Truman Silences Wallace, Denies U.S. Plans Attack on Russia

Secretary Will Remain On Cabinet

Wallace Pledges 'No Speeches' Until End Of Peace Conference

By WILLIAM R. SPEAR WASHINGTON (AP)

President Truman silenced Secretary of Commerce Wallace last night, while keeping him in the cabinet, and rushed out a reassurance that this nation has no idea of attacking Russia.

Wallace, in a letter made public Tuesday, said "a school of military thinking" advocated a preventive war on Russia before the Soviets have atom bombs. Wallace denounced such thinking.

Mr. Truman took two decisive steps in short order late yesterday:

1. He arranged for a gag on Wallace for the duration of the Paris Peace conference. Coincidentally, it may last through much of the congressional campaign as well.

2. He got from Secretary of War Patterson and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal a joint letter completely disavowing any such "thinking" as Wallace referred to, and had his aides release it to newsmen immediately without comment.

This was the upshot yesterday of a momentous discussion lasting two hours and 23 minutes, between the secretary of commerce and President Truman. The decision apparently represented both a compromise and a truce between Wallace and advocates of Secretary of State Byrnes.

Wallace, whose demands for more conciliatory treatment of Russia churned up an international storm, emerged grinning from the president's office and read a statement scribbled on a scrap of paper.

"The president and the secretary of commerce had a most detailed and friendly discussion after which the secretary reached the conclusion he would make no public statements or speeches until the foreign ministers conference in Paris is concluded."

Asked whether he was remaining in the cabinet, Wallace told reporters he was. Top administration officials had said before the meeting that President Truman apparently was bent on silencing him or forcing his resignation.

On the White House steps where reporters followed him, Wallace was asked what he meant by the "foreign ministers conference in Paris" and he said he meant the peace conference now going on in Paris.

Leaders of the participating nations are striving to conclude this conference in October and if they succeed Wallace may still have an opportunity to speak in the election campaign.

Wallace made plain that he was sticking to his foreign policy view though silenced for the time being. Asked whether he stood on his Madison Square Garden speech of last Thursday, which conflicted in many ways with the policies of Secretary of State Byrnes, he replied: "Absolutely."

However, he said he would cancel speeches scheduled for the near future. They include a radio speech next Monday night and an address scheduled for next Tuesday at Providence, R. I.

Besieged by reporters anxious for every detail of one of the biggest news stories the capital has had for weeks, Wallace told them:

"The president is very confident of peace with Russia." Questioned as to why he was (See WALLACE, page 6)

Military Heads Deny Charge

WASHINGTON (AP)—The secretaries of war and navy declared last night that they knew of no responsible army or navy officer "who has ever advocated or even suggested a policy or plan of attacking Russia."

In a joint letter to President Truman, released by the White House, they said there was "no basis" for a statement by Secretary of Commerce Wallace that a school of military thinking is advocating "a preventive war, an attack on Russia now before Russia has atomic bombs."

Military heads declared, "There is no basis for this statement. There is no such military thinking in the war or navy departments. We know of no responsible officer in the army or navy who has ever advocated or even suggested a policy of plan of attacking Russia."

The Wallace letter was one released Tuesday without White House approval, which the commerce secretary wrote to President Truman last July.

It advocated that even at the risk of being charged with appeasement of Russia, the United States should recognize Soviet rights to security.

Wallace said thoughts of attacking Russia were "not only immoral but stupid."

War Tribunal Learns—

Tojo Confident of Victory in '40

TOKYO (AP)—Hideki Tojo was so confident of victory that he told Germany in 1940 only a part of Japan's army could crush the United States, the war crimes tribunal heard yesterday.

The prosecution, opening the Axis phase of its world conspiracy charges against Tojo and other war-time leaders of the beaten empire, unrolled a story of duplicity, rivalry and fear between Japan and Germany.

Netherlands Presents Resolution on Balkan Border Dispute Issue

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y. (AP)—The Netherlands last night called upon the United Nations security council to ask the governments of Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria to stop "regrettable incidents" along their national frontiers.

Dr. Zelco N. Van Kieffens, the Netherlands delegate, presented a formal resolution to the council after the United States had suggested that a council fact-finding commission inquire into the "unsettled and disquieting situation" along the northern frontiers of Greece and the problem of national minorities in that area.

Herschel V. Johnson, U. S. delegate, also hit at Poland for bringing the Polish boundary issue into the security council debate on the Soviet Ukrainian complaint that the Greek government, supported by British troops in Greece, was threatening the peace of the Balkans. He said this was not the time nor the place for a discussion of Poland's western frontier.

Great Britain tentatively supported the United States suggestion but Russia's Andrei A. Gromyko, president, charged it was a "tactical maneuver aimed at deflecting attention" from the Ukrainian charges to other matters.

Alexandre Parodi, of France, indicated support of Johnson.

Cafe Owners Petition OPA In Ft. Dodge

FORT DODGE (AP)—At the suggestion of Walter D. Kline, Iowa OPA director, Fort Dodge restaurant operators will present to the local price panel today their protest against an OPA rollback of meat-meal prices.

Kline met late yesterday with operators of about 30 Fort Dodge restaurants who closed their places Tuesday in protest against the OPA order of the night before, which directed them to return to prices charged last June 30.

Following the action taken at Fort Dodge, apparently one of the first cities in the nation to face closed restaurants, operators of more than 100 eating places in more than a dozen Iowa cities have closed or plan to close soon.

Operators in many cities of the state adopted a "watchful waiting" attitude, in the hope that OPA would revise its order. Cedar Rapids operators declined to follow Fort Dodge's lead, and Fort Madison, Des Moines and Fairfield restaurant owners were among those watching the situation.

Also closed were restaurants at Oskaloosa and Creston. Those in Waterloo, Shell Rock, Cedar Falls, Waverly, Iowa Falls, Jesup, Gilbertville, Nevada, Manchester and Iowa City plan to close soon.

Meanwhile, Fort Dodge restaurants were expected to remain closed at least this morning but there were indications the eating places might reopen some time during the day.

Kline's suggestion to the restaurant group was made after he was asked what could be done in order to get eating places open without violating OPA regulations. Kline advised the operators to present their cases individually to the price panel, saying he would not state publicly what relief this panel might provide.

At the suggestion of Lyle Schrader, one of the restaurant owners, it was voted to have Dwight G. Rider, attorney for the group, accompany Kline to a meeting of the operators. The meeting has been set for this morning, after which the operators will decide on time for reopening their places of business.

Charges that the OPA was resorting to buck passing tactics by suggesting meetings with the price panel were hurled by Schrader at the OPA chief who declined comment and assured the operators of fair treatment.

At the conclusion of meeting Kline implied that undoubtedly the Washington OPA office was considering problems of the restaurant men but refused elaboration.

RESTAURANT OWNERS SEEK RELIEF FROM OPA

RELIEF FROM OPA rollback provisions is being asked by at least 35 local restaurant owners, several of whom are shown above. Signing the resolution to close Wednesday, Sept. 25, "until further notice," unless they secure revision of the ruling, is J. F. (Doug) Fairbanks of the D and L Grill. From left to right, they are: H. J. Reichardt of Reich's cafe, newly elected president of the Iowa City restaurant association reorganized yesterday for this action; Angeline Karas of Strand confectionery, secretary-treasurer; Fairbanks; Michael Woolf, of Smith's cafe (background); George W. Davis, manager of the Hotel Jefferson, and J. P. Gordon of Gordon's Sandwich shop.

