UNITED AUTO WORKERS' VICE-PRESIDENT DECLARES—

Big Business in Japan To Liquidate

Allies Order Feudal Militarism Abolished From All Schools

(TOKYO AP)—Japan's family-operated industrial monopolies, which built the machine of aggressive war, promised yesterday to go out of business, while Allied headquarters started kicking the medieval kinks out of the education system that long has nurtured the warlike spirit.

Simultaneously Prince Fumimaro Konoye, former premier who is taking an increasing share of Japan's political spotlight, contended that the emperor's highly-touted divinity never had been a legal concept. He conceded, however, that the current constitutional revision would shear Hirohito of some of his absolute powers.

The family monopolies, a system unique to Japan and known as the Zaibatsu, have agreed to be liquidated. Finance Minister Viscount Keizo Shibusawa announced in a statement issued under the name of the finance and industry ministries.

The powerful Tokyo paper Asahi immediately challenged the announcement. It declared that the asserted dissolution plans of such industrial giants as Mitsui, Sumitomo and Fuyo were merely a blind attempt to evade responsibility for the war, protect profits and await opportunities to go warring again in the future.

No Objection

Shibusawa said that "with regard to the fundamental policy of the Allied powers concerning liquidation of the Zaibatsu, the imperial government has had no intention of raising objections." He added that "in case of their spontaneous liquidation we desire to take appropriate measures consonant with the policy expounded by the Allied powers."

The minister told American and Japanese news men, however, that liquidation was a huge undertaking and details would have to be submitted to Allied headquarters for approval. He said it should not take long, but at another point said "real democratization" would require years.

Breaks Ordered

A fortnight ago General MacArthur ordered the Zaibatsu to break up. Today's statement appeared designed to counter growing demands of Japanese themselves for an end to these mighty trusts.

Striking deeper at the ideological roots of aggression, General MacArthur's headquarters ordered the feudal militarism cleared from the schools and replaced with instruction in the ways of peace.

Leftists Control Venezuela

Revolutionists Who Overthrew the Government of President Isaias Medina in Venezuela are Holding Former President Gen. Eleazar Contreras, Along with About 200 Other Prominent Persons, as a Hostage. Contreras is the Conservative Party Candidate in the Coming Elections.

(CARACAS AP)—Venezuela's Leftist government worked to restore order to this revolution-torn country last night as it announced that all opposition to its weekend coup d'etat had collapsed.

Armored scout cars, filled with green-clad troops carrying rifles and machine guns, continued to cruise the streets of Caracas searching for a few isolated snipers, but a government office announced:

"At noon yesterday no resistance was reported from any part of Venezuela."

Miraflores palace, in the center of the city, was still guarded by three lendlease medium tanks. The city's hospitals were still receiving wounded from last night's sniping which resulted in some casualties in scattered sections of the capital.

The most serious incidents during the day were those involving foreign diplomats. A crowd gathered before the Mexican embassy in the early morning hours and attempted to remove Diego Nulete Saidi, former governor of the central district of Venezuela, who had taken refuge there.

The crowd was bluffed away by the Mexican charge d'affaires, Jose Calero, who told them riflemen were concealed in the balconies.

Later in the day the dominican legation was stoned by a crowd, causing the minister and his wife to leave their living quarters.

Another mob attempted to seize an automobile belonging to a member of the Colombian embassy, but was dissuaded. The Haitian charge d'affaires was stopped by a small group and forced to place a white flag on his automobile despite the fact that it bore diplomatic license plates.

Representatives of the four countries were to meet late yesterday to prepare a protest to the government.

Three Leftist Parties Dominate French Constituent Assembly

PARIS (AP)—Three powerful political parties, all distinctly to the left of center, emerged last night from France's national elections as the dominant factors in the new constituent assembly which will carry out the voters' mandate to draft a new constitution.

Virtually complete returns showed the people not only had overwhelmingly approved General De Gaulle's plans to found a fourth republic, but had placed the tasks in the hands of the Socialists, the Communists and a new party born of the resistance—the Mouvement Republicain Populaire.

Unofficial computations based on virtually complete figures from metropolitan France showed this line-up on the 586 seats.

Communists 152; Socialists 142; Mouvement Republicain Populaire 141; moderate Rightists 67; radical Socialists 25; scattered among minor parties 18; still undetermined 41 (six seats to be filled later from Indo-China).

