GOP Hopes High as Nation Goes to Polls

Big 4 Ministers Agree to Hear Arguments Over Trieste Rule

To Consider Italian Treaty Before Others

NEW YORK (AP)—The four power foreign ministers conference agreed in a lengthy opening session here last night to hear Yugoslavia and Italy present arguments on the kind of government which they believe the United Nations should have over Trieste.

Arguments during the three hour and forty-five minute session in a Manhattan hotel room again revealed the basic split between Russia and the western powers over critical issues such as control of Trieste.

There were, however, some agreements such as an understanding that while Yugoslavia and Italy might be allowed to comment on the projected boundaries of the disputed Adriatic port, the boundary issue would not thereby be reopened.

Russian Foreign Minister Molotov reportedly lost out on the proposal to the effect that after hearing the Yugoslavs, the foreign ministers should turn the question of constituting a government for Trieste over to their deputies, allowing the Yugoslavs to sit in on the work. This was not approved.

Molotov, Secretary of State Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Bevin and French Deputy Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville met at 3 p.m. (CST) and quickly plunged into work. Byrnes served as chairman, and it was agreed that meetings would be held daily beginning at 2:30 p.m.

An agreement was also made that the Italian peace treaty would be taken up first and after that, in order, the treaties proposed for Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland. The task of the foreign ministers is to try to reach final decisions on recommendations made by the Paris peace conference last month.

In addition to the decision on Trieste yesterday, the Big Four took up these other points, all in the Italian treaty:

1—Inclusion in the Italian treaty of an Italian-Austrian agreement guaranteeing certain language and similar rights to German minorities in Bolzano and Trento provinces. This had been approved by a vote of 14-6 at Paris.

Molotov objected that such a provision in the Italian peace treaty was improper and argued that leaving it out would not upset the agreement.

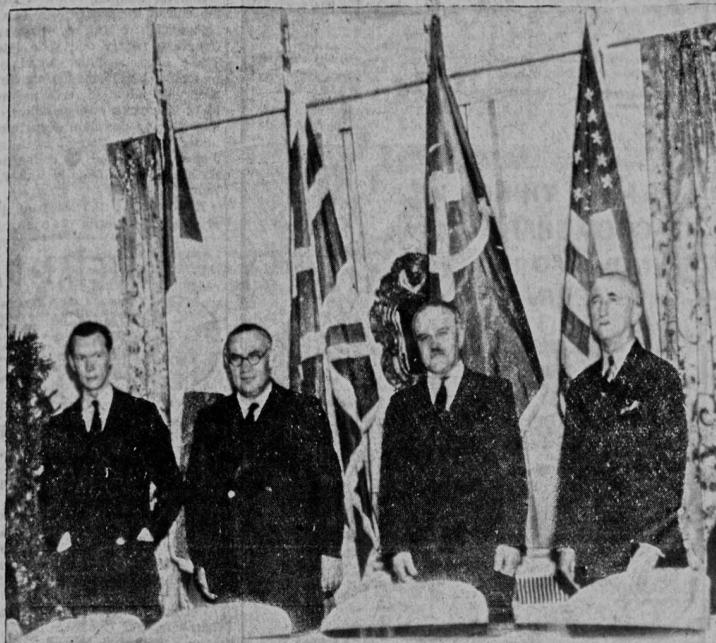

2—A provision guaranteeing fundamental human freedoms to the populations of transferred territories was finally agreed to in principle by Molotov. It had been accepted at Paris by a vote of 14-7. Molotov said, however, that he wanted it changed here to state that such rights were guaranteed in accordance with fundamental laws in those countries.

3—An argument broke out over a Paris conference recommendation that Yugoslavia and Greece should receive equal reparations of $100,000,000 each from Italy. Molotov insisted that Yugoslavia should have a favorable ratio of two to one. Byrnes, Bevin and Couve de Murville objected.

Byrnes said that at Paris the United States had argued for reparations in favor of Greece, contending that Yugoslavia was getting $195,000,000 worth of Italian installations in territory she is taking over.

The reparations question was finally passed over.

CIO Rejects Invitation
NEW YORK (AP)—The Congress of Industrial Organizations rejected yesterday an invitation from the Argentine government to send representatives to an international labor meeting in that country.

Russia May Ask UN To Locate in Europe

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y. (AP)—A new move to take the United Nations headquarters back to Europe and settle it permanently in the League of Nations palace at Geneva loomed as a possibility last night in the United Nations assembly.

United Nations sources said that Soviet Russia, which once vigorously opposed Geneva and anything connected with the old League as a home for the United Nations, was ready to ask that the assembly consider the Swiss city among the possible headquarters.

These sources added that the Russian position crystallized when it became known last weekend that the United States delegation finally abandoning its neutrality.

Molotov objected that such a provision in the Italian peace treaty was improper and argued that leaving it out would not upset the agreement.

2—A provision guaranteeing fundamental human freedoms to the populations of transferred territories was finally agreed to in principle by Molotov. It had been accepted at Paris by a vote of 14-7. Molotov said, however, that he wanted it changed here to state that such rights were guaranteed in accordance with fundamental laws in those countries.