MANY STUDENTS PATRONIZE LOCAL CAFES

CROWDED CONDITIONS in Iowa City restaurants, as shown by this overflow of students awaiting service in a local cafe recently, led C. Woody Thompson, director of student affairs, to call the threatened closing of local restaurants a "calamity." President Virgil M. Hancher says no students should leave school because of the situation, but most university officials declined to say what plans were being made to accommodate students who eat regularly in downtown eating places.

Russia Uses 2-3's Rule

PARIS (AP)—Russia invoked the two-thirds rule in a peace conference commission for the first time yesterday, indicating an intention to fight in the plenary session and in the foreign ministers council against at least some of the decisions she opposed.

At the same time the Soviet Union proposed in another commission session to limit the authority of the United Nations-appointed governor in the projected free territory of Trieste to a mere veto power over legislation.

Russian Deputy Foreign Minister A. I. Vishinsky told the subcommittee studying a permanent Trieste statute that he opposed giving the governor the right to initiate legislation, as proposed in drafts submitted by Britain, the United States and France.

In the Bulgarian political and territorial commission Russia was defeated, 5 to 3, in her opposition to a British-American amendment to refer treaty enforcement disputes to the United Nations international court of justice. Soviet Delegate Nicolai V. Novikov then demanded a minority report to the peace conference's plenary session.

Russia, White Russia, the Ukraine, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia voted against the amendment, which was supported by France, Australia, Greece, India, New Zealand and South Africa.

Restaurant, Hotel Groups in Mass Protest Against OPA's Meat Menu Ceiling Order

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The OPA's action in rolling back meat menu prices to June 30 levels brought a nationwide chorus of protest yesterday from hotel and restaurant groups, including telegrams to the president, predictions of court action and statements that restaurants would be forced to close.

Forty-five New Hampshire restaurant operators wired President Truman, demanding action to ease the "situation caused by the OPA rollback."

Protests also were sent to the president and OPA Director Paul Porter by the Rochester, N. Y., branch of the International Stewards club and by the Monroe County Restaurant and Liquor Dealers association.

A test case on the roll back in the U. S. emergency court of appeals is planned, according to a joint announcement in New York city by George R. Le Sauvage, chairman of the government relations committee of the National Restaurant association, and by John L. Hennessy, chairman of the food committee of the American Hotel association.

They said that "this latest action by the OPA has brought about a crisis which is threatening the very life of the public feeding industry."

Meat supplies were very low in New York city. The Ohio State Restaurant association said it would seek an injunction against enforcement of the order. The association also appropriated $10,000 as a defense fund for members cited by the OPA for refusing to comply with price ceilings.

Ray Flint, executive secretary of the Michigan Restaurant and Caterers' association, planned to ask for a moratorium of 72 hours before the OPA order became effective, saying it was "physically impossible" to make changes immediately.

Frank J. Wiffler, executive vice president of the National Restaurant association, termed the OPA order "discriminatory" and said in Chicago his group would ask for immediate decontrol of restaurant ceiling prices. He said a majority of the nation's restaurants would not be able to continue under the order.

8 Men Killed in Crash Of PBV Near Seattle

SEATTLE (AP)—Bodies of seven men were found yesterday evening in the tangled wreckage of a naval PBV plane but darkness hampered search for the eighth man aboard when the plane hopped from Whidby Island in Pudget Sound, on a 30-minute flight to Seattle during a rainstorm Monday.

The bodies were left at the scene, in the wooded foothills of the Cascade range some 45 minutes northeast of here, and guards were posted pending resumption of the search at daybreak.

Local Owners Act in Protest To OPA Rule

35 Iowa City Cafes Agree to Shut Down Pending Price Relief

By KEITH SPALDING Daily Iowan City Editor

Thirty-five Iowa City restaurant owners yesterday stood unanimously behind a resolution to close restaurants and food departments next Wednesday "until further notice" unless they secure price relief from OPA rollback edict issued Monday.

In stating their reasons for the action, the restaurant owners declared:

(1) That the new OPA regulation reverting meal prices to June 30 levels is unjust to the restaurant industry.

(2) That the local owners, however, "realize fully their obligation at the site of the State University of Iowa to serve the thousands of students who depend on them for subsistence."

Asked what effect the threatened close-down would have on university facilities, President Virgil M. Hancher said:

"The report that 3,500 students will be deprived of eating places by the closing of Iowa City restaurants does not conform to information available to university officials."

"Dining facilities of various types from dormitories to homes for about 8,300 students are available without local restaurants."

President Hancher did not give a breakdown of the figures for various dormitories and university dining services, but said no students should leave Iowa City because of reported action of local restaurants.

"When classes open Monday plans will have been developed to meet any emergency which may arise from curtailment of dining facilities in the community," the president said.

He said that additional students over the 8,300 figure could be absorbed by various dining units in case the situation becomes serious.

Dean C. Woody Thompson, director of student affairs, termed the situation a "calamity" and said there had been some general discussions concerning what might be done.

"No decision has been made as yet, but something must be and will be done quickly," he declared.

Ted Reiner, head of the university dining service, said there had been no definite plans made but that every possible effort would be made to accommodate students.

He declined to say whether the Iowa Union dining service can handle 2,000 to 3,000 students if necessary.

At the afternoon meeting, a modified resolution was proposed by Reichardt and Morris T. Lubin suggested seeking aid from the mayor and President Hancher.

By unanimous consent, the final resolution was drawn up by a committee appointed by Reichardt.

Those who will contact the mayor and President Hancher today are J. F. Fairbanks, chairman of the committee, J. P. Gordon, Michael Woolf, Reichardt and Angeline Karas.

The group resolved itself into a reorganization of the Iowa City Restaurant association, inactive since 1937. Reichardt was elected president and Miss Karas was elected secretary-treasurer.

Miss Karas said that only a few restaurants were not represented at the meeting and that those not represented had said they would (See RESTAURANTS, page 6)

One Wrong Doesn't Deserve Another

In deciding yesterday to close practically all of Iowa City's eating places next Wednesday in a mass protest against OPA's recent restoration of meat-meal ceilings, the local restaurant owners set the stage for something short of catastrophe.

Their action, however, was not entirely without reason when they met yesterday to reactivate the local restaurant association and pass upon this most important decision.

To argue that the new price order is fair to restaurant proprietors is foolish. There is no doubt that restoration of ceilings to June 30 levels, based on April, 1943, prices, makes it impossible for restaurants to realize a profit on meat meals sales.

Their protest is justified and they certainly cannot be condemned for airing their views to the public and to their elected representatives in congress. That is the democratic way.

But the question is, are they right in endangering the public welfare by refusing to serve those who depend on them for food? As far as Iowa City is concerned, the restaurant owners' decision to close and thus refuse their services to the public is no different than a strike by organized workers. The miners, trainmen, auto workers, seaman, etc., were and are being widely condemned for tying up industry and commerce and injuring the public welfare by striking for higher wages. Change the word wages to prices and you have the same situation here.