The Communists, although they kept abreast of the Socialists, lost their first test of strength against De Gaulle on his proposal for limiting the powers of the constituent assembly and creating an interim government. Despite Communist opposition, De Gaulle's recommendation won overwhelming approval.

This was how the count on the referendum stood after tabulation of almost 18,000,000 of France's 24,000,000 registered voters:

For an assembly that would write a constitution for the fourth republic: yes 15,656,283; no 596,743.

For limiting the functions of the assembly and providing for a provisional government to serve until the constitution is finished: yes 10,847,225; no 5,281,106.

Committee to Control Use of Atomic Energy

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate yesterday resolved a dispute over procedure on measures dealing with atomic energy by voting to create a special committee of 11 to handle them.

The decision represented a victory for those senators who had argued, as some of them phrased it, that "this thing is too big to be left in the hands of the military."

The new committee of 11—six Democrats and five Republicans—will get for study the atomic energy measure the administration has sent to the capitol.

This bill, reportedly drafted by the war department, would establish a commission appointed by the president to control domestic development and use of atomic energy.

It was introduced two weeks ago by acting Chairman Johnson (D., Cal.) of the military committee.

At the same time, a companion bill was introduced in the house by Representative May (D., Ky.), military chairman in that branch.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and others protested in the senate against letting the bill go to the military committee. They argued that atomic energy's implications in international relations are of first importance.

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) sponsored the resolution for creation of the special committee to be named by Senate President McKellar (D., Tenn.).

McMahon proposed nine members. The increase to 11 was accepted by a 45 to 27 vote when Majority Leader Barkley (Ky.) advanced it as a substitute for a boost to 18 proposed by Senator Ball (R., Minn.).

Gen. Franco Gives Qualified Rights To Spanish People

MADRID (AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco yesterday issued a decree giving the Spanish people "a bill of rights" that granted freedom of expression, provided it does not run contrary to "the fundamentals of the state."

The decree sets forth individual guarantees and provides for freedom of assembly for non-political association and others considered legal and in accordance with established laws. The decree becomes a part of the law of public order promulgated by the Spanish Republic in 1933.

Announcement that such a decree would be issued was made after a seven-day cabinet meeting that ended on Oct. 12.

Soft Coal Miners Returning to Work After Month Lapse

Labor Disputes Cut Total Number Idle in Nation to 230,000

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A CIO strike took 15,800 glass workers from plants in seven states yesterday as more than 200,000 miners returned to the soft coal fields, many of them for the first time in nearly a month.

Resumption of work by the miners at the call of John L. Lewis, United Mine workers' president, trimmed the national total of workers off the job because of labor disputes to about 230,000, including those involved in the glass strike.

The Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand workers struck at plants of two of the nation's major companies, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Libbey-Owens-Ford, after breakdown of negotiations over wages and other issues.

By Cities

The number out by cities were: 2,700 in Ford City, Pa.; 2,500 in Creighton, Pa.; 1,100 in Clarksville, W. Va.; 1,700 in Charleston, W. Va.; 4,000 in Toledo, Ohio; 700 in Mt. Vernon, Ohio; 400 in Ottawa, Ill.; 500 in Henryetta, Okla.; 1,600 in Crystal City, Mo., and 600 in Shreveport, La.

The stumbling block in the walkout was a strike last week of 400 workers at the Ottawa, Ill., plant of Libbey-Owens-Ford. The company informed union officials negotiations in Chicago could not proceed while the Ottawa workers were out. The union said determined efforts were made to get them back and contended negotiations should have continued since only 400 persons were involved.

Nearly all the 216,000 soft coal miners were back in the pits in six states yesterday, the date set by John L. Lewis for their return. They had been out 27 days in a dispute over recognition of a foreman's union.

Return of the miners stimulated a pickup in the steel industry where operations were curtailed by coal shortages. In the Pittsburgh district steel operations were expected to climb from 50 percent of capacity to 55 percent by the weekend.

Farmwork Unaffected

Paramount studio, picketed yesterday by about 300, reported that production had not been affected so far. RKO officials reported that only one company was shooting, of six scheduled to work. Warners, shut down two weeks by the strike, was picketed by about 500 persons.

In Portland, Ore., the AFL lumber strike policy committee announced yesterday that 11 independent Washington logging firms had agreed to pay workers a $1.50 hourly minimum. Sessions in Eugene between Williamette Valley operators and AFL strike policy committee, resumed yesterday, offered further hope of settlement of the four-week-old strike of 61,700 AFL lumber workers.

