

They Eat Their Cake—

Russian Diplomatic Trick

—And They Have It, Too

In establishing something with the deceptive appearance of a political federation, the Russians have accomplished the supreme trick every diplomat hopes for: they have eaten their cake while having it, too.

The more obvious facts: in a post-war global set-up along the lines of an international federation, league or alliance (and along such lines post-war reconstruction must inevitably be) the Russians have their bargaining powers multiplied by 16. They have, moreover, split responsibility for any actions that might prove embarrassing by 16. With the farce of legalism so dear to the Stalinist mentality, they may henceforward disclaim total responsibility for resented policies.

At the same time it is obvious that this "division" into "autonomous independent republics" is a clever but transparent trick. Russia still is an autocracy under Joseph Stalin, the embodiment of Communist virtues, and there is no reason to believe that any of the "decentralized" republics will be able, or, for that matter, desire to do anything that offends orthodox Communist propriety. At the same time, however, they can and will at least claim possession of a tremendous independence. This chimera they will use quite effectively in their foreign dealings.

Suppose Russia wishes to re-organize the Comintern, a world-weapon recently abandoned for reasons of political expediency. While the Moscow regime, quaffing deeply from the vodke of lamb-like innocence, will maintain strict legality, 16 minor legations in the countries of the globe will do the dirty work. If these "autonomous" diplomats are discovered and found guilty of undermining activities in contradiction to Moscow's promises, they will be sharply rebuked and Pravda will print a statement on how, for the sweet sake of liberty, the Kremlin must endure such outrages by its own republics. (Independent as the dear little cuss is, with all its damnable touching initiative.)

This sort of political shadow boxing is on the surface idiotic but invariably effective. One can also glean from this crude example how vast the opportunities will be for subtle Russian maneuvers on a global scale. R.J.C.

News Behind the News

Juvenile Delinquency a Symptom Of Social Degeneration

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON—Two news papers publishing my column have complained strongly (threatening to quit) because I have paid too much attention to juvenile delinquency.

They thought it a problem to be guided alone by physician writers who advised parents, and I suspect that behind their complaints is the common notion that "freedom of expression" will continue to be the song of this era instead of discipline in home, school and church.

In fact, a Pennsylvania reform school superintendent observed that my efforts to swim against a surface tide would await a reward in heaven, as none was possible on this earth. I disagree.

This juvenile delinquency decadence of our nation is not a child problem or a medical problem. It is a national symptom of a social degeneration involving adults more than children, the first crack that is widening before our eyes in a break of our established culture.

If it is not cured in the right way, we will fall down the abyss forecast by the philosophers Spengler and Sorokin, who surmised that western culture was going fast and would result in the rise of a new leadership, possibly oriental. (Since leadership in world culture has traveled westward).

Certainly, no nation is stronger than the character of its women and children, no matter how many battleships and planes it may have.

No less an experience expert than Inspector Walter M. Germain, crime prevention police at Saginaw, Michigan, has recognized juvenile delinquency as a character defect.

For some years, he has been speaking and writing of his experience, saying the only alternatives are the building of character or more prisons. He even joins a physician writer in prophesying "a psychopathic breakdown in civilization" unless the current march of crime by adolescents is reversed.

His theories of what should be done only partly coincide with

To the People of this Community

KILL OR BE KILLED

United States Marines paid the stiffest price in human life per square yard for the capture of Tarawa, vital Pacific outpost.

It was kill or be killed. Your boys did not flinch when they ran into the deadliest fire-power along the beaches of this important Gilbert Island stronghold.

This assault, bloody and costly, is one of the many which must be made before Tokyo and Berlin are pounded into dust and ashes.

What are you doing to back up the boys? Remember these are boys from this very community, perhaps from your very home. Any home in your neighborhood which today does not display the Treasury's red, white and blue 4th War Loan Shield proclaiming "We bought Extra Bonds" is not backing the attack. Every Extra War Bond you buy becomes a direct fighter against Japan and Germany. If you could but see one man die on the battlefield, you would not count the cost of your slight sacrifice to buy Extra War Bonds to make each succeeding assault less costly in the lives of our boys.

You can't afford NOT to buy Extra Bonds in the 4th War Loan if you would help these boys.