There were many proprietors attending yesterday's meeting who were a little more thoughtful than the others and who tried to impress upon their colleagues that they shouldn't be too hasty. Those men, unfortunately, were in the minority and their pleas fell on deaf ears.

There were a few restaurant owners attending the meeting who were not interested only in forcing OPA to rescind this one particular order but in breaking the back of the government agency entirely. One proprietor was heard to remark, "If we don't cooperate with the packers, we won't get anywhere," meaning, of course, that the restaurants should go along with the packers in withholding goods from the consumers in order to demolish what is left of the price control structure.

In view of such opinions which apparently were shared by many of the people at the meeting, we wonder if the decision was well enough thought out. Opposing OPA and working for its abolition by peaceful and democratic methods is one thing; but attempting to destroy it by methods which inevitably will harm a great portion of the public is quite another.

Some 4500 students—to say nothing of the townspeople—depend on restaurants for food. It is doubtful that university dining halls, even if expanded to capacity, could accommodate this extra load. No matter how you look at it, a general shutdown of Iowa City restaurants would cause extreme difficulty.

OPA has obviously erred; this newspaper feels that the restaurant owners have also erred. Since correction of the first error would cancel the second, let us hope that OPA will rescind its ill-considered order before it is too late.

Green also is sending additional letters specifically endorsing or opposing many congressmen.

U.S. Art Called 'American Tragedy'

(By Jane Watson Crane in the Washington Post)

Cyril Connolly is an English critic with a reputation for cleverness. This summer he had occasion to review the big show of American paintings sent by the United States under the auspices of the National Gallery for display at the Tate Gallery in London.

Borrowing a title from the late Theodore Dreiser, Connolly bluntly calls the show "An American Tragedy."

In two columns in the New Statesman and Nation, he traces the progress of American art from sturdy provincial painters to what he terms "the ignorant but well-nourished armies of the thirties."

As he sees it, the "tragedy" has unfolded in four stages.

ACT I of this drama, he calls "Once-Upon-a-Time." This was the tranquil era when all good artists painted like Englishmen.

ACT II is the romantic period or "the high moment" when God's country was still as God had made it and the artists strove to capture its wild romantic scenery on monumental canvases.

ACT III represents "the aftermath" or post-Civil War era, when Whistler and other American esthetes fled from the vulgar commercialism of the "new dollar-glutted America."

ACT IV is called "Retribution" or "Too Late!" This is the era of the big art boom.

"Shattered by 60 years of quantitative Philistinism," writes the English critic, "the American art world flies to atoms. Guilty millionaires flock to endow galleries and scholarships. Newspapers boast American talent, primitives are discovered and collected. WPA frescoes small town halls and country postoffices. Every kind of trick and inn flourish." But the big boom results in the big bust. He finds the results "lamentable—lamentable."

Since more than 200 paintings were sent across the water for this show, the reviewer has the alternative of mentioning a few by name, or none. Connolly chose the first course.

Congress Booklet Claims—

Ivan Is Free

—In Theory Only

(Last of four articles digesting the booklet "Communism in Action," issued by the legislative reference service of the library of congress. Statements of fact are presented as statements of reference service findings and not as original Associated Press reporting.)

By SIGRID ARNE
 WASHINGTON (AP)—How "free" is a Russian compared to an American?

The Russian constitution says he is just as free, with a couple of extra guarantees thrown in like the constitutional right to a job.

But in actual practice the Russian is only as free as the Communist party (a very small percentage of the Russian population) says he is. The constitution is not legally binding.

Communists say Russia is the "highest form of democracy in the world," because there is no "capitalist exploitation of labor."

But there is exploitation in Russia. Most "profits" from Russian enterprises—factory, farm, mine, or forest—go to the state. And state funds are spent in such a way that there is a Russian elite which lives at much higher standards than the masses.

No one in Russia lives on savings inherited from an ancestor, as the U. S. has. But the 1936 constitution permits people to "inherit personal property."

The Russian is "free" to earn his own living. Actually recent decrees have bound him to his job on the threat of reduced social security benefits. There are severe penalties for being absent one day without good excuse, clocking in late, knocking off early, idling either at work or over meals.

Whether he's a factory hand or a farm peasant, the Russian is tied into a wide recreational program which is intended to fit him for "labor and national defense."

He has reading rooms, athletic groups, clubs, theaters, museums, rest homes—all provided by the state. But all of them jam Communist party politics down his throat in his rest hours.

The one freedom which the Soviets do seem to work out is freedom from discrimination for reason of race sex or nationality. Any one who draws such a distinction is subject to punishment.

The government supports all sorts of group cultural expressions—theater, dance and music. But this "culture" has to be "proletarian in essence." A playwright in Irkutsk can turn out a show, but somewhere in it he is expected to put in a wallop for Communist politics, much as though Noel Coward could have produced plays here the past 14 years only if he had taken cracks at the Republican party.

Russia has a secret ballot and all adult citizens get to vote—but all the candidates are hand-picked Communists.

Russia says it grants free speech, press and assembly. But the government owns all newspapers, printing presses, pub-

James D. White's Interpreting The News...

The growing uproar over the Henry Wallace stand on American foreign policy illustrates, if nothing else, how terribly much more important foreign affairs are becoming in the conduct of this nation.

Whether you agree or disagree with Mr. Wallace, or with his critics, this change has been vastly accelerated by the war and underlies the whole situation. There is a sense of urgency, perhaps not much talked of but almost universally recognized that sharpens the arguments from every side.

To illustrate, 15 years ago this country heard that a bomb had exploded on some railway tracks in Mukden, in Manchuria. Then came news that the Japanese army had used this as an excuse to seize the city of Mukden, and then the whole of Manchuria, World War II was in the works.

Although Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson formally condemned this act of aggression, Manchuria was a long way off and the American people as a whole let it slide.

Today we know that Manchuria is not nearly so far away, that the oceans about us are no wider than the range of a guided missile, and Americans are not nearly so inclined to let things slide.

The fact that we are the world's wealthiest and most powerful country thrusts upon us the burden of leadership among smaller or weaker countries who look to us for the cues by which they shape their own policies one way or another.

Many foreigners still entertain grave fears that by habit and constitution we are not ready for this. As for ourselves, we face the problem of proving that we are ready for world leadership, and our problem is also one of proving it without sacrificing the liberties we treasure. That may be our biggest problem, and these are growing pains as we square away to the job.

sound and fury may come nothing better than the macabre, revolting type of painting exemplified by the work of Marvin Le Loraine Albright.

On this note he takes leave of the show, too bored or too exhausted to pursue the matter further.

But should this seem too encouraging Connolly ends by saying that out of all the present to veterans must be backed by full price controls, regardless of when it is made. Housing for veterans, the bonus payments, and pensions, all depend on maintaining fair prices.

The "Bonus now" advocates say that backpay adjustment is inevitable—everyone grants that—and they insist that it can become a political football, wasting a lot of time and money, if it is further delayed.

The principle argument against paying a bonus now would logically be that of proven friends of the veteran, or veterans themselves. Take the anti-argument from Representative Melvin Price of Illinois, an ex-GI with a congressional record of supporting price controls and the constitutional rights of labor. Congressman Price, a member of the house veterans committee, says, "I haven't been getting much mail on the bonus. A few letters here and there, but nothing like a trend. Everybody around here grants that there will be a bonus some time, but I feel that the time is not now. In the first place, any sum of money paid to veterans now would be worth a great deal less than it would have been in 1939, or that it might be in some more normal time in the future."

