

S. L. Miller Accepts Position in Pittsburgh

Dr. Sidney L. Miller, professor of transportation at the University of Iowa since 1925, has been named professor and head of transportation at the University of Pittsburgh.

This was announced by Dr. Vincent W. Lanfear, dean of the school of business administration. Dr. Miller is now the assistant to the deputy director of the office of defense transportation.

Beginning his duties in February, Dr. Miller will coordinate the university's program of aviation and will give courses in air, rail, highway and water transportation. An authority on transportation, he was called to Washington, first with the war production board and then in 1943 as assistant to ODT Deputy Commissioner General C. D. Young.

Dr. Miller directed the University of Iowa's bureau of business research and served as economist for the United Light and Power Co. and for the Association of American Roads. He was consultant for the Iowa commerce commission.

Born in Ravenna, Kan., he attended Kansas State Teachers college and received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin. He was superintendent of schools of Kansas and taught at Wisconsin before coming here.

His writings include two books, "Railway Transportation" and "Inland Transportation" and many articles in economic journals.

Dr. Miller is a member of the Mid-West Economic society, serving as its president four years. He is also a member of the American Economic association, Order of Artus and Alpha Kappa Psi.

The Millers home in Iowa City is at 422 Grant street.

Former SUI Student Receives Bronze Star

Staff Sgt. Lowell Matson, former student in the department of speech and dramatic art at the University of Iowa, was recently awarded the Bronze Star medal for meritorious achievement against the Japanese on Luzon.

Matson, a veteran of two years in the Pacific, also wears the Combat Infantryman's badge.

While a combat infantryman he edited and compiled a complete history of the military participation of his unit in the Solomon's battles. After completing 165 consecutive days of front line duty with the 25th division in the Luzon campaign, his work in combat intelligence and in the compilation of operational history covering the campaign won him the citation.

Sergeant Matson left the University of Iowa in 1942 to enter the service. He is now a member of the Sixth army historical section and is stationed in Kyoto, Japan.

5 Barriers Hinder World Peace—Kertzer

Five main barriers stand before world peace and global understanding, according to Prof. Morris Kertzer of the school of religion, who served for more than two years as a Jewish chaplain in the European war theater.

Profess Kertzer, again teaching in the school of religion, listed the barriers as follows: (1) language, (2) historical accident, (3) short-sighted policies, (4) different cultural levels and (5) charity.

"The only road of life is the path of intelligence—the path of enlightened understanding of ourselves and our fellowmen. All we have won in the war is freedom from the nightmare of slavery and freedom to work out an enlightened pattern of living," he said.

"This is our last chance. That truth has come with the atomic bomb. Unless we settle our troubles with intelligence instead of by armed conflict we will be the players on the stage for the final curtain," he continued.

Professor Kertzer believes that the salvation of civilization lies in the halls of hundreds of universities and colleges all over the world.

"We have had many trial chances and failed; this is our last chance to think through a plan for human living that will work," declared Professor Kertzer.

Maj. Edward McCloy Tells of China Experiences—

Former Frivol Editor Visits Old Haunts

By ANNETTE AVERY

"Being born in Shanghai and raised in Nanking, I was prepared for what we found in China," said Maj. McCloy, son of Prof. and Mrs. C. H. McCloy, 1 Oak Ridge, who has just returned home after 15 months duty in the CBI theater.

"Most of the boys had read too much about Chinese mandarins and pagodas, and they just didn't find them," continued Major McCloy, explaining that most American troops entered China, as the major did, from India, through China's "back door." The bare rice fields and tiny huts of the peasants in Western China were a great disappointment to many soldiers expecting something straight out of Marco Polo, or the Tales of Fu Manchu.

Before entering the army in March, 1942, Major McCloy attended the university, where he was editor of Frivol for his last two years. At the university, he was a member of Delta Upsilon social fraternity, Order of Artists, Beta Gamma Sigma, Union board, AFI, Inter-fraternity court, and was captain of the gymnastics team. He graduated in 1940.