TWA Negotiators Near Agreement

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representatives of opposing sides in the Trans World Airline pilots' strike failed last night to complete drafting of an arbitration agreement which would end the 15-day-old strike over increased pay and improved working conditions for pilots.

The dispute, affecting 1,400 pilots who are members of the Airline Pilots association (AFL), resulted in the furloughing of 15,000 other employees over the system when it shut down.

Earlier in the day, David L. Behncke, president of the pilots association, announced that the union "officially accepted" the arbitration plan.

There was little debate in the council after Dr. Oscar Lange of Poland offered a resolution to remove the case from the council calendar. Brazil, the United States, France, Soviet Russia, Great Britain and Egypt quickly voiced their support and the vote was taken.

Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko said the council was trying to make it "possible for the general assembly not only to discuss but to make recommendations on the Spanish question."

At a steering committee meeting yesterday morning, Russia, Britain and the United States indicated they were ready to take up the site question immediately but the president, Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, put the matter over until today out of deference to delegates who wanted more time.

The position of the big powers roughly is this:
The United States—Neutral so far reported favorable to keeping the United Nations in this country.
Soviet Russia—Undisclosed so far.

Great Britain—Favorable last summer to the Westchester site in New York state and apparently still for it.
France—Favorable to a site on the east coast of the United States.
China—Leaning to the west coast of the United States, with one member of the delegation saying flatly Geneva would not be satisfactory.
If the Russian delegation finally decides to support Geneva, one of the likely considerations would be economy.

Vote of 35-Million Predicted; Control of Congress at Stake

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The American people hand in a verdict of votes today on shortages, strikes and other issues of a congressional election campaign that has hoisted Republican victory hopes to the highest level in more than a decade.

Some 35,000,000 voters are expected in the polling places to make their pick of 1,065 candidates for an even 500 major offices. Not since the late Franklin D. Roosevelt began performing his political magic in national elections in 1932 has the GOP been so optimistic.

Control of congress for two years at least, with its impact on the course of the administration, is the big, immediate stake. Fifteen states appear to hold the key to what will happen in the senate. These and another eight seem likely to determine the political alignment of the house.

The election weighs heavily, too, on the 1948 political fate of President Truman and men from whom Republicans may choose their next candidate for the White House. The voters also select the governors of 33 states.

Both the Democratic and Republican high commands stood pat on the usual forecasts of victory. Each read into prospects of a record vote in an off-year election omens favorable to its cause.

So confident were the Republicans that this is their year that they differed only on the size of the majorities by which they claimed they would rule the next senate and house. They last had a senate majority in 1932.

Democratic forecasters saw somewhat varying prospects. Some had conceded during the campaign that they felt the off-year election trend against the party in power had set in.

Rep. John J. Sparkman of Alabama, chairman of the Democratic speakers bureau, said in an election-eve statement for the Associated Press that the Democrats would hang on to majorities in both branches of congress but would lose some strength. But National Democratic Chairman Robert E. Hannegan stuck to a prediction that his party will pick up power in congress.

With 39 senators now, the Republicans need a net gain of 10 seats to capture control. In the house they have to add 26 seats to their present 192.

Key States
The decision whether the senate stays Democratic or swings to the Republicans apparently hinges on results in these states:
Ohio, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Wisconsin, where the Republicans contend they are sure to gain four senate seats and the Democrats concede nothing.
New York, Massachusetts, Missouri, Idaho, Montana, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming and New Mexico, where the Republicans say they will bowl over Democrats and the Democrats say they will hold their own.
Kentucky and California, where the Democrats hope to turn Republican senators out of office and the GOP says it can't be done.

The significance of the balloting in these states to the make-up of the house rests among 22 congressional districts where the winner was named by margins of less than 5,000 votes in 1944. Five of the districts are in Pennsylvania, four in Missouri.

In addition, there are 13 districts which were particularly close two years ago in Oklahoma, New Hampshire, Illinois, Connecticut, Minnesota, New Jersey, Maryland and Michigan.

Sparkman forecast that the Democrats, who now have 235 members in the house, will wind up with "at least 231."

In another statement for the Associated Press, Rep. Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, Republican campaign director, forecast a minimum gain of 40 for the GOP. That would give it 232 seats.

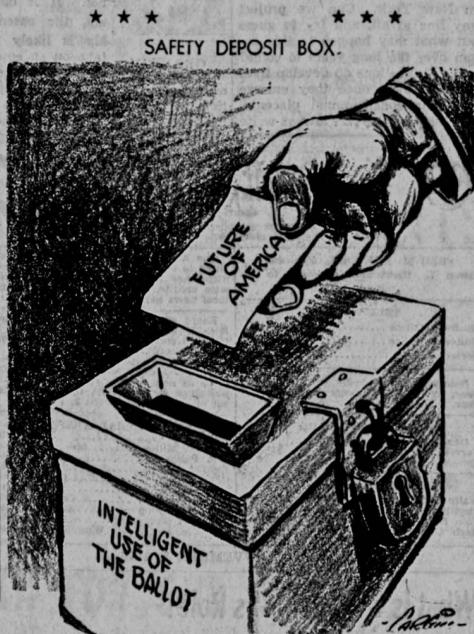

Later Brown upped this forecast. He said he is "now satisfied that we will make a net gain in the house of between 50 and 60 seats, with a rock bottom figure of 45."

