Nip's Infiltration Attack Frustrated by Marines

12,864 Enemy Troops Killed

Navy Department Acknowledges Loss Of 2,050 Marines

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Guam, Tuesday (AP)—A number of Japanese attempts to infiltrate the lines of the U. S. marines on Iwo Jima Monday were broken up and the battle positions remained substantially unchanged, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Thus, for the second straight day, Nimitz reported little change in position in the bitter fighting, now in its 15th day, for the strategic little island 750 miles south of Tokyo.

Heavy Fire

"The enemy made a number of attempts to infiltrate, and subjected the marines to heavy small arms and artillery fire," Nimitz said in his communique. "All efforts were broken up. There was no appreciable change in the lines on March 5 (Monday)."

No mention was made of the positions of the third, fourth and fifth marine divisions last reported pressing the Japanese toward cliffs on the north and northwest edge of Iwo.

2,050 Killed

Navy Secretary Forrestal said in Washington that 2,050 marines already had been killed on Iwo but the loss was not out of proportion to the importance of the island. He had just returned from Iwo where he said the enemy was putting up the "most thorough and skillful" defense.

Nimitz reported yesterday that 12,864 Japanese dead had been counted up to 6 p. m. Saturday and 81 prisoners taken.

Improved weather conditions facilitated unloading operations in Iwo's beaches.

Chichi Jima Bombed

Chichi Jima in the Bonin Islands immediately to the north was bombed Sunday by Liberators of the Seventh airforce, while torpedo planes hit the Palau Islands with the loss of two aircraft. Navy fighters swept Ponape in the Carolines.

Five Japanese, wearing full American marine battle dress, were killed by 24th regiment patrols, AP War Correspondent James Lindsay reported.

He was told by Lieut. Col. G. L. McCormick of Huntington Valley, Pa., assistant chief of staff at Iwo headquarters, that the Japanese apparently were disguising themselves in an effort to sneak within the American lines.

Rupture of Pipeline Looses Crude Oil Upon Ohio River

CINCINNATI (AP)—An undetermined amount of low-flash crude oil was loosened upon the flooded Ohio river Monday by the rupture of a submarine pipeline supplying the war-busy Latonia, Ky., refinery of the Standard Oil company.

James S. Dalton, assistant superintendent, said that "while a fire danger should be recognized, it is highly improbable." Principal effect of the accident, detected late Monday night when gauges on the 336,000-gallon-per-day failed to register, would be to slow up production of vital war fuels including base stock for 100 octane gasoline.

Lawrenceburg and Aurors, Ind., and other downriver communities figuratively clothes-pinned their noses as the oil slick swept down stream, the odor in some places being described by residents as "terrible."

The pipeline is the only one serving the Latonia refinery which otherwise gets its supply of crude oil only by railroad tank car and barges, Dalton said.

Urge Nazi Surrender

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
An appeal from General Eisenhower's headquarters, addressed to German army officers Monday via the American broadcasting station in Europe, urged that they "reconsider the situation of Germany, the situation of their men and their personal situation" and surrender to the allies.

France Balks At Sponsoring Peace Parley

PARIS (AP)—France has informed the United States, Great Britain and Russia that she will not attend the San Francisco United Nations conference as a sponsor, but merely as an invited nation.

The decision to reject sponsorship of the meeting was made by the cabinet after the return of Foreign Minister Georges Bidault from conferences with Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in London, it was disclosed.

The reason for the decision was that acceptance of a sponsoring role would place France in the position of accepting Dumbarton Oaks conference decisions which she had no part in making and there was not sufficient time for study of "such important matter."

It was said that the formal invitation to France to participate as a sponsor at San Francisco arrived only today.

The first word of the official French attitude toward the United Nations meeting reached Paris through dispatches from Washington Monday and the first reaction among members of the consultative assembly was one of extreme disappointment.

Clouds Breaking Up, Cold Wave Coming

It is going to be cold today but it should start warming up towards evening. The clouds which have made Iowa City a rather gloomy place for the past few days are expected to break up and go away so that it will be mostly clear. We may get a sprinkling of snow before all this happens but it won't amount to much.

The low temperature yesterday morning was 31, the high 42 but by midnight the mercury was down to 24.

Janitor Confesses Cremation Murder

CHICAGO (AP)—A murder charge was filed yesterday against Joseph Nischt, 30-year-old janitor, who, Police Captain Edward Kelly said confessed cremating the body of Mrs. Rose Michaelis, 58, after knocking her unconscious with a blow.

Nischt was taken to the apartment building in which he was employed and in which Mrs. Michaelis lived to reenact the crime. Captain Kelly said Nischt cringed and wept as he told details of the slaying.

Two Women Killed, Seven Injured In Head-on Crash

Two Iowa City women were killed and seven other persons injured early yesterday morning in a head-on crash of two automobiles near Cedar Rapids.

The dead are Dorothy Babbitt, 19, of 1117 E. Church street, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Babbitt, and Mrs. Betty Hakes, 18, of Moline, Ill., who was living with Miss Babbitt.

Late last night Doris Coffee, 19, of 624 N. Johnson street, one of the injured, was reported to have a fractured back, possibly a fractured nose and bruised legs.

Also injured were: Pvt. Jack E. Rohner, 21, of Iowa City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter P. Rohner, 11 W. Burlington street. Private Rohner was home on furlough from McCook Field, Neb.; Corp. Joseph P. Akers, 20, of 210 1/2 S. Clinton street. Corporal Akers was home on furlough from service in the marine corps;

Robert Burger, 21, of 620 Ronalds street, of the merchant marines, broken right arm;

Mr. and Mrs. Loraine Schrader, both of Cedar Rapids, backs injured and facial laceration;

George Stevens, 27, of Marion. Mr. and Mrs. Schrader and Miss Coffee are patients at St. Luke's hospital in Cedar Rapids. The other four patients were taken to Mercy hospital in Cedar Rapids.

Sheriff James H. Smity of Linn county said the accident happened under visibility conditions made treacherous by fog.

The group was returning home from a dance in Cedar Rapids. The car, owned by Private Rohner, was driven by Burger.

Mr. and Mrs. Schrader and Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were returning from Lake Macbride to Cedar Rapids. Stevens was driving.

Miss Babbitt was born May 24, 1925, in West Liberty, the daughter of William and Bertha Babbitt. She moved with her mother to Iowa City two years ago after living in Cedar Rapids for nine years.

Her father died in 1935. Surviving are her mother; one sister, Mrs. Rella Towne of Cedar Rapids; one half-sister, Mrs. Marie Pollock of Waterloo; two brothers, Harold Babbitt of Iowa City and Sergt. Kenneth Babbitt, serving in Belgium.

