AMERICAN HEROES

BY LEFF

When his platoon in New Guinea was pinned down by heavy enemy machine gun and rifle fire, Private Maurice L. Levy, of Chicago, sat for the night in the crotch of two big trees. He stopped six of the enemy during the night, and 19 more with the coming of daylight. Wounded four times and weak from loss of blood, he crawled down to safety. Back his bravery with another War Bond.

A Criticism of Contemporary Literature, And a Guide to Good Reading

Edited by Jarvis A. Thurston

EARLY OPPOSITION TO THE ENGLISH NOVEL: The Popular Reaction from 1760 to 1830. By John Thunon Taylor. New York: Columbia Univ. Press. $2.00. Pp. 148.

Reviewed by JARVIS A. THURSTON

In the preface to his book Mr. Taylor delimits his subject and explains his method. The present volume deals with the popular opposition to the novel as it existed during the latter part of the eighteenth and first part of the nineteenth centuries. Literary historians frequently make at least passing reference to this well-known early antagonism. Related aspects of the subject have received more definite treatment. The tardy evolution of critical criteria in regard to the novel has been traced by Joseph Bunn Heidler and Byron Hall Gibson; the relation between the hostility to fiction of the eighteenth century has been analyzed by F. W. Galloway. 'Forgotten favorites' from the many volumes of 'tenth-rate' fiction against which much of the censure was directed have been brought again to life in the work of J. M. S. Tompkins and Dorothy Blakely. Yet no detailed picture has hitherto been given of the elements which made up this widespread opposition to the reading and writing of novels.

Appropos of his method the author says: "In attempting to re-create this pageant of protest and the replies it provoked, I have sought to portray the rise in reputation of the form in the popular mind. Since I have considered the vigorous resistance to the novel from the more largely social point of view, I have supported my generalizations principally with ideas found in numerous minor publications. Expressions of opinion about the dangers of novel reading pervade the ephemeral literature of the day—the little-known periodicals, books of conduct designed for young men and young women, treatises on education, and even the forgotten novels themselves—as well as the letters and diaries." In his realization that the society of an age is reflected best not by its greatest but by its most "ephemeral" writings, Mr. Taylor evidences a sociological and historical sense that is too infrequently met with in students of literature.

In the first section, "The New Reading Public and the New Novel," Mr. Taylor discusses the simultaneous growth of the new reading public and the new novel, which reacted upon each other and became, in the eyes of critics and moralists, a primary social evil. Although the rise of the new reading public created a demand for novels, it also gave impetus to the opposition to the novel. "On one side were the moral judgments imposed upon the novel by a middle-class conception of conduct and morality. On the other were the warnings of critics and moralists who considered any wide reading by the lower orders to be inconsistent with their life of manual labor, in particular any reading which seemed diabolically designed to unsettle the stolid peace of mind necessary to the acceptance of such a lowly status."

The second section is a discussion of the novel against the background of the circulating libraries which sprang up like mushrooms in England in the middle of the eighteenth century. They were the predecessors of our drug store rental libraries. The STAR of February 4, 1793, advertised that Hazard's Library at Bath was then well supplied with "Dr. Waite's celebrated Worm Medicine in the form of Gingerbread Nuts." As Mr. Taylor explains, these libraries had two influences. First, the respect for the novel as a literary form was retarded because of the "manufacturing methods which the booksellers employed to supply their subscribers"; second, the libraries brought to the novel a tremendous number of readers who "were to cast the decisive ballot which would cause this type of writing finally to triumph over all others in its influence upon the public."

The preponderance of readers of the new novel were women, who at the time were just beginning to enjoy a few educational privileges. They were their greatest readers, and as such were the victims of much censure by the moralists. In "Women and Fiction" Mr. Taylor analyzes the relation of women to the opposition to the novel.

In the last two sections of his book—"The Novel as Instruction" and "Reading for Amusement"—Mr. Taylor concerns himself with the beginning defense of the novel on the grounds that it was a medium of instruction and that it was a harmless amusement. Of course, these early justifications met with considerable resistance upon the part of those who persisted in judging novels by moral standards. It was long after 1830 that the novel was finally able to win itself a place among the accepted genres of literature. Today it is quite generally accepted without question, but there are still vestiges of opposition to it on moral grounds lingering in religious and Humanistic circles.

"But the novel was given a bad name in its youth that has overshadowed its successful maturity," said Henry Seidel Canby in his essay, "On a Certain Condescension toward Fiction." Mr. Taylor in his "Early Opposition" has given us an excellent account of that "bad name," not so much by a historical critical interpretation, but by a wealth of exemplification and quotation from over three hundred sixty sources. These sources, listed in a fourteen-page bibliography, form an excellent starting place for anyone interested in pursuing the subject further.

Polish-Soviet Relations

Polish-Soviet relations are widely discussed in the United States, but their most important element is being ignored. In this connection, therefore, we consider it our duty to call attention to the following:

The establishment and continuation of friendly relations between Poland and U. S. S. R. is not only prerequisite to security for both nations, but is basic for the peace of Europe as well. The Polish workers and peasants, who constitute a large majority and the very backbone of the Polish nation, were among the first to recognize this fact.

