Italian capital.

The main German army in Italy, however, has been kept north of the Apennine line in the region of the Po, suggesting that there Hitler intends to put up his best stand on Italian soil.

These placements betray the Nazi plans. They are not trying to face us with a superior force, but have schemed what the military men call "strong delaying actions" to impede us and keep us down to a homeland.

They could make a better fight of it by withdrawing planes and troops from northern France and the lowlands, but, obviously, they are afraid of momentary invasion, and intend primarily to protect the plodding pace.

Can Reds Break Dnieper Line. The next ten days should tell whether the Russians can break through the Dnieper line. Present condition of the battle suggests three widely separate points at which the Russians will meet strike.

If they could cut across the Dnieper at the big bend (Dnie-Propetrovsk), they could threaten the whole southern German line and might cause the Nazis to withdraw not only from Melitopol, but all the way back beyond the mouth of the Dnieper river. This would leave the Germans practically crowded out of their Black sea shore positions.

The prospects that the Russians could smash the line at Kiev has been widely analyzed. But there is a third opportunity northward around Smolensk which has not drawn much attention.

There they could force the Germans back against the impenetrable Privat marshes and divide the German army north and south of that vast swamp, thus hindering their communications and weakening their ability to resist.

Any one of these three Russian successes would break the propaganda front which Goebbels has erected at home and should cause panic among the German people.

German Retreat Strategy. The German retreat strategy in Italy and Russia has sponsored some notion that Hitler is holding back the best portions of his large army for counterattacks as soon as allied lines are advanced too far to be easily maintained.

Some authorities suspect him of playing the Rommel game of north Africa. There the Nazi retreated until the British were beyond their best supply radius before launching his major force.

That is possible but not probable. The plain explanation of German weakness is that our constant threat of direct invasion from England has pinned down a heavy quantity of German strength for the defense of that area.

Furthermore, our line of supplies can be just as easily maintained in northern Italy as in the boot. Also it is hardly likely that the Russians will get beyond their depth.

Fluid Defense. Military men write of fluid defense, meaning mobile resistance. Our attack since the final stages of the north African drive has developed an even more sparkling strategy of war—fluid offense.

Our armies have shifted positions no less intricately than a Notre Dame backfield. General Clark's army, for instance, landed south of Salerno and wound up in central Italy, while the British armies from the heel and toe likewise have criss-crossed and fitted into positions behind and around him like vast puzzle pieces.

The same swift moving of armies in bewildering fashion was evident in Sicily and earlier in Tunisia where the Americans who were fighting on the right suddenly appeared on the left. The deception of these shifts has been heightened by amphibious flanking movements around to the German rear by the sea, the latest having developed at Termoli on the Adriatic.

It is just possible we may outflank the coming Gaeta line and perhaps even Rome by landing at Civitavetchia and circling in from the coast to the German rear.

Washington in Wartime—

Sen. Tolan Vs. Senate Garage

WASHINGTON—The capital in wartime: Our latest addition to the sound and fury files is Rep. John H. Tolan's battle to convert the Senate Garage into sleeping quarters for visiting servicemen. It appears the congressman from California built his clincher argument on the fact that he had been snooping around the Union Station the other weekend and discovered a score of our boys in khaki and blue napping on the hard, hard benches.

That very same night, according to the war hospitality committee, there were 277 available free beds in Washington just begging to rest the weary bones of some service men. In fact, since the committee started functioning about a year ago, there has been only one weekend when the demand for beds even equaled the supply.

That was several weeks back when the big military carnival on the Washington Monument grounds ushered in the "Back the Attack" bond campaign. What we need in this town now is more beds for civilians.

Nothing that has happened in recent months has caused more consternation in Washington than Gen. Douglas MacArthur's statement "is his role in the Pacific, he hoped to play it manfully and that island hopping is not his conception of how to win the war as supreme commander of the entire Pacific and East Asia theatre; (4) that in spite of his protests that he has no political ambitions, he was thinking in terms of the presidential campaign next year and sought to prevent in advance any political sidetracking; (5) that he has only recently learned about the strategy in the Pacific and wants on record now that he doesn't agree with that strategy or feel very happy about the role he has been assigned in carrying it out.

With the exception of point No. 4, I think it's possible that all conclusions may have touched on the truth. In spite of the fact that there is bound to be a boom for MacArthur for president which will carry right to the Republican convention floor, I believe intimates of MacArthur here who insist that he has no interest whatever in that direction.

