Great Britain, France Report Troops Leave

U. N. Delegates Watch Iran for Completion Of Soviet Withdrawal

NEW YORK (AP) — Great Britain and France reported to the United Nations security council last night that all their troops had been withdrawn from Syria and that "the bulk of fighting forces" would be evacuated from Lebanon by June 30.

The reports were made in letters to Hafez Afifi Pasha, chairman of the council, by the British and French delegates, Sir Alexander Cadogan and Henri Bonnet.

From the reports, it appeared that at least one of the controversial questions before the security council at its turbulent London session was nearing a solution.

First Reports
 The letters were the first official reports to the U. N. peace agency on the Syrian-Lebanon situation, although it was reported unofficially in Damascus, Syria, on April 16 that the last British and French troops had departed. Cadogan's report said that all except "a small liquidation party" of British troops would be out of Lebanon by June 30, while Bonnet notified the council that the "bulk" of French troops would have left by then.

Delegates to the United Nations security council yesterday watched Tehran and Moscow for any announcement that Soviet troop withdrawals from Iran had been completed or were nearing completion.

The delegates were generally optimistic that Russia would carry out her promise to have all her troops out of Iran by May 6, although none reported any definite information on the progress of the withdrawals.

Troops All Out
 If the troops are all out by May 6, the council would be able to drop the controversial issue from the agenda. Otherwise, when the delegates meet next week, probably Tuesday, they will be forced to re-open the case.

The council continued to watch the Palestine controversy with interest.

Arabs Propose Fight to Death

LONDON (AP)—A high Arab official said in Cairo last night that some Araba leaders had proposed that the Holy Land be transformed into a battleground where Arabs from all over the middle east would fight to the death "for their existence."

In Palestine itself, where the Arabs had called a one-day general strike in protest against the American-British committee report, more than 1,000 Arab youths hurled stones at police and British troops in a riotous demonstration in the ancient old city of Jerusalem.

The troops, armed with tommy-guns, dispersed the youths at historic Damascus gate after two hours.

In Cairo, Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary-general of the Arab league, said some Arab leaders had urged the evacuation of women and children from Palestine to neighboring states as a precautionary measure before outbreak of warfare.

Public Office Barred To Ichiro Hatoyama

TOKYO, Saturday (AP)—Ichiro Hatoyama, president of Japan's prominent Liberal party and frequently mentioned for premier, was barred today by General MacArthur's headquarters from holding public office.

Hatoyama, whose party — actually conservative — won a plurality of votes at the recent election, had been under criticism for writing a book in which he praised Hitler and Mussolini.

Ordered Removed—Smacks Tojo

agandist Shumei Okawa, who yesterday twice slapped Japan's wartime dictator, Hideki Tojo on the top of his bald head, was ordered removed from the courtroom at today's second session of the international military tribunal arraignment Japan's 28 top flight war criminal suspects.

Chief Justice Sir William Webb issued the order. He said it was necessary to have an examination by two psychiatrists to determine whether the tall, grinning defendant was mentally capable of pleading.

Okawa's seat had been moved back to get him out of range of ex-Premier Tojo, sitting in front of him, but Okawa began making unintelligible sounds as he heard the discussion.

Lanky Okawa was led from the courtroom prisoners' box by Lt. Col. Aubrey Kenworthy, of Omaha, Neb., tribunal provost marshal, with orders to return him when the mental examination was completed.

Without the distracting presence of Okawa, the court then proceeded with the reading of the eight remaining specifications of the 55 count indictment.

Playful, grinning Okawa, long an advocate of aggression to drive the white races from Asia, had snacked the court by his antics yesterday. Twice he had bared his breast and shouted gibberish.

Company Threatens To Halt Manufacture Of Farm Machinery

President Declares Corporation Needs Increase in Prices

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Tribune said last night the Oliver corporation, manufacturers of farm equipment with seven mid-west plants, has told the OPA that unless it gets price relief by next Tuesday, it will suspend operations.

The Tribune quoted Alva W. Phelps, president, as saying he had sent a letter Monday to OPA Administrator Porter stating that Oliver had on April 9 applied for an over-all increase in farm equipment prices and that the application "is based upon current substantial increases in labor and material costs and upon severe and continuous operating losses over an extended period."

The story said the firm has been "forced to sell" its products at a loss of 23 cents on the dollar.