In order to attain these aims, however, relations between the two countries should be established on a basis of real freedom and full equality. Such a relationship would act as a foundation for full coordination of the heroic struggle of the Red army with the equally heroic struggle of the Polish underground, many of them veterans of the Polish army—the first, and, for a time, the only army to resist the Nazi foe.

For the sake of truth and for the sake of realization of a Polish-Soviet alliance, an alliance indispensable for the peaceful future of Europe, we have to emphasize that it is not Poland that is putting obstacles in the way of its successful conclusion.

After the break, made by the Soviet government, in diplomatic relations with the Polish government in April, 1943, various agencies of the Soviet government have, directly or indirectly, indicated that they do not recognize the Polish government's right to represent the Polish nation. It has been hinted, moreover, that a selection under the auspices of the Soviet Union will be undertaken to determine who may hold office in the Polish government and even who may live in Poland.

Here is the essential problem. No Pole sanctions or will ever sanction such an interpretation of friendly collaboration which is based on denial of freedom and equality. Polish-Soviet friendship can and should be achieved by means of an understanding between the Soviet government and the Polish government which is the only genuine representation of the Polish people.

The Polish government is a coalition government in which all major Polish political parties are represented. Representatives of the workers and peasants (over 80 percent of the Polish population) hold a majority in that government, which is in close and regular contact with Poland and which speaks for the people of our country.

There is no obstacle to a lasting alliance between the U. S. S. R. and Poland, based on mutual good will, respect for treaties and mutual commitments of both countries resulting from those treaties, and the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

The Soviet union, if it acknowledges the right of the Polish people to freedom—should explicitly state that it does not intend to interfere, in any way whatsoever, in Polish internal affairs, and that it will secure the repatriation of all Polish citizens

Mallon's Answer to THE Question:

What About the Post-War World?

By PAUL MALLON

(Note: Frequent comment on Paul Mallon's column has been: "You can say that again." During a brief, much-needed rest, some of his timeless columns will be reprinted in accordance with that suggestion.)

WASHINGTON—Dear: You ask me for constructive suggestions for a post-war plan. The maintenance of eternal peace should be the only objective of the settlement. I do not believe any of the old reactionary suggestions will do the job—leagues of nations, world courts, sworn promises to outlaw wars, pious pronouncements of peaceful intentions. They did not work before.

We have found from current experience that these were only artificial and superficial methods. They do not reach down into basic causes of war.

In our search for a real solution, two basic principles must be adopted first. The solution we want must be democratic and Christian. No nation which will sincerely espouse the principles of democracy or Christianity will be the aggressor in any war.

It will not seek to impose its will on others through an international police force, a suggestion, which to me, is only an excuse for imperialism.

Perhaps we might keep the world peace by imperialism, but it would necessitate a complete American policing of the world, and this, of course, is out of the question. Our allies would not accept such a proposal, even if offered.

The only kind of peace-making imperialism which is possible in the existing situation would be one conducted jointly by Russia, Britain, the United States and China. Such a joint imperialism could be neither democratic nor Christian in nature.

The Russians have a different system, which they no doubt intend to keep. Indeed, even the British system, while like ours in its Christian roots, is different from ours in democratic practice, because it is basically a limited imperialism, developed to further the necessary aspirations of the British empire.

If we enter upon such a joint deported to the Soviet union from eastern Poland. Confidence should be placed in the nation which preferred an unequal struggle to the death, to Hitler's proposed cooperation in the crusade against the Soviet Union.

The only European nation which under the most appalling Nazi rule did not put forth or set up a puppet government to cooperate with the German invader—should be trusted.

The Polish government's statement of Jan. 14th, 1944, once more bore evidence to the Polish people's desire for full cooperation between Poland and the U. S. S. R., a cooperation based on the principles of justice and freedom. Unfortunately, the Soviet government's declaration of Jan. 16th, 1944, again postponed Polish-Soviet understanding. No pronouncement or vicious interpretation by avowed and/or unavowed Soviet agents can alter this fact.

POLISH LABOR GROUP American Representative of the Polish Underground Labor Movement (Polish Socialist Party and Trade Union Congress) New York, N. Y. January 17, 1944.

China-Anglo-Russo-American imperialism, the makeshift empire will not last long, because its component parts are not naturally congenial, but rather competitive and conflicting. These same considerations impel me to lose hope in a world state, because such a state would only draw a deceptive cloak over the differences, which exist in this world, but would not cure them.

Indeed, such a proposal is impossible for other reasons. Neither the Russians, British nor Chinese desire to sacrifice their national interests and purposes, even if I and cannot assume that we will ever desire such a state until it can be contrived on the basis for which we stand—democracy and Christianity.

Until the world comes to our principles, I do not believe our people would want one world. It would have to be our world.

How then do we seek eternal peace on a basis of democracy and Christianity? What kind of a formula can we get? I think we should seek the simplest possible formula, not an intricate contrivance, based on deals to be made by the world politicians, swapping territory and policies here and there in a world conference.

If we could put our world of the future on the same basis in which the people live together in a community, then we may have simplicity and sincerity as the foundation of our undertaking—not some jumble of compromised principles arrived at by haggling between Stalin, Churchill, Roosevelt and Chiang Kai-Shek trying to outwit each other in some new conference.