Studied Chinese Language He entered the army as a second lieutenant and was later sent to the Yale university language school for four months, where he studied the Chinese language. He went to China as liaison officer with the Eighth Chinese division, and since his was the first liaison unit attached to that particular division, there were misgivings on the parts of both American and Chinese personnel.

"Our commanding general was a fine man, and he seemed very pleased with the results. We had splendid cooperation from the troops. In fact, our outfit was probably one of the best in China," said the major. "But just the same, it is a funny situation, an American second lieutenant telling a Chinese colonel what to do."

Spoke Chinese Before English According to the major, he was born in Shanghai and lived in Nanking until he was seven. "And supposedly spoke Chinese before I spoke English," he added. "I even went to a Chinese kindergarten. And yes, I was raised by a Chinese ahma."

His return to China, however, was under different circumstances than his departure at the age of seven. The Eighth division was stationed in southeastern China, and according to Major McCloy, for day in, day out living, that was probably the most uncomfortable theater of operations.

"I knew one man who had been in China for 27 months, and had been to Kunming once. That was when he arrived. The rest of the time he was out in the weeds. There just isn't any place in China to go for a rest, so they just stay out in the hills and fields. I've seen men lose 50 pounds living on rice and grass," Major McCloy continued.

With the army, his chief duties were officially divided into two parts. The first was conducting schools for Chinese officers and enlisted men, making up training schedules and supervising training, and the second was supervising issues of American weapons to the Chinese. They received American rifles, machine guns, mortars, 37 mm. engineer's supplies, medical supplies, and a good deal of radio equipment. They did not, however, receive any American food or clothing," concluded Major McCloy.

Gan-Bei Parties "Our third main duty seemed to be attending Gan-Bei parties," the major laughed. "A literal translation of gan-bei is 'dry glasses', or the American 'bottoms up'. Since the Chinese use very high alcoholic content rice wine (120 proof) for their parties, you really know it when you've been to one. Whoever named it 'wine' must have certainly had a great sense of humor." To illustrate the major's statement, rice wine is called Jing-Ba (Air raid) juice, or 'white lightning' by the Chinese. According to Major McCloy, a Gan-Bei party was given upon any pretext. On inspection tours he tried to make sure his visits would be unannounced, leaving little time for preparation. But on several occasions he was urged, 15 minutes after arrival, to stay for a celebration, his host insisting "It's all prepared, it's all prepared." And it always was.

MAJ. EDWARD McCLOY, former Frivol editor of '38 to '40, discusses changes and former publication procedures with present editor, Kay Keller, at a meeting.

"At a gan-bei party everyone sits around a circular table and eats out of the same bowl," explained the major. "Most Americans learn to use chopsticks in a hurry, and like to use them. They are very convenient and very sanitary, except for the use of the community dish. Each person has his own bowl of rice, and then, . . . there is the wine."

Available glasses at such parties usually varied considerably in size, anywhere from a small wine glass to a large water tumbler. "It was always a race to see who could get the smaller glasses first, because when someone says 'Gan-bei!' you are supposed to 'comply' regardless of size or quality of your container," laughed the major. "The one redeeming feature is that you are permitted to have someone represent you, a fact that definitely had its advantages."

Probably his biggest treat, said the major, was the arrival of American horses. Chinese horses, according to the major, are sure footed, but badly gaited little creatures about the size of a shetland pony. After looking at them for so long, the new American horses looked tremendous.

Chinese Respect Roosevelt "Before troops went in, Americans had a fine reputation China," stated Major McCloy. But some of the boys took advantage of the uniform to exploit the people, and they were quick to resent it. They had a very deep respect for the late President Roosevelt, however. Major McCloy was out on an in-

had seen several of $5000 denomination."

To the Chinese troops, the major was "Major Mai K'e-wen," but the Chinese cooks and interpreters were dubbed Jimmy, Alfred, Mortimore, Woodrow, or whatever seemed to fit. "Speaking of names," added Major McCloy, "there are only about forty Chinese surnames. There are probably more Wongs in China than Smiths, Jones, and Greens in America."

Wants To Go Back "Yes, I do want to go back to China," ended the major. "I definitely want to go back to north China, which I have never seen, and to Shanghai, where I was born. In fact, I've been debating about settling there permanently. It's quite a place."