See Protest Vote
This year the Republicans are saying heavy registrations and prospects of a heavy ballot mean the people are ready to protest at the polls against shortages and strikes and the pattern of government in general.

The Democrats have replied that there will be a protest vote, all right, but that it will be against the way prices have shot up—they lay that to the GOP.

The leadership of each party is highly aware that only once since the Civil war has the party which has won an off-year election failed to put its man in the White House two years later.
In New York, reelection of Republican Gov. Thomas E. Dewey over Democrat James M. Mead would give the 1944 GOP presidential candidate a chance for the nomination in 1948.
Republicans are counting on Dewey to run so strongly as to help the rest of the party ticket and clinch the senate bid of Irving M. Ives. Ives is running against former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman for the senate Mead now holds.
Other Presidential Hopes
Around the country, other GOP presidential possibilities are running for office:
Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan for another term.
Former Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio. Dewey's vice-presidential running mate in 1944, for the United States senate.

Elections at a Glance
Seats at stake—35 senate, 432 house, 33 gubernatorial.
Republicans need 10 senate, 26 house seats to win control.
Democrats can lose 7 senate, 17 house seats and still retain control.
Expected vote—35,421,339.

Key States to Watch

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A few of the significant races in today's elections:

California—Both sides say it's a close match between Sen. William F. Knowland (R) and Republican Henry Cabot Lodge, who used to be one before he went to war. Battling under a slogan of "Tobin, Truman and Trouble," Republican Robert F. Bradford is bucking the reelection bid of Democratic Gov. Maurice J. Tobin.

Missouri—Weathervane border state to be watched, particularly for its bearing on President Truman's personal prestige in his home state. Sen. Frank P. Briggs (D) is opposed by James P. Kem (R). It's nip and tuck, too, in the fifth congressional district race between Albert L. Reeves Jr. (R) and Truman-favored Enos Axtell (D).

New York—Governor and senator contests will be decided by an unusually heavy off-year vote. Most onlookers give Republican Gov. Thomas E. Dewey the edge over Democrat James M. Mead for another term at Albany. On the extent of his margin, if victorious, may depend whether he remains prominently in the 1948 presidential nomination picture. Also, whether Republican Senatorial Nominee Irving M. Ives takes the measure of Herbert H. Lehman (D).

Ohio—A state to keep an eye on because the voting may be projected to some extent into the 1948 campaign. Former Gov. John W. Bricker, 1944 GOP vice presidential candidate, is mentioned as possible presidential timber. He is trying for the senate seat of Democrat James W. Huffman. Democratic Gov. Frank J. Lausche is trying to repeat against Republican Thomas J. Herbert. Lausche's name has been linked with speculation about Democratic presidential and vice-presidential candidates in 1948.

26-Inch Snowfall Submerges Denver, Stops All Service

DENVER (AP)—Denver started digging out yesterday from under a 26-inch snowfall, the city's worst in 33 years, and attempted to get vital services operating even before the snow stopped falling.

Schools were closed, the state capitol was shut down and the city council called off a scheduled meeting.

Emergency snow removal crews worked on the city's streets, where thousands of automobiles and delivery trucks were stalled. Funeral services were called off. Garbage disposal was stalled.

Transportation from the south—where the storm struck almost as hard as in Denver—was almost at a standstill. No buses were running and trains were hours late.

The snow caved in roofs of some buildings in Denver. Seven deaths were left in the wake of the storm. Snowfall, which extended as far south as the Texas and Oklahoma panhandle, caused 13 passengers and the driver of a continental trailways bus to be marooned overnight in a drift seven miles north of Stratford, Tex. They were reported still snowbound yesterday.

Four persons died in Denver trying to start snowbound automobiles and one man suffered fatal injuries in a fall on a downtown street.

Hotel Suite Linked To Alleged Fraud Involving $900,000

NEW YORK (AP)—A $300-a-month hotel suite, well stocked with Scotch whiskey, where $20 tips were given bellboys and from which attractive women carried messages, may have been the base for the alleged embezzlement of nearly $900,000 from the Mergenthaler Linotype company, District Attorney Miles F. McDonald said yesterday.

The Kings county district attorney said William A. Nickel, 40, former $100-a-week bookkeeper for the Brooklyn firm, now en route from Miami Beach, Fla., to answer charges of forgery and grand larceny, maintained the in the Hotel Capitol for nearly a year.

McDonald said the women visited the suite in the Manhattan hotel on Monday or Thursday evenings. Investigation showed that checks in the Mergenthaler case always were chased on Tuesday or Fridays, he added, indicating "a pre-arrangement by the women to make sure arrangements were all right for the next day."

Nickel was arrested Thursday in Miami Beach. He was quoted by authorities as saying he would reveal "the whole story" when he arrives here under guard today.

TWA EMPLOYEES PICKET WHITE HOUSE

TWO PICKETS CARRIED a mock corpse past the White House yesterday, with a sign appended reading "Here Lies Freedom Born 1776, died, 1946. Killed by strikes." The pickets are part of a group of non-flying Trans World Airline employees from the New York area protesting against the strike of TWA pilots. (AP WIREPHOTO)

FD RATHER BE RIGHT—

Can We Save the Assembly?