The announcement brought to 28 the number of operators who have met the AFL lumber and sawmill workers' demand for a $1.10 hourly minimum.

"UNIFIED COMMAND"

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL, chief of staff, U. S. Army, told Congress that unless the United States has a unified command "there is little hope" that the nation can secure a "lasting peace." General Marshall is shown as he appeared before the Senate Military Affairs committee.

U. S. Military Merger Opposed by Navy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Pointing at beaten Germany as a horrible example, the navy yesterday opposed proposals for merger of the war and navy departments.

"The Germans had that in Hitler, and I do not think it is a profitable example," secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal told the senate military affairs committee.

In place of the congressional proposals for a single department with authority over air, land and sea forces, the navy's civilian chief suggested:

1. A study of the whole field of postwar defense problems by a committee of military experts, congressmen, and leaders in science, labor, education and industry.
2. Creation of a national security council composed of the secretaries of state, war and navy plus the head of a new security resources head.
3. Retention of the present war and navy department and many of the wartime organizations, which Forrestal said, produced coordinated efforts in military operations.

The cabinet member offered a big chart that showed a new department of air ranking along with present war and navy departments. But Secretary Forrestal said he was not convinced that air should be given an equal place.

The British tried this before the war, the navy secretary said, and the British fleet was so "stripped of its air power" that it suffered some bad reverses.

When Forrestal had completed his prepared arguments, most senators on the military committee made it clear by a barrage of critical questions that they still favored some plan for consolidating all armed forces under a single cabinet position.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.), acting chairman and sponsor of one merger bill, said the reference to Germany was not a fair comparison because of the peculiarities of Hitler. Forrestal nodded agreement on this.

Union Head Puts Charges Before Senate

GM Threatens Sitdown Against Planned Wage Raising, Reuther Says

DETROIT (AP)—Vice President Walter P. Reuther of the CIO's United Automobile Workers union charged to congress last that General Motors had "given notice of a sitdown strike" against a government wage raising policy.

Reuther sent a telegram to Sen. James E. Murray, chairman of the senate education and labor committee, asking Murray to "bring immediately to the attention of the senate" the position of General Motors in its current wage dispute with the union.

Charging that Wilson had delivered "an either or ultimatum" to the government, the people and General Motors' 350,000 employes, Reuther said:

"Either, says Wilson, the government will have to raise prices, labor will have to take the present 23 percent cut in take-home pay or the congress must amend the wage-hour act to increase the normal work week to 45 hours."

'Thru the Hoop'

"If congress will jump through the hoop at General Motors' command, then, says Wilson, General Motors will increase hourly wage rates five to eight percent and pay overtime above 45 hours.

"If none of these ultimatums is accepted," Wilson said, "General Motors will push out sample cars to dealers throughout the country and then go on a sitdown strike, relying on public opinion to force congress to take the backward step of increasing the work week to 45 hours—a time when eight million unemployed within the year are anticipated."

Reuther told Sen. Murray "General Motors wants a strike. That is plain. It is baiting labor; it is baiting the government; it is planning to use its vast economic power and propaganda machine to coerce congress."

In disclosing his telegram to Washington, Reuther followed up previous statements by himself and UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas assailing Wilson's proposal for a 45-hour work week.

The two union men said the proposal would mean a scrapping of the wage and hour act and would bring about a "surrender of basic labor standards."

'Phony Bribe'

Thomas termed Wilson's suggestion for a five to eight percent wage boost on a 45-hour week "a phony bribe" and said that the auto workers would not permit "such a betrayal of their own people."

The statements from the union heads, which included a charge by Reuther that "Wilson and General Motors are hell bent for a strike," came as the corporation advised its salaried and hourly-rated workers that Wednesday's strike vote "will undoubtedly be in favor of a strike."

A strike vote in GM's plants, at the petition of the UAW-CIO in support of its 30 percent wage increase demand, will be conducted by the national labor relations board Wednesday.

Thomas said Wilson's 45-hour week proposal for the country would "add at least six million to the ten million who will face the bitter prospect of unemployment in 1946."

War Leader Attacks Labor Government For Lack of Plans

LONDON (AP)—Former Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared last night that unless demobilization of Britain's armed forces is accelerated "we may lose forever our rightful place in the post-war economic world."