The company, with headquarters in Chicago, employs some 10,000 persons in its two plants at South Bend, Ind., and plants in Battle Creek, Mich.; Cleveland, Ohio; Springfield, Ohio; Charles City, Iowa; and Shelbyville, Ill.

Phelps, according to the story, added that the directors had authorized the action and that "though we recognize the need to produce the equipment the farmers must have, it is of course impossible for us to stay in business if we cannot even meet our own operating expenses."

Prison Guards Attempting to Get Within Gun Range Withdrawn

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Prison guards, who had been creeping through the main cell block to get within gunfire range of the rebel Alcatraz convicts, were withdrawn last night, leaving the desperate men to make the decision between surrender and death.

A prison official said on the telephone: "We left them alone last night to talk it over. We'll go to work on them in the morning."

Not a sound could be heard from the prisoner's stronghold. Outside, weapons poised, waited guards and marines.

Thus far, the desperate bid for freedom had cost the lives of two guards. Fourteen others were wounded.

There was no indication of the casualties within the silent cell block. But they must have been heavy.

For more than 24 hours, a hail of rifle and grenade fire had poured into the cell block.

Prison officials who could be reached by telephone insisted they knew nothing of what was going on in the cell block.

"We're just waiting," an unidentified man said. "It's their move next."

Earlier this evening, the convicts had made one bid for a truce. One of them telephoned Warden J. A. Johnston: "We'll make a deal when you throw your weapons and ammunition out."

That was the last word from the men. About five o'clock, one of them fired a half dozen wild shots from a window. Then there was silence, unbroken for the remainder of the evening.

There appeared to be little hope of STARVING THE MEN INTO SUBMISSION. One officer who had been on the island said the prisoners early in the riot had seized a kitchen and presumably taken food supplies. The prison guards now hold the kitchen.

Warden Johnston reported a group of 150 prisoners who had not taken part in the escape attempt, and who had been held under marine guard in the yard all night, had been returned to cells.

"We have completely prevented the mass escape plot. Now we must secure the firearms and the men who have them."

Major Albert Arsenault, Marine public information officer, returned from the island yesterday afternoon and told reporters of the truce offer.

Major Arsenault said that Warrant Officer Charles L. Buckner, of Memphis, Tenn., had volunteered to try and blast the desperadoes out.

He mounted the roof, drilled three holes with an electric chisel, and lowered an anti-tank grenade on a length of string.

"Buckner heard some of the convicts scream then to be let out. Then he heard a rifle shot. THERE WERE NO MORE SCREAMS."

Major Arsenault said Buckner, a Pacific combat veteran who holds the silver star and purple heart, continued dropping grenades into the cell block. Major Arsenault estimated he dropped 150 of them.

He said an assistant warden had told him he believed the convicts still holding out in the cell block—which he estimated at 24—still had about 3,000 rounds of ammunition.

He said he had been told the riot first began when a convict reached out from his cell and hooked a guard around the neck with a carpenter's T square, pulling him close and ripping the keys from his belt.

Fatally Wounded Guard Names Convict Assailant

Just before he died, William A. Miller, Alcatraz guard, and three other critically wounded officers signed identical statements naming Joseph P. Cretzer, 35, as the man who shot them.

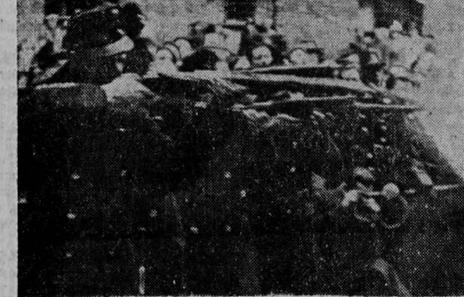

The statements read, prison authorities said:

"Being in a critical condition and believing that I am now dying, I make this my sworn statement that I was shot with a .45 calibre Colt's revolver by Convict Joseph Cretzer, No. 548, whom I can positively identify."

"Joseph Cretzer SHOT ME COLD-BLOODEDLY AND SAID 'I WILL KILL YOU.' Cretzer shot me when I was in a cell in which he and other prisoners had placed me."

Cretzer, a bank robber, is serving a life sentence for the murder of a United States marshal in Tacoma, Wash.

Top Nazi in Hungary Pays Price

Bodies of Two Boys Found in Attic Trunk

CHICAGO (AP)—The bodies of two small boys, missing since Monday, were found in an attic trunk yesterday and Captain Ray Crane, chief of uniformed police said they probably locked themselves in accidentally while playing.