By SAMUEL GRAFTON
(New York Post Syndicate)

This being a kind of election day piece, one might as well use it quietly, to spot a few long-range trends. These concern the general assembly of the United Nations, that curious unanalyzed, still-unformed body now meeting in New York. Can we project any line at all, and try to guess out what may happen to this organ over the long years to come?

For institutions do develop lives of their own, once they emerge from the constitutional placenta, and the passing years always write unofficial amendments in their own a branding way. In the case of the general assembly, the answer probably depends on whether the world makes peace or not. If it does not, the assembly is likely to take on an equivocal character as a house of organized contention, an arena masquerading as a headquarters. If the drift toward two worlds, rather than one, continues, the temptation will be strong upon bewildered political leaders to use the general assembly as a kind of proof that we are meeting with the rest of the world when in actual fact, we may not be meeting with it. There they all are, in one room, our leaders may say; see, we are dealing with the world; what more can you want?

But we may, in point of fact, not be dealing with the world at all, only differing with it; and the general assembly may come to be used metriculously as proof that we are brisily intimate with the rest of mankind, when actually, we may not be. A heavily anti-Russian administration, with isolationist tendencies, for example, might find the assembly useful as a covering device for cool, even totally negative relations on the diplomatic level. See, we meet the foreigners all the time, it could say, grinning.

We tend to forget (in our valid enthusiasm for the assembly as a symbol of organized humanity) how easy it is for a party system to develop in a body cast, however vaguely, in the parliamentary mold. But in the case of an institution like the assembly, a two-way system means two worlds, not one. The assembly can quite as easily become an institutional expression of mankind's division, as of its unity, without changing a word in the charter. Always, ones come back to the feeling that to make the assembly live, and be great, world pacification, on the diplomatic level, is essential.

We come now to those curious creatures, the delegates to the assembly. Who are they? What are they? Are they really consequential, as individuals, or are they only messengers? Are they characters on the world scene, of a new kind, or are they only tokens, holding down chairs for their chancelleries?

Here again one has the strong feeling that if we really make peace these delegates will be set free for growth, and for adventures in progress, with and among each other, while if we fail, they will be nervously limited to the function of diplomatic couriers, who happen to deliver their messages orally.

A new kind of man is in birth—the delegate to the world's assembly; some day we may even want to elect him to his job, by popular vote, on the basis of special aptitude, which is as likely to show up in this field as in any other; but whether he will be born or not depends on whether we can make peace. In this issue is wrapped up the assembly's real promise, as an excursion beyond the politically known, into the new.

There it stands, the general assembly, and we must make sure to phrase the leading question about it correctly. It is not whether the assembly can save us, but whether we can save the assembly.

People Saying 'No!' To Sky-High Prices

We have reached a pretty pass when a butcher can't tell any longer whether the woman on

Letters to the Editor—

Indicts Community for Jim Crow Barbers

TO THE DAILY IOWAN:

I am indeed sorry that the Iowa City barbers (excluding the proprietors of the one All-American barber shop in town) missed the Iowa-Illinois game. I am certain that they missed the game because everyone in the Iowa stands stood up to applaud Iowa's Negro Guard, Earl Banks, as he left the game in the fourth quarter after a magnificent stand against the Illinois, and I am sure that the Iowa City barbers, conscientious sounding boards of public opinion that they are, would not have been hypocritical enough to have applauded the playing efforts of a representative of the race whose hair they are too proud to cut in their barber shops.

This, of course, leads to an indictment of the Iowa City citizenry in general—an indictment of the football fans who were not too proud to cheer the efforts of Tunnell, Banks and Howard for the Hawkeyes, nor too unsportsmanlike to applaud the efforts of Patterson, Young and Owens for the Illinois, yet are stopped cold when called upon to show these men that they are welcome in Iowa City. These fine football players and other equally fine representatives of their race are stopped—not on the one yard line—but STONE COLD DEAD IN THE BARBER SHOPS OF IOWA CITY!

When will the citizens of Iowa City awaken to the fact that an All-American line-up won World War II? When will they realize that ALL races, all colors, all creeds united in the all-out effort which won American supremacy over totalitarian foes? When will they realize that "One World" begins at home—with an application of truly democratic principles to the problems of our local community?

Iowa City barbers cling to the white-supremacy because they believe that the citizens of Iowa City are behind them. If the powerful pendulum of public opinion were to swing toward true democracy they would not long oppose its persuasive force. Iowa City must voice its democracy not only on Saturday afternoons at the stadium but also on Saturday mornings at the barber shop!

Two Point Out Iowan Error

TO THE DAILY IOWAN:

Last Saturday The Daily Iowan printed a review of Mr. Frank J. Sheed's lecture, one of the finest heard by a university audience as shown by their overwhelming response. But in some dark corner of the senate chamber sat a gremlin. I'm sorry to have to say it, but the result of its handiwork comprised the Iowan's review. Why couldn't a simple review like this be accurate? From the reviewer's words, one would consider the lecture vague, dull, ambiguous and irritating.