The fact remains, however, that MacArthur's statement has puzzled Washington observers more than anything that has come along recently and it will take the disclosure of military secrets which can be only divulged in actions to clarify his meaning.

RECENT BRIDE

In a lawn wedding, Lois Muriel Fincham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fincham of Nevada, became the bride of Clyde Pavlova of Iowa City Sept. 25 at 6 p. m. in the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev. George Waleen of New Ulm, Minn., read the double ring service beneath an arbor covered with climbing roses and bordered with Canna lilies. The traditional wedding marches were played by Mrs. Lena Marshall of Des Moines, who also accompanied Lola Vriezlar of Des Moines in the vocal selections, "I Love Thee" (Grieg) and "Because" (D'Hardelot).

Attending the bride as matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. Roberta Giles. Serving as bridesmaids were Phyllis, Beverly and Monna Jean Fincham, sisters of the bride, Mildred and Bette Pavlova, sisters of the bridegroom, and Nedva Correll, a classmate of the bride.

Best Man
Robert Rowley assisted as best man and ushering were Reuben Widner and Max Watesman. Danna and David Rankin attended as flower girl and ring bearer. Train bearer was Gladys Mae Fincham, sister of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white slipper satin, fashioned with a fitted, quilted bodice, full skirt and a junior train. The long, fitted sleeves were quilted above the elbow and pointed at the wrist. Her full-length veil was of English imported net trimmed with chintilly lace. She wore a two strand pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom, and carried a bouquet of orchids and gladioli.

The matron of honor was attired in a frock of sheer brown and tan leaf print, styled with a fitted bodice, full skirt and long sleeves. She wore a tiara of flowers in her hair and carried an arm bouquet of salmon gladioli.

Autumn Hues
The bridesmaids wore gowns of blue, wheat, green, gold, rose and rust taffeta in autumn hues. Styled similarly, the dresses were fashioned with basque bodices, scalloped necklines and quarter-length sleeves with scalloped edges. Small ruffled caps in matching shades and colonial bouquets of gladioli and chrysanthemums completed their costumes.

A pink satin gown cut with a full bodice, long pointed sleeves and a short train was worn by the flower girl, while the train bearer was attired in a princess gown of gold taffeta. Carrying the rings on a white satin pillow, the ring bearer was dressed in a black and white satin suit.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Fincham chose a navy blue lace gown complemented by a corsage of roses.

Nuptial Reception
The reception after the ceremony was held in the home of the bride's parents for 125 guests. Assisting hostess was Mrs. Vida Rankin of Colorado and pouring at the serving table were Mrs. Marie Fincham of Rockford, Ill., and Mildred Lankeau, a classmate of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of the Iowa Methodist hospital school of nursing in Des Moines. Mr. Pavlova attended Minnesota State Teachers college in St. Cloud and the University of Chicago. He is at present a senior in the college of medicine at the University of Iowa and a member of Kappa Delta Pi, honorary society of education. He will take his internship at Missouri Methodist hospital in St. Joseph, Mo.

The couple is residing at 624 S. Clinton street.

BUD, playing grown-up, typifies the millions who responded to the call for volunteers to guard the home front. They studied first aid, fire fighting, plane types. They kept lonely vigil at isolated posts. They took their jobs with deadly seriousness—showed the world that America knew the meaning of "Alert!"

America's railroads know the meaning of that word, too. Because of their alertness munitions plants operated at capacity; fighting men and materials moved with great dispatch; our entire war machine meshed and moved smoothly and swiftly.

ROCK ISLAND'S Program of Planned Progress typifies the alertness so vital to the continued efficient operation of America's railroads. For it visualizes improvements—what is to be done, when and how. With the transition from war to peace, ROCK ISLAND will be ready!

Cooper Pitches 4-3 Victory

Card Hurler, Catcher Shocked by Sudden Death of Father

By JUDSON BAILEY
 YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK (AP)—In a stirring drama the full story of which was unknown to most of the 68,578 fans, big Morton Cooper pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4 to 3 victory over the New York Yankees in the second game of the world series yesterday only a few hours after the sudden death of his father.

Mort and his brother, catcher Walker Cooper, learned of their loss late this morning, just before they led the Redbirds back into this big concrete arena to seek atonement for Tuesday's 4 to 2 opening triumph by the Yanks.