Sinatra Still 4-F

JERSEY CITY, N. J. (AP)—Frank Sinatra is back in a 4-F classification as a result of the unanimous vote of the four members of his draft board 19 at the regular meeting last night.

Ira W. Caldwell, board chairman, said Saturday he had ordered the crooner placed in a 2-A-F classification after notification from Washington that military officials had disqualified Sinatra for the second time because of a punctured ear drum.

Russians Surround 200,000 Germans; Seize 150 Localities

Gross-Tychow, Yank Prison Camp, Liberated by Reds

LONDON (AP)—Russian troops captured Stettin's outer defense city of Stargard Monday as they ripped through 150 localities in Nazi lines in the corner of Pomerania east of Stettin Bay, and tightened their hold on possibly 200,000 Germans trapped in another pocket far to the northeast.

Russians artillery pounded the suburbs of Stettin, Berlin's port, as tank columns fought close to Alt-Damm, East bank Oder crossing town just opposite Stettin and 15 miles west of fallen Stargard.

To the northeast another Russian army in 10-mile gains captured 80 localities, including Wiesenthal, seven miles southwest of Schlawa, a stronghold on the road to Danzig, and Gross-Tychow, site of an American prison camp 18 miles south of captured Kooslin, a Moscow communique announced. Whether any Americans were freed was not immediately made known.

Russian troops on the Baltic stormed the stronghold of Kolberg Sunday night during a blizzard and were "held at the fringes of the town," a German broadcast said.

Naugard, 22 miles north of Stargard, also fell as the Russians folded the Germans back against a 45-mile line between imperilled Stettin and the Baltic Sea, clearing the Red Army flank for the coming offensive toward Berlin.

Premier Stalin also announced in an order of the day the fall of Polzin, middle Pomeranian stronghold 52 miles northeast of Stargard. Polzin had been bypassed by Zhukov's troops in their Baltic break-through which on Sunday reached Kolberg, 65 miles northeast of Stettin.

Ruml Pays Tax On C.R. Estate

DES MOINES (AP)—Beardsley Ruml, noted New York financier who is a native of Cedar Rapids, has paid the state of Iowa $653 inheritance taxes in connection with his mother many years ago, state tax commission records showed yesterday.

The estate of the late Mrs. Salome Ruml of Cedar Rapids had a gross actual value of $87,441, the records showed and a taxable value of $33,460. Beardsley Ruml received no part of the final distribution of the estate because of the advance bequest, a copy of the will disclosed.

The commission reported collection of inheritance taxes from 16 other estates. Largest was $14,587 from the estate of Jerry Sullivan of Storm Lake. Taxable value of that estate was placed at $154,849.

The other estates, the taxable value of each and the tax, included: Eunice B. Lynch, Cedar Rapids, $185,522 and $4,005; Henry L. Riets, Iowa City, $153,337 and $10,767; Daniel K. Unsicker, Wright, $109,633 and $2,709; Anton F. Bohnsen, Clinton, $74,519 and $4,968; Augusta Leasch, Burlington, $16,601 and $3,250.

Nazi Demolitions Spell — End of Battle of Cologne Plain

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press War Analyst
The thunder of Nazi demolition charges blowing Rhine bridges all the way from Cologne to Wesel spells the end of the battle of the Cologne plain.

It may well spell the end of allied hopes of seizing any river crossing intact to expedite establishment of East Rhine bridgeheads; but it also probably doomed many thousands of Nazi troops still on the west bank to death or capture.

Large Groups

How long the grim Nazi business of abandoning large groups of troops to their fate, as allied and Russian forces press on into the heart of Germany, can go on without producing a complete collapse in German army morale is open to conjecture. There are increasing signs of impending enemy military disintegration detectable in field reports from both fronts. These signs are backed by evidence that the Nazi effort to mobilize all German citizenry into a last ditch people's army is proving largely a futile gesture.

Little Desire

The will to fight has been notably lacking in such units once the Wehrmacht troops were pulled out. The citizen soldiers show little disposition to sacrifice themselves in battle-to-the-death rear guard actions, the function apparently reserved for them by the Nazi commanders, once the fear of Wehrmacht guns at their backs is ended.

That is a highly significant indication of the growing defeatist mood among the German people as distinct from the Nazi police German army. It implies that a cracking strain is developing within Germany that will certainly limit sharply the extent and seriousness of guerrilla operations after organized resistance ends if it does not lead to something like the internal revolt against continuation of the useless slaughter that terminated the last war.

Allied Troops

With allied troops on the lower Rhine from Bonn to Arnhem in Holland, and Russian forces now manning the Neisse-Oder line virtually from the southern Sudeben mountains to the Oder estuary the final two-front breakthrough cannot be far away. With all Rhine bridges destroyed by the Germans as seems probable if not already accomplished, it may take time for General Eisenhower's armies to bring up all the equipment they will need to force that last Nazi western defense moat. Eastward, however, there seems every reason to expect immediate Russian renewal of the direct drive at Berlin. The operation that split Pomerania apart to the Baltic seems to have fully set the eastern war stage for just that.

Negotiators Discuss Lewis' Wage Demand

WASHINGTON (AP)—Coal mine wage negotiators centered their discussions yesterday on John L. Lewis' demands for a 10-cent per ton royalty and for a cut-back to 35 hours in the straight time work week.

No decisions of any kind were reached, it was understood, though the operators may take a definite stand on the royalty issue by today.

Lewis spent more than an hour addressing the closed negotiations session, centering on the two points.

Operators figured that the U.M.W. chieftain's proposal for revision of the work week would boost the miners' take for a 54-hour week from $57.06 to $63.50. Lewis wants overtime to start after the 35 hours instead of 40 as at present. He also wants pay for a daily 15-minute lunch period which now is uncompensated. He wants regular pay for time spent traveling between tipple and working face, instead of the miner's face which now gives the miners 50 cents for an arbitrarily estimated 45 minutes underground travel time.

Plane Crashes—Eight Killed

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Eight persons were killed and 14 hurt yesterday as a two-engine C-60 cargo plane crashed and exploded at Wright field, setting fire to a hangar in which a number of civilians were working.

The public relations office at the field, headquarters of the air technical service command, said five of the dead were members of the crew of the plane.

The plane was on a test flight under the supervision of the personal equipment laboratory and crashed just as it made its take-off. Seven other airplanes in the hangar were destroyed but military and civilian personnel succeeded in preventing the flames from spreading to other buildings.

Riot Panics Bucharest

MOSCOW (AP)—A Tass news dispatch reported today that pro-fascist bands were rioting in the streets of Bucharest and tearing pictures of united nations leaders from buildings in the Romanian capital, which has been without a government since that of Prime Minister Radescu resigned a week ago.