Apparently fully recovered from his week's illness, the wartime leader vigorously attacked the labor government for what he termed "inadequate" demobilization planning and demanded that it bring back "the men who have conquered."

Churchill, bringing one of the nation's toughest domestic problems strikingly to public attention, told the house of commons he would have been "ashamed" had he been charged with the responsibility of the present government's program for processing the millions of soldiers out of uniform.

Appearing in the role of champion of the soldiers, who voted predominantly against his government in the general election last July, Churchill asserted that slow demobilization was "the fountainhead of all our domestic difficulties."

Replying for the Attlee government, Labor Minister George Isaacs asserted Churchill's speech was "most irresponsible and mischievous."

"Whether it was to help get me out of the services or to get them out of temper with the present government, I do not know," Isaacs said.

"If we do not get the great wheels turning we may lose forever our rightful place in the post-war economic world."

Rationing of Meats, Fats, Oils May End Before New Year's

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rationing of meat, butter, fats and oils may end before January 1, a department of agriculture official said yesterday.

Dr. D. A. Fitzgerald, director of the department's office of requirements and allocations, told a senate small business subcommittee that he favored a removal of ration points from the products "by the first of the year or earlier."

Previously, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson testified that he was "reasonably sure" all controls on fats and oils can be lifted by New Year's and possibly before then. He added that further reductions in ration points for butter was under "immediate discussion" by his department and the office of price administration.

Eugene Brockenbrough, chief of the fats and oils and dairy products branch, OPA food rationing division said any change in red point requirements would be announced Thursday. He said proposed changes could not be made public previously because of the effect on the market, but listeners inferred that butter points will be lowered.

Remains of Tortured U. S. Fliers Recovered

HANKOW, China (AP)—The charred bones of three American airmen, at least one of whom was burned alive after falling in Japanese hands, have been recovered here.

The story of brutal torture by beating, showering with icewater and finally by fire came from the information obtained by American intelligence officers and reliable local witnesses.

The men were survivors of a B-29 bomber from Chengtu which crashed 50 miles north of Hankow. Before being murdered, all were prodded for miles through the wintry streets of Hankow last Dec. 18 clad only in short underwear, and were beaten, kicked and reviled.

CAPT. APOLLO SOUCEK, U. S. N., skipper of the new aircraft carrier, the U. S. S. Franklin D. Roosevelt, looks over his mighty vessel as it nears completion in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The vessel will be commissioned as a part of the Navy Day ceremonies on Oct. 27 in New York.

Esquire Case to Go Before Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP)—The supreme court agreed yesterday to decide the Esquire magazine case.

The magazine is fighting for its second class mailing privilege which saves it $500,000 a year. The post office department studied its leggy ladies and robust humor in 1943 and ordered it out of the lower rate mail class. A lower court upheld Esquire and told the department to stick to its mail carrying. The government has appealed.

The court also took judicial notice of the growing controversy over oils and minerals under the sea just off shore. It will state some time after January 1 whether it will consider a government suit to establish federal control and deny it to the states.

An OPA price ceiling case won a place before the court. A review will be given an Idaho supreme court decision that sales by states and counties are exempt.

Warmer Weather, More Clouds Coming

There will be a rather thick mess of clouds filling up the sky over Iowa City today. There is rain in those clouds but whether or not any of it will fall on us is rather hard to say at this point. It is likely that some of it will leave the clouds in this general area. Warmer temperatures are accompanying this particular cloud mass.

Even though the sun shone yesterday, the mercury was in low spirits and could crawl no higher than 37.

Editorials:

Let's Dedicate the Stadium to Our Heroes

Human nature, that strange component of man, has long insisted that something monumental be dedicated to mankind's heroes, especially the dead heroes of war.

It has often been pointed out in and after this war that it would be a much greater tribute to the men who sacrificed their lives if we would spend our memorial money for humanitarian benefits.

Yet somehow memorial funds are not as symbolic of the reverence we hold as are memorial structures. And if structures have enough additional symbolism so that our heritage becomes more realistic, perhaps it is better for us to erect monuments than to establish funds.

That is what Gus Schrader, The Daily Iowan's sports editor, had in mind when he suggested in his column that Iowa's football stadium be named and dedicated in honor of the 14 Iowa athletes who died in World War II.