Under these tragic circumstances Mort went to the mound with calm courage and proceeded to prove that he is the great pitcher that his record in the National league for the last two years has indicated.

He suppressed the Yankees on six hits, none of them for more than one base until the ninth inning, allowed only one walk, and hurled himself out of trouble on the few occasions he found himself in a jam.

It was a great show that erased all the black marks which had been placed against him for two failures against the Yankees in the 1942 world series and two losses to the American league in all-star games.

In contrast to Tuesday's humpty-dumpty performance, the Cardinals supported Cooper with a thrilling hitting and fielding display in which Martin Marion and Ray Sanders stole the Yankees' thunder by hitting two crashing home runs in the early innings against Ernie (Jumbo) Bonham.

Makes First Hit
 The first hit by either team in the first three frames was Marion's smash into the lower stands in the left field corner on Bonham's first pitch in the third.

Then the Redbirds ripped over three more runs in the fourth on a sharp single to center by George Kurovski which brought Musial home without even drawing a throw, and Sanders' line drive homer into the lower right field stands.

This bang, bang, bang firing against Bonham brought the Yankees' bullpen rushing to action, but the big righthander steadied thereafter, allowed only two more hits and fanned a total of nine men before being removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning.

Altogether the Cardinals made only seven safeties off Bonham and Johnny Murphy, who pitched the final frame, but they were explosions which left the New York Bombers stunned until the ninth.

The Yankees tried to get back into the ball game in the fourth stanza when Frankie Crosetti popped a single over Sanders' head on an attempted bunt, raced to third on a single by Bill Johnson and scored on a fly by Charley Keller.

But the one real threat they made to Cooper was on their last turn at bat while hundreds of fans were crowding into the exits. Johnson, who also made two hits Tuesday, led off with a double to left and Keller followed with a tremendous triple over left-fielder Danny Litwhiler's head.

This caused manager Billy Southworth to come trotting onto the field for a hasty conference with Cooper, but it didn't succeed in shaking the pitching ace of the Cards. He got Bill Dickey on a liner to second baseman Lou Klein, caused Nick Etten to ground to Klein, Keller scurrying home unimpeded on the play, and then forced Joe Gordon to raise a futile little pop foul to catcher Walker Cooper in front of the Yankee dugout.

Suitable Finish
 It was a suitable finish for a stirring, heart-warming job by Cooper, whose chances against the Yankees even without the pressure of a death in the family had been in doubt because of his showing in the last series, when the Bombers pounded him for 17 hits in a total of 13 innings in two games.

Aside from the two scoring innings, the apple-checked St. Louis star was in trouble just twice and worked his way out almost effortlessly.

In the fifth inning with one out, Gordon singled to center and sped on to second base as centerfielder Harry Walker fumbled the ball momentarily. Walker quickly made up for his lapse by making a spectacular catch of a long fly by Tuck Stainback on the next play, and Bonham was an easy infield out.

In the sixth Crosetti, a nuisance to the Cardinals in both games, led off with a ground single to center and on the next pitch catcher Cooper tipped Bud Metheny's bat for an interference play which put runners on first and second with none out. Johnson promptly rapped into a fast double play, however, to take the heat off Cooper and Keller went down on a fly.

The one walk given by Cooper was to Dickey at the start of the seventh and the next three batters were retired in order.

Runners on Bases
 On the other hand the Cardinals had runners on the bases in every inning except the first and sixth. They got men to first and second with one out in the fifth on a walk to Klein and a safe bunt by Walker to keep the Yanks jittery after the scoring punches in the two previous innings and in the ninth they managed to get a runner to third. Litwhiler walked and Klein beat out an infield hit, but Walker was retired on a liner to Stainback in center.

The score of the game yesterday was exactly the same as the tally in the second game of the series last year, when Johnny Benzley led the Yankees to lift St. Louis level before the two teams moved to New York, and it left the Redbirds exultant over their chances in the remaining games.

Southworth said he would come back today with a lefthander, Alpha (Bet) Brazle, the 27-year-old rookie who was promoted from Sacramento of the Pacific Coast league in mid-July after pitching 40 consecutive scoreless innings there. Since entering the national league he has won 8 games and lost 2.