I think we should lay down the basis upon which we propose to live in and maintain peace of the future, and let each other adjust themselves to it as they will. Apply the principles of democracy and Christianity to the formula of the community way of life, and you will find yourself arriving at these following lines of planning:

A United States of Europe, molded after our own United States, elimination of tariff barriers therein, self-sufficiency in raw materials. The variety of nationals in Europe to have a common army, legislature, president, premier.

As for us, we would do as believers in democracy and Christianity do everywhere to protect themselves, in line with the community spirit. We would acquire air bases and territory, not in the interests of world conquest, but to defend our shores, or hemisphere or "sphere of defense" wherever it lies from a strictly military (not a political) standpoint. The army and navy should decide this, not the White House. We should get these in return for the debts outstanding against us, and we should seek them not only for defense but to make ourselves self-sufficient as regards raw materials, just as we propose to have Europe do. We would maintain an army and navy, but particularly an air force competent to deal with any challenge of our interests.

We would have a good neighbor policy with the world, particularly with friendly democracies of the world, not on a basis of lending them money to build steel mills to compete with us, or any basis like that, but upon a genuine basis of mutual advantages. We would not strew our money around the world to change living standards, but we would cooperate with all nations in an effort to get them to improve themselves.

Opinion

On and Off Campus QUESTION: WHAT DO YOU THINK COULD BE DONE TO CHECK JUVENILE DELINQUENCY IN IOWA CITY? E. F. Rate, Johnson county attorney: "I believe it is important to keep the boys and girls in school and to provide plenty of opportunity for recreation and educational activities after school. 'I think it would also help if we had an organization devoted to the problem of juvenile delinquency. Possibly such an organization could select a responsible citizen of good judgment to act as personal advisor for each delinquent, find out his problems and assist in their solution. Each case could be reported and studied by the organization and much information accumulated for use in other cases. 'One of our troubles is that we have not been doing enough to prevent the first offender from becoming a repeater.' Frank J. Snider, Johnson county superintendent of schools: "Surely we must have closer supervision in the homes, and I suppose we'd say from the city, officials and schools. They are the ones who are going to have to combat it. These three groups are in a position to assert the most influence on the stage of these boys and girls." Judge James P. Gaffney of district court: "It is time for everyone in the community to awaken to the situation, particularly parents, and for all of us to do something about it. I feel that every boy and girl arraigned at the bar of justice in a delinquency case is not on trial; it is the community that is on trial." William Romine, E3 of Davenport: "I firmly believe it is the fault of the home. In most instances the father and mother are as much to blame as the children in cases of juvenile delinquency." Mary Frey, A1 of Fairfield: "Realizing that this is a nationwide problem, we must strive to find adequate recreational facilities within the communities. This may not appeal to many of the children so parents must be forced to realize the seriousness of the problem and to realize that they should do something about it." Russell Travis of Fulton, Ky., advanced engineer: "I feel the extension of recreational facilities in this town would do away with a great deal of delinquency. The recreation should be the type which children of this kind would enjoy." Bruce Hughes, A1 of Sioux City: "The enforcement of laws against juveniles working would be a good idea. More recreational facilities to encourage teen-agers to acquire wholesome habits should be provided." Marjorie Lipman, A1 of Milwaukee, Wis.: "I think electing a board of high school students who realize that it is their problem could direct pupils in outside activities." Roy Paulsen, A3 of Clinton: "I think the family ought to use more child psychology in the raising of their family. If they can't they ought not to have children."

Zino Francescatti, Contemporary Violinist, To Give Concert in Union Wednesday Night

'Life' Photographed Him Playing 4,000 Notes in 3 Minutes

Zino Francescatti, contemporary French violinist, will present a concert in the main lounge of Iowa Union Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

Tickets for the concert will be available at Iowa Union beginning Monday. University students may obtain tickets by presenting their student identification cards at the ticket desk in the lobby. A limited number of reserved seats will be sold to the general public.

Francescatti has been in America for the past four years, appearing with symphony orchestras and on radio broadcasts throughout the country. His violin technique was photographed for Life magazine last year. The pictures depicted some of Francescatti's positions as he played 4,000 notes in three minutes while executing "Perpetuum Mobile" (Paganini).

Before leaving Europe the violinist accompanied Maurice Ravel on a concert tour, through England. In 1928 he joined the violin section of the Orchestra Straram of Paris, under the direction of Walter Straram.

Among the European orchestras with whom Francescatti has played are the Berlin Philharmonic, the Concertgebouw of Amsterdam and the orchestras of Rome, Monte Carlo, Budapest and The Hague. The violinist made his first appearance in the Americas with Jose Iturbi in Buenos Aires, coming to the United States in 1939.

In his concert at Iowa Union Wednesday night, Francescatti will play "Sonata in A major" (Bach); "Variations on a Theme of Corelli" (Tartini-Francescatti); "Sonata in A major, op. 47" (Beethoven); "Week-End" (Gaillard).

"La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin" (Debussy-Hartmann); "Minstrels" (Debussy); "Polka" (Shostakovich) and "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso" (Saint-Saens).

Newman Club To Elect Heads

At a meeting of the Newman club Wednesday night, plans were announced for a party to be held in the river room of Iowa Union tomorrow night from 8 to 11. The dance, to be called Cupid's Capers, will be the last to be held before Easter.