Then, too, I think the veteran will need the money more in a few years, after he has gotten settled down a little."

Mr. Price's statement was made before the end of the summer session, at a time when he was working desperately to save price controls, and before the unemployment among veterans had increased to its present critical proportions.

The first test of how far the bonus agitation has developed will come in the American Legion convention in November. Several state delegations have passed bonus-now resolutions.

From its past record, the Legion has waited for sentiment to get pretty loud before it acts. The first convention of the biggest of all veterans organizations, at Minneapolis in 1919, passed a resolution against the bonus. It took another decade for the Legion to change its position to backing adjusted pay. The VFW had been hammering for several years before the Legion picked up the ball and scored the touchdown behind this excellent blocking. While the VFW national meeting in Boston in September is almost certain to endorse its bonus program passed last year, and many of the smaller veteran organizations have already swung into line, the mighty legion is still in a decisive position on most veteran issues.

In a way the curious resolution considered by the American Veterans Committee in its first convention in June of this year reflects vet sentiment slowly bubbling to the surface. It stated that the organization opposed a bonus, unless by March 1, 1947, veterans' unemployment and housing problems had not been solved. One AVC member said this was like delaying the establishment of a fire department in the hope that houses would stop burning down by March 1, 1947. The AVC resolution inferred that there was a genuine need for a bonus if things went on as they were. But the delegates defeated the resolution and passed nothing in its stead.

The fact is that a bonus to 15 million veterans, more than one-tenth of the population, would spread itself through millions of families which contain both veteran and former war worker, in the same way that GI allotments had a general effect of lifting American family incomes.

The ex-doughboy of 1917 used his bonus to good advantage during the depression. Most bonus checks went to saving homes caught in the crash years in which more than a million homes were foreclosed. The rest of his modest $900 went to similar goods of life, which benefited the entire economy. What the ex-GI would do with his "adjusted compensation," when multiplied by 15 million veterans, promises to not only save him from economic shipwreck, but to lift the whole country into prosperity. These are the arguments of the "bonus-now" veterans, and these are the points which will concern the veteran conventions of the fall, and the congress of January.

Requests Students To Invite Fathers

All students who want their fathers to come here for the traditional Dad's Day weekend Sept. 27 and 28 should extend their own invitations for the weekend, according to Dr. Earl E. Harper, chairman of the Dad's Day committee.

Dr. Harper explained that since the weekend will take place so soon after school starts, it will be impossible for the committee to secure the necessary addresses from the registrar's office to send invitations to each student's father.

Featured activities for the weekend will include the Dad's Day dance Friday night at Iowa Union and the Purdue vs. Iowa football game Saturday, Sept. 28.

Dr. Harper said that students may take their fathers to the dance as spectators if they wish. Music for the dance, the first all-university party of the year, will be furnished by George Olsen and his band.

Tickets, which will cost $2.50 a couple, will go on sale Monday at the Iowa Union desk.

U.S. Educators Select University of Iowa For Honor Roll Post

The University of Iowa has been selected as one of 100 schools on the Honor Roll of American Public Schools, the result of a poll of state superintendents and other prominent educators from all over the country.

The poll was conducted in connection with an article, "The Hope of American Education," by Harlan Logan, which appears in the Oct. 1 issue of Look.

The schools on the honor roll were chosen on the basis of their progress in overcoming what Look listed in an earlier issue as the six greatest weaknesses of American education: confused objectives, outdated yardsticks, unpaid, misdirected teachers, inadequate equipment, inefficient techniques, a snail-like pace.

Church Group Presents Plan

The program for the coming year of the University of Life, was announced last night by its director, Mrs. Lowell Boyer.

The executive committee of the interdenominational group of high school students representing nine Protestant churches in Iowa City, met with Mrs. Boyer at the Wesley Foundation and decided to hold meetings in different churches each Sunday at 7:30 p. m.

This year the four main sessions will be: "Why the Bible?" conducted by Dr. Willard Lampe; "The Living Church," with Rev.

J. E. Waery; "Learning to Live Together," with Dr. Ralph Ojemann; and a fourth class yet to be announced.

Each meeting will consist of a half-hour worship service, a class meeting, and will close with a recreation period. Joy Ashton is in charge of the recreation program, and Douglas Dirk will plan the worship services.

Several out-of-door meetings are planned for the beginning of

SUI Fraternity Rush Week Ends Today; 700-800 Men Sign

With 700 to 800 men signed up for rushing, fraternity rush week enters its last day here today. Pledging will start tomorrow at 8 a. m.

Although open house has been held at all fraternities since Monday, all events at the houses today will be open only to men with invitations. Today also will be the last day for registration for rushing at the desk in Iowa Union, according to Bill Reis, A3 of Omaha, Neb., Interfraternity rushing chairman.

Since there are no quotas as to how many men each fraternity may pledge, many of the fraternities will fill their houses and then pledge men who have already obtained housing for the year. Although it is impossible to estimate the number of men who will be pledged, Reis expressed doubt as to whether the 14 fraternities now active on campus could accommodate all the men who have signed up for pledging.

"If men aren't taken in," he said, "it isn't because they're not wanted but just because the fraternities can't handle them."

Lists of each fraternity's pledges will be taken to the Interfraternity desk at Iowa Union Friday.

To Meet for Golf

The Women's Golf association will meet for golf tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Iowa City country club. Last week's winners, Mrs. Chester Phillips and Mrs. Herbert Ries, will be in charge.

Those attending are asked to bring their own lunch.

The year. One will feature an out-of-door communion, another a trolley tramp and sack lunch.

The second meeting, on Oct. 6 will be held at the Island near City Park where the "tribes" will have their traditional ceremonial fires.

Louis Flattens Mauriello in Opening Round

THE POWER of Joe Louis' left is firmly planted on Tami Mauriello as the Bronx Barkeep is skyrocketed into the air in the first and only round of the heavyweight championship bout last night. (AP Wirephoto)

Bronx Barkeep Knocked-Out As Champ Keeps Promise

YANKEE STADIUM, New York (AP)—Joe Louis kept his promise last night to "make a quick one" against Tami Mauriello, but he kept the promise so well probably even he was surprised at what a short night's work it was.

He caved the roof in on the tubby Bronx barkeeper so completely and so rapidly with a fancy display of all his gaudy artillery, that he chalked up the second fastest knockout in heavyweight championship history. It took him just 2 minutes and 9 seconds to turn the trick—to beat the round man from uptown into a helpless hulk. And but for two right hand "crunchers" he missed by a shade a few seconds earlier, he might even have equalled his own world record—the 2.04 it took him to stiffen Max Schmeling in their return bout back in 1938 in this same ball yard.

Although he'd been saying right along in his training that it would be a short night's work, the Bomber might have let it last a bit longer than it did. At 211½ pounds—Tami scaled 198½—Joe was heavier than ever before in his 12 years career in the ring. Tami had youth—23 years to 32—on him, and Louis might have been inclined to feel him out for, say, a round, any way.