The Tass report quoting the Romanian newspaper Momentul said that bands of legionnaires, protected by Radescu's ministry of the interior, were racing through the streets in automobiles, shooting up the homes of democratic leaders and spreading panic among the population.

F.D.R. Names Fred Vinson Administrator

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Fred M. Vinson, now economic stabilization director, to take over the Federal Loan Administration job which the senate wouldn't let Henry Wallace have.

The appointment, which the senate seemed ready to confirm quickly, completed the division of the jobs from which Mr. Roosevelt ousted Jesse Jones, Houston, Texas, banker and publisher, inauguration day to make room for Wallace.

The senate held up confirmation of the former vice president as secretary of commerce until legislation was put through divorcing the loan authority from the cabinet post. Jones had held both jobs.

The loan administrator is head of the multi-billion dollar Reconstruction Finance corporation and its giant subsidiaries.

Vinson has been economic stabilization director since James F. Byrnes left the post to become war mobilization director.

Actress Survives Gas

NEW YORK (AP)—Blonde Una Merkel, actress whose specialty is scatterbrained southern belle types, was overcome by gas today when, police said, her 70-year-old mother took her own life.

Building employes, attracted by the odor of gas broke into the hotel apartment and found Mrs. Betsy Merkel in the kitchen.

Fleeing Nazis Burn Bridges

U. S. Ninth Army Joins Canadians At Rhine River

PARIS (AP)—United States tanks drove more than a mile yesterday into the tottering Rhine-land metropolis of Cologne, seized one-fifth of it, and the largest German city ever to be stormed by the Allies seemed virtually within American grasp.

The charge of American tanks from the north to within two miles of the big Hohenzollern bridge in the heart of the city forced the remaining German garrison—estimated by one staff officer to number only 1,000 men—to fall back.

From West

Other American forces were smashing in from the west, and a flying column began cutting three miles southwest of Cologne to complete the encirclement. This column last was reported about five and a half miles from the Rhine south of Cologne.

Largest City

Cologne is the largest city in Rhenish Prussia, normally with a population of 768,000 which ran her once-busy war factories, but most of the civilians had fled now or covered in basements as the battle swirled around them.

Simultaneously, the United States Ninth army struck into the center of the shrinking Rhine pocket to the north, fighting into Rheinberg, one of the chief ferry points for an estimated 50,000 German soldiers trying to fight their way to the east bank of the river.

Seize Control

American and Canadian armies had seized control of 70 miles of the Rhine's west bank between Cologne and the Dutch border, and the Germans were hemmed into three slender pockets in the remaining 20 miles.

Before the rush of the United States Ninth army, the Germans blew all three bridges at Duisberg, were routed from the cross-Rhine suburb of Homberg, and were being compressed in a west bank area 10 miles long and six miles wide.

Invitations Issued For San Francisco Security Conference

WASHINGTON (AP)—Invitations to the world security conference went out yesterday amid signs that smaller nations will strive to limit the authority of the big powers.

All the united nations, except Poland, were invited to the conference beginning April 25 in San Francisco to set up international machinery to enforce peace.

The state department announced the long-awaited Yalta formula on how the great powers would vote in the proposed world council. It would allow a great power to be formally accused and tried before world public opinion on a charge of threatening aggression but any one of the powers, including the accused, could veto the use of force against it.

American Republics To Draft Statements On Argentina, Trade

WASHINGTON (AP)—A five-day embargo on all less-than-carload freight shipments in or out of the eastern half of the United States will go into effect today at midnight.

The Association of American railroads announced the embargo today to clear up an accumulation of less-than-carload type shipments resulting from the widespread winter rail traffic tie-up.

The embargo is to end Sunday midnight, the association feeling the situation by then probably will be largely cleared up.

Dean Virginia Gildersleeve Expert on Internationalism

NEW YORK (AP)—People who know Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, only American woman delegate to the forthcoming united nations conference on drafting a world security plan, say she has a lawyer's mind.

"She weighs things like a judge and won't voice an opinion unless she is sure of her ground," they continue. "Since she has a scholar's definition of what is 'sure' she does not express her opinion as often as some people."

Miss Gildersleeve is dean of Barnard college for women, Columbia university. As delegate to the San Francisco conference in April, she will help write the Dumbarton Oaks proposals into a workable international organization for world security.

Look at her and you see a woman with intelligent eyes that glow like brown lamps, with silver-shot hair swept back from a face seamed and mellowed a little with passing years, yet alert with the look of one who sees a vision of new things. Virginia Gildersleeve was born in New York, went to college to please her mother, remained to teach English at Barnard and became its head at 33. Today she is one of the foremost educators in the country.

The Equal Rights Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP)—The proposed equal rights (for women) amendment is up in congress for another kicking around.

This is the eighth time the bill has been launched. It got nowhere before—never even reaching the floor for debate. It may get nowhere again. There's a chance it may.

The congressmen who have to decide on it are caught in a squeeze between the women who want it and the women who don't. (And not all the congressmen are convinced it is a good idea.)

The women who want equal rights say: "It's about time." Women against it say: "Equal rights for us is a booby trap." There isn't anything in the constitution to guarantee women equal rights with men (except in voting). In order to get such a guarantee there would have to be an amendment.

Here's what the proposed amendment says: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Congress and the several states shall have power within their respective jurisdictions to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

"This amendment shall take effect five years after the date of ratification." For an amendment to become law it has to pass both houses of congress and be accepted by the legislatures of 36 states.

To give an idea of what this might mean: the child labor amendment got the approval of congress in 1924. So far only 23 states have ratified it.

Here are some of the arguments of those opposing the amendment: 1. You can't legislate equal rights. It's a social problem that has to be worked out in time.

2. If state laws were made to conform to the proposed constitutional provisions, many existing state laws protecting women might be wiped out. These include various labor laws giving women special privileges, such as limiting the hours they may work. (The point is: some states might "give women the right" to work as long as men.)

3. The amendment would jeopardize the entire pattern of our family support laws, which place prior responsibility on the husband or father. If these were wiped out, not only might wives and widows lose their legal allowances, but children might be penalized by the resulting confusion.