Two-Way Celebration

(Christian Science Monitor) We like the way Cpl. Dick Scholet celebrated getting out of the army the other day. Dick had been in the Aleutians two years and in Germany six months. Naturally he was glad to get back to Cobleskill—which, in case you are ignorant, is in the foot of the Catskills, in Schoharie county, New York.

HEY KIDS! ALL KIDS! I Feel Like Celebrating Meet Me in the Park at 7:30 p. m. Friday We'll Eat Ice Cream Cones Under the Ice Cream (Lots of It), You, or I, Give Out. SEE YOU ALL THERE Dick Scholet Cobleskill is not such a big town, but 20 gallons of ice cream were consumed in 500 cones by 150 youngsters that night. It struck us that this style of celebrating was quite superior to the mode adopted by too many, both in uniform and out.

The Peron Menace

The Milwaukee Journal emphasizes simply but sharply the menace of the return of Juan D. Peron to power in Argentina. In an editorial the Journal substitutes the word "Hitler" for "Peron" in some of the paragraphs of Buenos Aires dispatches telling of the wave of strikes and bloodshed.

Peron apparently never really lost contact with the ruling men of Argentina when he was ousted. Although admirals and generals were forced by public pressure to get rid of him, he still had many friends in the government, and the police of Buenos Aires remained loyal.

And like the rabble-rousing Hitler, he was able to maintain control over the labor elements he had swayed to his side. Many labor-and we join Gus in urging that the Student Council act immediately along that line. The student body and the university administration must act soon to honor their war dead. Dedication of a football stadium—where for many years American youth will gather to engage in or witness the kind of American competition that is part of our way of life—would be one of the finest tributes we could pay.

As Gus said, the name of the stadium is unimportant, although it should follow the line of "Iowa Memorial stadium." We are hoping that a more suitable name, expressing the same thought, can be used. We would be glad to have students write their suggestions to The Daily Iowan.

One aspect of dedicating the stadium to the dead athletes is puzzling, however. What will be our memorial to the hundreds of other students and alumni who were killed?

Of course it is fitting that the stadium honor the athletes. And Gus' suggestion that a large plaque bearing their names be erected is excellent. But the dead non-athletes were just as heroic and deserve just as much tribute—probably more because there were more of them.

If the stadium is to be renamed as a memorial, we believe it should be done this year because by 1946 some of the significance will have faded. And if it is to be dedicated this year, the Student Council and the athletic department must take immediate action.

ers remembered him as the labor minister who reduced hours and raised wages even though he curtailed their liberties.

With the sincere but misguided aid of some of labor, and by "ganster" tactics he apparently terrorized Buenos Aires into a 24-hour sympathy strike. This vividly recalls some of Hitler's methods.

Our chief hope for the future is that the democratic forces which displaced Peron, even if only for a short time, will not give up the fight and that eventually they will be successful.

Covering The Capital

By Jack Stinnett

WASHINGTON—All around town: Considering the wordage involved it's surprising there isn't more wit and humor on the floors of the house and senate. Occasionally, however, some one does come through. For example, Sen. Clyde M. Reed (R., Kan.) wound up a long speech on the shortage of physicians:

"I shall conclude in another moment, Mr. President. I know the senator from Kentucky (Majority Leader Barkley) always becomes worried when I make an extensive speech. I never become worried when he makes one; otherwise I should be worried much of the time."

Barring copyright complications, President Truman's next campaign song is as much a certainty as anything can be.

It's "I'm Just Wild About Harry." If the song makes any contribution to the votes that Truman gets (nobody here doubts for a second that he will be the nominee) the Republicans will have only themselves to blame.

They brought the swingful ditty to the attention of the Democrats when they started a slogan in one of their unofficial party magazines: "Don't Go Wild About Harry."

Bert Andrews, genial chief of the Washington staff of the New York Herald Tribune, is generally credited with reviving the old Barbary Coast (San Francisco) expression and applying it to the president: "Don't shoot the man at the piano, boys, he's doing the best he can."

The remark, tossed off in all good humor, came as the news men and women left the only press and radio conference the president has held at which he didn't have all his answers ready to deliver in one-two punch style.

If you are willing to give big enough odds, say ten to one, you can pick up some bets around Washington that the next Republican nominee will be Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, the ex-governor of Massachusetts. He won his senate seat in 1944 by more than 400,000 majority at the same time that President Roosevelt was sweeping the state at the head of the Democratic ticket.