Demos' Big Dinner Fails to Rouse The Old Enthusiasm

QUESTION: DO YOU THINK WE SHOULD RETALIATE FOR JAPANESE TREATMENT OF AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR?

Prof. Kirk H. Porter of the political science department: "No, because we cannot possibly compete with those people in atrocities. We couldn't possibly do as bad things in retaliation. You can't compete with a savage in savagery."

Maxim Travis, A4 of Waterloo: "No. In wartime you usually find it to be true that so-called atrocities are committed by both sides. It is the publicizing of such that serves as a powerful propaganda weapon and is always used to its fullest extent by ourselves as well as the enemy. I think as a whole there is nothing to be gained by retaliation as such."

George Anderson, Al of Avoca: "I believe the proper authorities should be punished for these atrocities. I don't believe the whole of the Japanese people are to blame for them. I'm in favor of using the same type of retaliation that the Russians have been using in their trials of the German officers."

Mrs. J. C. Tipton, housewife: "It seems as though our being good to their prisoners hasn't made any difference to them. Therefore we ought to treat the Japanese prisoners as they treat ours. Yet when one thinks of it, it makes us no better than they. I am not certain what should be done. The quicker we get at them, the better—that is the main thing."

Mary Schwarzkopf, A4 of LaGrange, Ill.: "We should be careful if we do, for we have been known to commit atrocities ourselves. It should retaliate the Japanese may publicize our crimes, I think retaliation has already been accomplished by the fact that the American people are now conscious of the true nature of the enemy and of the American job that is far from being finished."

In a single ring ceremony Lorna Stobart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stobart of Hamilton, Ohio, became the bride of R. Dale Nance of Iowa City, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Nance of Stillwater, Okla., yesterday morning at 10:30 in the Trinity Episcopal church. The Rev. Frederick W. Putnam read the service before an altar draped in white and bouquets of white snapdragons.

Organ selections played by Richard Crowder, included "Meditation de Thais" (Massenet); "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden;" "O Perfect Love" (Browne); the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin (Wagner), and "Wedding March" (Mendelssohn).

Serving the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Raymond A. Dennison, Hugh V. Ross of Iowa City attended the bridegroom as best man, and Leo Reyna of Iowa City and John B. Stobart, brother of the bride, were ushers.

Given in Marriage

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a two-piece street-length dress of pastel aqua crepe. She chose brown accessories and her only jewelry was a necklace, a gift of the bridegroom. Mrs. Dennison chose a street-length grey-blue crepe dress with navy blue accessories. Her corsage was of talisman roses. For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Stobart was attired in an aqua crepe dress contrasted with brown accessories. She wore a garden corsage.

A wedding breakfast for the wedding party and their immediate families was held after the ceremony in the Jefferson hotel.

Hawkeyes Take On Maroons Here Tonight

Iowans Seek 7th Straight

PROBABLE STARTING LINEUPS

Iowa Ives (6-1) ... F. Furry (5-9). Danner (6) ... F. DeGraw (5-11). Herwig (6-3) ... C. Delibin (6-2). Postels (6-3) ... G. Whit's (6-1½). Spencer (6-3) ... G. Finn (5-11). Officials: John O'Donnell (St. Ambrose) and L. W. Whitford (Iowa Teachers).

Time and place: Saturday, 8 p.m., Iowa fieldhouse.

Broadcast: WSUI, Dick Yoakam and Bernie Bracker, 7:55.

While Purdue and Ohio State fight it out for the league lead decision the Iowa Hawkeyes will beceded a game tonight as they go up against the Chicago Maroons, all-time record losers in the Big Ten loop.

Beginning at 8 o'clock in the Iowa fieldhouse the Chicago five will seek to continue their jinx position on the Iowa schedule. Once before in 1938 when the Hawkeyes were riding high in the league standings the visiting quintet dropped them with a scoring rush and Pops Harrison and company will attempt to see that that doesn't happen again.

Dave Danner and Dick Ives, freshman flash forwards for the Hawkeye squad and third and fourth place contenders in Big Ten scoring channels, will probably attempt to better their individual records but indications were that Iowa would seek a straight win rather than attempt at setting a new record.

