Remagen Bridge Captured Intact

Investigation Shows German Officer In Charge Drunk

By Howard Cowan
WITH THE U. S. FIRST ARMY EAST OF THE RHINE (AP) — The German officer assigned to blow up the Remagen bridge was drunk when American forces captured it, an American sergeant declared yesterday in contributing a new chapter on the Rhine crossing.

Staff Sgt. Joseph de Lizio, Bronx, N. Y., who captured the German officer, said he was soused—but plenty.

This was what a subsequent investigation disclosed.

The German, a lieutenant, had been told some days in advance that he would have to destroy the 1,200-foot steel bridge. He had a flair for the dramatic, and when the United States Ninth armored division drew near he spread the word throughout Erpel, the town at the east end of the bridge, that "the bridge goes at 4 o'clock this afternoon."

Dynamite was planted at strategic spots on the structure and the last folks in Remagen who wanted to leave were given a chance to cross to the east bank.

German soldiers and civilians from miles around were sitting in "grandstand seats" at every suitable vantage point on the east bank, waiting for the spectacular sight of American troops pulling up at the Rhine and getting the bridge blown up right in their faces.

A few minutes before 4 o'clock the German officer signaled the plunger down. Two small puffs of dust and smoke accompanied by explosions echoed through the hills, but the bridge almost unbelievably remained on its piers.

(A dispatch for Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead yesterday said engineers of the First Army attributed the failure to a faulty fuse. It may have been that because of the German lieutenant's "elaboration, the fuse was not properly inspected.)

Everyone on the east bank froze in paralyzed consternation. Then pandemonium broke loose. Few of the German soldiers present were even armed, so sure were they that the Americans would not be able to cross the river.

Anti-aircraft gunners on a high cliff at the east end of the bridge raced to their guns and tried to level them on the bridge. At the same time American troops raced across.

Within a few minutes more than 300 Germans had surrendered, including the unfortunate officer assigned to blow the bridge.

Medals—But No Extra Pay for Medics—

By Lewis Hawkins
WESTERN FRONT (AP)—The war department hasn't silenced a long standing army complaint by its decision to grant a valor badge to front line medics while withholding the $10 monthly pay bonus which goes to enlisted men who wear the combat infantryman's badge.

Doughboys and medics of the 36th division seem agreed that the badge is a step in the right direction but were unimpressed by Secretary of War Stimson's reasoning—as reported in the Stars and Stripes—that granting extra pay for duty under fire would compromise the medic's status as non-combatants under the Geneva convention.

Pfc. Albert Dallegro, a rifleman from Newark, N. J., and his buddy Pvt. Adam Aldi, Fonda, N. Y., couldn't even see any room for argument. Dallegro declared: "They do as much as me and they haven't even got a rifle." Aldi asserted: "Of course the medics should get it. They certainly do as much as we do."

The nearest thing to enthusiasm encountered among medics themselves was Pfc. James Parker, of Paris, Tex., a litter bearer since the African campaign and holder of a Bronze star for bravery. He said, "I don't care too much about not getting the extra pay, although I think we should get it. At least the badge will make clear the difference between who carries a litter and who carries a bed pan."

Pfc. Joe Ershun, veteran litter bearer, of (579 61st street) Brooklyn, N. Y., also welcomed the badge, saying, "I'm glad to see the front line medic get a badge to mark him as a combat soldier, but I don't see why they didn't give us a pay boost like the infantry gets. I can't see how it endangers our noncombatant status. After all, paratroop medics, get jump pay, so why shouldn't we get hazard pay?"

Medical officers—who wouldn't share in the pay bonus even on front line duty—reacted much as did the men. Division Surgeon Lieut. Col. Clarence Brewster of Ft. Worth, Tex., said "The valor badge is a step forward, but it doesn't go far enough. They should get extra compensation."

Lieut. Col. Joe Pate of Paducah, Tex., a regimental surgeon, said, "It would seem that at the time the infantry-men got their badge, the war department didn't even know there were medics up there. Now they have given them the badge minus the extra pay. It sounds like appeasement to me."

Reflecting a widely held opinion that the war department is bogging unnecessarily at the term "combat pay" and that an increase could be called something else. Lieut. Alfred Perez, assistant battalion surgeon, from San Antonio, Tex., said, "Infermarians are being paid for the danger and hardships they go through, not because they carry guns. The medics go through the same dangers. The war department's reason for not granting extra pay doesn't make sense."