Program for Tomorrow's Symphony Concert

Mention French music to most concert-goers, and they will think at once of Debussy and Ravel; opera-goers will think first of Gounod's "Faust," Thomas's "Mignon," Delibes's "Lakme," Bizet's "Carmen," and perhaps Massenet's "Thais" or "Manon." All these composers and their works seem definitely French in that even a layman would never mistake their style for Russian, Italian, or German; yet the style of Debussy and Ravel is very different from that of, say, Gounod, and there is no common basis such as folk-song or regionalism to impose arbitrary resemblances upon these highly individual composers. They do share certain traits such as clarity of expression, poetic imagination, sensitivity, and polished craftsmanship which are characteristic of the best French work in all arts,—but also of the best art of other peoples. Actually French music represents an orderly growth in which general development has been constant but in which there has been plenty of room for individuality. Already in the eighteenth century, even while German and Italian influences dominated French musical practice as they have at times dominated ours, Rameau and Couperin invested their compositions with a type of fancy and even humor characteristically French. During the first half of the nineteenth century Berlioz, one of the most original geniuses who ever lived, and nowadays acknowledged as the father of modern orchestration and of modern practice in musical description, produced his great symphonies—the "Fantastic," "Harold in Italy," and "Romeo and Juliet"; but French taste at the time was not quite ready for him. Government subvention of opera encouraged such talents as Gounod,

Thomas, and Delibes rather than Berlioz, and public response under the Empire of Napoleon III inclined toward lavish stage spectacles rather than to the supposedly soberer pleasures of symphonic music. However, after the national disaster of 1870, the time was ripe in France for the best minds in every field to reflect a new earnestness and emphasis upon serious aspiration. In music native French symphonists came to the fore. By 1900 such composers as Franck, d'Indy, Chausson, and Debussy (Ravel came to international notice a little later) represented French music at home and abroad rather than the successors of the older group of operatic composers. French symphonic music soon became world famous for poetic imagination, rich harmony, and colorful orchestration.

Wednesday's program is drawn from the pioneer works of this school rather than from later examples. Bizet thought of himself as a composer for the theater, and his overture "Patrie" was written to accompany a play; but it lives today in the concert hall, and Sordani's play is practically forgotten. Franck's symphony, produced in 1888, was more than a bit too modern for his contemporaries, but a whole generation of French composers adopted it as their New Testament, and the work today is still vital and still beloved. Saint-Saens, whose best symphony is dated 1886, is represented in this program by his gay and sparkling Algerian Suite based upon French North African scenes. In mood and treatment these three pioneer compositions are most varied; but they share in common the vigor and charm which we associate with modern French music,—and also a dramatic quality which they brought with them from the theater to the concert hall.

The coordination is planned under a group of five widely known cancer experts, cooperating with doctors, scientists, laymen and government, and working under direction of Rear Admiral Charles S. Stephenson, retired.

Rabbi Gilbert Klaperman—

Describes Zionism Movement

By LYNN JOHNSON
Daily Iowan Feature Editor

"Captain Alfred Dreyfus has betrayed his country and sold military plans to Germany!"

It was an unjust accusation, which shocked France and split it into two great controversial camps. Men like Emile Zola, Clemenceau, Anatole France, and other famed liberals of the Third Republic immediately rallied to the cause of Dreyfus. They claimed his trial had been unjust, a result of anti-Jewish bigotry.

Paris correspondent for an Austrian paper was Theodore Herzl. As the tragic trial unfolded, he realized it wasn't Dreyfus who was on trial, but Jews everywhere, Jews who presented a defenseless minority in every country. At this point, Herzl's Jewish consciousness was aroused and in his mind, he began to seek an amelioration to this condition. It was there the germ of political Zionism was born.

Zionism is the movement concerned with a return of the Jewish people to Zion, or Palestine. In this activity, as explained by Rabbi Gilbert Klaperman, Palestine is analogous to the United States, Jerusalem to Washington, and Zion to Capitol Hill. Hope to return to Zion is as old as the first Jewish exile from Palestine. That hope, together with their cultural heritage and religion, has kept the Jews alive through the ages.

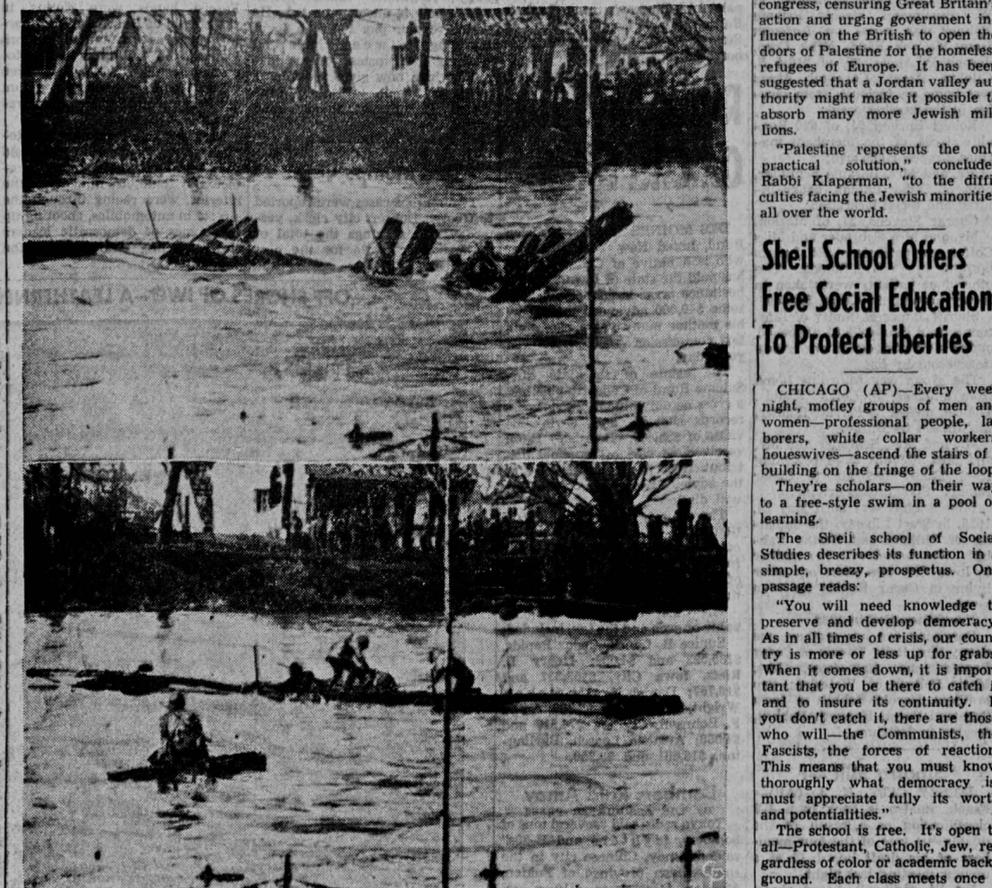

Herzl's brilliant mind employed all his ingenuity toward the materialization of his dream. He wrote a book which he called "Judenstaat," in which he outlined practical plans for the establishment of a Jewish homeland. Most of his life was spent touring Europe, meeting crowned heads, the sultan of Turkey, and the Pope in Rome, attempting to make them sympathetic to the cause.