For instance, Mr. Sheed did not say "education seems to be attempting to fit men for the impossible—for living instead of making of living." Rather the opposite. He said instead that education should servatives who felt that they were flying high on the basis of their own sheer wit and brilliance, are settling down to earth once more, finding they are being held up now, if at all, only by their own galluses. They are down among people who have faces again, and problems.

I do not know if the results of this change will show up in today's election. But I have a feeling that there will be, among these res ults, oddities and cryptic manifestations which will baffle some of those political primitives who made easy reputations for themselves during a time when everybody had money, and no worries.

Attends Conference
Dr. Ralph H. Ojemann of the psychology department will attend the University of Michigan Child Development conference at Ann Arbor today, tomorrow and Thursday.

During the conference he will give three lectures—"How to Study Child Behavior," "When Your Child Does Not Cooperate," and "How Responsibility Develops."

Assails Paragraph in Sports Article

TO THE DAILY IOWAN:

I would like to call attention to an article in Sunday's Daily Iowan written by the assistant sports editor. In it he supposedly quotes some gentleman as saying "why in h--- do they use a quarterback who can't pass, can't run, can't call signals and sits on the bench when the other team has the ball?"

Perhaps I have a mistaken conception of what constitutes fair journalism, but this doesn't quite jive with what I think is fair and square, especially under the circumstances. As long as the team can win, the Iowa Hawks are a bunch of supermen who can do no wrong, according to The Daily Iowan's sports writers. Let this same team lose a close, hard-fought game that could have gone either way, however, and we see the sentence which is quoted in the first paragraph.

The Daily Iowan calls for more school spirit is beyond me. Cold journalism contributes to school spirit is beyond me.

Today's Voting Ends Truman Story, Part 3

By LAWRENCE E. DENNIS
Daily Iowan Columnist

Today's congressional elections mark the climax of the third phase of a political campaign which started on April 12, 1945.

The death of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the succession of Harry Truman to the presidency were the end and the beginning of a vital era in American politics. The first chapter of that era was written between April 12 and V-J day (Aug. 14, 1945). During those four months the Truman administration carried out wartime foreign and domestic policies which, for the most part, had been set in motion by President Roosevelt and his associates.

Hectic Months
Chapter number two ran from the end of the Pacific war to the adjournment of the seventy-ninth Congress, nearly one year later. Those hectic months found our national legislators supporting, with only slight dissent, President Truman's foreign policy, as executed by the state department under the direction of Secretary James Byrnes and his colleagues, Senators Tom Connally and Arthur Vandenberg.

However, in the case of the president's domestic program, the picture was not nearly as bright from an administration standpoint. Almost all of the Truman-sponsored legislation which came before congress following V-J day were either rejected completely or modified in such a way that its original purpose was largely nullified. So great did the rupture between the executive and legislative branches of our government become that, in the closing days of the seventy-ninth, the president was forced to veto a series of measures which were diametrically opposed to his proposed domestic program, both that which he had "inherited" from F.D.R. and that which he himself had drawn up with the help of his advisers.

Name-Calling
The third phase of the campaign, which began when the congressmen returned home to defend their records and stump for reelection, has been characterized by a flurry of name-calling, political oratory and general reluctance on the part of candidates from both parties to look the voting public squarely in the eye. President Truman's personal program, (See CABBAGES, page 4)

What Is Government's Role?

Probably the greatest harm that will come from the recent collapse of the government price control system will be in loss of confidence in economic planning on the part of the American people.

All about us we hear assurances that all will be well again now that private enterprise has taken over—just as if private enterprise were the answer to all that ails us. The vicious economic cycle of boom and bust which has worked such hardships on all of us at one time or another seems to present proof that private enterprise is not in any sense of the word the full, final solution.

This is not to say that most Americans do not want to retain our private enterprise system. The number of people who would have us adopt some form of socialism or communism is actually negligible.

But the big question in all this is just what should the function of government be.

To begin with most people have very little faith in economic planning. This, we think, is due to the fact that drastic planning programs were forced on the people before they were mentally prepared for them, and the programs themselves were not always administered as well as they should have been. It is also true that we have accepted certain myths which tend to fog our thinking about economic planning.

For instance, we say that the only proper job for government is the role of a policeman. We say that the government which governs best is that which governs least. Yet we have acted otherwise. When the Constitution was adopted it carefully created a government with the power to act positively.

And from first we have used our government to plan for us and to act aggressively.

Another myth is that the government should act affirmatively only in setting up a framework within which "natural" economic forces could take care of themselves. Yet we have used our government to perform detailed management of affairs in such fields as postal service, education, transportation, trade, wages and hours.

Isn't it about time that we stopped a moment to ask ourselves just what the proper functions of government are, what the proper functions of private enterprise are and how the two can be harmonized?

In our hybrid, changing system, all our major social groups have from almost the very beginning depended upon government to make it possible for them to enjoy the maximum degree of freedom. In the depression we used government to pull capitalism up by its boot straps. In the war we leaned on government to assume much of the property risk for private enterprise. It seems that none of our major social groups hesitates to use government for selfish advantage. But when it comes to general advantage, we find it very difficult to agree on what role government should play.

We cannot condemn the general attitude among the American people that private enterprise is the normal and proved system, and that the burden of proof lies with those who would modify it. But the evidence is now overwhelming that private enterprise is not perfect, that in order to keep it, we must accept government control in some areas at least.