The boys were Chester Lesniewski, 9, and Anthony Liczkowski, 8, who lived with their mothers in the basement apartment of the south side bungalow.

Capt. Crane and Coroner A. L. Brodie said an immediate post mortem was impossible because of the condition of the bodies, but added there were no apparent marks of violence.

The boys were fully clothed and in sitting positions, back to back, in the trunk, police said. One boy clutched a toy pistol.

Blue Lapel Buttons, Blue Suits, Blue Ties Give Obvious Answer

DES MOINES (AP)—Gov. Robert D. Blue, who never forgets the color of his name, yesterday was distributing a plain blue lapel button as his official re-election campaign badge.

The governor wears blue suits and blue ties, has all his printing done in blue ink and has blue ribbons on the typewriters for his press releases and speeches.

An aide explained the idea of the plain blue button was to get persons to ask its meaning, whereupon the Blue supporter would give the obvious answer.

Slaughterers Ordered To Set Aside More Pork, Lard for Export

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government ordered slaughterers to set aside more pork and lard for export yesterday while President Truman emphasized that his administration still stands for price controls on meat.

Slaughterers were directed to set aside for government export purchase pork products equal to 15 percent of the live weight of the hogs they slaughter and a quantity of lard and rendered pork fat equal to six percent of the live weight of their slaughter.

The order, effective Monday, applies to federally inspected plants in all except 11 southeastern states where output is insufficient to meet local needs.

The set-aside percentage now is 13 percent for pork products and five percent for lard. The program has not applied previously to rendered pork fats. Beef already is subject to a set-aside order with the government taking about ten percent for export.

Store Pays Claims
 OPA violation claims for $25 were paid by the Hummer Grocery of Iowa City for over-charge on grocery items.

The Campus Chest drive, still $3,700 short of the original goal, has been extended to Wednesday, according to Howard Hensleigh, L2 of Iowa City, drive chairman. Collections amounting to $917.24 yesterday brought the total up to $2,896.91.

Announcing the extension, Hensleigh said that some campus organizations have not yet been reached. He explained that the drive is being continued in order to give everybody on the campus an opportunity to contribute.

Kappa Alpha Theta sorority became a member of the 200% club yesterday by donating $2 for each resident.

The Campus Chest committee will meet this afternoon to plan for the continuance of the drive.

Law Commons has contributed $120 and is expected to reach its 100% goal next week. Four of the ten Hillcrest units have donated $100. The sale of ice cream bars by representatives of the Student Christian council yesterday netted $31.

The campaign next week will be directed toward groups not already adequately canvassed, according to Hensleigh. Pointing out that many of the houses have done excellently, he said that they will not be contacted again.

Contributions are still being collected at Currier hall and Hillcrest. Plans are being made to contact medical students through the medical fraternities. Many of the dental and law students have not yet been reached, Hensleigh said.

Getting Down to Bare Facts

STATISTICS aren't what David Rothman, left, and Barbara Kirby are interested in, but they get down to bare facts to show the problem they're up against. The shortage of diapers has reached such an acute stage that the Cotton Textile Institute and the National Institute of Diaper Services have formally appealed to the Civilian Production Administration to include diapers among essential critically scarce textiles which have been granted price incentives in order to bring about an increase in production.

Editorials:

Starvation Is More Than Just Increased Diseases

A group of American newspaper editors, after touring Germany and Austria, reported they were seriously concerned over the lack of food but had not seen any actual cases of starvation.

The editors said the lack of food was being shown in the increased tuberculosis rate and the drop in coal production. One of them, Hamilton Owens, a Baltimore Sun editor, even predicted it would be necessary to reduce the daily food ration in the American-occupied Austrian zone from 1,250 calories to 400 by July 1 if no improvement is forthcoming before then.

In one way these statements emphasize the seriousness of the food situation in Europe, but the editors apparently missed the big human factor which really determines what constitutes starvation.

Medically, starvation starts long before the human being becomes too weak to do physical work. Doctors have said that about 1,000 calories a day are necessary for a man to remain alive if he stays in bed and is warm. Between 1,200 and 1,500 calories are necessary for even the slightest exertion such as would be required by being out of bed. Almost 2,000 calories a day are necessary to do light work and for heavy work about 2,500 to 3,000 are required daily.