"Almost four million Jews have been massacred in Europe," Rabbi Klaperman remarked grimly. This number is larger than any single allied loss on the battlefield. "When the necessity arose for a Jewish haven, the people were faced by this brutal, illegal law! Britain holds a mandate over Palestine, co-signed by the United States, which expressly instructs Great Britain to 'play big brother' and help develop Palestine as a Jewish homeland.

A storm of protest has arisen in the United States, not only among the Jews, but among the leading Christian laity and clergymen. Several times resolutions and bills have been introduced to congress, censuring Great Britain's action and urging government influence on the British to open the doors of Palestine to the homeless refugees of Europe. It has been suggested that a Jordan valley authority might make it possible to absorb many more Jewish millions.

"Palestine represents the only practical solution," concluded Rabbi Klaperman, "to the difficulties facing the Jewish minorities all over the world."

THEY CROSSED THE ROER—THE RHINE'S DEAD AHEAD

CROSSING OF THE ROER RIVER in the early dawn by American forces in their spectacular drive toward the Rhine was not all smooth sailing for the Yanks. In the top photo, the weight of one extra man completely collapses the pontoon bridge, while freed of the weight, the bridge springs back into position (lower photo). One soldier with rifle can be seen pulling an injured man back on the bridge as another Yank on a single pontoon floats helplessly downstream. Note the motorboat in the background which is rushing to the rescue.

Seahawks Down Gophers 50 to 30 in Season's Final

Cadets Come From Behind

Samuel, Pugsley Lead Navy Scoring Attack With 14 Points Apiece

By BOB BROOKS Daily Iowan Sports Writer With Don Samuel and Charles Pugsley leading the way, the Iowa Seahawk basketball team closed its season by trouncing Minnesota 50-30 in a rough ball game in the Iowa fieldhouse last evening.

Hermsen of Minnesota opened the evening's scoring by sinking one of his famous pivot shots, but two free throws by Samuel and a field goal by Pugsley put the Seahawks into a lead which they never relinquished.

Scoring Divided Scoring for the navy was divided evenly between Samuel and Pugsley, each with 14 markers. The Seahawks played a fast game in the first half and lead 21-12 at the intermission.

As the second period opened, the Gophers started to narrow the margin between the two teams. Muske and Tomczyk counted a field goal and free throw respectively to make the score read 21-

Clarence Hermsen was the scoring leader of the evening with 22 points, as most of his buckets came from his famous pivot shot which kept Joe Holland busy all evening trying to guard and finally sent him out of the game with five fouls.

When the navy finally stopped Hermsen, the ball game was never in doubt, but even though he did not score, he was always a threat.

A Salute To --

The Hawks-Big Ten Champions

By ROY LUCE Daily Iowan Sports Writer

It's all history now—but it's history that will live forever in the hearts and minds of Iowa fans. The 1945 basketball season of the Iowa Hawkeyes. A glorious history that paints a beautiful picture of a handful of kids, and a partly bald coach, who starting from scratch, built one of the most powerful basketball clubs in the nation.

Fitting Salute

Who will ever forget the smooth floor play and sensational hook shots of Dick Ives; the rebound work of towering Clay Wilkinson, the great defensive play of Jack Spencer and Herb Wilkinson; the all-around play of Ned Postels; and the brilliant spark-plug work of little Murray Wier? Or for that matter, who will ever forget lovable Pops Harrison? They'll all live on in Iowa history as symbols of true sportsmanship and the will to win against unsurmountable odds. A fitting salute to a great team—a team of champions.

Way back in Dec. 1944, Dec. 9, to be exact, a handful of Iowa basketball hopefuls were shocked when five men, wearing the colors of the Old Gold, roared to a 101 to 23 victory over Western Illinois Teachers. New hopes were instilled in the minds of the ever hopeful Iowa fanatic. Could it be possible that the Hawkeyes had at last reached the pinnacle of basketball success? Fans were doubtful, but nevertheless impressed by the 101 points the Old Golders scored, which, by the way, were just two points shy of the Iowa scoring record. The old record was 103 points against Chicago set the year before.

Iowa Fans Doubtful

Just two nights later, the Hawkeyes humiliated South Dakota State on the Iowa floor, 87 to 37, as Iowa fans began to cast more than a sideways glance at the coveted Big Ten title. Already big-time sportswriters were booming Iowa, along with Ohio State, as the team to watch in the Western conference. Still, the Iowa fans were doubtful. They remembered only too well, last season's dismal ending. The Hawks had a chance at their first undisputed title in the history of the school, but an upset by Northwestern in their last game knocked the Hawks out of a possible championship tie into a second place tie with Wisconsin.

Then came the first real test of the Hawkeyes—a road trip to Nebraska to play the ever-dangerous Cornhuskers. The Hawks continued their point-a-minute barrage by downing the Nebraska five, 61 to 45.

The University of Denver was next on the list of the Hawkeye victims as they fell by the roadside, 60 to 41. Optimistic Iowa fans were still dubious, however, and pointed to the next contest with the powerful Irish of Notre Dame as a barrier that the Hawks couldn't hope to surmount.

But the Hawks snowed under any feeling of defeatism that might have been in the air by smashing the Irish, 63 to 46. Notre Dame had been ranked as one of the most powerful teams in the nation, prior to that contest, but immediately their stock took a drop, and sports fans throughout the nation began to take notice of the up-and-coming Hawkeyes.

The Old Gold squad wound up their pre-conference schedule by overwhelming a small, inexperienced Michigan State quintet, 66 to 29. That was Dec. 30, 1944. Just seven days later, they opened their conference schedule with a not too impressive, 41 to 34 victory over the Minnesota Gophers on the Hawkeyes' home court. The Iowa basketball clientel shook their heads and rumors floated around the campus that the Hawks weren't the team that they were cracked up to be.

Hawks Retaliated

The Hawkeyes retaliated with a smashing and brilliant, 61 to 34 victory over the Purdue Boiler-makers the following weekend. The "I told you so boys" began to nod their heads in approval as a national poll ranked the Hawks the second best team in the nation, just a few points shy of the top team.

Then came the Hawks first conference road trip of the season—a trip that almost proved disastrous to Hawkeye title hopes. The Iowa quintet went to Michigan and squeaked out a last minute 29 to 27 victory, mainly on the efforts of the lad with the red hair, Murray Wier, who hit for 11 points, six of them in the last three minutes.

Michigan, playing a stalling game, almost upset Iowa until "Lil Dynamite" entered the contest. The Hawks, trailing by nine points at the end of the first half, were sparked into activity by the scoring antics of the five foot, eight-inch Muscatine forward. Once again, Iowa fans shook their heads in dismay and looked with dread on the remainder of the tough conference schedule.