Tito Fighting Democratic War—

By RICHARD TOMPKINS
NEW YORK (AP)—Josip (Tito) Broz is not fighting for communism, but to re-establish a Yugoslavia whose people may select whatever type of government they want, says the American officer who set up the first allied supply line to the Partisans.

As a matter of fact, says Maj. Louis Huot in "Guns for Tito," a book published Thursday, the Partisans expressed much concern over being depicted as Communists.

Huot and his assistant, Lieut. Tim Faulkner, were running military supplies through the German blockade even before formal announcement that allied aid would be extended.

Under special assignment, they got through 1,000 tons of cargo in 20 days before the service was regularized and they were given other assignments. Just before he left, Huot says, Tito denied any intention of imposing a pre-fabricated government of any sort.

This was in October, 1943, a month before the free Yugoslav radio denied what it termed enemy statements that Tito's army "is purely Communist." It said: "All parties are represented in the army, with Communists in the minority."

But before that date, Huot and Faulkner had discovered the make-up of the Partisan forces. Huot's story is principally devoted to supply-running adventures, but references occur throughout to the political make-up of the Partisans.

Once an English naval officer, watching the crew of a small Partisan blockade runner, inquired who they were.

"Tito's men," answered Faulkner.

"But who are they and what are they doing here? Is it true that they are all Communists?"

"About nine out of 10 of the people on these ships are good Catholics," replied Faulkner. "What is a Communist?"

In the seclusion of Tito's headquarters at Acjce, Huot talked for hours with the Partisan leader and his staff.

The conversation veered to plans for the future of Yugoslavia. Huot sums it up:

"The fusion of all the elements of the Yugoslav community into a homogeneous democracy was their avowed goal."

Tito said:

"I wish the facts were known to your countrymen and the British. They are obviously without accurate knowledge about us—or they could not put out programs like those we hear from the United States and England over the BBC.

"We are fighting for democracy, and there is no other nation that has paid so high a price to defeat fascism and live in peace under laws of its own making.

"Who knows exactly what kind of government there will be in our country 10 years from now? All we claim is that ours will be what the united people of the south Slav countries want."

Wounded Soldier Stops Tank—

By Wes Gallagher
WITH THE 83RD INFANTRY DIVISION IN GERMANY, March 14—(Delayed)—(AP)—If you had your right leg blown off and the other leg ripped to shreds after a direct hit with a tank shell—

If you had been blown away from your machinegun and struck in the head with a shell fragment and everyone around you had been killed or wounded—

If you saw a 40-ton German tank 10 yards away from where you were lying and 20 German infantrymen moving up behind it—

If all these things happened, what would you do?

This is what Sgt. Ralph G. Neppel, 21, of route 2, Glidden, Iowa, a machinegun detachment leader in the 83rd division, did:

He dug his elbows into the street and painfully pulled himself 10 yards to his machinegun. Somehow he pulled himself into firing position with blood spurting from his wounds and he started firing at the infantrymen while the German tank crunched to a halt alongside his position.

Anyone leaning out of the tank could have dropped a hand grenade on his, but no one did.

Neppel killed eight Germans and drove the rest off before he slumped over his gun. The tank crew, frightened by the loss of protecting infantry, retreated without firing another shot.

The action occurred last Dec. 14 when Neppel's battalion of the 329th infantry was assigned to clear the village of Birgel. There was little difficulty accomplishing the task but the roads were so heavily mined that tank destroyers and anti-tank guns could not be moved up immediately. Neppel led one of several machinegun squads sent out to defend two main streets from a counterattack. He set up his gun at the corner of a building.

The German tank attacked at once. It made a direct hit on the position and a shell fragment severed Neppel's right leg below the knee. Additional fragments broke the other leg and wounded him in the head. All his companions were casualties.

When the tank retreated, medical men carried the still conscious sergeant into a nearby house. They gave him morphine and he lay for eight hours before being evacuated.