Funeral Rites Pending For Charles Zager

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made for Charles Zager, 81 who died in a local hospital, at 1:30 p. m. Thursday. He had been a patient at the hospital since December 5.

Mr. Zager, former Iowa City police judge, is survived by two daughters, Dorothy Zager of Chicago, and Mrs. Allen Downs of Columbia; and by two sisters, Mrs. John F. Roessler of Iowa City and Mrs. John Strickler of Kalona.

Elevator Relaxes Student Traffic Exhausting

During this vacation period from Dec. 21 until 8 a. m. Jan. 7 the old elevator in East hall will have a rest too. Of course janitors may be using it regularly, or a few of the faculty members who want to catch up on some work may go up and down a couple of times. But it won't be the regular run-of-the-mill elevator traffic.

Maybe some are unfamiliar with this old elevator—those who have used only the nice shiny new one that takes no tragic maneuvering at all to shoot him to his destination.

Students who have classes in East hall, classes on the third, fourth, fifth or sixth floors, have perfected a foolproof, or nearly so, formula for making this elevator do their bidding.

This elevator is no ordinary one—one which you merely step into, press a button, and at the end of the ride step out on the desired floor. Oh no, this elevator takes a certain amount of ingenuity, a certain amount of personal wheeling, and sometimes though of course not often, even a mild curse to produce the desired results.

The great feat of stepping into the elevator is accomplished only by the most persistent effort. First the student must get the elevator to stop at the floor he's on. Then he must open the door quick-like-a-flash before some other impatient "bell-pusher" on another floor rings, and he sees his ride shooting up or down without him leaving him to walk to class or be late.

Now, for the most crucial part—suppose he wants to go up, this is used as an example because it is the easier. He presses the button for the floor he wants. Then he remains with his weight against it until he reaches his floor, at which time he must grab frantically to pull the door open. If he fails to heed these two warnings, he is apt to shoot up and down intermittently at the will of some person or persons waiting for the elevator on different floors.

The most difficult work comes if he desires to take the elevator down. The student follows the same procedure to get into it. But since the elevator won't respond to a simple punch of any certain down button, he must punch a floor higher than he is. After he has started up, he must quickly punch basement and hope that he will get down as far as first.

So you can understand how the old elevator needs a Christmas vacation nearly as much as the students who ride in it.

Behind the Mikes...

By Helen Huber

You radio listeners are in for a treat when Bob Crosby, recently discharged from the marine corps, brings a brand new radio program to the air beginning Jan. 1. The show will be heard Tuesdays at 10 p. m. (EST) over CBS. On Christmas day, Bob and his Bobcats will be featured on "Two Hours of Stars" which airs over CBS from 4 to 6 p. m. (EST).

While you're gathered around the fire in your own home on Christmas Eve, you'll be able to hear the Christmas Eve ceremonies during which President Truman will light the big tree in the nation's capital and deliver a holiday message to the country. The festivities will be broadcast by the Mutual network for a full half hour (5 to 5:30 p. m. EST), Monday, Dec. 24.

Don't forget to listen to the Sunday night "Beulah" show when the versatile Marlin Hurt adds a fourth role to his collection of voices, that of the Reverend Harris. But even four roles are no strain for Hurt, who has dozens of other voices tucked away in his flexible larynx besides that of himself, the soprano Beulah and the baritone Bill. They include Gypsy Rose Levy, the village constable, Jeff Higgins and enough other assorted characters to populate a good-sized town.

First Police School Praised By Teeters

"Enough praise can't be given to the instructors and to the patrolmen who participated in Iowa City's first police training school," said Mayor Wilbur J. Teeters at the conclusion of the course yesterday.

"The program more than lived up to expectations," he continued, "and all who took part in the training showed the interest that was necessary to make it a complete success."

The four weeks course, which ended yesterday with a trial of a staged hit and run accident, consisted of classes every Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights from 7 to 10 p. m.

The classes covered nearly every phase of police work, and Police Chief Ollie White said that the policemen taking part were so interested that the class periods were often extended so that all the questions could be answered.