Just three days later, the Hawkeyes entertained the Hoosiers of Indiana at Iowa City and soundly spanked them 50 to 51. The lads from the Hoosier state proved to be tough customers for the Hawks, but a sustained last half drive by the Hawkeyes insured the victory. Clay Wilkinson had a big night by hitting for 20 points. Ned Postels also proved a big cog in the victory by coming through with 13.

Stumbling Block

The Hawkeyes met a stumbling block in Illinois the following weekend, falling by the roadside in the last minute, 43 to 42. Their winning streak of 10 games broken, it appeared that the Hawks could not hope for more than a share of the conference crown. Illinois and Ohio State held the key to Iowa's chances. As it turned out, the Illini beat the Buckeyes, and the Buckeyes returned the compliment by whipping the Illini, leaving the Hawkeyes at the top of the conference heap. Still, the road ahead for the Hawks was a rough one as they had to face five Big Ten conference foes—all of them tough. Standing out on the list of teams yet to be faced were the Illini—the only team that had licked the Hawkeyes. The future didn't appear too bright, especially with the Wolverines of Michigan coming to Iowa City the following weekend.

Big Mistake

The Hawkeyes proved it was all a big mistake at Michigan by soundly trouncing the Wolverines, 50 to 37 on the Iowa court, and once again the sports fans started talking in terms of championships and Madison Square Garden. But the first real road test of the Hawks was still in the offing as they had to face Indiana Saturday and Purdue on the following Monday nights. It was the first double road trip for the Hawks in several years, and many fans were still dubious about the outcome of the double poison the Hawks faced on the weekend.

Vengeance

Everybody considered Iowa due for an upset, and those in the know said that Wisconsin would do it. They almost did too, staging a last half rally that came within one point of the fading Hawkeyes, 54 to 53. The Hawks vowed vengeance, and vengeance they got in the 68 to 38 thumping they landed the Badgers on their home floor a week later.

Things appeared brighter now. Only the Minnesota Gophers remained in the Old Golders' way for a share of the crown. And on Feb. 26, the Gophers fell to a fierce Hawkeye onslaught, 55 to 48 in the Minnesota fieldhouse. It took the Hawkeyes a few minutes themselves, to realize that they had won a share of the coveted Big Ten crown. Amid a throng of well wishers, the Harrison men crowded about their coach. Victory was theirs, and victory was sweet. For the first time in 19 years an Iowa team was to figure in the championship of the Big Ten.

Hawkeyes Knew

The Hawkeyes knew and most of the record crowd of 14,400 who packed the fieldhouse last Saturday knew that the Illini were in for a beating. Dave Danner's remark: "Iowa will sweep Illinois right out of the fieldhouse," seemed to be the key of the whole Iowa attack. True, the Hawkeyes were in trouble several times last Saturday, but always the fighting spirit that pulled them through 10 previous conference games, took root in the form of more baskets. The Hawkeyes had to fight off a last half Illini surge to win, but the newly crowned champions did it in great style.

Maybe So

By BOB KRAUSE Daily Iowan Sports Editor

IF YOU HAPPEN to be an Iowa sports fan we would introduce you to a sport which is played by vigorous young men here in the spring months. It is called baseball. You'd better start getting interested in that game because, as of last night, Hawkeye basketball came to end for this year.

No, there will be no Madison Square Garden for Coach Pops Harrison's champions. There will be no accompanying glory, and there will be no possible NCAA or national championship. At a meeting last night the team members themselves decided that they would not accept any invitation to a tourney.

Fine Trip

Earlier in the season we thought we would be pretty unhappy if Iowa did not go to the Garden. We looked forward to the possible pleasure of the trip—disregarding the actual coming and going—and we thought about the thrill of covering and seeing a tournament in which we would be more or less interested. We have seen these affairs before but only watched as a casual spectator.

At present, however, we are just as glad that the Hawkeyes didn't vote to accept a bid. From all we can gather it wasn't very difficult for the team to make up its mind as it did. There were, of course, the outward reasons, which are well known, but there were others, too.

Almost Impossible

It's no secret that many of the players are behind in their studies, and that Ned Postels and Herb Wilkinson, being engineering and dentistry students, respectively, could hardly have made the necessary arrangements.

But there is a good deal more to it than that. We haven't the slightest doubt but what most of the men on the Iowa team don't give a hoot right now if they never see another basketball game. The weekly pressure which has been tightening since late last December has taken a definite toll. Even if we had been partially blind while wandering through the dressing room last Saturday night we couldn't have missed seeing that Harrison's men were completely exhausted. Besides that looked a good deal thinner than when the season started. Basketball is not easy on the health.

Not So Obvious

And there is one more not so obvious factor to be added. Don't ask us how the coaches of the teams who will be in the tournaments are going to keep their clubs at the necessary emotional pitch in order to win against big time competition. We don't think Harrison would want to try to bring the players to the mental state they achieved last Saturday. The strain is too great. Pops and his squad need a rest.

Haegg To Run Mile Again This Weekend

NEW YORK (AP)—Gunder Haegg, Swedish ace who finished last in a five-man race last Saturday, said Monday he would run the mile again this weekend and that he hoped he could cut at least 10 seconds of his 4:31 board floor debut.

All History Now

Yes—it's all history now—but it's history that will live forever in the minds of all loyal Iowa fans. Never to be forgotten in the annals of Hawkeye basketball history are the names: Dick Ives, Clay Wilkinson, Jack Spencer, Herb Wilkinson, Ned Postels, and Murray Wier.

A fitting climax for a fighting team—champions of the Big Ten conference for 1945.

St. Pat's Star Player

By BETTYE NEAL Daily Iowan Sports Writer

Genial Gene Herdliska, the Shamrock's versatile forward with the uncanny shooting eye, wound up his career in basketball for St. Patrick's high last week by turning in another of those spectacular scoring performances which have become as natural to him as his top rate floor play.

When the Irish finished their sectional tournament play Saturday night, Gene had racked up 46 points, besides setting an individual and tournament scoring record. In one game, he hit the hoops for 28 points, an all-time high, but as we said before, such performances are nothing new to the six foot forecourt mainstay.

Offensive Spark

Although Gene has had only two seasons' experience as a regular on the Shamrock squad, he has earned the reputation of offensive spark for the team. More than once his hook shot has pulled the Irish to victory.

It would naturally follow that he is one of the team's top scorers. With 219 points to his credit all season, Gene is the Shamrock's second high point maker. He is topped only by Red Gatens, with 237, and followed by Doc Connell with 155.