Since most Europeans must work to find food and shelter and clothing, the daily rations they are now getting—between 1,000 and 1,500 calories—are not enough to prevent starvation.

The body begins to starve—that is, feed upon itself—when the food intake falls below the level required for the type of work being performed. Body fats are first to go and are quickly followed by muscle tissue.

One group of American prisoners of war in Germany averaged a calorie intake of 1,000 to 1,300 daily. At first the men lost weight rapidly—from three to six pounds a week. When their fat reserves were depleted they lost from two to three pounds a week.

The important thing to the men was that even though they did not materially feel the loss of weight at first, as they gradually lost muscle tissue they began to realize they were starving.

This was first noticed as a general feeling of weakness, dizziness and highly increased irritability. The men found they had no initiative, their entire life degenerated to one subject—food. Talk often centered around home and family but seldom in any connection other than something to eat.

Gradually all types of activities were curtailed; men spent the greatest percentage of their days and nights in bed, some even having to be forced to walk a necessary 200 yards to eat.

This then, is the situation the editors didn't see or didn't report. Of course, they can be excused. It is hard for a man who has always been well fed to visualize and feel the terrible plight of the individual who is starving.

We think the editors did a good job in bringing the seriousness of the problem to the attention of the American public. We hope, however, that those same editors and the public will realize even more the horrible fate of starvation.

For starvation is measured in even worse terms than a high tuberculosis rate and a low rate of coal production.

The Battle of Stamps

An example of intra-state trivia is going on before the eyes and ears of Iowans. To those of us in Iowa City, the tiff-in-a-teacup is right at the front door.

Des Moines and Iowa City are vying for the honor of selling the first day's centennial stamps. They're conniving with all the atmosphere of intrigue surrounding a South American revolution.

Tradition, says Des Moines, gives the first day's sales to the existing state capital. The glory of the past (another form of tradition), says Iowa City, puts the sale in our lap because this city was the capital at the time Iowa was admitted to the union.

Right now Iowa City seems to have the edge in the battle (rah! rah!). The centennial commission has informed the postoffice department that it has selected Iowa City as the spot for the sale.

We recognize the honor we are receiving, and we applaud those men who brought it to us. But we hope that our leaders and officials can get back to a couple of other problems—like housing and traffic fatalities, etc.

Covering The Capital

By Jack Stinnett They Fight Wars Is Key To Fight for Teen-Age Vote

WASHINGTON—It hasn't made headlines lately, but the odds are considerable that the next time you vote on a constitutional amendment, it will be to give the youngsters 18 years old and over a vote.

The idea has been kicking around for almost three years. If any one can be singled out as father of the movement, it's little Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia. He put over the first state law granting a vote to the 18-year-olds.

In the fall of 1943, he appeared before the house judiciary committee to argue for legislation that would open the polls to all 18 years old and over.

The legislative wheels haven't turned on it since. The house judiciary committee, whose chairman, Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), has spoken in opposition, hasn't even reported out the resolution which would put an amendment proposal up to the states. There isn't a chance in a thousand of any further action this term.

But that doesn't alter the leading statement in this article. Amending the constitution is a long slow process, which is the way it was intended to be.

In the first place it takes two-thirds of the house and senate concurring to even get the proposal before the state legislatures. Then those bodies have seven years for three fourths of them to get together on the necessary affirmative action that would make the proposal a part of the constitution.

The ponderousness of this legislative machinery and slowness with which it grinds out a constitutional amendment shouldn't discourage anybody. The important points are that the seeds of the movement have been sown; that the interest is nation-wide; that some states already have acted in favor of it; that enough leaders in the government and out have expressed themselves to assure that it is a controversial issue, and that there are several million potential young voters in high schools and colleges who will wake up or be awakened some morning to find they have themselves a cause.

So far, the pro and con arguments seem to reduce themselves to a couple of simple statements:

(1) If they are old enough to fight, they are old enough to vote.

(2) They are too immature to handle the ballot with good judgment.

Politically, so far, the opposition hasn't been particularly out-spoken. Election years aren't the best to get flat statements from members of congress.

A fairly interesting coterie here has come out with statements in favor of the 'teen-age vote. Among them are cabinet members, Secretary of Commerce Wallace and Attorney General Tom Clark; Senators Mead (N. Y.), Lucas (Ill.) and Morse (Ore.); Rep. Jennings Randolph (W. Va.), who has been scarping for action in the house for a couple of years. This isn't all by any means but it gives some indication that the movement has friends in congress.

