A. M. G. Failure?

The allied military government has failed to wipe out black markets and provide enough food for the people in the Naples area.

Gervasi tells of laudable accomplishments of the A. M. G. in getting banks and schools re-opened and restoring the financial life of occupied areas.

The A.M.G. pegging of the lira—which was valued at five cents in American money before the war—at one cent was a terrific blow to the pocketbooks and stomachs of all Italians.

While one kilo- loaf of bread, generally partly baked and doughy and heavy with water, sells at less than four lire under the A.M.G. ceiling, the black market price for the same amount of well-baked white bread is from 100 to 160 lire.

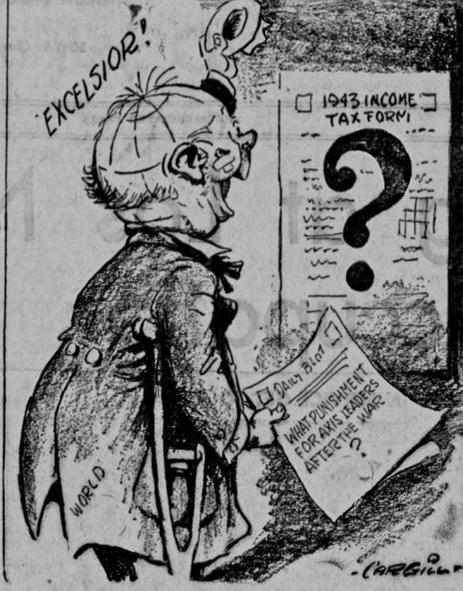

"There is almost nothing that is unobtainable on the black market. A barber offered to provide me with a bottle of eau de cologne for 1,000 lire.

A shipping shortage added to the difficulties in getting food to Naples and such evils as hoarding, smuggling, and bootlegging served to complicate the enormous task confronting the A.M.G., says Gervasi.

One of the major objectives of the A.M.G. in Italy was to provide reasonable quantities of food for the people as a whole, but especially the children, asserts Gervasi.

Very low, and the chances of Italy emerging as a democratic nation will be very slim.

QUESTION: DO YOU BELIEVE WE SHOULD BEGIN CONVERTING OUR INDUSTRIES IN THE NEAR FUTURE SO THAT BY THE END OF THE WAR WE SHALL HAVE MADE A BIG STEP FORWARD TOWARD OUR PEACETIME LEVEL?

Chester Woodburn, M2 of Des Moines: "I think the general staff running this war knows more about it, and if they say yes, I'm inclined to agree."

Pvt. John Geiger of Madison, Wis., in A. S. T. P.: "I think they should begin to convert some of the wartime material into peacetime articles."

Pvt. Truman Brooke of Minneapolis, Minn., in A. S. T. P.: "The majority of our major industries converted to wartime production in a very short time when the need arose."

News that presidential press secretary Steve Earley was sent to appeal to Barkley to return as leader has been published, but the president also sent his economic stabilizer and greatest soother, Jimmy Byrnes.

Now, Mr. Byrnes had as much ground as Barkley to resent the president's veto action. His advice was not taken in this matter.

Dec Zoller, A2 of Davenport: "I don't think we should start this conversion now because the war is far from over."

The tone of the message itself was an appeal which could be politically popular only to left-wing elements.

Now, Barkley has been kicked around as a stepchild by the White House for years.

Whether all involved will now live happily ever after remains to be seen.

The tax bill is passed and becomes law, Barkley keeps his job. The president appealed to wavering leftwing elements which were formerly the backbone of his political support.

It was a great battle but no lives were lost and only the president was wounded.

HOLLYWOOD—Madame Allie of mothers doomed to bring babies into the world for cannon fodder, had tremendous receptions everywhere.

For she remembers when: "Before the last war, I was a pacifist—I was not so wise as I am now. I toured in a play called 'War Brides' dramatizing the horrors of war and the sufferings will have to be disposed of before any new things can be made. This will cause unemployment."

Jeanne Kuhling, A4 of Arlington Heights, Ill.: "Not right away. I don't think we should start, because the end of the war is too far distant."