It was pointed out however that Ives, now holder of six Iowa and Big Ten records, might try to better his scoring honors if he has a hot night.

Most sources looked for a smooth, well fought game with Iowa polishing its defense for the coming and crucial Ohio State series next weekend.

All week long Coach Harrison has been emphasizing the fact that an overconfident team might lose to the lowly Maroon five and the emphasis has been placed on smoothing out offensives plays and defensive ground-holders rather than a slacking off in effort.

In other conference encounters Michigan takes on Indiana at home, Northwestern plays Minnesota at Evanston, Ohio State battles Purdue at home.

Little Hawks Bow to Clinton

Losing their third straight conference game, the Little Hawks of City high dropped below the .500 mark in the Mississippi Valley league standings last night as they bowed to Clinton 28-23.

With both teams playing an unenthusiastic, lifeless game in the first half, the River Kings of Clinton, led by Dean Burridge, put the winning spark in their play in the second half.

Burridge who scored only one field goal and one free throw in the first half, found his shooting eye in the second to dump in four field goals and two free throws, giving him high scoring honors for the evening with 13 points.

High man for Iowa City was Gene Mathess, who in tossing in three field goals, garnered six points. The entire first half saw

About the only real observation that could be made about this week in sports was that the whole system has been in suspended animation for the past month. If it weren't for the winning basketball team that we've got it would be easy to find the sports department of this sheet any afternoon, heads on their typewriters, sleeping.

Man, I want to be around when the big sports boom comes after the war. What with all of the plans coming out of the various baseball meetings and sports planning programs, it looks like sport will really be king.

Forthcoming plans for an enlarged big leagues should put basketball on the national scale that it has always deserved. Foreigners have been amazed that there really were only a few cities that competed on a large scale. Now with good ball in every city, what fun we're going to have.

NOTE TO THE CHICAGO SPORTS SCRIBES: Welcome to the bandwagon boys. We are glad to have you numbered among us. You've missed part of the ride, but then sometimes it takes people a long time to catch on.

The Chicago Daily News ran a story last week entitled—“It's a Cinch for Iowa, Maroons come Next”—. This referred of course to the then forthcoming Indiana series.

This is an amazing turn of face, fellas'. Next thing you know you'll be seeing us the conference crown.

That isn't as far fetched as you might think. . . .

The Navy's athletic big-wigs are in Washington right now beating their gums in a parley designed to “knit together more closely naval aviation's constantly expanding physical and military training program.”

Among those present are Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman, formerly of Iowa Pre-Flight school and newly appointed director of Athletics at Pensacola, Fla.; Lieut. Comdr. Harvey Harman, director of Athletics at the Pre-Flight school; Lieut. Comdr. Burt Ingwersen, familiar to Iowa fans as former head football coach at Iowa about 1927-29; and Lieut. Elliot Nays, head of the military department at Iowa Pre-Flight.

Hope you guys decide something good. Out of the coordinated program we should get even better athletics at the Pre-Flight school.

Few Iowa fans who hadn't heard of Dave Danner before he began to play for the Hawks know that he has a nickname—Beaver.

In tracking the chronology of this term one would find that it related to Danners proverbial worry complex before each game. Not only does Dae worry for himself but he has fears for Pops, Spencer, Herwig, Ives, Postels and the Hungry-Five.

The most aggravating thing in the world to his way of thinking is the cool, calm assurance of Spencer and Postels. These two basketballists never have a qualm about coming encounters whereas Danner is biting his fingernails down to the elbows before going out on the floor.

However, one feels that as long as the Beaver worries things will go all right Hawkeyeway.

Conference Basketball

DUBUQUE (AP)—The number of undefeated Iowa conference basketball teams dropped to three last night when Dubuque university defeated Wartburg college 58 to 28.

Howard Judson, Illini Forward, Learned Game In Prep School

19-Year-Old Won Honors in State High School Tourney

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—Howard Judson, 6-foot, 195-pound freshman forward on Doug Mills' young Illinois basketball team, will celebrate his nineteenth birthday Feb. 16 and he intends to observe the occasion by helping Illinois spring a few surprises in the stretch run.

All the Orange and Blue squad has to do in the next four weeks is battle Kentucky at Lexington, Northwestern at home, DePaul in Chicago Stadium, Ohio State twice at home, then Northwestern again in Chicago Stadium.