ARMADA OF SUPERFORTS WINGS ITS WAY TO JAPAN

FLYING IN THE STRATOSPHERE, B-29 Superfortresses based in the Marianas head for a target in Japan with only the clouds for scenery. Airforce officials say the bombardiers often must release their bombs over the target under just such atmospheric conditions as these, without ever seeing their objective. ## Opinion on and off the Campus—

When Were You Most Frightened?

Roger Fischer, A1 of Clutier: "I was most frightened once when I was just driving. I was looking all around, not paying much attention to my driving when all of a sudden I found myself in the ditch, and I was pretty scared."

Ed Hogan, J3 of Iowa City: "I walked out too far into a lake when I was nine years old, I couldn't swim, and I was afraid that I would drown."

Bob Green, C3 of Hampton: "One morning the chimney in the fireplace burned out. That was really a sensation."

Eileen Serschen, A1 of Cleveland, Ohio: "Once I woke up in the middle of the night and was sure someone was staring at me from the bedroom window. I was just frozen in my bed, I was so scared."

Isla Beth Hope, A2 of Chicago: "I was frightened while riding the sky-ride at the Chicago World's fair when I was about eight years old. Everytime we hit an air pocket my heart sank."

Bernadine Mackorosky, A3 of Kewanee, Ill.: "The time I was most frightened was when my boss, a city attorney, took me down to the police court to copy down a man's testimony for him. I became so interested in the case that I completely forgot to take notes and thought sure I would be fired. However, he was very nice about it and I kept my job."

Skip Hoyland, A1 of Oskaloosa: "The thing that really frightened me was the announcement of D-day and the congregation of people at the churches."

Twyla Cettert, A3 of Davenport: "I was most frightened once as a child when someone carried me across a track out of the way of a train."

Sophie Tucker Writes Book

By Margie Robinson
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Sophie Tucker, still going strong after laying 'em in the aisles for more than a quarter of a century, is convinced vaudeville is dead.

"There's nothing now—no show business," the grand old trouser said sadly in an interview yesterday. "Radio took it—pictures took it. There's no glamour to that."

But show business—as Sophie knew it—has been immortalized. Her first book, "Some of These Days," comes off the press today. And Sophie, who was fondling an advance copy, is proud as punch.

"I was simply thrilled when I saw it . . . just like it was a toy," she boomed. "It was late at night, but I couldn't put the book down. 'I'll read it some more,' I thought, 'and see if it's me.'"

"Oh yes . . . sure, sure. It really is." She puffed comfortably on a cigarette.

The book took six years to write. "I wrote until 7 or 8 in the morning," Sophie explained. "When I sat down I just remembered everything that happened."

She became misty-eyed. "I laughed and cried writing it, too," she confessed. "You know . . . Gestures tried to say what words couldn't get across.

Sophie, whose heart is as big as her smile, will give all proceeds of the book to charities—actors' guilds, the home for the aged her mother founded in Hartford, Conn., a playground in Jersey.

Sophie turned her life story over to Dorothy Giles, Saturday Evening Post writer, who put it into shape. Miss Giles, Sophie said, was with her three or four years, "getting the way I speak."

"I'm not a writer, dear," Sophie apologized with a warm smile. "I'll leave that to you clever gals."

She was asked what prompted her to become an author.

"Well, it was during a stormy session we had with the American Federation of Actors. I was president. Newspapers from all over the United States referred to me as an institution . . . so I just dropped my modesty and figured there must be something to it."

She hadn't given writing a thought before then, Sophie remembered. She lapsed into a glow of admiration for the press.

"Without the press we couldn't do a thing. I said it then and I say it now."

Sophie doesn't think any great songs have come out of World War II. "No, I don't use 'em. Don't think any of them are gripping," was her bass-voiced comment. She sings "mostly exclusive songs" now, although she sang semi-popular ditties during the last war.

"But I had to keep up with the times. Otherwise I'd have gone where all the old ones went," she said softly. She looked out of the window into the gray distance.

"Yes," she reminisced. ". . . all the old timers are gone."