Warren Brooker, M3 of Forest City: "I feel it is a little early for undue optimism in this respect. Perhaps some sort of compromise could be made by which large industrial plants, formerly engaged in the production of war materials, which for some reason or another have been closed down, might well be turned into peacetime production."

News Behind the News

Congress Seems Suspicious of F. R.'s Intent in Labor Draft Bill

WASHINGTON—Mr. Roosevelt, speaking in the closed fraternity of his few top advisers after his third term victory, is supposed to have complained that the Republican campaign against him was weak and technically defective.

Mr. Roosevelt certainly knew his weakness. That weakness has now been publicly exposed again by the courage of his own Democratic senate floor leader Barkley.

The public has assumed Barkley was shooting at treasury officials who normally would submit data for a veto message on the subject of taxes. Inside congress that assumption is rejected.

Barkley is believed to have had in mind one particular Roosevelt adviser who did most of the work on the veto message—a man not in the treasury. That man composed or at least finally assembled most of the false arguments of the veto message as exposed by Barkley.

The departure of this man from the White House coterie may be necessary before a more friendly undercurrent of relations with congress is possible.

As for the Affaire Barkley itself, these investigating facts behind it may now be told:

The speech of the Kentucky senator was a complete surprise to the president. It disturbed him personally and profoundly. No one except Barkley's wife knew he had decided to make the break.

New Books

By JOHN SELBY "HOW TO THINK ABOUT WAR AND PEACE," by Mortimer J. Adler (Simon & Schuster; $2.50) Clifton ("Kip") Fadiman is an extraordinarily persuasive man, whether writing book reviews in the days when he reviewed for the New Yorker, or presiding over "Information Please," or writing introductions for books. He does a lot of this last, and most recently he has done a fore-piece for Mortimer J. Adler's "How to Think About War and Peace."

Mr. Fadiman's point is simple. It is that Mr. Adler has written a dull book about an important subject, and that although reading the book is difficult, one should do it anyway. Mr. Fadiman does not call the book dull; he uses another word. "I am pleading with you to do something difficult," he writes, "to read a hard book." He continues in his truthful, unhearsay way: "These pages (and this is not praise) are swept bare of emotion. They are minus the seductions of a personal style. They do not glisten with humor. The delightful pleasures of mental compromise may not be sought here."

In fact, Mr. Fadiman's introduction is the most seductive forward put forward in many years for an inexcusably boring book. Mr. Adler says many pertinent things, most of which have been said before in one or another way. His most important pronouncement is that we shall need to extend our imagination, our thought and our interest beyond the field in which it operates most readily. That is, we can without too much difficulty visualize the future as it affects our children, and sometimes even their children. But this is not enough. We must in some way come to think of our grandchildren's grandchildren. We shall at the end of this war reach a truce, not a peace. We must decide upon the most extensible truce, and go on from there.

"But I do not see why Mr. Adler should have written a 'hard' book, or why he should have stonily eschewed emotion, the 'seductions of a personal style,' the 'glint of humor.'"

France Has Position Of 'Swinging Door,' Pierre Delattre Says

"There is no fear in the minds of the French people that they will not after the war regain their former position among the powers of the world," Pierre Delattre, professor of phonetics in the French department at the University of Oklahoma, said in an interview Wednesday.

Professor Delattre was in Iowa City to present two lectures to the graduate college on "Problems of comparative phonetics involving old and modern languages" and on Paul Passy, founder of the phonetics institute of professors of modern languages.

He ascribed this attitude of the French people primarily to the geographical position which France holds, "the swinging door between Europe and America. Economic and intellectual growth of the United States means growth for France, according to Professor Delattre.

He pointed out that the favorable climate and fertile soil of France were the main factors which attracted the early races of the north and south to ancient Gaul and there founded the French nation.

"These natural aspects and the fact that it is impossible for Paris to lose its long standing position as the intellectual center of the modern world will guarantee France's stepping back into its natural economic place," Professor Delattre said.

Hairless Joes—Bristling Necessity

By CATHY COVERT

Just in case a black hedge equipped with legs comes ambling toward you one of these fine spring days, don't be alarmed—it's not Paul Bunyan, just one of the boys from the college of engineering cooperating to the fullest extent with the latest brain child of the Associated Students of Engineering, the annual beard growing contest.