"We could lose everyone of those games," Judson says, "but don't think we're going to. We can score as well as any team and one of these days those close ones are going through. Then, somebody's going to have a nickname—Beaver."

Judson came to Illinois from Hebron High School with a record for scoring. He starred for four years at the McHenry county school and as a senior notched 520 points in 30 scheduled games.

Howie began playing basketball in the grades. "Wasn't much," he admits, "but for four years a bunch of boys got together a grade team and scrimmaged the high school freshman squad frequently."

He was "ready" when he hit high school and immediately began came a regular. Hebron surprised prep sports fans that year by coming to the state tournament, only to lose to Lewiston 31-30 in the first round. Keith Johnson, later an Illini squad member, was captain of the Hebron team that year and Judson gives him a great deal of credit for helping him become a basketball player.

"That's when I learned that one-hand push shot," Howie says. "And, I've been using it ever since."

The shot to which he refers is one which he lets fly with the right hand, accompanied by a swimmer's leg-kick. He shoots straight at the basket, with very little arch and hits with astonishing regularity.

Judson's best game in high school was a regional tourney battle with Woodstock in which he counted 25 of his team's winning 31-points total. That was as a junior when Hebron was coached by Ed Willett, now at West Senior High School, Rockford. Howie's coach as a senior was Les Harmon.

Last summer Judson competed on the North All-Star squad which met the South in Huff gymnasium. You guessed it. The winning basket was one of Judson's specialties to give the North a one-point victory.

Bluehawks Win Over Comets

A charity toss made by Steve Nusser in the last minute of a close game last night brought victory to U-High's Bluehaws over the West Liberty Comets to the tune of 32-31. Replacing Nusser in the starting line-up was Fritz LeGrande, but Steve came in at the start of the second quarter and remained for the rest of the game.

Although the teams agreed to play five fouls last night, Jack Shay went out just before the fourth quarter, but by that time had racked up 14 points for high man position. Five of these points were garnered in the first quarter with the score at the end of that period being 8 to 6 for the Blues.

In the second quarter Harlan Reise, Harley Hawker, and Jim Walker brought the Comets ahead with 5, 4 and 4 points respectively. They were able to keep this lead

Wisconsin Hands Northwestern Its First Setback

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Wisconsin handed Northwestern its first setback in the current Big Ten basketball race last night, downing the Wildcats 50 to 47 in a double overtime contest before a capacity crowd of 12,200.

After trailing through most of the regulation game, Wisconsin went ahead 37 to 33 with five minutes left to play. Center George Felt, slipped under the basket for a Northwestern score, but guard Russ Wendland, a former Wildcat star himself, matched it, leaving the Wildcats still behind by four points. Felt and guard Jerry Carle, however, countered once each to tie the count at 39-39 as the gun sounded.

At the end of the first overtime it was 42-all.

It was the first time this season that two Big Ten teams fought two extra periods.

Football Good Training For War—Harmon

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Take it from Lieut. Tom Harmon, football training helps.

Back home on a brief leave for the first time since Christmas, 1942, the former Michigan all-American of 1939 and 1940 is convinced that it was his gridiron and general athletic training that made possible his survival of two airplane crashes in the past year.

"I'll argue with anyone who says sports should be eliminated now or at any other time," declared Harmon upon his return here. "It is principally because of their earlier athletic training that our pilots are better than those turned out by Germany and Japan. They have learned early what it means to fight out of a tough spot and, boy, up there in the air the chips are really down. You can lose only once."

On every fighting front where I have been our men have always turned immediately to sports for recreation and relaxation whenever they had the opportunity and have played everything for which they had equipment. In China we had organized leagues in basketball, baseball and volleyball and even had competition in basketball with Chinese teams."

"To eliminate sports back home would be to destroy the basis of that interest and a great means of training which I am mighty thankful for. I had. Without my years of football and the hard knocks I received, I never could have lived through the South American jungle last spring, let alone get back to my China base after 32 days behind the Jap lines in November."