Mrs. Roosevelt Says Others Should Help U. S. Feed Europe

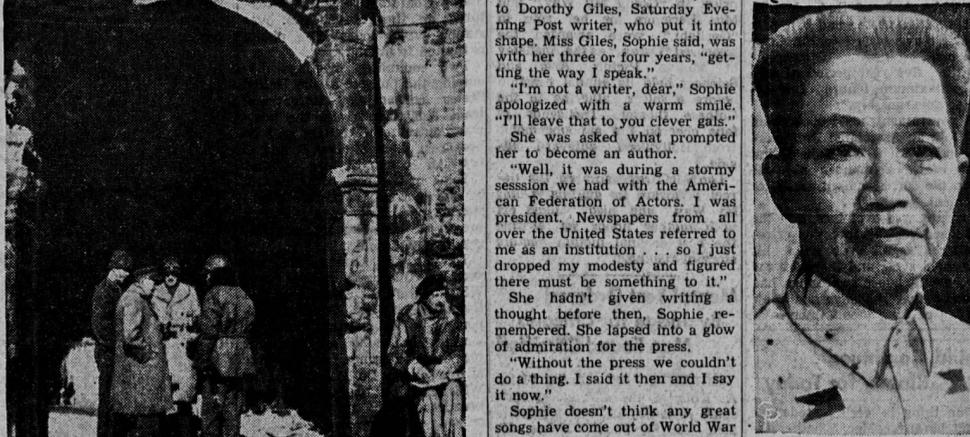

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt doesn't think the United States should feed Europe by itself.

Other nations have things to contribute, she told a news conference yesterday.

The president's wife had been asked whether she shared fears that the American economy would crack "if we feed Europe."

Her reply: "I do not see why we should feed Europe alone. Other countries can join with us."

In U. S. Hands

EMILIO AGUINALDO, aged Filipino revolutionary who led his countrymen in two wars, is now in American custody. Aguinaldo was a member of the Japanese-created council of state which was reported to have endorsed Puppet President Jose Laurel's proclamation of war against the U.S., and was a leader of guerrilla action in resistance after the American acquisition of the Philippines at the turn of century. # Seahawk Boxers to Face Badgers in Return Match

Irate Badgers Seek Revenge

Large Crowd Expected As Seahawks Appear In Last Home Clash

Two top boxing teams take to the ring tonight at the Iowa fieldhouse at 7:30 for the main ring attraction of the year when the Seahawks meet the Badgers of Wisconsin.

Two weeks ago the navy team edged out the favored Badgers by a score of 4 1/2 to 3 1/2. It was the first time in the history of the sport at the northern school that the boxing team had been defeated and the Badgers can be expected to attempt to take revenge for their setback.

Large Crowd
A large crowd is expected to attend the matches. The fights with Wisconsin last year gave the Badgers a 5-3 win over the cadet team. The second time the two met here in Iowa City, the events ended in a draw.

The two squads have almost identical records this year, the only difference being that Wisconsin had one more match which resulted in a draw. Both squads will be after the third victory of the season and both teams have only one defeat to mar their records.

Last Appearance
The match is the last home appearance of the Seahawks this year. They have one more match with the Minneapolis NAS on March 23. The Pre-Flighters defeated the air station here last week, 4-3.

The Seahawk coaches did some additional juggling of the lineup to make it more formidable for the key contest of the season. Kuhta, a leading contestant, who has been alternating between the 155-pound and 165-pound classifications, has been placed in the lighter category for tonight's battle. Earlier in the week, the Navy coaches had counted on him for the heavier division, but improvement of a newcomer to the squad caused the shift.

Opening Bout
In the opening bout of the 120-pound class, Robert Fuller will enter the ring against Jerome Pittman of the Wisconsin team. Pittman defeated Fuller in the earlier match.

James Woddy will be up against Akio Konoshima. The Wisconsin man downed the Seahawk representative, Wayne Gillette, at the Madison contest.

Even Record
Lloyd Swetman will enter the ring for the Badgers with the purpose of evening up the record with Don McLaughlin, who scored a T.K.O. over the Wisconsin boxer two weeks ago.

Another return bout will be the Robert Wilson-Harold Sullivan 145-pound affair. In an interview last week, Wilson, the most talented of the Pre-Flighters, termed Sullivan his most difficult opponent of the season.

Newcomer
Kuhta will meet Dave Dahl, a strong civilian newcomer, in the 155-pound class. Nedderon, the Wisconsin boxer in the last match battled with Kuhta to a draw.

L. P. Hickey, newcomer to the navy squad, will assume the 165-pound duties at his debut. He will meet Ted Chmura of the visiting squad.