Ever since Wednesday last the long suffering women of the more enthusiastic beard growers have found their men growing further and further away from them—out of bristling necessity!

These unfortunate victims of the eternal masculine urge to go primitive have finally resigned themselves to the prospect of unromantic weekends, and dancing that's far from cheek to cheek until the night of the Mecca Smoker, when the prize for the most unique beard will be presented.

Candidates for that dubious award include Clair Thomas, E4 of Lorimer, whose dark beard complete with mustache, is one of the more formidable accomplishments sported by the gentlemen of the engineering college. Clair's only worry is that it's turning red.

Also among those making claim to fame with impressive black bristles are Frank Mahan, E4 of Iowa City; Sam Elson, E4 of White Plains, N. Y., and Nick Demetroulis, E3 of Sioux City, affectionately known (could it be for his prowess as a beard grower?) as "Supertrouls" by his fellow engineers.

Most unfortunate among contenders for the title are those individuals who may be rugged, but are also blond, and left in the unhappy situation of possessing beards that are bristling, but at present practically invisible.

Chief among the victims in this class are Jim Lightner, E4 of Cedar Rapids, and Maurice Johnson, E3 of Clinton, who, however, hope to confound their black-bearded brethren with quantity instead of quality.

It seems however that some of the women on campus just don't have the right attitude toward the project and more than one prospective contestant went under the razor last weekend.

Ah yes, the life of a beard-grower in this civilized age is a hard one, as the possessor of the school's most unique beard will no doubt concede.

'Desert Victory' Film To Be Shown Today

"Desert Victory," second in the series of documentary films to be shown by the school of journalism to its students, will be presented this afternoon at 3:10 in the projection room of East hall.

Produced by the British Information services, "Desert Victory" is a highly dramatic film chronicling General Bernard Montgomery's advance from El Alamein to Tripoli. Photographed by soldier cameramen who fought and marched with the British army on the 1,300 mile trek across the western desert, of the 26 battle photographers and six officers producing this film, four were killed, seven wounded, and six captured while the film was being made.

Progress of battle and tactics used by the British in piercing German lines are shown through animated diagrams, maps and commentators' reports. Photography is excellent in spite of the fact that much of it was done at night.

The actors in "Desert Victory" are common British soldiers, though one or two star personalities, including Winston Churchill and Generals Montgomery and Alexander, make brief appearances. Captured German film incorporated into the movie also enables Rommel and Hitler to play their part for American audiences.

Minnesota Teams Complete Better Than Average Season

MINNEAPOLIS—Three Minnesota teams have completed their winter schedules with all boasting better than average success for the season's efforts.

Coach Niels Thorpe and his swimmers duplicated their record of last year by finishing the season undefeated in dual competition. The Gophers scored victories over Lawrence, Wisconsin, Iowa State and Iowa in order and placed third in the Big Ten championships held at Evanston, the same position won last year. Outstanding performances were turned in by the three letterman, Sam Solhaug, Don Fraser in the swimming events and Verne Ruostala in diving. The latter went through the season undefeated in dual competition and placed second in the conference meet. He undoubtedly will add to his laurels when he competes in the National Collegiate meet to be held at Yale the later part of March. Coach Thorpe predicts that he has an excellent chance to finish among the first three in this top attraction of the year for collegiate divers.

Gopher tankmen compiled a season point total of 90 points to 145 for their opponents.

Coach Larry Armstrong and his hockey team were forced to forsake collegiate circles this season in order to arrange a schedule. Because of existing travel conditions and restrictions it was impossible to schedule schools, that in the past have appeared against Minnesota in the ice sport. As a result, names of old friendly rivals such as Michigan, Illinois, Dartmouth, Yale and Michigan Tech were absent from the list of opponents. To compensate for the scarcity of intercollegiate rivalry the Gophers played a schedule consisting of two Canadian teams, the St. James Club of Winnipeg and the Port Arthur Griffons, a team composed of navy men serving aboard the H.M.C.S. Griffon. To round out the schedule for the year the hockey team took to the ice against three Minneapolis Park League teams composed of former professional and college stars.