Tami walked out as he'd been expected to, with his fists flailing. And one of the very first flails—the first punch of the fight, in fact—caught Joe flush on the mouth, and for a moment there was a possibility that the taroom tender might do the impossible. Joe staggered halfway across the ring. There is no doubt he was hurt by this right-hand hammer that tore into his face. He bounced into the ropes. He blinked. He came out slowly to meet the rushing challenge of the dark-haired clouter who himself has a record of 51 knockouts in 77 professional starts.

He knew now he had to go to work, and right now. And that's exactly what he did. While it lasted it was fireworks all the way and the unexpectedly solid turnout of ringside customers and the faithful in the lower stands and the upper tier of this triple-decked ballpark were on their feet and roaring virtually every second of the way.

Tami's answer for it, as he told his pals later, was "I thought I had him, but I got too damned careless." But he just wasn't giving the Bomber enough credit. Despite his surprisingly heavy avoidance, this was more like the Joe Louis who had made a shambles of the heavyweights now for 12 years, who has held the beak-busting industry's richest prize since he ripped it from gallant Jim Braddock's brow back in June of 1937, who has run up the longest successful reign of all heavyweight champions—23 defenses and 23 triumphs.

It was a more fit Louis than the Bomber who knocked out Billy Conn in this same ring three months ago in his first trip to the post since he went into the army in 1942. The flabbiness and softer "bee" piled on during his army life was gone. He wasn't particularly excited that he weighed so much last night. He had trimmed down to 208 pounds two weeks ago and laid off his training chores for a week to prevent staleness. That boosted his poundage.

There was no doubt that when he cut loose his high hard one last night after Tami had staggered him once and later shook him up with a short left, he still packed all the old dynamite he ever exploded.

He caught up with Tami in a hurry and began belaboring him with his Sunday shots. Tami tried to hold on, but Joe wasn't having any. He tore loose simply by digging both hands to the body so deep that only the cuffs of his gloves were showing. He drilled a right hand over, and a gash opened alongside Tami's left eye that brought the red dripping.

Finally, in a neutral corner, he found the range and smashed a right hand flush on the chin. Tami went down like a building that has had its lower floor blown out from under it. He tried to get up at five, went down again, and took nine.

After punching the barkeeper around the ring once more, Joe again got within shooting distance of the bulls-eye, in the same neutral corner.

Tami probably never knew what hit him after the first couple of blows. It was impossible to count them, they came so fast and at such close range. Tami started to topple, like a tired tree in the forest. Slowly he sank as close to the corner as he could get, seeming to be trying to get clear out of the ring to escape the chopping block.

He got to one knee at seven, but couldn't make it the rest of the way. Tears were in his eyes as Referee Donovan reached ten. This was the first refereeing assignment Donovan has had since last March—the first since he was cleared in connection with the death of a friend in a street fight.

In his dressing room, Joe couldn't say just which punch was the crusher that put Tami away. "There was an awful lot of them," he recalled. "I'll have to see the movies, though, to find out which one was the last. "I'm not gonna fight again until February," he went on.

"Then it might be Bruce Woodcock (British heavyweight champion who was knocked out by Mauriello here last May)." Joe insisted, too, that the first Mauriello right hand didn't hurt him. "I guess I was more surprised than anything," he said. It might be pointed out the customers were even more surprised.

His Leg Hangs Loose, but— Earley Top Placekicker At Notre Dame

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN SOUTH BEND, IND. (AP)—Little Fred Earley, who received a medical discharge from Annapolis because of a smashed right knee, will probably play only an hour or two for Notre Dame all season—but his place-kicks may mean the difference between victory and defeat for the Irish in several games.

In practices, the 21-year-old, 170-pound prep star from Parkersburg, W. Va. has stepped into placement kicks with the grace of a ballet dancer—although his right leg, the one he boots with, literally hangs from the knee joint. In two operations, one performed by navy surgeons at Annapolis, all the cartilages in his knee—which he first injured in high school—have been removed.

Yet, Earley has tried 18 place-kicks in the last four days, sending the ball through the cross-bars perfectly on every one of them.

"I feel sure we have one of the best extra-point-getters in college football," enthused Coach Frank Leahy.

Earley first played the in-again-out-again role at Notre Dame in 1943, converting 10 times in 13 tries. It was Earley who gave the Irish a 14-13 decision over the Iowa Seahawks by booting two extra points.

"With all the cartilage gone now, I figure I might be a better kicker," said Earley. "My knee used to pop out sometimes when I kicked. Now it sorta wobbles when I walk or run, but it stays in the groove when I kick."

In 1944 at Annapolis, Earley played second string fullback. He had only a chance to kick twice. The Navy used him against Notre Dame. He went in after touchdowns twice and added extra points each time as Navy walloped the Irish 32-13.

Leahy isn't worrying about Earley's kicking leg. The little guy has gone and injured his left knee.

Claim Herman To Boss Bucs

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette said last night it had learned from an authoritative source that Billy Herman, veteran Boston Braves infielder, will be next manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates succeeding Frankie Frisch.

The newspaper said announcement of Herman's appointment will come before the start of the World Series in St. Louis on Oct. 2. It added Buc President Frank E. McKinney would be in Boston this week-end to close the deal, and said a player trade was in the making which would send Bob Elliott and another Pirate to Boston in exchange for Herman, outfielder Johnny Hopp and south-paw hurler Ed Wright.

Pirate officials declined to comment on the report.

Other baseball men rumored in line for the Pirate managership have been Bill Meyer, Joe McCarthy, Al Lopez and Bill Kechnie. Owner McKinley said some time ago that 11 men were being considered for the 1947 post, but did not name them other than to say that Frisch was one of the 11.

Pre-season football ticket sales in the Western Conference have confirmed predictions that all attendance records would be broken in 1946.

Sain Slows Cards' Flag Drive He's In The Dust, But Out

BOSTON (AP)—Johnny Sain, rubber-armed Boston righthander, last night pitched the Braves to a 2-1 victory over the National league leading St. Louis Cardinals. The loss reduced the Redbirds' lead over the Brooklyn Dodgers to a game and a half.

Sain, a curve-balling smoothie from Belleville, Arkansas, held the Red Birds in the palm of his hand until the ninth inning when Enos Slaughter's 18th homer of the year ruined his shutout bid. The tying run was on second base when he retired Joe Girola for the final out.

Harry Brecheen, Eddie Dyer's starting choice, had matched Sain pitch for pitch through four scoreless innings until the Braves manufactured two runs on one base hit, Dick Culler's double, in the fifth. That was enough to ruin the day for the Cardinals who had hoped to gain ground on the Brooklyn Dodgers, who were held to a split by Pittsburgh.

As matters stand now, the Cards still boasted a decided advantage over the Dodgers who now have 10 games to play as compared to nine for St. Louis before the season ends a week from Sunday. Any combination of nine Card wins or Dodger losses would give the Birds the flag.

Anderson Drills Hawks For Opener

Emphasis Placed On Punting, Passing In Final Sessions

Dr. Eddie Anderson took active charge of the Hawkeyes practice session yesterday and sent the squad through long punting and passing drills.

The emphasis in the punting sessions was on protection for the kicker with Dick Hoerner, Russ Fechter and "Big" Bob Smith doing the most consistent distance kicking. Hoerner is the regular fullback while Fechter is his understudy. Bob Smith is the right half.

New passers showed up when the Hawks shifted to offense with Emlen Tunnell and Bob Sullivan passing from the half-back positions.