Lightweights
In the light heavyweight division Blaine Heaton will face Bill Neary. Neary defeated Dick Bugler, another Pre-Flight alumni, two weeks ago in the 165-pound classification.

Carl Kulawinski has moved back to the heavyweight position for the Badgers after a temporary shift to the 175-pound division. Melvin Levy, who scored a first round T.K.O. over his former Wisconsin opponent, Louis Davis, will handle heavyweight duties for the navy.

Maybe So

By BOB KRAUSK
Daily Iowan Sports Editor
THE TIME OF THE YEAR is now at hand when would-be sports editors and writers must exercise to the fullest extent whatever wits they may have left. The former must strain themselves to fill out a page and the latter have to reach around a good deal to find anything to write about. Right now the world of sports is quieter than Benito Mussolini.

Tonight, however, the athletic drought will be broken for a time. And it couldn't happen in a more violent way. In the fieldhouse, starting at 7:30, the members of the Iowa Seahawk and Wisconsin boxing teams will fill the air, and, maybe each other's noses, with an array of fists.

Much Promise
Whether or not you are a Phight Phan we urge you to attend. First, because the evening shows much promise of being an entertaining one. The Cadets, at an earlier date, handed the Badgers their first defeat ever suffered in their home ring. Therefore, it would appear that that old cliché motive, revenge, might be in order.

Added to this the score of the first match, 4 1/2 to 3 1/2, is a good indicator of the way the tide of battle will probably go—nice and tight. We have been led to understand that the bouts were all close and interesting, and there is every reason to predict that a repeat performance is in order.

Good Reason
But another good reason for treating yourself to the fun is that this event will be the last for Iowa Citizens for quite some time. If you are hungry for sport now is the time to satisfy the yen. The way that baseball schedule looks there ought to be a lot of fishing done over these spring weekends. Yes, they still use river banks for that, too.

Oh, by the way men. Why not bring along the date? Who knows, you might be able to exercise your protective instinct on the lady when the blood begins to fall. Just a thought.

AN OLD FRIEND of ours by name of Frank Keane has come across with another of his beautiful and rib-tickling schemes for the world of basketball. It may be recalled that Mr. Keane, the coach, almost since the beginning of time, of the Rhode Island State college basketball team.

Rhode Island State is entered in the National Invitation court tournament which gets under way at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. The Rams must face Tennessee in the opening round. We grieve for Mr. Keane and his lads, although, win or lose, he boasts that he always eats his breakfast next morning.

FEW PLACES
At any rate, smoking is allowed in the Garden—one of the few sports arenas where this is permitted. Players of visiting teams have complained about this time and again, to no avail. Herb Wilkinson told us once that, when he went to New York with Utah last year, the tears streamed out of his eyes after the first ten minutes or so.

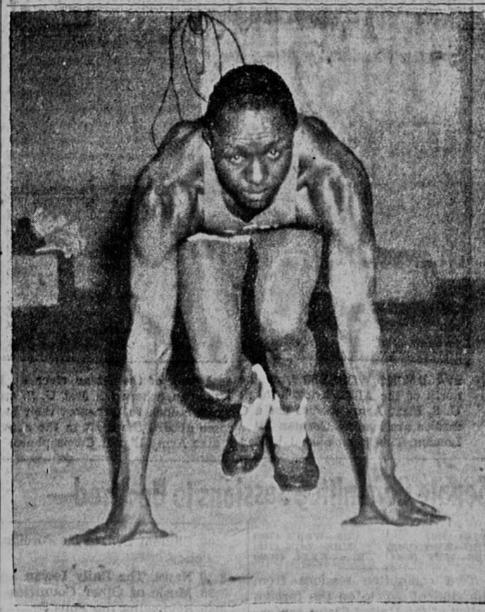

Well, it appears that Mr. Keane may have solved the problem for his lads. We understand that, during practice sessions all this week, Rhode Island has scrimmaged with smudge pots all along the sides of the court. These have been filled with old, stale and burning tobacco. At that rate the Rams could play in a smoke stack after a bit of "conditioning."