This world is confusing enough without our songs becoming musical crossword puzzles.

Then came 'Mairsey Doats' which did something permanent to our eardrums.

When Junior does his home work these days, it's a case of reading, 'riting and radio—with the radio always coming out on top.

The pistol shots in "Detective Neverfail" come in handy. They punctuate the sentences of themes Junior writes at home.

It's all very simple—Junior just doesn't let his eyes pay any attention to what his ears are listening.

A big league pitcher has already hurled a no-hit game, a golfer has already scored a hole-in-one—looks like there won't be anything for summer to do, when it officially arrives, but just be hot.

Excited British Girl Arrives at Hawkeye Village—

No. 116-- 'It Is Just Lovely' to War Bride

—Cooking's No Problem for Her Because She Can't

By WINNIFRED SHIELDS

The mud was a little deep at the Hawkeye village, and trailer No. 116 looked very much like No. 115 and No. 117, but to pretty English war bride Helen Henry, "It is just lovely. I can't tell you how lovely it is."

Mrs. Henry, 19, a native of Reading, Berkshire England, docked Monday aboard HMS John Ericsson with 790 other British war brides. She arrived in Iowa City Wednesday night.

She is the wife of Ray Henry, Al of Sheldon, a student of journalism at the university.

First Hamburger "I had my first hamburger last night, right here in this trailer," Mrs. Henry said. "A neighbor fixed it for me. And my first malt this morning—too sweet, though. I am just amazed at all of the good things to eat here in America."

"Why, on the way over we had two eggs every morning for breakfast, and in England the ration is one for every two weeks."

Asked if cooking would be a problem in a trailer, Mrs. Henry smiled:

"Well, not exactly a problem. I can't cook. They gave me a 'cookery' book when I was aboard ship, but I am afraid that Ray will have to take that over for awhile, but a few things I can fix will make this trailer more home-like."

Mrs. Henry met her husband

BRITISH BRIDE HELEN HENRY She Received a Husband's American Welcome

while he was serving with the Ninth troop carrier command, Allied "airborne."

"We met in November," Mrs. Henry said. "I was working in a laundry office at the time, and Ray used to come in and pay his accounts to me. We were married in St. John's church in Caversham. That was in May, 1945."

"America Exciting"

"America has been just terribly exciting since the moment I landed," Mrs. Henry said. "They were playing 'Roll Out the Barrel' when the boat docked, can you imagine that? We were all wearing tags around our necks, listing our names and destinations, just like parcel post packages."

Mrs. Henry thinks drugstores are one of America's greatest institutions, with streamlined trains and automobiles running second.

"I never have met Ray's family, but we called them on the telephone this morning," Mrs. Henry said. "They live in Sheldon, and I think they will be driving here soon."

And the Humor Over the doorway of trailer No. 116 was a cartoon clipped from the London Daily Express which pictured a hillbilly taking his British war bride home to a shack in the mountains. The caption underneath read: "But darling, I told you all Americans didn't live in skyscrapers."

"It's funny, don't you think," Mrs. Henry said. "But I still can't tell you how lovely I think it is here."

Having had his name on a waiting list for several months, Ray Henry got the trailer Wednesday morning, just a few minutes before he received the telegram from Mrs. Henry, notifying him she would arrive that night. He spent the day moving in and cleaning the cabin, getting it ready for Mrs. Henry's homecoming.

Letters to the Editor:

The Iowan's Readers Forum

Finds Special Tests Objectionable

TO THE EDITOR:

"The faculty of the college of liberal arts has decided that all sophomores and seniors should take three general examinations in addition to those administered by the various departments in the college. Scores on these examinations will be incorporated as part of your record in this institution. It is necessary, therefore, that you be present at the specified times."

Are we students nothing more than a flock of sheep? The faculty evidently considers us in this light. A sweeping decision, affecting hundreds of students, is arbitrarily made, the students are informed of it and told what they are to do, but no mention is made of any reasons behind the decision.

The attitude of the faculty in this matter has evoked no little resentment on the part of the students. No one enjoys taking exams, particularly exams such as these are to be. They haven't been required in the past (at least of the students who are being forced to take them now); this fact, added to the dictatorial way in which we were informed of them, and the length of time which will be needed for their completion, makes them doubly objectionable.