Gene came to the Irish team in 1942, showing such promise that he won a regular berth next season. Last year he earned his letter as a utility player at forward and guard, doing a "very creditable job," according to his coach, Cliff Kritt.

Versatile Player

Perhaps the most versatile player on the South Side team, Gene has come into his own this year at all three positions. He averaged 13 points a game for the first 10 games this season from the pivot position. Later he was switched to guard where, more than a few times he utilized his height to break up enemy passing attacks, besides turning in stellar performances under the basket.

Undoubtedly Gene found his niche at the forward spot to which

E. G. (Dad) Schroeder, director of athletics, announced last night that Iowa's Big Ten champion Hawkeyes had voted not to attend the NCAA tournament to be held in Madison Square Garden.

Schroeder said that a bid to the tournament would have been tendered the Hawks if they had decided to attend, and emphasized that the decision had been made solely by the team and that no pressure had been put on them by the athletic board to vote the way they did.

The fact that Herb Wilkinson, star guard, and co-captain Ned Postels would be unable to make the trip, prompted the squad members to vote not to attend. As the team as a whole put it, "If we can't attend as whole team, we don't want to attend at all," seemed to be the consensus of opinion among the champion Hawkeyes.

Wilkinson is enrolled in dentistry school and Postels in engineering and the heavy schedules that both schools demand force them to not be away from the campus for a long period of time, such as a trip to New York would demand.

City Hi Ready For District

To Meet Muscatine In Tournament Opener Tomorrow Night

Iowa City's Little Hawk cagers, who worked themselves up step by step into the Mississippi Valley conference title and then scalped their next two opponents after the championship was won, will have their toughest assignment of the season tomorrow night when they journey to Muscatine to play the Muskies in the first lap of the district tournament.

Muscatine, which has packed plenty of power all season is now acknowledged to be the No. 1 team in the state, a fact which makes the Little Hawks' chances more than a little uncertain.

Hot shot for the Muskies is a forward named Mason, while Haveman, a guard, is also a strong scoring threat to the Little Hawks, who will need this victory to stay in the tournament.

When it comes to scoring City high can be looked at as one of the highest scoring Iowa City outfits for quite some time. Saturday night's game with Oskaloosa at the fieldhouse before the Iowa-Illinois contest saw the Hawklets hit a scoring rampage which gave them 64 points in 32 minutes of playing time, or two points per minute.

Any high school team that can score two points a minute is up there with the best of them you may be sure, and while Oskaloosa certainly didn't put up the opposition that the Muscatine outfit will have to offer tomorrow night, the game was nevertheless a pretty fair estimate of the Little Hawk strength.

Although Jimmy Van Deusen had a bad night at Roosevelt last Friday, because he was trying so hard to pass Kremer in the conference race, Bob Freeman and Van Deusen were two high scoring Hawklets who may be counted upon for over 10 points per game most any time, although the Muscatine strength may slow them up considerably.

Van der Zee to Leave Public Utilities Alone

Teeters Lauds Plans For Airport in Citing Big City Improvements

By JOE MATHER Daily Iowan Staff Writer Those political observers in Iowa City who have been anticipating a political explosion over the municipal ownership of utilities in the present campaign would have been disappointed if they could have attended a meeting sponsored by the League of Women Voters in the Congregational church last night.

Each candidate of both parties was allowed a few moments to express his opinions on civic problems. Mayor Wilber J. Teeters, Republican, cited a few of the important civic improvements which have been initiated during his administration and a brief outline of what should be done in the future.

Prof. Jacob Van der Zee, Democratic candidate for mayor and one of the proponents of municipal utility ownership in the bitter political fight of a decade ago, put the issue squarely on the table. "I have been called a 'corporation biter,'" he said, "and my friends have asked me what I intend to do now. Well, I had my fling at that and I failed. I am not gunning for any public utility corporation."

"Nor do I have any regrets for anything that I did during the six years I was on the city council," he declared. "The municipal ownership question is all settled, and don't expect any fireworks from me."

He stressed the fact that Iowa Citizens have saved nearly half a million dollars because of the reduction of rates following the political fight of eight or nine years ago.

However, he also stressed that it is the duty of the city council to regulate the rates charged by private utility concerns operating in the city. The council must not dodge that obligation.

"The Iowa City airport will be one of the best in the state and one of the most important things in the city and it will all be municipally owned," asserted Mayor Teeters in his allotted few minutes.

He explained that over $300,000 for the completion of improvements and expanding of the airport was available now and as soon as material and men could be obtained, the work would begin.

"The money needed for building a municipal swimming pool is in the bank and is costing taxpayers less than one-eighth of one percent," the mayor said.

"When Chief Ollie White returns from the FBI's National Police academy in Washington, D. C., and teaches the other members of the force what he has learned, as he is under bond to do, Iowa City will have one of the best police departments in the state," Mayor Teeters declared.

Professor Van der Zee expressed the hope that in the future Iowa City politics might be divorced from the national party lines. "The national parties have no business in municipal elections," he asserted.

Only four cities in the state still retain the national party lines in municipal politics.

Chinese Engineers Laud Flood Control Improvements

Chinese Engineers Laud Flood Control Improvements

"Seeing what you have done in flood control, improving river navigation and irrigation has given us a great deal of encouragement," declared Chang Han-Ying, chairman of the group of eight eminent Chinese engineers who arrived in Iowa City yesterday to attend a five-day engineering conference which begins today.

Mr. Chang, who is a commissioner in the National Conservancy commission of the Chinese government and also commissioner in charge of hydraulic engineering of the Central Planning board, and his party have nearly completed a tour of important hydraulic and hydroelectric projects in the United States.

The Chinese engineers arrived in this country about the middle of October to begin the tour which is under the general auspices of the UNRRA. After leaving here they will spend two weeks surveying soil conservation projects and then will return to China.

Much of the work in hydraulics and hydroelectric power that was being done in China before the war had to be discontinued, Mr. Chang said.

However, 2,000 miles of the upper Yangtze river system have been made navigable for small boats and the area of land under irrigation has been increased by 600,000 acres during the war.

One of the most important developments that China is planning to continue after the war is to harness her tremendous potential water power. Mr. Chang explained that the Yangtze river is smaller than the Mississippi but that it is much swifter and more water flows in that than in the Mississippi.

The electrical power from these proposed developments will be used for industrial purposes, operating pumps in irrigation projects, municipal uses and in homes.

"This is very important because it will help to raise the standard of living," Mr. Chang said.

Other proposed developments are to attempt to irrigate the vast desert regions in the northwest part of China and to improve flood control works on the Yellow river to prevent its disastrous floods in the future.