Just Another
We trust that you won't blame Mr. Keane for the cigarette shortage. This trick is just another of many for the man who has done more for New England basketball than even the ball. Long may he burn his smudge pots.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't wait! Ike Johnson—Iowa Track Star

'Ike' Johnson— Iowa Track Mainstay

Isaiah (Ike) Johnson, 20-year-old Negro freshman at the University of Iowa, has been one of the mainstays of Coach George Bresnahan's Hawkeye track squad all season, and this week was selected as one of the four men who will represent Iowa in a mile relay event at the Chicago Relays Saturday.

High School Record
Ike, who comes from Coffeyville, Kans., brought a formidable high school record with him when he enrolled at Iowa. Among his many other triumphs, he was the broad jump champion in the Kansas state high school track meet in 1944, his senior year.

In 1944, too, Ike placed second in the 200-yard low hurdle run, and before that, he had won his share of places in track competition. In his junior year he ran the quarter-mile leg championship. As a sophomore, running on the half mile relay team which took third place in the state meet, the Iowa flash ran a 220-yard distance.

Basketball Stay
A graduate of Field Kindley high school in Coffeyville, Ike also participated with his high school basketball team, playing guard and center, and winning three letters in that sport, as well as three in track.

Physical education major at Iowa, Ike stated that he came to the university upon the recommendation of his high school coach, who attended Iowa in years gone by.

A five-foot, 10 1/2 inch tall man, Ike weighs 162 pounds. He is classified 4-F in the draft because of a perforated ear drum, but that doesn't hinder him in his track work or in his studies.

Leading Scorer
One of the two high point winners on the Iowa track squad—Keith Gotthardt is the other—he has earned first places in the 60-yard dash, 70-yard low hurdles and

Confers Here With Officials

Visit Indicates Little Chance of Madigan Returning Next Fall

Clem Crowe, head basketball coach and football line coach at the University of Notre Dame, left Iowa City late yesterday afternoon after conferring with university officials for two days concerning the football coaching job at Iowa next fall.

E. G. (Dad) Schroeder, director of athletics, said last night: "I can't say anything at this time, except that Mr. Crowe is very definitely interested in the job. It naturally has to be discussed with university officials before any announcement can be made."

Madison Doubtful
The status of Coach "Slip" Madigan still remains as much in the dark as ever. No official announcement has been made as to whether Madigan will be back next fall or not. Crowe's visit here, however, hints very broadly that Madigan is not coming back.

Athletic Director Schroeder said that an announcement would probably be made in a few days concerning the situation and that until then nothing definite could be said concerning the problem.

Iowa City Fliers Discuss Problems

Appoint Committee To Advise Municipal Airport Commission

A group of 27 persons interested in private flying in Iowa City met in the Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric company assembly room last night to discuss the problems and prospects for private flying with Vern Bales, chairman of the municipal airport commission.

A committee of five persons headed by Dr. Stuart Cullen was appointed to represent the private fliers to the airport commission.

The major problems facing private fliers in Iowa City at this time as discussed are:

1. A contract with United Airlines made in 1930 leased the airport to the airline company for a period of 50 years. Nothing can be done at the local airport without United's permission.

2. The present manager of the airport, representing both United and the city, is also the only operator at the field. Some of the private fliers feel that this situation prevents other commercial operators from setting up business.

3. Under the existing system of control private fliers face a serious difficulty in obtaining hanger facilities for their planes.

Bales, speaking for the airport commission, explained that the contract with United and the conditions created by it are beyond the control of the city and the airport commission.

He admitted that this contract might be a hindrance now and in the immediate future but that he believed that if it had not been for that contract, there would be no Iowa City airport now.

United has spent a great deal of money to improve the municipal field and maintain it.

The city has no money. All the taxes that the city is allowed to levy for the airport are needed to keep up the interest and withdraw bonds issued by the city for other improvements and enlarging the area of the field.

A plan is being worked out by the commission whereby private fliers can rent land from the city, build their own private hangers and keep them for two years. At the end of that period the hangers will be turned over to the city and rented to the plane owner.

The other members of the committee to advise the airport commission are, in addition to Dr. Cullen, Ira Stover, Robert Jehle, John Piper and Dr. Everett Christensen.

Social Service Jobs Available for Twelve Graduating Seniors

Twelve graduating seniors—eight women and four men—are wanted for a special "Training Through Service Project," sponsored jointly by the Congregational Christian Service committee and the Cuyahoga (Ohio) County Relief bureau. The program, which gives the participant a chance to earn while he learns, begins July 1.