Instead of posing the question, however, of "government control or private enterprise?"—as if they were absolute alternatives—we should be asking ourselves where we need government control and to what degree, and how can we best complement government control and private enterprise.

It must be remembered that our democratic government and free enterprise system can only survive if production and employment is stabilized within reasonable limits, through the prevention of the extremes of inflation and deflation. There is no doubt in our mind that we must have planning of one sort or another. And since private enterprise has failed thus far to use effective planning to eliminate the inequalities and hardships of our system, we can see little hope except through government planning.

And even if most of the planning is done by private groups, the results of their agreement are inescapably the concern of government and law. No matter how you look at it, it seems to us, government must play a very decisive role in stabilizing production and employment.

It's time, therefore, that all of us stopped thinking of our government as a big club, as something foreign and far removed. Ours is a people's government and as long as it remains that way, we have little to fear about losing our inalienable rights.

If private enterprise fails in certain areas, our government must intervene to guarantee economic stability. Our government is not just an agency from which we demand action and aid when we want something for our own group. When the general welfare requires it, our government also has the right to ask all of us to give up something in return.

N.Y. Times Science Editor Opens SUI Lecture Series

William L. Laurence To Deliver Address On Atomic Heritage

William L. Laurence, Pulitzer prize-winner science editor of the New York Times, will lecture on "Our Atomic Heritage" Nov. 21 at Iowa Union in the first of this year's all-university lecture series, Union Director Dr. Earl E. Harper announced yesterday.

Laurence was commended by the army to be the only reporter, covering the July 16 atomic bomb experiment in the New Mexico desert. Army security measures prohibited any other reporters from being present.

After the New Mexico experiment, Laurence was sent to the Pacific by military authorities to observe the effect of the bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Selected By Army
Army officials selected Laurence to cover the progress of the atomic bomb and its effects because of his background as a scientific reporter. As science editor of the Times, he has watched and reported most of the big science stories for the past 15 years.

In 1940 Laurence wrote for the Times the first article released for public consumption about the advent of atomic power. The article explained the release of atomic energy by uranium fission through the use of "U-235."

In 1945 the United States army borrowed Laurence from the Times and appointed him consultant to the Manhattan engineer district. He was on this assignment when he saw the atomic bomb dropped on Nagasaki.

Joined Times Staff
Laurence joined the New York Times staff in 1930 and since that time has been reporting scientific discoveries and developments. His book on atomic power is to be published by Alfred A. Knopf Co.

After winning several awards for his work in science, Laurence was awarded the Pulitzer prize

Johnson county and Iowa law requires that the county school superintendent visit each school at least once every year.

Commenting on the powers of the various county boards of education throughout the state, Snider declared that their activities, at present, are limited almost exclusively to choosing text books.

There are 107 rural school teachers in Johnson county, teaching in the 104 one-room rural schools.

Twenty-seven school buildings in the county have been closed by local school boards because of lack of pupils, not a teacher shortage, he emphasized.

Most county rural schools average about 16 pupils, Snider reported, although in Sharon township, district nine, 43 pupils attend a one-room school. This is the heaviest pupil load borne by a Johnson county rural school.

sition as chief executive and titular head of the Democratic party has been placed in jeopardy by a series of unfortunate incidents, some of which he might have prevented had he been more keenly aware of the responsibilities incumbent on his high office. It must be said, however, that he did not hesitate, when occasion demanded, to place his case fairly and fairly before the people, so that they might help him determine his course of action. Such a statement, regrettably, cannot be made about a majority of the men whose candidates we are asked to endorse or accept in the polling booths today.

Untouched Issues

Many issues are at stake which have not been touched upon at all during the past several weeks: internal control of the Republican party; the soundness or lack of it in our supposedly bi-partisan foreign policy; the position of the administration with regard to the Democratic party in the south; the true evaluation, from a progressive standpoint, of a given candidate's voting record. As voter, we have allowed politicians in both major parties to employ smear names and meaningless phrases which serve no purpose other than to cloud our thinking and confuse the issues.

Snider to Ask for School Legislation Providing More Administrative Powers

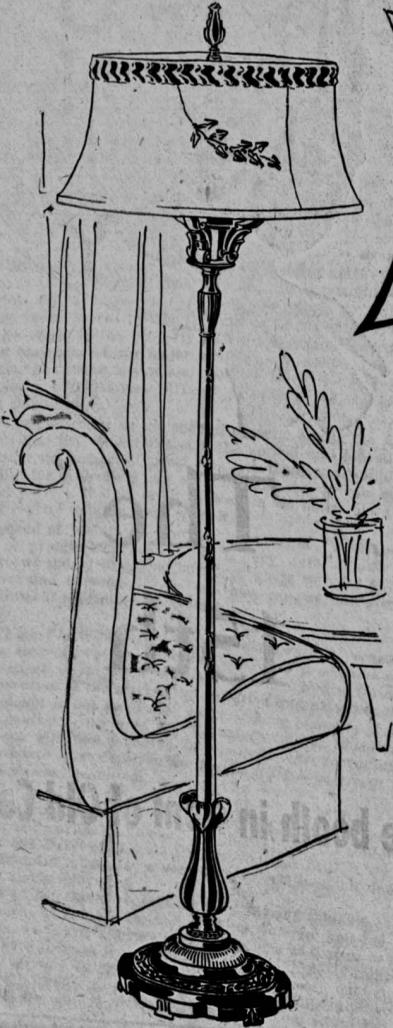

An appeal for legislation that would provide for assistant county superintendents of schools and would give increased administrative powers to county boards of education will be presented to the state legislature when it convenes in January, Frank A. Snider, Johnson county superintendent of schools, disclosed yesterday.