All hydraulic and hydroelectric projects in China are under the authority of the National Conservancy commission, an organ of the central government corresponding roughly to our department of the interior. Under the national commission are commissions for each area of development, such as the Yangtze river commission, the Yellow river commission and the Hwai river commission.

These commissions have authority over all the phases of engineering: studying, surveying, planning and actual construction.

After arriving in this country the high-ranking Chinese engineers spent one month in studying the various projects in the Tennessee Valley authority. Then they were guided by United States army engineers on tours of the Ohio, Missouri, Arkansas and upper and lower Mississippi rivers.

This tour of the entire Mississippi basin lasted 50 days, 20 days in the office and 30 days in the field. Then the Bureau of Reclamation guided them through the west, visiting Colorado, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and points of hydraulic interest in other states.

This tour lasted 45 days and they saw such projects as Grand Coulee, Shasta and Boulder dams and the Imperial valley of California.

The other members of Mr. Chang's party are Chang Jen, chief engineer of the Yangtze river commission; Hsu Shih-tu, senior technician of the National Conservancy commission; Lin Ping-yi, acting chief engineer of the Hwai river commission; Tsai Chen, senior technician, National Conservancy commission; Liu Chung-juai, chief engineer of Shensi Provincial Conservancy bureau, Sian; Tsai Pan-lin, senior technician and chief of irrigation division, National Conservancy commission, and Wu Yiu-sing, senior technician in charge of river regulation and flood control of the National Conservancy commission.

'Total Peace' Culbertson Draws Plans From Varied Life

Bridge expert, author, editor, linguist, world traveler, philosopher and world strategist are combined in the life of Ely Culbertson, who will speak at the Iowa Union next Monday at 8 o'clock on "The Fight For Total Peace!"

In describing his plan for world peace, Culbertson draws from a rich international background of understanding. His father was a Pennsylvania mining engineer who married the daughter of a Cossack general, and Culbertson was born in Roumania where his father was working for a British oil company. Skill in construction, both in his bridge plans and later plans for a world peace, came from his engineer father; from his mother came daring in conception.

His early life was spent in the Russia of the czars when unsuccessful revolutions were rampant and young Culbertson saw the inside of many a Russian jail before he acquired a Yale education. Since that time he has studied at six universities including Geneva university and Sorbonne and has traveled observantly the world over.

It wasn't until 1916 that Culbertson began as a writer on literature and sociology, but before that time he spent years studying mass psychology and international relations. Widely read in philosophy, history, and economics, Ely Culbertson also stood in breadlines, picked fruit, planted corn, panhandled and gambled scientifically for a living.

In mapping out his career, Culbertson has been president of the Bridge World, Inc. since December, 1929, and of the Kem Playing Card company since 1937. Not only does he edit two magazines, The Bridge World magazine in New York and the International Section Le Reveu du Bridge in Paris, but he is also the founder and president of the World Federation, Inc. Also numbered among his varied experiences are his contributions to magazines on international politics and mass psychology. He also is a scenario writer.

Here is a man who has for years lined up opposite hands—east, west, north and south, and who now has turned to lining up opposing nations at the coming peace table by devising strategy to keep their relations peaceful if not friendly. From his widely diversified background Ely Culbertson will tell of "The Fight For Total Peace."

Concert to Include Compositions of Bizet, Franck, Saint-Saens

The fifth concert of the university symphony orchestra during the 1944-45 season will be given tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the main lounge in Iowa Union. Prof. Philip Greeley Clapp, head of the music department, will conduct. The concert program includes compositions by three well-known composers, Bizet, Franck and Saint-Saens. Bizet is best known for his opera "Carmen." The popularity of this opera has distracted attention of conductors from his other works. In recent years there has been a rediscovery of a number of orchestral compositions and the last two or three years this rediscovery has assumed proportions of a Bizet revival.

The overture "Patrie" which the orchestra will play, has within the past two seasons been presented by most of the leading symphony orchestras and recently was broadcast by the NBC orchestra from New York.

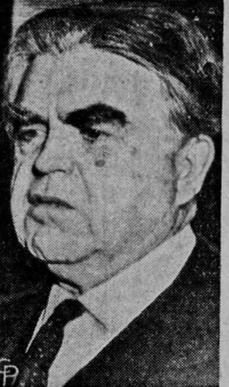

Originally it was written as an introduction to a stage play of the same name by Sardou and used in the first production in Paris in 1873. It is martial and patriotic in character.

The "Symphony in D minor," another number on the program, is a familiar favorite to music lovers everywhere. Franck wrote it in 1888 at a time when French composers were turning from operatic toward symphonic music. Franck not only was a great composer in his own right, but as a teacher of whole generation of distinguished composers, has often been called "the founder of the modern French school of composition."

"Suite Algerienne," the last number of the program, is a light and charming souvenir of one of Saint-Saens many trips to Algiers, a region where the orient was brought into close contact with the occidant. The suite consists of four short tone pictures.

Tickets for this concert are available in room 110, music building, or at the main desk in Iowa Union.

City High School Models Show Spring Fashions

BY CHARLOTTE SLIFE Daily Iowan Staff Writer The very newest in spring suits, frocks, formals and sportswear was shown last night at the junior class style show at City high school. Yetter's department store furnished all garments shown.

Show New Colors Definitely good colors this spring as indicated in the suits and dresses are Chinese fuchsia, navy blue, chartreuse, castilian red and turquoise blue. Clever accents are the dog collar veils which are anchored by dainty ribboned and jeweled dog collars. Plastic is making its appearance in fashions in the patent and mesh bags made of that very adaptable material. Accenting dresses are the plastic buttons, pins and buckles, and even the latest footwear is designed out of plastic.

Water Resources Report Published In Geology Survey

As a part of the present state-wide cooperative investigation of water resources, a report containing day-by-day records of stage and discharge of Iowa streams, 1940-42, has just been published by the Iowa Geological survey.

The report was prepared under the direction of L. C. Crawford, district engineer of the water resources branch of the United States Geological survey in Iowa. Preparation of the data for publication was carried on in conjunction with the continuous and systematic fact-finding program in cooperation with several state departments including the Iowa Geological survey, Iowa Institute of Hydraulic research, Iowa State Conservation commission and certain Iowa cities and also the corps of engineers, United States army.

Basic data regarding the flow of rivers, streams and lake stages are presented in a convenient form for public and private use and in order that factual information concerning the surface water resources of Iowa will be readily available for postwar activities as well as for current and continuing consideration of water-supply and flood-control problems.

The report has been issued as Water-Supply Bulletin number two of the Iowa Geological survey, by A. C. Trowbridge, director and state geologist, and is being released through cooperating agencies. It contains 222 pages of tabular material with pertinent discussion, several maps and illustrations.