You don't hear often from the tall, gangling Back Bay senator, but colleagues agree that he is piling up a remarkable record of being party-right on almost every issue that comes along. Incidentally, he already has a solid reputation for being one of the most sincerely friendly men on capitol hill.

The bet angle would hardly be worth mentioning except that it is the first and only offer I have heard on the positive side that anybody "will be the nominee." You can get all kinds of bets that almost anyone you name won't be nominated.

Postwar Concert Features Victory Music

By PROF. PHILIP GREELEY CLAPP

The American nation and Ludwig Van Beethoven were born only a few years apart, 1776 and 1770 respectively. News traveled slowly in those days, but even if modern resources of communication had been available and in operation, one doubts whether the fathers of the Constitution would have paid any attention to the birth of a son to a one-time singer in Bonn. Johann Van Beethoven probably would have felt little interest in the political fortunes of certain recalcitrant British colonies. He would have had no inkling of his baby son's future response to such humanitarian and libertarian ideas as were then challenging and motivating the best minds of two hemispheres.

Nevertheless the good seed of 18th century humane philosophy fell upon fertile soil in the minds of Thomas Jefferson and Ludwig Van Beethoven. Very probably they were alike in developing a philosophy, even a religion, embodying high ideals of the brotherhood of man, implacable hatred of tyranny, and realization of the necessity to "fight the good fight" for the individual and collective worth and dignity of mankind.

In 1803 Beethoven dedicated his "Third (Heroic) Symphony" to Napoleon, whom he then conceived to be a sort of Prometheus the Liberator. He angrily withdrew this dedication when Napoleon declared himself Emperor. In 1808 he produced his "Fifth Symphony," a white-hot expression of man's struggle for noble ideals. Beethoven's contemporaries were slow to grasp his meaning; yet for many generations this message of the "Fifth Symphony" has been so universally understood that its opening theme has been used by the United Nations as a rallying cry for victory.

In 1848, at a time when revolt against the tyranny of monarchs was breaking out into revolutionary demonstrations in many parts of Europe, Richard Wagner completed the opera, "Lohengrin." He based it upon old legends concerning the knights of the Holy Grail, a religious order consecrated to Christian ideals of peace and brotherhood among men. Although Wagner held a high position as court conductor in Saxony, he sacrificed his security, his liberty and an assured brilliant premiere for his opera by joining the revolutionaries in their uprising against royal and feudal oppression. Wagner was banished from Germany for many years.

All over the country symphony orchestras are placing the "Fifth Symphony" and the prelude to "Lohengrin" on the first of their programs following victory, to express clearly those ideals for which the allied nations have been fighting.

Most of these programs also include an American composer, although, since we have not yet produced one composer of universal scope, different individuals have appeared on various victory programs.

For Wednesday evening's concert here the University Symphony Orchestra has selected George Whitefield Chadwick's four "Symphonic Sketches" as expressing what the world at home and abroad recognizes as "American" in Mark Twain, Walt Whitman, and even Uncle Sam. A consummate musical craftsman, Chadwick in these sketches talks music with an American accent. At least two sketches are American in scene, and all are American in feeling and color. Each is filled with earnestness and humor of a characteristic American blend.

Browne, Culbertson to Lecture Tonight

Will Discuss Russia's Role In Peace Era

"What About Russia? Two Points of View" will be the topic of a discussion when Ely Culbertson and Lewis Browne, authors and lecturers, appear at 8 o'clock tonight in the main lounge of Iowa Union. The discussion will open this year's university lecture series.

Culbertson, noted as the originator of the Culbertson system of contract bridge, recently has gained wide recognition for devising a framework for enduring peace. Although he generally is thought of as a card game expert, he considers his real vocation to be in the field of mass psychology.

Lived in Russia
The son of an American mining engineer who founded the Russian fields of Grozny in the Caucasus, Culbertson spent the early years of his life in Russia. He came to know the cruelties of revolution first hand while still in his teens.

Lewis Browne, author of many books, including "See What I Mean" and "This Believing World," is one of those rare writers who actually enjoys lecturing. When questioned as to his favorite sports, Browne answered, "In summer, swimming; in winter, lecturing."

Browne to Start
Browne will open tonight's discussion with a 20-minute exposition giving the forces now at work in the capitalistic nations which are trying to drive the United States into an attack on Russia. Culbertson will follow with a 20-minute exposition giving the reasons why the Soviet Union eventually may be driven to attempt to assault us.