Although they only played about half the game, both Bob Freeman and Willie Orr were red-hot for the Hawkeys, scoring 29 points between them. Freeman tossed in six field goals and four free throws for a total of 16 points, while Orr garnered five field goals and three free throws for 13 points.

Leading at the half by a score of 25-9, City high relied on its reserves for a very great deal in the second half. With the reserves playing a bang-up game all the way the Little Hawk score continued to mount.

From the opening seconds in the game it was easy to see that an Iowa City victory was the order for the evening. From the start the Hawkeys had things pretty much their own way in controlling both the backboards.

Cooperating and coordinating perfectly in their triumph last night, the Little Hawks looked like a championship team. To beat the West Branch five tomorrow afternoon in the finals, they will have to keep up the torrid pace, for West Branch is no easy mark.

As a climax to a season packed with cage thrills seldom seen on the Iowa hardwood the University of Iowa 1944 basketball team will go against a seasoned five from Northwestern university tonight in a game that will either make or break Hawkeye championship-share hopes.

Rated as a seventh placer at the opening of the season, the Iowa hopefuls have come along to the point where a double win this weekend, not an improbable happening, would give them a share of the Big Ten conference crown with Ohio State, now resting quietly on the long end of their 10-2 league season.

Northwestern's team, reported to be very tricky and dangerous, although patched up due to service calls of several of their first stringers comes to Iowa ready to make trouble and to live up to its name as a Wildcat.

Whereas Iowa will look to the sharpshooting services of Messrs. Ives and Danner, first and fourth respectively in league scoring, Northwestern will count on pow-

Sports Trail . . .

By WHITNEY MARTIN
 NEW YORK, (AP)—Just when you were wondering a little how the major leagues were going to palm off Kankakee baseball at Yankee stadium prices you learn the prices aren't going to be the same this year as last after all. They're going to be higher.

Neither the jacked-up prices nor the faded quality is the fault of the clubs. Both are due to circumstances beyond their control, with the manpower situation responsible for amateur-night performances and the new 10 percent government tax causing the admission hike.

Actually the basic admission prices remain the same, with the added tax bringing the increase, but try to explain that to your pocketbook, as two bucks going out is two bucks going out, no matter what for. If attendance did show signs of dropping because of the price increase, the clubs could cut their basic price so that the added tax would bring the figure only to the 1943 level, and they're welcome to the idea.

Just how the inferior play will affect attendance is problematical. Lots of the games will be played at night, the Senators alone having 46 such contests, but the fact remains a team can look just as bad at night as it does in the day time, particularly if the lights are on.

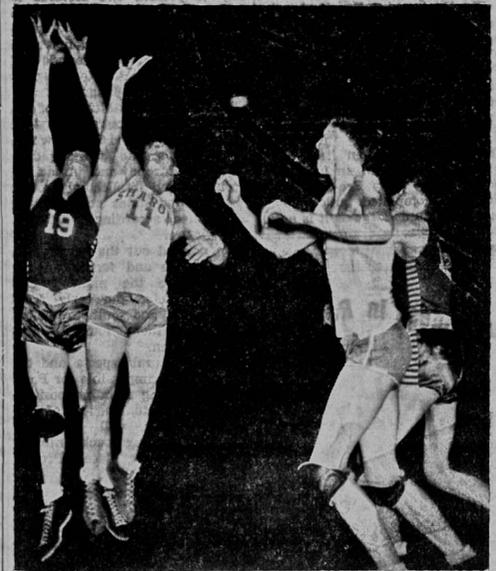

If the competition is keen enough the real baseball fans probably will go to the games anyway, the same as the fight fans continue to jam Madison Square Garden to see shows with main events of the 10-20-30 class.

Also, the real fans probably won't debate with themselves on whether to spend that extra dough which the tax makes it necessary for them to spend, as a guy making up his mind to go to a ball game isn't going to let the price of a couple of hot dogs stand in his way.

Neither can the clubs be blamed for holding their basic prices to the same level regardless of the caliber of play, as there is no law against getting as much as they can get out of the fans, and if a club can get carriage-trade prices from baseball-hungry fans regardless of the performance it certainly is entitled to do so.

Leading until the final quarter, the hard-fighting St. Mary's Ramblers of Iowa City were eliminated from the sectional tournament, 32-28, last night by Riverside, who staged a fourth period rally to gain their way into the finals Saturday afternoon.