Snider is a member of a committee of county school superintendents, backed by the Iowa State Education association, to consider legislative reforms pertaining to Iowa schools.

"It is a farce to suppose that one man can adequately supervise the operations of all rural schools in a county the size of Johnson county," Snider said.

"Assistant superintendents are needed badly in Iowa counties. In Wisconsin or Michigan, counties the size of Johnson county would be provided with two superintendents," he declared.

Board of Health Reports Iowa City Disease Rate Drop

Citizens of Iowa City can rest assured they live in a healthful community according to reports given by the city board of health in its semi-annual meeting last night.

City physician Dr. Paul Reed said that in the past six months there have been only two cases of polio and only very occasional cases of scarlet fever, chicken pox, mumps and measles.

The total number of disease cases was noticeably lower than for the preceding six month period.

Veneral disease, which was expected to increase greatly with the much larger population, has dropped to a much lower figure than was previously reported, Dr. Reed said.

Health Inspector Charles Schindler, reporting on city restaurants, said that the situation on the whole was "good."

A few minor violations have been reported, Schindler said, but in general the restaurant owners have shown willingness to cooperate with health officials.

The biggest problem in restaurants today is the lack of permanent help, Schindler declared. Milk Inspector Clarence Ruppert reported that although Iowa City itself was unable to meet the demand for milk by some 1,300 gallons each day, enough milk was being brought in from Cedar Rapids and Clinton.

Iowa City milk has been consistently up to standards set by the board of health and city ordinances, Ruppert said.

Alderman Charles T. Smith proposed that the board of health and the city council seriously consider methods for improving conditions at the city dump.

Smith suggested that the sanitary land fill method in which a bulldozer is used to push dirt fill in on refuse that has been dumped in trenches would be a satisfactory solution.

Norman H. McFarlin, 509 S. Clinton street, reported yesterday that his automobile received $100 damage Saturday in a four-car collision north of Iowa City on highway 218, according to Sheriff Preston Koser.

McFarlin said a car behind him failed to stop, pushing his car into the one ahead.

The Community Chest drive ended yesterday with a grand total of $24,541.57, which is $3,531.57 over the goal set, according to Prof. Ralph H. Ojemann, chairman of the drive.

Professor Ojemann said he was well pleased. The results will allow the Community chest to go ahead with plans for the children and youth of Iowa City.

Gratitude was expressed not only to those who contributed but also to the many workers who gave their time to make the drive a success.

Although the downtown office of the Community chest has been closed, Mrs. J. L. Records, secretary, has announced that any subscriptions that have not been turned in can be sent to her home at 121 Grand avenue court. The and youth of Iowa City.

Here are the educational benefits now open to you under

THE GI BILL OF RIGHTS

THOUSANDS of young men who were unable to enlist in the new Regular Army before October 6 have asked the Army to clarify the present status of educational benefits under the GI Bill of Rights. Briefly, here it is:

Any young man who enlists in the Army for 1½, 2 or 3 years and serves 90 days — one day of which occurs before the termination of World War II is declared — will be entitled, upon honorable discharge, to a year of education in the college, trade or business school of his choice for which he can qualify.

In addition, he is entitled to an additional month of education, up to 48 months, for each month (including the first three) he serves prior to the official termination of the war.

For example, if you enlist tomorrow and the war is declared ended two months from tomorrow, and you are on active duty 90 or more days, you would be entitled, after your honorable discharge, to one year and two months of education.

The government will pay your tuition, laboratory fees, etc., up to $500 per ordinary school year, and give you $65 a month living allowance; $90 a month if you have dependents.

In addition to the educational benefits, you also get the many other benefits of the GI Bill of Rights and family allowances for the duration plus six months.

A 3-year enlistment enables you to choose any branch of service which has quotas to be filled and any overseas theater which has openings. For full details, stop at your nearest U. S. Army Recruiting Station.

Injuries Hit Cadets, Irish As Climax Battle Nears

Cadet Fuson 'Will Not Play'

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
NEW YORK (AP)—Herschel (Ug) Fuson, regular right halfback of the all-winning Army eleven when he isn't busy filling in for another regular, will not play against Notre Dame Saturday because of a shoulder injury, coach Earl Blaik told the New York football writers yesterday through an emissary.

There's some doubt about the type of injury Fuson suffered but there's no doubt about its effect. "He will not play," Lt. Boh MacKinnon told the reporters. "Before I left the Point to come here, Colonel Blaik emphasized that. He also said that the entire Army backfield strategy would have to be overhauled. At this time, we do not know who will replace Fuson."