In the drills, the first team backfield consisted of Lou King, quarterback Sullivan and Smith, halfbacks and Hoerner, fullback.

The second team backfield was piloted by Art O'Neill with Tunnell and John Tedore, halfbacks, and Fechter at fullback.

The first string line had Hal Shoener and Bob Phillips, at ends; Bill Kay and Jim Cozad, tackles; Roger Kane and Earl Banks, guards; and Jim Lawrence, center.

The regular guards, Bob Lid-

Moguls Not Pinching Pennies

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW YORK (AP)—The manner in which the major league magnates agreed to contract reforms suggested by the players indicates that maybe the picture of a typical club owner as a penny-pinching Simon Legree has been a little out of focus.

Nobody realized the great, warm hearts which beat in the breasts of the moguls or the anguish caused by the sad plight of the ball players. Why didn't the owners do something about it before? Why, nobody asked them.

That must have been the reason although there are some skeptical citizens who might suggest that the Mexican league trouble and the threat of a players' union might have something to do with it. Perish the thought.

Anyway, the most interesting innovation at the joint meeting of the club owners of both leagues from our standpoint did not concern contract reforms. It was the formation of an advisory council consisting of commissioner Happy Chandler, the presidents of each major league, a club owner from each league, a player from each league, and minor leaguer.

The interesting part of the new council is just what affect it might have on the powers of the commissioner. It is assumed that any problems coming before the council will be settled by vote, which means that Dixie Walker or Joe Di Maggio or any player who might be chosen to represent the players as a group would have just as much to say about such questions as the commissioner.

That seems to be quite a far cry from the days when the late commissioner K. M. Landis cracked the whip and everybody jumped. Landis was more or less a law unto himself, and his decisions, reached after going into conference with himself, were as final as death.

The readiness with which the magnates agreed to the player demands probably came as a surprise to the players themselves, who now probably are booting themselves for not making additional demands, such as time and a half for extra inning games and a percentage of the gate.

Aside from the threat of the Mexican league and a players' union, the requests, which will cost the club owners plenty of money, came at a most opportune time. If the magnates ever are mellow, they should be right now with attendance at an all-time peak and cashiers working overtime counting the receipts.

On the surface the players' suggestions do not appear unreasonable. Most of them involve the financial protection of the athletes, giving them a sense of security they heretofore have not enjoyed.

For those who believe ball players are overworked the suggestion that spring training shall not start earlier than March 1, starting in 1948, is worthy of note. That means the players will do their year's work in seven months, leaving five months to catch up on their hunting and fishing and checker playing.

A seven-month working year might seem pretty nice to an office worker or truck driver or ribbon salesman who looks forward avidly to his annual two weeks' vacation. But shucks, they don't have to dodge pop bottles and bean balls for a living.

Anyway, the modest demands of the athletes and the ready agreement of the club owners is a good omen for harmony in the sport. Now if the players can just sign a truce with the umpires everything will be lovely.

his first start for the Tribe since coming up from Oklahoma City, was slugged for circuit smashes by Sherry Robertson, Mickey Ver-

Newhouser Beats A's For No. 25

DETROIT (AP)—The Detroit Tigers came from behind for Hal Newhouser yesterday, beating the tailend Philadelphia Athletics 2 to 1 on Roy Cullenbine's 10th inning single with the bases loaded and two out as Newhouser hurled a three-hitter to become a 25-game winner for the third straight season. Newhouser, who has lost eight games, struck out 11 men.

Hal hurled hitless ball for the last seven innings to best Phil Marchildon, who had a four-hit shutout going into the ninth.

A pair of walks and George Kell's infield hit loaded the bases in the 10th for Cullenbine, who promptly provided the winning hit, his third of the day, scoring Kell from third to break up the game.

White Sox, Yankees Divide Twin Bill

CHICAGO (AP)—Earl Caldwell, 41-year-old veteran of the bullpen, was credited with his 13th victory of the year against only four losses yesterday as the Chicago White Sox divided a double header with the New York Yankees.

Caldwell took over for Frank Papish in the fifth inning of the second game and, although he was hit rather freely, held the Yanks at bay while the Sox went on to win 9-7. The Yanks' behind Spud Chandler's seven-hit pitching, won the opener 4-0.

Chicago collected 13 hits off Ernie Bonham and three successors with Don Kolloway and Cass Michaels each getting three safe blows.

Dodgers Split With Pirates

BROOKLYN (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates dealt Brooklyn's National league pennant chances a severe blow yesterday when they held the Dodgers to a split in their double header.

Lefy Fritz Ostermuller, Dodger castoff, held his former mates to nine hits in pitching the seventh place Bucs to a 3-2 victory in the opener. Ralph Branca, who shut out the St. Louis Cardinals last week, duplicated with a five-hitter 3-0 performance against the Pirates in the second game.

As a result the Dodgers trail the front-running Redbirds by 1 1/2 games as the Cards lost to the Braves in Boston last night.

The Pirates landed on Kirby Higbe, mainstay of the Brooks' hurling corps, for two big blows, a second inning double by Billy Cox followed by Ralph Kiner 21st home run, to put the Dodgers on the defensive for the remainder of the game.

The Pirates made it 3-0 in the fifth.

The Dodgers salvaged the second game when Branca, the 20-year-old lad from Mt. Vernon, N. Y., who spun that surprise shutout victory over the Cards last week, came back to hold the Pirates scoreless with only five hits. Branca fanned seven and walked only two for his third victory.

Wallace Pledges 'No Speeches' Until Peace Conference Ends

WALLACE—

keeping quiet on foreign policy he replied:

"The fact that I am an honest man."

He said the question of his possible resignation did not arise in the talk with the president. Asked point blank if the president requested him to resign if he could not keep silent, he replied with a terse "No."

A crowd of perhaps 200 people pressed against the White House gates, waiting for a look at Wallace as he left.

The secretary was smiling and joshing as reporters trailed him to the door.

Once again he was asked what was responsible for his decision to keep quiet for a while and answered that is "because all the hungry wolves are here—that's the way the press determines things." There was no elaboration of this remark.

He said nobody knows, but he thinks the Paris conference will be over before the fall political campaign in this country winds up.

The only other person in on the meeting with Mr. Truman, Wallace said, was presidential secretary Charles G. Ross. He said there were no phone calls during the discussion, thereby eliminating any possibility that the trio might have talked with Secretary of State Byrnes in Paris.

Wallace returned to his office on the 5th floor of the commerce building at 6:06 p. m. and said that he had no further comment to make.

Asked by one reporter "Have you got everything patched up?" Wallace replied as he hurried down the corridor to his office: "Everything's lovely."

Byrnes' first lieutenant, under-secretary William L. Clayton, had two conferences with the chief executive before the hour of Wallace's appointment. Clayton was accompanied the first time by Donald Russell, an assistant secretary. His partner at the second session with president was Bernard Baruch, administration spokesman in the United Nations for the atomic control plan which Wallace specifically assailed.

Clayton declined to talk afterwards, but he is known to be insistent that any future speeches by Wallace on foreign policy be cleared first by the state department.

Meanwhile, however, the release Tuesday of a private letter which Wallace wrote the president on July 23 setting forth in greater detail the secretary's recommendations for an understanding with Russia—even at the risk of "appeasement" protests—incurred the chief executive's displeasure. Mr. Truman specifically "disapproved" the release. But it came about through an official mix-up and Wallace was not blamed.