Tom Stahle, Rambler forward, who turned in one of his best games of the year, was high point man of the game, connecting for 19 points. Taking scoring honors for Riverside was Lyle Fox, who hit for four baskets and three free throws for 11 points.

The St. Mary's five was leading 7-6 at the quarter and 17-11 at the end of the first half. Riverside came back the second half to slowly cut the margin to 22-21 as the third period ended.

The Riverside five, taking advantage of St. Mary's over-ambitiousness, turned in their best playing during the last quarter. Forward Dick Swales looked the best on defense for the winners.

John Lenoch, St. Mary's mighty little senior guard, played a whale of a game on defense before leaving the game on fouls in the third quarter.

The most outstanding offensive man on the floor was Stahle, who also turned in a good defensive game.

 Little Hawks Win 53-29

Throwing everything they had at the spunky but definitely out-classed Williamsburg five, City high's Little Hawks advanced into the sectional finals last night as they drubbed the Williamsburg team 53-29.

Although they only played about half the game, both Bob Freeman and Willie Orr were red-hot for the Hawkeys, scoring 29 points between them. Freeman tossed in six field goals and four free throws for a total of 16 points, while Orr garnered five field goals and three free throws for 13 points.

Leading at the half by a score of 25-9, City high relied on its reserves for a very great deal in the second half. With the reserves playing a bang-up game all the way the Little Hawk score continued to mount.

From the opening seconds in the game it was easy to see that an Iowa City victory was the order for the evening. From the start the Hawkeys had things pretty much their own way in controlling both the backboards.

Cooperating and coordinating perfectly in their triumph last night, the Little Hawks looked like a championship team. To beat the West Branch five tomorrow afternoon in the finals, they will have to keep up the torrid pace, for West Branch is no easy mark.

 Sharon Blasts Way To Winners Circle; Beats Cosgrove, 25-19

Still clinging to the winner group, the Sharon basketballers blasted the Cosgrove five out of the tournament to the score of 25 to 19 last night in the City high fieldhouse.

Shaffer started the ball rolling for the Sharon quintet, scoring 8 points in the first quarter, and ran up a total of 12 points for his evening's work. Meede, shiftily little forward for the losing five, looked very impressive, as he managed to hit the hoop for 8 points, with many of the shots from far out on the court.

At the start of the second half, it looked as though the Cosgrove boys might turn the game in their favor, as they put on a short exhibition of fine ball playing and good shooting.

The score at the half was a slim 6 points, and still any ones ball game, but after the losers short spurt at the start of the second half, the Sharon lads resumed their old style, forging ahead to win in a very decisive manner.

Winning the game last night means that Sharon has only to beat Riverside to advance to the district meet, but to beat Riverside, will take all the tricks Coach Sarah Frazier can pull out of the bag. In center Sehr, the Sharon five has a very capable boy, as he is tall, and has an eagle eye for the basket.

One of the largest crowds yet to watch the tournament witnessed last night's games, with lots of color and cheering to make the game interesting.

 West Branch Wins 36-35

An unlucky U-high foul in the last seconds of the game gave the West Branch Bears a 36-35 victory over the Bluehaws last night as Don Rummells of the Bears tossed in a free throw seconds after the game ended.

As the game ended the score read 35-35, but a U-high foul committed before the buzzer sounded gave Don Rummells his chance to try for the free throw. When his first shot from the foul line rang true, U-high was out of the sectional tournament.

Final Basket
 With first one team leading and then the other, it was impossible to tell the outcome of the game until the final basket swished through the hoop.

Sparking the play of the West Branch outfit was sure-shot Don Rummells, who swished in seven field goals and six free throws for a total of 20 points. He and his two brothers, Wayne and Warren, led the attack, while the West Branch defense held Bluehawk Jack Shay to 12 points.

Close Guarding
 Closely guarded all the time, Shay led his team-mates as he dumped in three field goals and six free throws.

At the quarter the score was 10-3 in favor of the Bluehaws, while at the half U-high still led 17-16. Third quarter score saw the Bears leading by a point, 28-27.