Harmon was lost in the jungles of Dutch Guinea eight days last spring after the bomber he was piloting crashed there and on Oct. 30 was shot down in flames during a battle with Japanese Zeros over China. He bagged two of the attacking Zeros before going down and then parachuted into a lake. He suffered second degree burns about the legs and head to get back to his base and when he did

Boilermakers Outfight Ohio In Last Half

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Purdue's Boilermakers outspeeded and outfought Ohio State in the last half last night to gain a 59 to 49 victory over the Buckeyes and thus retain their perfect record in the Big Ten basketball race. It was the second Western conference defeat for Ohio State.

The Buckeyes led for more than half the game, having a 24 to 21 margin at half-time. When Purdue got out in front, however, at 30 to 29 the Boilermakers never relinquished their advantage.

Lecturer Describes Growth of Interest In History of Indians

"Interest in the presence of prehistoric man belongs almost entirely to this century," said Prof. Charles R. Keyes of Cornell college, at a lecture last night in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

"Colonial literature provided a poor source for a picture of the American Indian, due to the racial prejudice which the colonists maintained. No prehistoric monuments could be seen by the colonists, as they were not prepared to read the significance of the shell heaps found on the eastern coast," said Professor Keyes.

When the agriculture of the Iroquois became known and mounds were found which could not be explained, interest in the Indians grew.

Almost spontaneously, two ideas arose—first, that the Indians could not have built the mounds, having no beasts of burden or adequate utensils, and second, that the mounds must have been built by a superior race preceding the Indians.

Both ideas were found to be incorrect as interest in the mounds grew. Caleb Atwater, Squires and Davis, Alfred Hill and Theodore Lewis, and Clarence B. Moore, archaeologists of the 19th century, made many interesting finds which were recorded in numerous volumes.

"Institutional agencies interested in archeology multiplied as the 19th century progressed. During the seventies, the United States government created a bureau of ethnology to establish some facts about the Indians," said Professor Keyes. Museums sent out research expeditions to collect material.

Before the close of the century, universities began offering courses in anthropology, and gave archaeology a new direction and enlarged outlook.

Archaeologists became more interested in the reconstruction of the lives of prehistoric men and began to rely on habitation sites rather than on the mounds, since more evidences of culture traits could be found there.

Professor Keyes closed the lecture with illustrations of an ancient bison hill found in New Mexico in 1926, near which were found true Folsom javelin points with a highly specialized flint.

The site seemed to be the hun-ing grounds of the people in the region as the points were often found in the bones of extinct species of bison and horses, musk oxen, ground sloths, mastodons, and woolly mammoths. However, the remains of the men who made the points were never found.

Next week, Professor Keyes will lecture on "Archaic Cultures Following the Glaciers: The Three Great Patterns."

Prof. Wylie Speaks To Masons on Modern Sea, Air Navigation

The sky, earth and sea are all important as position points and guides for navigation according to a discussion of "Modern Sea and Air Navigation" by Prof. C. C. Wylie of the university astronomy department, at the Masonic luncheon yesterday.

"The process of navigation in a ship or a plane is a matter of piloting just as you'd go by car to Davenport," said the speaker.

The first method discussed was following markers as if you were reading road signs and mileage indicators when driving an automobile. Air and automobile travel in this phase do not differ because there are always indicating marks in the air.

The second method discussed by Professor Wylie was flying by radio beacons which emit signals. This is the primary method used by Transcontinental airlines. Crashes in the mountains, however, have been attributed to this type of signaling because the sun and various heavenly bodies sometimes destroy the beacon beam.

The third method of navigation signaling is called dead reckoning or deduced reckoning, by which a plot is made from a map, the plot being taken from an original position. By drawing a line and watching time and speed, accurate deductions about points and position are made.

Celestial signaling is the fourth navigation method in which the sun and stars tell the course. The constant rotation of the earth keeps this from being the simple method it might be were the earth a stationary mass. Most exacting tables must be kept to prevent losing a course. Various astronomical factors enter into this method, which aided Columbus in his voyage. He, however, used the dead reckoning system, and when sailing west, discovered he could

Mary Williamson Will Open Career Clinic Series Today

Mary L. Williamson, guest speaker for the Career Clinic, will be on the campus today to speak to university women and to interview them concerning their vocational plans.

In addition to working as an advertising copywriter in a Chicago department store, Miss Williamson has written numerous magazine articles on retailing, for business education magazines.