Dancing will be to recordings, and the dance will be a mixer to entertain new Catholic students on the campus, including the Catholic members of the new army units.

Chaperons will be Prof. and Mrs. Walter Daykin, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Monnig and the Rev. Bonaventure Schwinn, O. S. B., director of the Newman club.

The committee in charge of plans for the dance includes Mary M. Meis, A3 of Cedar Rapids; Ned Billick, A2 of Iowa City; Donna Billick, A3 of Iowa City; Evelyn Murray, A3 of Iowa City; Betty Cole, A2 of Iowa City; Rosemary Wells, A1 of Keokuk; Eileen Culhane, A3 of Des Moines; Margaret O'Connor, U of Iowa City, and Mary M. Monnig, A4 of Iowa City.

Election of next year's Newman club officers will be held at the regular meeting Tuesday night. The Rev. Bonaventure Schwinn, O. S. B., announced that the student center will soon be ready for limited use.

Dr. Robert A. Caponigri of the English department spoke briefly to the group on "The Catholic System of Higher Education in Italy," telling of his own experience in Italian universities and explaining the general differences between the Italian church educational system and our own.

The formal graduation dance of the first battalion of the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school will be held tomorrow night from 8 until 11:30 in the main lounge of Iowa Union. The Seahawks will play for the affair.

PROF. CHARLES R. KEYES
"The Woodlands-Habitat Sites," will be discussed by Prof. Charles R. Keyes of Cornell college in the third of a series of six illustrated archaeological lectures, tonight at 7:30 in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

This lecture should be of local interest because remains of woodland civilizations were found in and about Iowa.

Back Your Beard—Contest—Men Only

By CATHY COVERT
A challenge to Iowa manhood was delivered yesterday when there appeared on the door of the engineering transit office an official announcement of this year's beard growing contest.

"Let's all get behind this" pleaded the bulletin (what else could you do to a beard? we wondered), and make it a big success!

Prospective beard growers among the engineering students were further lured by the promise of a "worthwhile prize" to be awarded at the Mecca week smoker to the proud possessor of the most unique beard.

The notice, signed by Edward Larsen, president of the Association of Students of Engineering, announced that the contest would begin Wednesday morning and end the night of the Mecca smoker, March 16.

Speculations were varied as to the origin of this singular contest—could it be, we mused, that the engineers just didn't like to shave?

Iowans Take On Purdue Five Tonight

Boilermakers Have Edge

Ives, Danner Combo Will Attempt Spill Of League Leaders

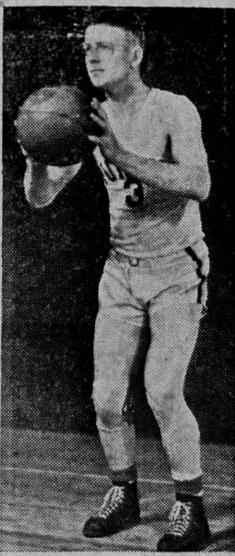

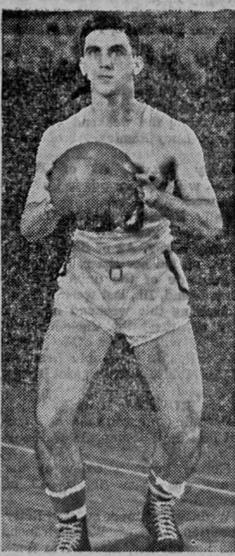

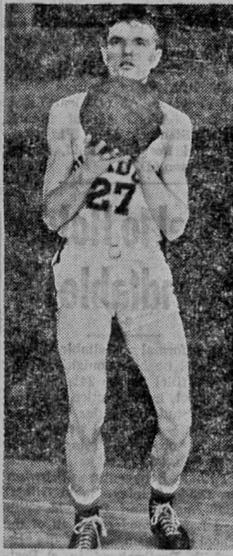

PROBABLE STARTING LINEUPS

Iowa	Pos.	Purdue
Ives (6-1)	F	Hoffman (6-1)
Danner (6)	F	Horn (5-11)
Herwig (6-3)	C	Frazier (6-3)
Spencer (6-3)	G	Friend (5-9)
Postels (6-3)	G	Haag (6-1)

Officials: John Getchell (St. Thomas) and John O'Donnell (St. Ambrose)

Time and Place: Friday, 8 p. m., Iowa fieldhouse, unreserved seats only available, doors open 6:30 p. m.

Broadcast: Dick Yoakam and Bruce Hughes, WSUI, 7:55 p. m.

THE THREE PURDUE Boilermakers pictured above, Stephen Frazier, center; Paul Friend, guard; and Dennis Horn, forward, will go out on the field house floor to make trouble for the Iowa Hawkeyes this evening at 8 o'clock. Friend played on the 1943 Purdue five, white Horn handles the ball very well and sets up the close-in plays. Frazier holds down the pivot spot at 6 feet 3 inches in height.

Purdue May Be Forced to Split Squad

Navy 48-Hour Rule Might Limit V-12ers To One Away Game

Still featuring Pops Harrison's oft repeated phrase that "We're going to settle a few scores in the Big Ten this season," the 1944 Iowa Hawkeyes will take on the Purdue Boilermakers at the fieldhouse tonight in the most crucial battle of their season so far.