Cooper seemed likely to pitch again later in the series. He hoped to arrange to leave last night for Independence, Mo., where his father, Robert J. Cooper, a 58-year-old rural mail carrier, died unexpectedly of a heart ailment.

Brother Walker intended to go home after today's game and both were expected to be with the Cardinals again in St. Louis Sunday when the fourth game is played after open dates Friday and Saturday set aside for traveling.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees nominated Hank Borowy, a slender young righthander who has won 14 and lost 9, to hurl the third game. Down the home stretch of the American league Borowy, a former Fordham star, won seven successive decisions and 11 of his last 12 games.

Upton Close Will Speak Here Tonight

World-Famed Author, Analyst to Give First Lecture of Season

Upton Close, internationally-famed lecturer, author and radio news analyst, will speak here tonight on "Moves on the World's Chessboard," the first of this season's university lectures.

Outstanding authority on Asia and its peoples, Close, long before Pearl Harbor, in his best-seller, "Challenge: Behind the Face of Japan," predicted the clash between Japan and the United States as inevitable.

Expert on Pacific Affairs

Accepted as radio's special expert on Pacific affairs, he was getting ready to fly across the Pacific on a survey mission for Readers Digest and NBC four days before Pearl Harbor was bombed. Close has traveled extensively throughout China, Manchuria, Siberia and Japan. He served as an intelligence officer for the United States government during World War I and was investigating officer for our government in Shantung during the Japanese invasion from 1916 to 1919.

He served as adviser to Chinese students during the student revolutions in 1919 and was chief of foreign affairs under War-Lors Pei-Fu, editor of the Peking Leader, the oldest newspaper in the world.

Later a professor of Asiatic culture at the University of Washington, Close was commander of an annual American expedition to the Orient, a seminar of students, teachers and professional people.

As an explorer for the National Geographic society he covered the earthquake in northwest China which cost the lives of half a million people in 1923 and has presented short-wave broadcasts in Chinese.

Close believes the Pacific era is here and that an American-monitored peace for all the peoples of the Pacific basin, Japan included, should be established.

D.J. O'Connor Named in Raid

Donald J. O'Connor, president and manager of the Bluejackets club was charged with illegal possession of gambling devices and illegal possession of alcoholic liquor in two informations filed in district court yesterday by County Attorney Edward L. Rate.

The Bluejackets club is an organization for the enlisted personnel of the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school.

One information stated that seven slot machines "with an element of chance involved in their operation" had been found in the club in the Paul-Helen building which was raided by Iowa City police Sept. 27.

Twenty-nine cases of whiskey, gin, brandy, rum and wine were also found, some of which did not bear the Iowa State liquor seal. The second information charged O'Connor with "intent to sell" the liquor.

GENERALS TAKE TIME TO BITE DOGS

WEIGHTIER DUTIES of war are laid aside for a moment, above, while two Allied generals take time to "go to the dogs." The "dogs" are the famous American hot dogs, served at a U. S. headquarters in England and evidently relished by the officers. The generals are Maj. Gen. R. M. Wooten, left, of the British Army, who had just received the U. S. Legion of Merit, and Maj. Gen. John C. H. Lee, commander of the U. S. Army Services of Supply in the British Isles. This is an official United States Army Signal Corps photo. (International)

Cowles Speaks Over WSUI Today at 3:15

Pay-As-You-Go Tax For 1st Period Due

All pay-as-you-go liabilities and returns for the first three months' period ending Sept. 30 are due at the office of the collector of internal revenue in Des Moines not later than Oct. 31, according to the internal revenue service of the treasury department.

Forms for the returns of income tax withheld from salaries and wages for this period have been mailed to all employers in the state to facilitate the immediate return of the first quarterly payment.

E. H. Birmingham, collector of internal revenue for the district of Iowa, states that severe penalties will be imposed for failure to file these returns before the deadline.

Birmingham added that since the employer is not the taxpayer, but merely the withholding agent for the United States, the tax withheld is not the property of the person withholding it.

'This Is the Army' To Be Given Tonight At Englert Theater

All Seats Reserved; Receipts to Be Given To Army Relief Fund

The premiere showing of the movie "This Is the Army," with 350 soldiers of Irving Berlin's original stage show and added movie stars, will begin at the Englert theater tonight at 8 o'clock. All receipts from tonight's show will go to the army emergency relief fund.