The commerce department explained it was releasing the letter because of a copy "was filched from the files and is in the hands of a newspaper columnist." Drew Pearson then issued a statement demanding a retraction and declaring that "this document came into my possession in open and above-board fashion from sources which had no connection with his (Wallace's) department."

Wallace in turn issued this statement yesterday:

"I was gratified to learn that the columnist who had a copy of my letter of July 23 has stated categorically that he got it from sources outside of the department of commerce. I am happy to take his word and I will be interested in knowing where he did secure the letter."

Pearson commented that "Mr. Wallace must know that newspapermen's sources are confidential." He also announced that "in view of Mr. Wallace's statement I do not propose to take any legal proceedings against him."

Calls Wallace's Silence Promise 'Cowardly'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Commerce Wallace's announcement that he would make no more speeches until after the Paris peace conference ends was characterized by Rep. Slaughter (D., Mo.) yesterday as striking a "new low in cowardice so far as our foreign policy is concerned." Slaughter's remarks, made in an interview, were among several critical comments from both Republican and Democratic congressional sources.

On the other hand Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt declared at a Liberal party meeting in New York that she believed "Henry Wallace wants exactly what the president, the secretary of state and all of us want."

There was no immediate comment from state department officials.

In an address at Tifton, Ga., in which he mentioned no names, Senator George (D., Ga.), former chairman of the senate foreign relations committee and a close associate of Secretary of State Byrnes and Senator Connally (D., Tex.), incumbent committee chairman, contended that "we cannot stabilize the world if those in high positions of responsibility are not willing to support the government's policy."

In response to an inquiry of Tallahassee, Fla., Senator Pepper (D., Fla.), said that he had "nothing to say about any decision that Secretary Wallace might make about his own conduct."

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) declared in an interview in Ohio that President Truman had "attempted to play both ends against the middle—to appeal to the left wing with Wallace's favorable words about Russia while appealing to more conservative sentiment by supporting Secretary Byrnes."

From Rep. Engle (R., Mich.) came the suggestion that "when a cabinet member does not agree with his president, he should get out of the cabinet."

Rep. Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) said in a Chicago speech that dismissal of Wallace from the cabinet is "the only way to retrieve the fine work that James Byrnes and Arthur Vandenberg are doing."

"If things move ahead in the spirit of Mr. Wallace, two ideologies will clash—one of them must win. There is only one answer to this conflict of ideologies. We must embellish freedom with the same kind of pageantry that Communism is using to sell itself to the world."

At his home in Pawnee City, Neb., Sen. Kenneth Wherry (R., Neb.) said "I don't think this Wallace thing is serious. I think he is going to stay in the cabinet and will be the chief man in the New Deal political campaign."

Father Flanagan, Ladd Address Students

SIOUX CITY (AP)—The best protector of a wayward child who has wandered away from the influence of his home is the right kind of police officers, Rt. Rev. Msgr. E. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town near Omaha, Neb., yesterday told 200 Iowa police officers meeting here.

Father Flanagan and Mason L. Ladd, dean of the University of Iowa law school, were the principal speakers on the afternoon program of the second day of activities of the annual convention of the Iowa Association of Chiefs of Police.

Msgr. Flanagan described the "right kind of police officer" as the "type of officer who finds the youth in dark places, in places of temptation, listening to the wrong kind of philosophies. Next to the family, he is the boy's best friend."

Dean Ladd told the peace officers that the nation can rely on the returning veteran for the fullest support in law enforcement and in bettering society, because the veteran knows full well the meaning of America.

George Gibbons, Sioux City Commissioner of Public Safety, also spoke on the afternoon program.

Yesterday's activities concluded with a lunch and a dance. Closing sessions of the convention will be held today.

OPA Considers Meeting Restaurant Demands

WASHINGTON (AP)—An OPA spokesman said last night modification of its recent order in rolling back meat menu prices to June 30 levels is possible if the restaurant industry can present proof the new ceilings are too low.

The law requires the OPA to give restaurants the equivalent of their 1936-1939 earnings, the spokesman said, and if the operators can show their earnings under the new order will be below that figure the OPA is required to make an adjustment.

RESTAURANTS—

follow any decision of the association.

According to Mrs. Nell Alderman, manager of the Union dining room, the Union is at present serving 500 persons per meal and is running at near capacity.

According to restaurant owners, who complained that the university dining services are not controlled by OPA, approximately 4,000 students regularly patronize downtown restaurants.

President Hancher's figures, however, indicated that only about 700 students would be seriously affected by the threatened strike.

The restaurant association members agreed to delegate a seven-man committee to meet with President Hancher and Mayor Wilber J. Teeters "to ask them to use their influence in behalf of our cause."

The meeting will take place in President Hancher's office at 3 p. m. today, according to George W. Davis, manager of the Hotel Jefferson.

Davis called a meeting of approximately 18 restaurant men yesterday morning after receiving a telegram from the Iowa Restaurant association secretary in Des Moines.

The telegram suggested a resolution to close all restaurants "if OPA rollback provisions are not rescinded within seven days."

Following a motion by H. J. Reichardt, of Reich's cafe, the matter was held over until 3 p. m.

for a general meeting of restaurant owners.

At the suggestion of several members, the group decided to set membership dues at $10 yearly to cover cost of telegrams and other campaign expenses to secure revision of the OPA order.

Telegrams from Senators Bourke B. Hickenlooper and George Wilson were read. In effect, these messages said the senators were protesting the order and asking that it be rescinded.

Restaurant owners pointed out that OPA prices of the June 30 level are really the ones based on April 4 to 10, 1943, and that since that time prices have been allowed to rise to the point where a good many owners are "losing money."

Pressed on this point, they said the prices would not allow them a "fair profit" to operate their businesses and declared that wages as well as prices have taken large rises in recent months.

They also explained that the new ceilings affect only restaurants and that there has been no subsequent placing of price ceilings on foodstuffs or produce wholesalers since June 30 to protect restaurant profit margins.

J. F. Fairbanks, representing the D and L Grill, urged against hasty action and cautioned the restaurant men that they have "an obligation to these four or five students who depend on us to serve them."

He pointed out, however, that restaurants would be unable to continue operation under present prices, and urged united action following any decision of the association.

Several owners remarked that they did not want Iowa City to be an "example" in the state and that any action by owners at this time when Iowa City is crowded with the influx of students might cause "ill feeling" toward restaurant owners.

One member asked whether the meeting was called "just on account of these prices, or are we out to break OPA?"

"If we don't cooperate with the packers by not buying any meat, we'll never get anywhere," he said.

Another suggested that restaurants stay open if possible, even if only at noons, and said he believed "things would work themselves out."

Yet another suggested that a good many of the incoming students are veterans, "and those boys have to eat," but a veteran restaurant owner urged members of the association to "stand as an organization and lick this thing."

Considerable confusion was expressed at the meeting yesterday concerning whether eating places should immediately begin to operate under the rollback ruling or wait for official notice from OPA.

OPA officials last night said officially that prices should be rolled back, but said they had received no official notice of the action from Washington, D. C. offices.

Previously, they pointed out, news by radio and newspapers has been accepted as official notification of OPA orders.