As a natural consequence of the lack of information as to their purpose and nature, rumors concerning these examinations have been circulating rapidly. There seems to be some foundation for the belief that they will be used to indicate weaknesses in the present curriculum, with a view toward eliminating them in the future.

But if they are of such a nature that they are intended to benefit future students rather than provide evidence of the achievement of present ones, what is the object of incorporating the scores in the examined student's record?

Or is this statement merely a device to encourage more complete cooperation on the part of the students? Another question:

Are the sophomores to take the same exams as the seniors? If so, why?

No provision is made for students who ordinarily work during the time the examinations are to be administered. Such a provision may well have been impossible, but those of us who will have to lose time from work as well as suffer the inconveniences inherent in undergoing 11 hours of extra exams feel we have a right to know "what the score is."

How 'bout it, faculty, would it be too degrading to let us understand on our little secrets? Dick Sittler (Robert L. Ebel, director of the university examination service, told The Iowan at the time of the announcement of the tests that their purpose makes it advisable not to reveal their nature.—Editor.)

12-YEAR-OLD BOY STUDIES CHINESE IN YALE CLASS

AP News Features

NEW HAVEN—If you ask 12-year-old Nicholas Van Dyck how he likes attending Chinese language classes at Yale, he'll tell you they're lots harder than his classes at Troup junior high school where he is a seventh grade student.

The son of missionaries, Nick sits in on classes five days a week. He isn't regularly enrolled, of course, nor does he pay any tuition. It's because his parents expect to return to China this fall or winter that Troup principal Timothy E. Curran and Yale Chinese Professor George A. Kennedy made the special arrangement.

The Van Dycks were here on a year's furlough when war broke out with Japan. Nick was seven years old at that time, having first been brought to China at the age of three months.

"I learned Chinese just as I did English when we were living in Anhwei province, but that five-year lay-off was too long, and I forgot almost all of it," says Nick.

City Grocers Explain Bare Shelves—

'War' of Shortages Continues

The war may be over, but the food shortage wasn't helped much by the advent of peace.

First and most mysterious on the list of wanted but scarce items is meat. Four reasons for the meat shortage were given by several Iowa City food merchants.

(1) Black market operations.

(2) Lend-lease and shipments abroad.

(3) Past consumption was too great, with a resulting depletion of stock.

(4) Deliberate withholding by the cattle dealers in hope of rising prices.

Whatever the reason for its scarcity, meat dealers can see no letup until next fall when the new cattle will be ready for the market.

Sugar-Bases Short Because of the sugar shortage all commodities with a sugar base will be scarce for sometime yet. This includes such items as soft drinks, candies and jello.

Corn syrup, which once was in great favor as a sugar substitute, will continue to be elusive until the new corn crop is harvested. The poor corn crop last year is the chief reason for the absence of the syrup now.

Shortening, salad dressings and other foodstuffs with an oil base are also conspicuous in their scarceness. An increase in oil production seems to be the only remedy for the situation.

Soap Appearing Again Soap, which sent housewives on a harried store-to-store search not long ago, is becoming more plentiful. While not all brands are available in large quantities, there is no complete dearth of this product. But erratic shipments still result in limited supplies.

By saving used kitchen fats housewives can help alleviate the fat and soap shortages that exist and help both the grocer and consumer return to a peacetime basis.

Godin des Odonais, French naturalist, traveled along the banks of the Amazon river, Brazil, for eight years, about 1765. He prepared illustrations of hundreds of animals and birds, many of them unknown before, and collected more than 10,000 species of plants, all of which he gave, in 1773, to the museum of natural history at Paris on his return to France.

City, Student Groups Plan for Emergency Food Drive May 12

University fraternities, sororities, campus dormitory units, grocers, banks, restaurants, schools and churches and Iowa City clubs are making preparations to meet quotas in the forthcoming Emergency Food collection in Johnson county beginning May 12.

Some dormitory units, sororities and fraternities have already reduced their menus, and have made arrangements to contribute canned goods and cash donations. In response to messages received from the National Emergency Food collection headquarters, campus units are saving boxes in which food will be packaged for overseas shipment.

The University World Affairs Forum has placed barrels in each grocery store where shoppers can donate food to the drive.

All Iowa City clubs and social organizations have been asked to donate cans contributions and to charge members cans of food for admission to meetings. They have also been urged to eliminate refreshments during the drive. Several clubs have already made plans for "starvation" luncheons.