Totalitarian Nations Expect Us to Become War Weary, Negotiate Peace—Burlingame

By ROBERTA WHELAN

However great any loss we may incur from this war, it will be less than sending another generation of men to fight another war under far less favorable circumstances, according to Bob Burlingame, WHO newscaster, who yesterday addressed an audience of university women and faculty members at Information First.

"However weary we may grow of this war," he declared, "we must never succumb to the fatal virus of a negotiated peace with the present governments of Japan or Germany or any successors thereto."

Germany and Japan, he said, believe that we will grow weary after we have incurred considerable loss of men and material and that we will negotiate a peace allowing them to retain their conquered territories.

Their own home conditions, he said, are not nearly so encouraging to the allies as we have made them appear by our wishful thinking. Contrary to popular opinion, Burlingame stated Japan is more likely to crack from within than Germany.

The rank and file of German people, he said, are still wholeheartedly behind the Nazi regime. There are still as many German divisions as at the beginning of the war. There is no starvation inside Germany and the aerial bombardments of Germany, while they have of course impaired production, have not had the devastating effects we had hoped for, and have made steel-hard the German morale, in the same manner that the Luftwaffe attacks strengthened English morale and determination.

Japan, on the other hand, is apt to be weakened by the large number of peace-minded people still influential in Japan, the over-propagandizing of the Japanese people, and Japan's long history of internal strife. For these reasons, Japan, Burlingame said, will probably not fight to the last man despite seeming Japanese fanaticism.

Japanese defeat Burlingame declared inevitable, but he also described it as impossible without a great number of strong Chinese bases. He pointed out that though all operations are now directed toward China, it is doubtful that any bases will be established in China this year.

Russia, the always-to-be-considered factor in peace planning, is as important in the Pacific theater as on the eastern frontier, according to Burlingame. He expressed belief that Russian entry into the Japanese conflict will come as soon as she is able to effect it, not out of gratitude to us, but for Russia's own long-range interests.

Such cooperation by Russia involves the fact that "the future destiny will be woven by that people or those peoples who contribute the most to the liberation of the conquered countries," stated Burlingame.

The true realization of the ordeal ahead of us, he said, is apt to

Prof. Arthur Murphy Discusses Intellectual Friends of 2 Decades

"The period of thought between the two world wars was a time of wide fluctuations when convictions formerly accepted as true were declared false," Prof. Arthur Murphy said at a graduate college lecture last night in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Professor Murphy, head of the philosophy department at the University of Illinois, in discussing "Current Trends in American Thought," pointed out that thinking today is the reflection of what educators have said and what we have read.

The American intellectual # passed through two main phases and is now at the beginning of the third. The first period was from the end of World War I through the 1920's, a time of criticism, disillusion and debunking of philosophical theories.

A period of faith and quest for ultimate certainties began in 1930 and continued until the beginning of World War II. The intellectuals, looking for a faith to bring them back from the aloofness of previous years, sought a doctrine that would justify the past and assure their future.

The New Deal came into being and was an atmosphere of moral enthusiasm and hopefulness, according to Professor Murphy. The great characteristic was the extent to which leadership was divided. "Perhaps men were striving not for a new faith but to turn against something that was insecure within itself," he said.

Prof. Arthur Murphy concluded his interpretations of contemporary thought by describing the beginnings of the third phase of the American intellectual. "We are beginning to link up the spiritual principle with that which is rooted in the soil of America."

R. C. Tomlinson To Leave Iowa City

R. C. Tomlinson, director of the Iowa City U. S. O. since its opening last Aug. 5, will leave Iowa City to assume directorship of the Madison, Wis., united service organizations March 13.

Tomlinson's new directorship will give him a larger unit with three full-time associate directors. The policy of the Iowa City U. S. O. will continue the same, according to Leland L. Stacey of Kansas City, regional supervisor of the army and navy Y. M. C. A.

Tomlinson came to Iowa City last June from Lake Forest college where he headed the speech and dramatic arts department for 15 years. Since the opening of the Iowa City U. S. O. on Aug. 5, the average attendance has been 1,800 each weekend.

The Tomlinsons, who have been living at 524 Park road, have one son, Russell Jr., with the army in Italy, and a daughter, Margaret, student at Lake Forest college.