A victory for the Hawks tonight would not only tumble the Lafayette men from the top of the Big Ten heap but would throw the league lead into a deadlock between the two teams that might continue until the close of the season should Iowa drop Northwestern here in two weeks.

Coach Harrison's team has been working all week on a re-vamped offensive and defensive system designed to stop the straight-forward, driving Purdue attack.

Noted for its powerful and rugged form of play, the Purdue team attack centers around sharp-shooters Paul Hoffman, and Charles Haag, of Hoffman, Haag, and Horn, Inc. The three-H's of the Purdue forward wall are re-knowned throughout the conference for their ability around the scoring ring and their fast breaking form of play.

To counter-balance this Iowa will field the usual lineup with Messrs. Danner and Ives, scorers supreme, calculating to show the Boilermakers a little about the finer points of the game.

In the statistics column Purdue has the advantage. With Ives and Danner leading the league in scoring, Iowa trails in defensive play 43.3 to Purdue's 38.3. The Boilermakers have the edge in scoring also with 53.5 to Iowa's 52.4.

U-High Meets Mt. Vernon For 1st Place Tiff

Tonight at 7:30 Coach Ross Wedemeyer's Bluehaws will meet Mt. Vernon there in a battle for 1st place in the Eastern Iowa conference. Mt. Vernon now holds that place having won three and lost none. U-high so far has lost one out of six conference starts.

Capt. Don Wagner, recently in bed with inflamed tonsils, is now up and expects to lead to the Blues tonight. Other sure starts are Jack Shay at center and Bob Vander Zee at guard. The other forward slot will be filled either by Steve Nusser or Harold LeGrande, who has shown good ball handling recently when substituting for Nusser. The guard position will be filled by Jim Williams or Jack Kennedy, both of whom have been playing in that capacity.

Lefty Grove Believes Baseball Can Carry On Despite War-Time

LONACONING, Md. (AP)—Organized baseball and other sports are war-time necessities which should not be rationed "even if they have to call us old fellows back" says that eminent ex-master of the fireball, Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove.

But the former great hurler with the Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Red Sox doesn't believe the manpower situation will become so desperate that he will be asked to put away his gun and fishing tackle and come to the aid of the national pastime.

If he were to dig out his old glove it almost certainly would be a long, tough comeback trail for a 43-year-old gaffer two years out of action.

"There still is plenty of good material just over 38 and under 18 and enough of the young ones to keep the game going as long and as far as 99 percent of our boys over there want it to go," he asserts.

The erstwhile king of the south-paws is having himself a whale of a time in "retirement," running a farm and a combination bowling alley-billiard parlor, as well as dabbling in amateur photography, woodworking and toolmaking.

And after a quarter of a century bouncing around the baseball circuits, years in which he amassed 415 victories, 300 of them in the majors, and made himself a bundle of cabbage running

I. U. Wrestlers Title May Be Threatened

Will Close Season Saturday in Tank Wrestling, Title Bouts

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Indiana university, 1943 Big Ten wrestling champion, will call upon a squad of freshmen and 4-F's to defend its title tomorrow at the conference meet at Northwestern, but Hoosier Coach Billy Thom has conceded defeat and is already planning for next year.

The veteran Thom, who in 16 years has brought Indiana eight Big Ten championship mat teams, was forced to recruit his 1944 crew from the University's physical education classes. The Big Ten meet, says Thom, will give the Hoosiers valuable experience that will be of great use next year, when almost the entire team will return for duty. Since the current I. U. squad is composed of 4-F and younger members, the Hoosier mentor will be able to have a complete team at the start of the 1945 campaign.

Indiana, nevertheless, will have a full squad on hand this weekend to defend its title match-by-match. The I. U. contestants will be headed by Johnny Wilson, who as a sophomore last year wrestled in two matches before being called into the service. Upon his discharge from the marines, Wilson returned to Indiana and has gone undefeated this season. He is a brother of Benny Wilson, 1940 Big Ten champion here. Johnny, although a 145-pound wrestler last year, has been holding down the Crimson 155-pound class this season.

The 121-pound I. U. entrant will be Bernard Souers, outstanding high school wrestler at Bloomington last year; Jennings Polley, another frosh, will be entered in the 128-pound class; Charles Isberg, Whiting freshman, in the 135-pound division; class and aggressive George McCool, Indianapolis freshman who was state champion two years at Ben Davis high school, in the 145-pound weight; Wilson at 155 pounds; Jack Willis, inexperienced Griffith, Ind., freshman at 165 pounds; either Chuck Sanders, Brazil, Ind., frosh, or Frank Cioli, Campbell, Ohio, freshman, at 175 pounds, and Dan Stocker, Hammond freshman, or Joe Sowinski, East Chicago first-year man, in the heavyweight.

The Hoosiers have won from Wheaton college this year, tying DePauw Pre-Flight and losing to Ohio State and Michigan.

well into six figures—the gray-haired veteran is at last taking root in one place and liking it.

Wolverine Grapplers, Cagers, Harriers End

Will Close Season Saturday in Tank Wrestling, Title Bouts

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Michigan's basketball, wrestling and hockey teams close their 1944 schedules tomorrow after which there will be but one more athletic event here until the spring sports campaigns are opened in mid-April.