At both Browne and Culbertson believe that war between the United States and Russia would mean catastrophe for all civilization, each will present ways in which such action might be avoided. Browne will stress the importance of the psychological approach, and Culbertson will conclude the discussion with emphasis on the political steps which must be taken.

Free admission tickets for the discussion may be obtained at the Union desk upon presentation of student identification cards. All tickets which are not claimed by students will be distributed among townspeople.

Included in Teagarden's record of college and university performances throughout the nation are engagements at Michigan State, George Washington, Georgia Tech and Notre Dame. He has played engagements at the Roseland ballroom in New York City, the Sherman hotel in Chicago and the Plantation in Dallas.

Behind the Mikes . . .
 By Helen Huber

The play's the thing, but the title counts, too! At least so it is in radio, where a good title for a program may mean a million or more listeners. To get a magic monicker to satisfy a sponsor is a tangled process of long hours, short tempers and a wide margin for error. A few years ago, a new mystery series was being planned. The only catch was a catchy title. "Time Out for Terror"—too wordy; "Shadows and Studders," "Candlelight Killings," were discarded. Finally—a stark word which shot shivers—you know the program as the popular CBS thriller, "Suspense." However, it appears that title choosing won't be difficult in the future if a present trend continues in force. That is, to dub the show after the star. Thus, the radio listings divulge such air series as the Andrews Sisters Show, "Ilka Chase Observes," "Kate Smith Fiction Parade."

Dr. McKee Discusses Uses of Penicillin At Legion Meeting

By JEAN GALLAHER

"The antibiotic world has opened up great new fields to help man conquer his old foes—organisms causing infectious diseases." This statement was made by Dr. A. P. McKee, associate professor of bacteriology in the college of medicine in an address to the American Legion at the Community building last night.

In his talk on "Penicillin and Similar Products" Dr. McKee stressed the point that although the new drug is very potent, it does not cure all infections. Furthermore, he pointed out that certain organisms may become acclimated to the penicillin mold so that the treatment is ineffectual.

"For this reason," said the doctor, "it is important that penicillin be taken only by prescription."

Beginning with the story of the discovery of the penicillin mold in 1928 by blue-eyed, mild-mannered Dr. Alexander Fleming of London, McKee traced the development of the substance to the present time. He explained how the new cure was brought to the United States for mass production and how at first it required two barrels of the original fluid to treat a mild case of infection.

Chief among the curable infections are pneumonia, scarlet fever which causes blood poisoning, boil

'Blithe Spirit' Opens Run at SUI— First Play 'Improbable Delight'

By GUS SCHRADER

There is no reason to keep you in suspense: "Blithe Spirit" is an altogether gay and amusing evening. Noel Coward's wraith-infested "improbable farce," as presented last night at the University theater in the first production of the school year, became an improbable delight to one of the most enthusiastic first nighter audiences in recent years.

A travesty of ghost stories, filled with sardonic impercibility of wit, the three-act play was given just the right direction of lightness, liveliness and speed by Vance M. Morton.

The cast of seven characters handled Mr. Coward's lines of wit and mischievous fun ably on all but a very few occasions, and made the audience break into applause at several points in the course of the spooky plot.

Almost every play since Hamlet has proved that nothing is so perilous in the theater as placing a ghost on the stage. "Blithe Spirit" is a pleasant and amazing demonstration of how a genius magician-playwright can pull a whole play-full of shades from one small top hat and make it uproariously funny.

The ghosts of the play are not frightening spectres and only comically perturb the middle-aged English novelist to whom they happen. It all starts when the novelist, Charles Condomine, well played by Arnon Bonney last night, brings a slightly balmy medium out to his country home in an attempt to gather material on the occult for his next work.

Charles and Ruth, his second wife, rather handsomely accomplished by Dorothy Stinchcomb, set out to enjoy the mad antics and seance handed out by the enthused medium, Norma Walcher. But the fun backfires when the seeress' success at the black art exceeds even her own lavish expectations and she materializes the impudent ghost of Charles' first wife, Elvira, given a good ethereal interpretation by Wilanée Schneider.