Immediately after the talks, Miss Williamson will make appointments for personal interviews, when she will discuss individual problems.

Both talks will be given in the house chamber of Old Capitol, and the interviews will be held in the basement of Old Capitol.

Miss Williamson, state supervisor of distributive education for the board of vocational education, has had experience as coordinator and supervisor of distributive education in Sioux City, Richmond, Va., and Corpus Christi, Tex. Her work has included job placement, training and follow-up training with adult groups.

She has also been an instructor of retailing during summer sessions at the University of Denver commerce school in Denver, Colo. Miss Williamson's own experience in the field includes sales work and sales training in various department stores.

In her talk at 10 o'clock, Miss Williamson will give information on vocations and the training needed for work in fields open to women.

The exact procedure to be followed in applying for any job, personality factors necessary for making an effective impression, the letter of application, the personal interview, the assets and liabilities of the college woman for jobs are a few of the problems Miss Williamson plans to discuss in her talk at 1:30.

Today's lectures are the first of the Career Clinic series which is sponsored by the vocational board of the University Women's association. Others will be held Feb. 12, 19, 26 and March 4.

keep track of latitude but had to guess longitude.

In Columbus' time the world map was quite inaccurate because the scale was too small. The 60-degree scale should have been 69, and by the mistake maps tended to show Asia and Africa spread out too far to be accurate.

The work done by three navigation instrument inventors and theorists was explained by the speaker. The book of Summer explaining his theory of fixing a position on the sun and another point on which the sun is overcast has been used by all navigators since 1837.

choice of Mr. Sam undoubtedly would please the southern conservatives. The real party men.

But, so I hear, Mr. Roosevelt may soon have to make an extra effort to please the left wingers. Some of the left wingers are pretty mad at the president. Maybe Wallace's renomination would calm their fears.

Jumping quickly to another field of talk—have you seen the new Lira with which Italy hopes to get its financial feet on the ground? It is a spectacular looking bank note and straight propaganda. I'm glad to report, successful propaganda. On the back of the note are the four freedoms—in full. A notation says the bill was issued by the United Nations.

I heard a refreshing story the other day about several soldiers who hate being back in "the states" again. They sigh for those good, old days in the Solomons when life was really something. Gosh, what food they had there. And what care. Something going on every minute, day and night.

Contrast this nostalgia for the South seas with the following quotation from—no, I can't tell you his name—but this is the quotation:

"Here I sit, south of the equator, with the gooney birds on a God-forsaken treeless, shrubless, grassless, womanless, nativeless coral reef. Not Hollywood's version of the South Seas by any means. Dorothy Lamour, black or white. Not even a black Fuzzy Wuzzy. Just insects and soldiers live here. Even the mosquitoes can't stand the place.

"Some people say that three months after they get here the boys start talking to the gooney birds. In six months, the gooney birds begin answering back. But old steady, level-headed Jimmy thinks the yarn is a myth. I've been here three months and I'm not crazy yet."

'Y-GAM' Group To Take Care Of Children

Plans are being made for the establishment of the Y. W. C. A.'s Girls Aid to Mothers in cooperation with the World Student Service Fund.

Operating under the title of Y-GAMs, university women will be registered with the Y. W. C. A. to take care of children, and they will be on call for the citizens of Iowa City, faculty members, and army and navy families.

Registration of university women interested in this project will be held in the Y. W. C. A. rooms in Iowa Union from 9 until 5 o'clock Thursday and Friday. Students need not be Y. W. C. A. members to participate in this activity.

Files of women registered will be kept in the "Y" office at the Union, and parents may call there for girls to take care of their children in the evenings.

Regulations of the organization state that the women will work for a flat rate of 35 cents an hour and that transportation will be provided to the home and back.

Girls may not have guests while they are working, nor will they be expected to do any household duties other than taking care of the children.

Proceeds obtained by the organization during its first month of operation will be contributed to the W. S. S. F., an organization soliciting funds through the colleges and universities throughout the country to aid imprisoned, interned and refugee students whose educations have been interrupted by the war.

The Y-GAMs have been organized by a committee headed by Jean Stamy, A3 of Marion. Other members of the committee include Joan Holt, A1 of Highland Park,