Tomorrow's Wolverine card includes a basketball game with Northwestern at Evanston as well as the Big Ten swimming and wrestling title meets, both of which also will be held at Evanston. Home events on the schedule are a track meet with Notre Dame and a hockey game with the Brantford, Ont., A. C. Starting time of both these engagements will be 8:00 p. m.

The basketball quintet will seek to avenge an earlier 57-47 defeat at the hands of Northwestern, but even if this is accomplished the Wolverines will finish in the conference second division. To date Michigan has won four and dropped seven in league play. In each of the two championship meets to which Northwestern will play host Michigan is favored.

Michigan's hockey team has had its best season in several years and if the Wolverines turn back the Canadian attack this week in their final appearance it will give them a record of five wins and three defeats. The track meet here with Notre Dame will be the last home appearance of the Michigan squad during the indoor season and may produce half a dozen new meet records.

The track team has four more road appearances booked for the indoor campaign, climaxed by the Big Ten meet at Chicago March 11. Two more swimming meets also remain, one of them here. This will be the national A. A. U. meet March 31 and April 1 when the nation's outstanding swimmers and divers assemble here to battle for individual and team honors.

Roosevelt High Breaks National Tank Record

DES MOINES (AP)—The Roosevelt high team of Des Moines shaved six-tenths of a second from the national interscholastic swimming record for the 160-yard relay over a 20-yard course in a dual meet with East High of Des Moines yesterday.

The Roosevelt quartet, composed of Bill Crispin, Larry Larimore, Ralph Katz and Jim Dickerson, swam the distance in one minute, 15 seconds.

Illinois, Ohio State Cage Tilt May Put Buckeyes Out of Race

Long Standing Jinx Might Drop Olsenmen Out of League Tie

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—Coach Harold G. Olsen brings the biggest and one of the hottest-shooting basketball teams in the Big Ten to meet Illinois in George Huff gymnasium tonight and tomorrow night. And, the Buckeyes will be after a pair of victories which would give them a record of 10-2 in the conference and a hoped-for slice in the Big Ten crown.

To do that, the Ohioans will have to break a jinx that has left them without a victory in Huff gym since 1936 when State won an 18-13 verdict. The Bucks have won only two of nine games from Mills-coached Illinois teams since 1937 and had their last victory at Columbus in 1940.

But, Coach Olsen feels that this year will be different. Certainly Ohio State has the personnel—a team that averages 63-34 and includes in Don Grate, Arnold Risen, Jack Dugger, and Bob Bowen, four of the conference's top ten scorers. Grate, workhorse of the Buckeye team, leads his squad in point total with 150 in Ohio's ten conference games. Assistant Coach Wallie Hoettger, who scouted the Bucks last weekend, says Grate is probably one of the best forwards in the Big Ten right now.

He and Dugger are Olsen's two experienced team members. Grate was a freshman squad member in 1943 and Dugger earned a letter on the Buckeye varsity. Risen, Bowen, and Paul Huston are all playing their first seasons in the conference.

Illinois hit the comeback trail Saturday by whipping a highly-favored DePaul team 45-33 in Chicago stadium in what was termed a major upset of the season. If the Illini can continue the pace set in that game, a victory or two over Ohio will not be impossible.

Nothing would suit the Illini better. With a record of two victories and five defeats in Big Ten play, Coach Doug Mills' team must win four of its last five games with Ohio, Northwestern, and Minnesota to end the season with a percentage of .500.

Mills has settled on six men who will carry the burden for Illinois in remaining games. With Don Delaney out, Gordon Gillespie, Chicago freshman, will handle center. Stan Patrick, Chicago senior, is a fixture at one forward and Jake Staab, V-12 sophomore from Chil-

Seahawks Form New Track Squad For Chicago Relay Meet

Crack Track Team Is Being Whipped Into Shape at the Pre-Flight School

A crack track team is being whipped into shape at the Pre-Flight school, under the direction of Lieut. (jg) Frank Porter, who will coach the team.

The cadets will meet Wisconsin, and will send entries to the Chicago relays March 18, Purdue relays March 25, and the Drake relays April 29. There is no way of telling at the present time just how tough the cadets will be, but it is quite probable Lieutenant Porter will turn out a top-notch team with the abundance of star material at the pre-flight school.

Other factors facing the coach will be the constant turnover of cadets, which was a big issue in the recent poor showing of the Seahawk baseball team. At the present time, however, Porter reports several cadets who have turned in creditable time.

T. K. Boylen, of Portland, Ore., can clip the mile in less than 4:30, with L. E. Chaney jumping well over six feet at the high jump. Cadet L. W. Alkon boasts the best bad set record: :06.2 for the 60-yard dash.

Icothe, and Howie Judson, Hebron freshman, divide time at the other forward. Junior Kirk and Jimmy Seyler are the guards.

TRUK—

tary secrets of more than a quarter of a century, the bold aviators made a flight of nearly 2,000 miles over enemy waters. They battled a variety of freak weather conditions. The first plane was greeted by a dozen bursts of wild anti-aircraft fire. A tremendous barrage of flak, from ground guns and ships in the lagoon, met the second plane. Enemy fighters zoomed into the sky but never got near the daring marine planes.