Tickets are selling well, according to Harold Lyon, manager of the Englert theater. All seats for the performance are reserved. Tickets can be purchased for $1.10, $2.20 and $3.30 at the box office any time after 11 a.m. There are still tickets available. To Earn 10 Million

Receipts of the stage show, from which the movie was taken, totaled two million dollars, all of which went to the army emergency relief fund. The picture is expected to earn another ten million dollars for the fund.

The stage show, which Berlin wrote and produced in the spring of 1942, ran three months on Broadway. The show then toured the nation, playing a special performance for the President in Washington, D. C.

Irving Berlin contributed his story and music for the movie. All movie stars participating donated their services and Warner Brothers made the picture at cost. Soldiers in the cast made the movie as part of their regular army work under army discipline.

Berlin Sings

The movie centers on the production of two army shows, one in each World war. Songs from Irving Berlin's first show, "Yip, Yip, Yaphank," are included in the movie. Berlin, himself, sings "Oh, How I Hate To Get Up in the Morning."

The army emergency relief aids families of servicemen as well as servicemen themselves. It is independent of the war chest.

Every city with a population of over 5,000 will have a premiere of this picture.

During the first 7 months of 1943, American shipyards delivered for service a tonnage of new merchant vessels equivalent to the entire ocean-going tonnage of the American Merchant Marine prior to Pearl Harbor.

NEW CURRIER OFFICER

BERNICE QUINTUS, A4 of Garner, was chosen vice-president of Currier Hall, women's dormitory, in a general election Wednesday. She will serve as vice-president this semester, and president next semester, taking the place of Marjorie Bestor, C3 of Newton, who will be graduated in the December Convocation.

'Alice in Wonderland' Scenery Unique; Shifts Made in Full View of Audience

The scenery to be used in "Alice in Wonderland," the first play to be produced in the University theater this year, is unusual in that scenery shifts will be made in full view of the audience.

The uniqueness of the play itself makes this necessary, for Alice does not leave the stage during the play, except during the period of intermission at the close of part one.

For this reason, Alice is unable to "go to the scenery" as most leading characters do; therefore, the scenery must be brought to Alice.

Two devices are used in the process of bringing the scenery to Alice that make it possible to have 26 different changes of scenery without closing the curtains, except at intermission.

The first of these is a pair of wagons, or platforms, which roll onto the stage on a track, bearing the downstage scenery. These wagons will be set with scenery backstage and rolled onto the stage at the beginning of each scene, simultaneous with the background change.

The method of changing the background is the second unique feature of the stage setting for "Alice in Wonderland." Ordinary painted backdrops would be unsatisfactory because of the nature of the play.

"Alice in Wonderland" opens with Alice sitting before the fireplace in her own home. She falls asleep, and the following scenes are dream sequences, many of them too short to make changes of regular scenery possible.

The dream scenes blend and merge into each other so suddenly and unexpectedly that a hazy, indefinite background is needed to complete the effect of dreaminess. This indefinite effect is achieved by means of light projection in forming the backgrounds. Designs will be thrown on a curved background by means of projectors and slides which are also curved. This makes it possible to achieve peculiar, distorted background scenery which corresponds to the impression of the scenery which was received by Lewis Carroll's Alice.

The scenes representing the duchess' kitchen and Alice's palace are examples of this type of projection.

Some of the scenes, however, are landscapes or mere land and sky scenes, as in the conversation between the walrus and the carpenter, a seashore scene.

Thus, while projected light forms the background designs, wagon platforms will bear the three-dimensional scenery which is actually used by Alice and the strange creatures which fill her dream.

The scenery has been planned by Prof. A. S. Gillette of the dramatic art department. Slides which will be used in projection will be made by Prof. H. D. Sellman.

'Old Cap' Bell Hasn't Failed Since 1855

Approximately 16 times every school day, the bell atop Old Capitol is rung by J. F. Phipps to signify the beginning and ending of classes.

Phipps, university employee for 23 years, rings the bell by means of a rope in the basement of Old Capitol, and as far as he knows, the same bell jarred the seniors of the class of 1855 to wakefulness at the end of a chemistry lecture the same as it does today.

The bell, according to Phipps, isn't swung on an axle like a church bell, but a weight is hit against it, causing the instrument to ring.

"It's always worked," says SUT's bell ringer number one. "As long as I've been ringing it. It's never failed me."