The women will be housed in the County Nursing Home in Cleveland, and will be employed there not less than 30 hours a week. They will receive full board and room and a minimum of $30 per month. The men will be housed in the Lodge in Cleveland and will receive similar remuneration.

The purpose of the project is to give its members practical experience in social service work and to acquaint them with the work of the health and welfare agencies of Cleveland. Such experience and training will qualify them for more responsible work with some relief agency, either in this country or abroad.

The project is open to members of this year's graduating class in any recognized college or university. Selection of the members for this training will be made solely on the basis of the individual's interest and ability. The unit is open to members of all races, creeds and colors. Application blanks may be obtained from the Rev. James C. Flint, Congregational Christian Service Committee, 289 Fourth avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

Economic, as Well as Political Cooperation Needed After War, Says Prof. Paul Olson

Explaining that the United States must cooperate with other nations after the war economically as well as politically, Prof. Paul R. Olson of the college of commerce spoke to members of the Rotary club at their weekly luncheon meeting yesterday at the Hotel Jefferson.

"We must not make the mistake again of restricting our imports," he declared. "If we decide to assist other nations in their reconstruction after the war by lending them money while at the same time we withdraw ourselves from world markets, we might just as well call the loans 'gifts,'" he asserted.

Nations Look to United States Pointing out that the other nations of the world are looking to the United States for guidance in formulating international policies, Professor Olson emphasized the powerful economic position of the United States.

"The center of world economy has shifted to the United States," he declared. In the period between the wars, the United States led the world in volume of exports and was second only to Great Britain in volume of imports.

After the World War the United States imported more raw materials than any other nation. America's industrial production was 45 to 50 per cent of the total production of the world.

Weight Against Nationalism "The United States has a tremendous weight in the world economy, but can we throw the weight against the forces of nationalism that the war has strengthened?" he asked.

Every great war causes a trend toward nationalism and economic self-sufficiency. This trend is evidenced now by the proposed policy of continuing to expand the synthetic rubber industry after the war.

Air Evacuation Modern Speed Saves 43,000 Lives

Without air evacuation neither sulfanilamide, plasma nor surgical skill could have availed to save the lives of the wounded, according to the air surgeon general of the army airforces.

Nearly 800,000 wounded, sick and injured American servicemen have been transported by airplane from battle zones in all parts of the world in the two and a half years since air evacuation has become an accepted part of the military medical program.

One out of five American war casualties who returned to this country last year came by plane. They totaled 43,000—a number 10 times as great as the number brought home by plane in 1943.

Military authorities today are enthusiastic about air evacuation and term it one of the five greatest life-saving measures of modern military medicine. Not only does air evacuation provide the speediest means of removing the wounded from battle zones to rear areas, but it has proved its value logistically. The same planes that fly the wounded out of battle areas have flown in laden with vital supplies, food, munitions or medical necessities.

In the fighting zones it is likely that the roads are limited in number and capacity, and that rail lines are either non-existent or consist of one track lines. By moving patients out over these surface lines, sometimes it is impossible to move supplies in. Air evacuation relieves the roads so that there is no interruption in the flow of needed supplies.

Air evacuation has also been endorsed because of its strategic value to the military commander in battle. It is reported to have contributed to the success of every major land offensive involving American forces in this war. The success of a campaign some times may hinge on an army's ability to evacuate its non-effectives.

In Tarawa the retention of the wounded on the island would have hampered military operations. In New Guinea, where the only other form of evacuation was by foot or on pack animals over the Owen Stanley mountains, all casualties were moved by air.

The army, navy and marines all use air evacuation today. The troop carrier commands of the army airforces transport wounded from battle zones to rear areas of safety, and the air transport command flies those who are returned to this country. The naval air transport service carries out a similar program for the navy.

Both the army and navy maintain schools where medical flight personnel is trained. Recently a group of 24 navy nurses were selected for the first class of the newly established navy school for air evacuation at Alameda, Calif.

The army airforces school of aviation medicine is located at Randolph field, Tex., where a new class of 10 nurses starts every three weeks. Each group is given an intensive nine-week course.

Today more than 800 army flight nurses are engaged in air evacuation duty. Of that group more than 100 are in this country and the remainder overseas. A nurse