Neither of them was damaged. The attack on Truk involved great risk for our naval forces—from enemy land bases and carrier planes and from submarines. The possibility of wreaking further damage on the already crippled Japanese fleet as well as on installations at Truk apparently was considered a worthwhile gamble by American leaders.

If we could trap a sizeable Jap force with our bombing it might render the Japanese incapable of engaging American forces in carrier or surface action in other circumstances which could be more costly to our fleet.

The attack on Truk involved a courageous stroke extending far past Eniwetok, Kusaie, Ponape and other enemy airbases. Recent bombardments of those atolls evidently were the forerunners for the Truk assault.

For 30 years the Nipponese have been building this central Pacific atoll into a super bastion and Truk is shown as Japan's "Pearl Harbor."

It has an excellent harbor and installations, and the reconnaissance planes found great air fields, a lagoon filled with warships of all types, great coastal batteries, dry-docks and other facilities to make it a powerful base.

Capt. James Q. Yawn of Bogue Chittom, Miss., gave some indication of the mass of enemy warships at the lagoon. He said he counted 25 through one small gap in a cloud, adding:

"It looked like the whole Jap fleet was down there, and I saw only a part of only one of the many anchorages."

Capt. Edward J. Sanders of Sioux City, his co-pilot, told of seeing an island which was a maze of landing fields and revetments. "The strips, taxi-ways and shops covered the entire layout," he said. There did not seem to be room for anything else, even living quarters.

Navy men until recently had considered Truk to be almost impregnable. It was not uncommon to hear one of them exclaim, "Hope we can by-pass Truk." But the massing in the Pacific of the world's most powerful battle fleet, flying the Stars and Stripes, and the speedy conquest of Kwajalein atoll in the Marshall islands, changed all that. Kwajalein apparently was an eye-opener in many ways, for it demonstrated what happens to Japanese defenses under the pulverizing shelling and bombing of American warships and planes. It was a test for our new tactics and weapons.

Truk's excellent harbor provided protection for major Japanese task forces and submarine bases from which Nipponese underwater raiders could sail forth for attacks on allied shipping throughout the south and southwest Pacific.

Mahana Home Burns to Ground
The Clarence Mahana home, 2172 I street was gutted by fire shortly after 4:30 yesterday afternoon.

Iowa City firemen played two streams of water into the one and a half story structure for nearly two hours before the blaze was extinguished. Nothing was saved except for a very few clothes. Fire Chief J. J. Clark said the fire was believed to have started in the oil heating unit on the first floor.

NEWS—

around the world, we should be suspicious and alert. We should remember that Britain and France could have killed off Hitler easily and almost without loss of life if they had moved promptly to meet their peril, rather than furnishing him with credit adjustments and materials to build himself into a formidable fighting force (as we did also with Japan).

That is the prime peace lesson of this war—constant alertness against any authority challenging our way of life. Complacency is the sin for which we are now suffering. Our future army, navy and air force must not only be superior to its problems, but kept politically alert to its dangers. (Incidentally, the navy always wanted to go in and clean out Japan before we let her rise to a position of momentary superiority in the south Pacific; it could have been done easily some years ago.) Here we have the real cause of this war, and we must meet it directly.

Now if you want some international organization, I say all right, join in, for the minor superficial, speechmaking thing it will be, but such a thing is dangerous, not primarily for what it will do to this country in a political or military way, but what it will do psychologically. It will make us complacent again. We will think we are secure again through this means alone, and discard our armament, and open the way for some stealthy aggressor, through secret treaties and secret armament, to challenge again our superiority in this world, because we will always have enemies as long as we are superior, and they will always be plotting to make themselves superior, whether through domination of a world state, a league of nations, or whatever other means.

Such international organizations always have been inconsequential up to now, and will be dangerous delusions for the future, if we throw away again the superior armament we are acquiring for our side in this world. Let's keep the war won the way we win it.

Follow a new progressive course of developing the world to democracy and christianity by example, in hopes that someday a world state on our basis may become naturally possible—but al-

All Iowa City Food Retailers Receive New Ration Tokens

Distribution of new red and blue ration tokens to Iowa City food retailers was begun yesterday, according to R. J. Phelps of the war price and rationing board.

Retailers may obtain one-point tokens at the Iowa State Bank and Trust company or at the First National Capital bank.

Effective Feb. 27, ration tokens will be given in change for brown and green stamps, according to Chester Bowles, director of the office of price administration.

Under the new simplified plan, the five blue stamps which become valid Feb. 27 are 8A, 8B, 8C, 8D and 8E. Three red stamps also become valid Feb. 27: 8A, 8B, and 8C.

Process foods will require blue stamps, and meat, fats, cheeses, canned fish and canned milk will require red stamps. Thus the consumer will need only one ration book when marketing for food.

Tokens for Change
When a consumer pays a market bill, she will no longer have to tear out the exact number of stamps to meet her purchase requirements. Instead, she will use as many ten-point stamps as necessary and take the difference, if any, in token "change."

Advantages of this plan, according to Bowles, include a longer period for budgeting points because of the increased validity period of 12 weeks; less error in budgeting and more convenience in figuring points because each red and blue stamp is worth 10 points. Consumers also avoid a last minute rush before expiration date because periods are definitely scheduled far in advance.