"The course next year will be set up so that there will be fewer subjects," said Chief White, "so that each subject may be fully discussed, and every phase gone into."

This course laid the groundwork, he continued, "so that next year more emphasis can be placed on the technical aspects of police work."

The final course on the program was a staged hit and run accident with half the police students acting as planners, and the other men serving as investigators.

The "accident" took place Dec. 12, at 8:15 at Dodge and Davenport streets. The investigators found "Joe O'Toole" lying under his bicycle the victim of a hit and run driver.

Police were able to locate the car the next morning in the Nall garage, and identified it through tire tracks left in the snow, and by matching pieces of broken headlight found in the scene of the accident to the glass remaining in the headlight frame.

At the trial of the driver, presided over by District Judge Harold D. Evans, County Attorney Jack C. White attempted to prove that Patrolman E. J. Ruppert was the driver of the car.

Attorney A. O. Leff represented Ruppert, whose defense was that his car had been taken while he was at a movie.

The trial was not finished because of lack of time, but Judge Evans explained some important points for policemen in trials of this sort. He stated that on the evidence that he had heard he would have to rule the defendant not guilty, declaring that guilt must be proved beyond all doubt. He stressed the fact that policemen testifying should not appear uncertain, and that all evidence introduced should be in the same condition as found.

City Council Refuses Vets Permit Request

The city council of Iowa City refused for the second time to grant a class B club beer permit to the Veterans of Foreign Wars post No. 2581, when it voted last night at a meeting to accept the recommendation of a committee that the petition be rejected.

The petition was presented at a meeting of the council Dec. 10, and the members moved to refer it to "the committee" which considered the post's request for a permit for their clubrooms at 204 1/2 S. Dubuque street earlier this year. The location desired in this petition was 22 1/2 W. College street.

This committee was composed of the entire council and Mayor Teeters ex-officio. An application to start a new cab company, The Iowa Cab Co., and an application for a permit for an additional cab from the Limited Cab Co., were deferred until the next meeting of the council.

The Varsity-Hawkeye Cab Co. was granted permission to operate another cab. The council discussed the possibility of cab inspections before permits were granted in order to keep defective and unsafe cars from being operated in Iowa City, but no official action was taken.

The council granted a cigarette permit to the Quadrangle soda fountain, and approved renewal of a class C beer permit for Aaron Braverman, 101 S. Clinton street.

An ordinance rezoning the area south of Kirkwood avenue to the city limits, and west from Linn street to the east bank of the Iowa river, to an industrial district, was passed by the council. The employment of Wilma Swenka as a secretary in the office of the city clerk was also approved.

Mrs. Barnes, who charged cruel and inhuman treatment, was granted the custody of a minor child.

Brazilian Town Boasts Of One Musician In Every Family

SAO JOAO DEL REY, Brazil—This little town of the Brazilian interior, and one of the oldest of the country, has a musician in every family and has supported a symphonic orchestra since 1776. Music, here, has been definitely incorporated in the life of the population.

Besides two century sacred orchestras—the "Lira" of Sao Joao and the Orchestra Ribeiro Bastos—there are numerous other musical organizations.

All the children study music and those who show abilities dedicate themselves to the art.

The first reference to musical activities here dates from 1717—two centuries and a half ago. Then, an orchestra directed by Antonio de Carmo played on the hill of Bonfim at the arrival of Count of Assumar. Since that date, such references are numerous.

The "Lira" of Sao Joao was founded in 1776. There was, however, a group of musicians who refused to be incorporated into the orchestra. In 1840, a new orchestra was formed having as members the descendants of those who refused to join the "Lira" 64 years ago. An intense rivalry established between the two groups which still exists.

Marriage Licenses
The clerk of the district court yesterday issued marriage licenses to Marcella Kirkpatrick of Tipton and Edwin Jullifs of Onslow, and to Virginia M. Beranek and James K. Wilson of Solon.

Administrator Named
J. A. Parden was appointed administrator in district court yesterday for the estate of James R. Martin, who died Dec. 13. Bond was set at $1,000, and Messer, Hamilton and Cahill are the attorneys.