Pretending to be a little put out at having her backgammon game with Ghengis Khan interrupted, Elvira glides in looking preposterously glamorous for a ghost in her silver grey makeup and costume. She is just as impertinent and as much of a problem to Charles as she ever was. Of course, only the spirit-plagued husband can see her, but that doesn't stop her from setting to work immediately to make misery of his second marriage.

Dr. and Mrs. Bradman, played competently by Joseph J. Kelly and Joan Sayers are present at the seance and later try to lend their feeble mortal assistance in helping their novelist friend rid himself of his ghostly dilemma.

Now Elvira has returned with a plot in her protoplasmic mind, and although her plans don't quite work out, by the third act there are two ghosts, the second wife making even a more handsome spirit than the first. How Charles, who changes from an astral bigamist into the sole survivor of the triangle, is exorcised you will wish to discover for yourself.

The plot is ingenious, and toward the end the ghost idea begins to wear a trifle thin.

Most substantial part of the play is the character of the bicycle riding spinster spiritualist and Miss Walcher plays it with enormous inventive and gusto. Winning almost as many laughs from the appreciative audience is Sybil Rickless as the Condomine's comical maid. Her actions are like those of a startled wild hare, but she has more to do with the plot than you will imagine.

The scenery for the attractive English interior was skillfully prepared by Arnold S. Gillette and lighted by Hunton D. Sellman. Costume Designer Berneice Prisk did an excellent job of draping the two lovely apparitions in shrouds of extraordinary fashion.

The entire production temporarily established that death can be turned into the merriest of merry topics and the dear departed into the gayest of gay companions.

Coast Guard Stamp Available on Request Beginning Nov. 10

A three-cent coast guard stamp of the armed forces series will be placed on sale at the New York City post office Nov. 10 and will be available to local collectors, post office officials said yesterday.

Of special delivery stamp dimensions, this new issue will be printed horizontally in green. The central design shows two coast guard landing craft proceeding from a supply ship in the background.

Across the bottom of the stamp is centered "United States Coast Guard," and to the left and right of these words are the dates 1790 and 1945.

Stamp collectors desiring first-day cancellations may send not more than 10 addressed envelopes to the postmaster, New York City, with cash, money order or postal note to cover the cost of the stamps. Postage stamps and personal checks will not be accepted. An enclosure of medium weight should be placed in the envelope and the flap sealed or turned in.

Orders for the first-day covers must not include requests for uncanceled stamps.

The Philatelic agency, Post Office Department, Washington, 25, D. C., will have stamps of selected quality for collectors who desire them for philatelic use. These will be available on or after Nov. 13. Mail orders should be restricted to one variety of stamp and no first-day covers are available at this agency.

The coast guard stamp will not be on sale at the Iowa City post office before Nov. 11.

Collectors who wish first-day cancellations of the navy stamp, second of the series, should send addressed envelopes to the postmaster, Annapolis, Md. The navy stamp will go on sale there Oct. 27. Selected stamps of this issue are also available at the Philatelic agency.

HINTS for Homemakers

By MARGARET CROOKS HOME ECONOMIST

ALTHOUGH the canning season is practically over, there still is time to put up some of the remaining surplus foods. When the work is over, you will find real satisfaction in knowing there is an adequate supply on hand for the winter. A couple of good recipes are given below for those who want to do some last minute canning.

 PEACH BUTTER

Wash and prepare peaches for cooking. Crush and cook in own juice, or add enough water to start cooking. Cook until peaches are soft. Press through sieve to give smooth consistency.

Add half as much sugar as sieved fruit. (Up to half the sugar can be replaced with corn syrup or honey) Add ¼ to ½ teaspoon salt to gallon of pulp.

Cook small amount of peach butter at a time. Boil rapidly, stirring frequently until butter begins to thicken. Reduce heat and cook until mixture is thick but soft enough to spread easily when cool.

One or two teaspoons of mixed spices per gallon of butter may be added toward end of cooking time. Pour boiling hot butter into hot sterilized containers and seal.

 BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES

25-30 medium cucumbers 5 cups sugar
 8 large onions 2 tablespoons mustard seed
 2 large sweet peppers 1 teaspoon tumeric
 ½ cup salt ½ teaspoon cloves
 5 cups cider vinegar Other spices to taste

Wash and slice cucumbers. Chop onions and peppers, combine with cucumbers and salt. Let stand 3 hours and drain. Combine vinegar, sugar and spices in large kettle and bring to boil. Add drained cucumbers, heat thoroughly. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal.