Tokens have a value of one point and have no expiration date. They may be spent by any member of the household. Children can be sent to the store with tokens only, thus reducing the chances of losing ration books.

11 Stamps a Month
Ration books will last longer. One book will do the work of at least two or three. The number of stamps to be handled will be reduced from the maximum of 28 stamps now used each month to 11 stamps under the new plan.

There will be a change-over period when brown stamps Y and Z (book 3) and green stamps K, L and M, (book 4) remain valid through March 20. Point values of brown and green stamps are not changed. Tokens will be given in change for these stamps.

What Electrical Appliances Will You Buy After the War?

Survey of Local Residents Reveals Radios Plentiful, Refrigerators Scarcer

What electrical appliance would you like to buy first when the war is over?

This is one of the questions asked in the three-month survey made by the Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric company in which they interviewed 98.6 percent of their 5,800 customers in Iowa City and rural areas.

The survey, centering on electrical appliance use and depletion, covered the following questions: What electrical equipment do you now have and use? How old is it, over or under 10 years? In what condition, working or not, is the appliance? The final question, which was answered by 1,000 of the persons surveyed, was "What appliance will you purchase when this war terminates?"

Three-Months Survey
In the three-months' survey a compiled list of all company districts was made. Of all the company territories making the survey, Iowa City topped the list in the number of persons interviewed. Davenport, Rock Island, Moline, Cedar Rapids, Ottumwa and Ft. Dodge were the other regional areas surveyed.

Iowa City is indicative of most economically sound districts because of her high standards, and the figures are comparable to those practicable in other survey areas.

The survey began in cooperation with the government policy of determining condition of appliances at the present time to allocate critical materials used in electric and gas equipment manufacturing.

The method of survey in Iowa City by the company was difficult because all customers do not call directly at the store. A three-channel survey was made—persons who came to the store filled out and signed questionnaires, but with customers who paid by check personal visits and phone calls were made.

Distinctions between residents of city and rural districts were found. Usually the woman of the house was the interviewee on farms, and in instances where the man of the house was not consulted, out-door electrical machinery was often given no preference. However, city and rural areas proved to be closely allied in their needs and desires.

"Fine Cooperation"
"Cooperation was splendid, and some persons even came back to inform us of second-hand purchases made after our survey, which made our tabulations more correct," said George Sheets, sales supervisor for the local branch of the company.

Apartment houses were "problem children" because the person interviewed was not the owner but rather the renter who used the equipment.

The most commonly used articles of equipment were clocks, coffee-makers, food-mixers, irons, lamps, radios, ranges, refrigerators, toasters, roasters, vacuum cleaners, washers and waffle irons. Equipment such as yard lights, cream separators and water pumps were important among rural residents.

Radios Top List
Of the equipment most frequently used, radios topped the list with 107 percent, indicating more than one radio in every home. This is based on the statements of 5,400 city interviewees.

The equipment and saturation figures for the rural area are as follows: under 10 years old—364 radios, 354 irons, 288 washers, 280 refrigerators and 288 clocks; over 10 years old—107 radios, 57 irons, 97 washers and 39 refrigerators. The saturation figures for these items are for radio, 100 percent; irons, 87; washers, 82; refrigerators, 68, and clocks, 63. The saturation percents were broken down into results under 10 years old—refrigerators, 52.4; washers, 42.1; radios, 80; irons, 72.5, and over 10 years old—refrigerators, 16.9; washers, 29.5; radios, 27, and irons, 20.1.

Irons and washing machines are now badly needed and unavailable, and 30 percent of the homes are without refrigerators. New processes and plans may be devised for future filling of these needs.

The significance of the survey lies in the fact that a more accurate record is now available for government and factory planning. Through the data secured by these two agencies, plans can be made ahead for the things needed in all homes in tomorrow's world of new electrical equipment.

Equipment Maintenance
During the survey, literature was distributed to teach owners the most efficient ways of caring for the appliances to make them last longer. It was explained that owners frequently must have special jobs done and neglect calling for assistance.

If a repair job was discovered in the survey, a repair man was sent to make the adjustment.

Sheets explained that no commercial aspect was involved in the survey because the purchase of the items is not possible now. Therefore, in the policy of interest in the present needs of all persons, and the future needs of the government and manufacturer in discovering post-war requirements, the survey was successful, according to Sheets.

"It all indicates," said Sheets, "that at this time there is more planned effort to care for post-war needs—probably the greatest ever made."

Books First On Want List

"You'll not be sorry for any contribution you make if, after the war is over you should meet one of the boys you helped," says Staff Sgt. Bernard E. Falk, army specialized training program student, in discussing the book drive of the World Student Service fund.

Sergeant Falk in his experiences overseas has found that our men "over there" rate books first on the list of things they'd like to have.

The University Women's association is sponsoring a week of book-giving for prisoners of war, evacuees and foreign students. Any and all kinds of books will be accepted through community organizations and university groups—textbooks, fiction or non-fiction.

Prospective book-donors will find collection boxes in the lobbies of downtown department stores, Iowa Union, in Schaeffer hall, University hall, Macbride hall and in all of the student housing units.

Iowa counties have received $1,625,000 of the subscription, and Iowa City will receive credit for an additional $50,000, announced F. E. Meacham, local ticket agent.