Concerning menus and price lists collected yesterday from several restaurants, local OPA officials said they had been directed in a memorandum last week to collect sample menus, but did not know what they would be used for.

Isabel Smelser Files Suit for Divorce Here

Isabel Smelser filed suit in district court yesterday for a divorce from Everett Smelser on charges of cruelty.

Start Cugat Show Ticket Sale

Council Must Sell 4,500

Oct. 2 Deadline Set To Cover Guarantee, University Expenses

Advance ticket sales for the Xavier Cugat concert, to be given here Nov. 4, will start this morning at 8:30 at a desk in Iowa Union.

The student council, sponsor of the concert, must sell 4,500 tickets by Oct. 2 to cover Cugat's advance guarantee of $3,500 and the university's expenses of $1,000.

Directly in charge of the sales will be Dick Yoakam, G of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Dick Ives, A4 of Diagonal, and Howard Hensleigh, L3 of Iowa City. The ticket desk will be located in the Union, with council members on duty, all day today and tomorrow and Saturday morning.

Ives will be in charge of a drive to sell tickets through student housing units which will get underway Monday. The council also plans to set up a booth on campus where students may obtain tickets, which will cost $1 plus federal tax.

"If we can put this concert across, it will set a precedent for having more big name bands on campus in the future," Herb Olson, A3 of Winfield, council president, said. "One of the big student gripes in the past has been the lack of such band appearances here, now it's up to them to make the Cugat performance possible."

Olson explained that the university does not have funds available to underwrite such a concert, so the council arranged for a special contract with Cugat's agent, the Music Corporation of America, whereby the show could be financed by advance ticket sales.

Cugat show, which will feature some 41 performers, will start at 8:30 p. m. Nov. 4 and last for more than two hours.

Cugat will feature in the show Raul and Eva Reyes and Jose Munero.

An exclusive Columbia recording artist, Cugat and his band have appeared in such movies as "Bathing Beauty," "Two Girls and a Sailor," "Stage Door," "You Were Never Lovelier," "Weekend at the Waldorf," "Holiday in Mexico" and "No Leave, No Love."

Among Cugat's outstanding engagements have been appearances at the Waldor, Statler, Mark Hopkins, Stevens and Netherlands Plaza hotels, the Copacabana and the Palmer House in New York, Ciro's and the Trocadero in Hollywood and the Colony Club in Chicago.

On Oct. 5, 1941, Mrs. Fulgencio Batista, wife of the president of Cuba, conferred upon Cugat the Grand Cross of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes in behalf of her government. This medal, with the rank of commander, has been awarded to only three other recipients in the history of the Cuban republic.

Cugat was accorded this honor in recognition of his role in popularizing Cuban and other Latin music in this country.

Numbers such as "Begin the Beguine," written for Cugat by Cole Porter and Cugat's own "Take It Easy" are typical of his high tempo and style.

Born in Barcelona, Spain, Cugat was educated in music at the best conservatories in Europe in

RHUMBA KING XAVIER CUGAT, who will appear with his orchestra and a company of singers, dancers and entertainers Nov. 4 do a number for "Bathing Beauty" while Lina Romay dances the "Joropo Venezolano."

Anne Wilson Weds Edward J. Wiesner In Eldora Sept. 8

Anne Lindsey Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Cecile Wilson of Chisholm, Minn., became the bride of Edward J. Wiesner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wiesner of Eldora, Sunday, Sept. 8, in Eldora. Reading the single ring ceremony was Dr. Elkhart.

Given in marriage by her brother, Ralph Wilson, the bride wore a white floor-length gown of shirtings and old lace and carried white roses. Her gown was styled with a diamond neckline, cap sleeves and a bustle back. She wore a lace veil, falling from a braided coronet. Her only jewelry was a bracelet.

Callie Wilson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was gowned in baby blue floor-length taffeta, styled with a high neckline, cap sleeves and draped pockets. She wore a pink satin bow in her hair and carried Talisman roses.

Dean Wiesner of Eldora was best man, and ushers were Loren Wiesner and Karl Weisner, also of Eldora.

A reception was held in the preparation for the concert stage.

Enrico Caruso heard Cugat play and brought him to the United States on a concert tour. They toured together for five years, spending much time on friendly cartooning competitions—a hobby which later proved of importance to Cugat.

Although he has become outstanding in the popular dance field, Cugat is looking for new fields to conquer. Always interested in folk music, Cugat has made intensive study of the music of the Latin-American republics and is now in the midst of a nationwide concert tour featuring the music of these countries, with soloists and dancers to present the music in its full native beauty.

Cugat's concert here will be part of the nationwide tour.

Blanks Ready At VA Office For Autos

Amputees and other veterans entitled to receive cars from the government may now obtain applications at the local veteran's administration office. William J. Doherty, contact representative, said yesterday.

Doherty said that medical records indicated that 221 Iowa veterans are eligible to receive the specially equipped automobiles at government expense.

Of these, Doherty knows of some 17 in Iowa City or the surrounding area who are eligible. Available to veterans are used wagons, jeeps, trucks and tractors, Doherty said.

First step in the procedure to secure the cars is to obtain the proper form at the VA contact office either by writing or calling in person.

To Advise Vet

The office will advise the veteran where the completed form should be mailed. After approval, it will be sent back to the veteran who will then take it with his driver's license to the local vehicle licensing agency.

Once all the necessary information is on the application, the veteran can take it to any automobile dealer and negotiate for his car.

Dealers will submit the papers to the VA regional office in Des Moines for repayment.

To Pay up to $1,600

The VA will pay as much as $1,600 for each car, including the necessary special equipment, but cannot reimburse a veteran for a car he has already bought.

According to W. B. Nugent, Iowa manager of the VA, no veteran can be given an automobile unless he proves to the VA that he can operate it safely and can be licensed in the state of his residence.

Doherty said that each veteran who files an application will be given every possible assistance. The local veteran's administra-

Medical Care Named Subject for Debate In High Schools

"Resolved, that the federal government should provide a system of complete medical care available to all citizens at public expense" will be the subject of debate for the Iowa high school Forensic league during the 1946-47 season, according to Prof. A. Craig Baird, chairman of the organization.

Operating in six divisions of competition, the league will feature debate, discussion, extempore speaking, original oratory, interpretive reading, student senate and radio speaking, Professor Baird said.

Enrollments of the high schools must be made by Dec. 1 and March 15 is the final date for entries to the district contests. Final contests in all sections are scheduled for April 10, 11, and 12 at the university.

Immediate issues of postwar readjustments are included for discussion. Among the topics are increasing production, inflation, economic controls, international government, curricula in schools and colleges and labor and management problems, Professor Baird said.

This is the 42nd year of league activity. Last year in debate, Central high school of Sioux City and Muscatine high school tied for first place in class A, and Manchester high school was the class B champion.

City Merchants to Meet

Students who have been here before know the Union Cafeteria for its good food and fine service. The new schedule for service at the Cafeteria, which goes into effect immediately, is as follows:

Evening 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Sunday Dinner 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The university has revised the class schedule, so that an extra hour for classes can be provided during the noon hour. In order to accommodate students who will be attending a class from 11:30 to 12:30 or from 12:30 to 1:30, the Union Cafeteria will be open longer hours this year.