Fuson, a rugged 220-pounder from Middlesburg, Tenn., started the season as the Army's regular center, a job he handled all last season. Then when Shorty McWilliams resigned to continue his education at Mississippi State, Fuson was converted into a halfback. He held that spot until Felix (Doc) Blanchard, All-America fullback was injured, then shifted to the plugging post.

Blanchard has recovered from his leg injury but in the last three games he and Fuson have shared the fullback duties and were the ace linebackers.

It is on defense that Fuson's absence may be felt to the greatest degree.

His most logical successor in the starting backfield is Rip Rowan, 180-pounder whose forte is speed rather than defensive strength. Another possibility is Bobby (Jack) Stuart, who has been out of the lineup all season because of a late September operation.

Charles Callahan, publicist for Notre Dame, also attended the Fuson announcement with a statement that it was possible that neither center George Strohmeier nor Zymont Czarski, left tackle, would face Army.

Strohmeier, who picked up a pair of bruised ribs in the Iowa contest, added a twisted ankle to his miseries as the Irish downed Navy in Baltimore last Saturday. Czarski has a hip injury.

Meanwhile, odds on the game now are 5 to 6, pick 'em. First odds listed last week had Army a 7 to 5 favorite.

Hotel rooms already are as scarce as available tickets, which now reportedly are bringing $100 a pair for fair seats and $150 a pair for those near the middle of the Yankee stadium field.

Wisconsin Approves Rose Bowl Agreement

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—The University of Wisconsin faculty approved yesterday a proposal that the Western conference enter into a five year agreement with the Pacific Coast conference on the annual Rose Bowl game.

The proposal, already approved by a majority of the Western conference schools, in an unofficial tally, would restrict the New Years' Day classic to competition between the two leagues.

The University athletic board submitted the proposal which still must be approved by the board of regents, the regents are expected to act favorably on it.

Middie Bob Kelly— Wanted Team to Lose

—Notre Dame Game

By DON LAY
(Ed. Note—Don Lay, who is now enrolled in the University of Iowa School of Journalism, was a member of the 1945 Navy football squad and an Academy friend of Bob Kelly.)

Nobody there saw Kelly. One of the strangest tales of war time football centers around "little" Bob Kelly, at one time an all-American halfback. Kelly was a star on the 1943 and 1944 Notre Dame teams and then went to the U. S. Naval academy to play for the Middies of Crabtown in 1945.

Bob resigned at the end of football season from Annapolis and returned to his old alma mater at South Bend—only to injure a knee in spring drills and drop out of the football picture completely.

The little story behind Bob and his stay at the naval school has never reached the public's eye before. When Bob came to Annapolis in the summer of 1945 Navy coaches took him in with open arms. It went without much saying that the right half back slot on Navy's powerful 1945 grid aggregation would be Bob Kelly's from start to finish. Newspapers and fans were amazed when Bob Kelly took a back seat in the last half of Navy's grid campaign. The big reason "why" has never been told before.

Coaching for the Blue and Gold last year was a submarine commander. His name is one most Navy fans know and one that most Navy fans are trying to forget... Comdr. Oscar E. Hagberg. It goes without saying, he was a good submarine commander.

It was the middle of the season and Navy had just breezed by Penn. The Notre Dame game was looming as the biggest obstacle of the year—with the exception of Army. The Thursday before the team left for South Bend a weekly pep meeting was held out in front of Bancroft Hall. The two speakers scheduled were two former Notre Dame stars. One was assistant coach "Rip" Miller, who had played under Rockne as one of the seven mules; the other was

Won't Unveil Ernie Zaleski

By SID FEDER
SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—There have been reports current for some time in football circles that Notre Dame has a secret weapon named Ernie Zaleski who would be unfolded for the Army game next Saturday.

Don't believe it. Next year—maybe yes, because ex-GI Ernie has the makings of one of those swivel-hipped step-pers who would be just what the doctor ordered as the breakaway runner that the Irish have been lacking this year.

But for Saturday's game, you can take it right from the fellow who knows best—Irish coach Frank Leahy—Ernie not only won't start but probably won't get into the game at all.

The reason of course, is that, having joined the squad only a month ago, the local boy who's making good is still practically a gridiron "kindergarten" member.

But that doesn't mean Leahy is downhearted about his ball-carrying department because several of his line-busters came to life so suddenly against Navy Saturday that they left the master happily wondering if maybe Santa Claus hadn't come early this year.

The way such pigskin manipulators as Floyd Simmons and Gerry Cowhig and Corrie Clatt caught fire against the Middies after only so-so performances in previous operations left no doubt that they'll be high and hot for Saturday.

Simmons scooted 84 yards in 15 tries, including two touchdowns, and looked like the best of the right halfbacks. He's a hard-to-bring-down 195-pound six-footer from Portland, Ore., who, Leahy says, "can be our best or our worst back."

For the past several weeks, Simmons has been ailing with a mysterious side injury that had the doctors baffled. They put him on a diet of strict rest for a while, and that did the trick.

Cowhig, who's a rangy hustler from Dorchester, Mass., might possibly be the breakaway runner the Irish have been hunting. He was a regular back in 1942, but went into the service—and returned this year. Saturday, he went 30 yards for one touchdown that counted and 83 for another that didn't. Cowhig and Terry Brennan, the Milwaukee light-heavyweight, will give the left-half back hole just the touch of class it needs.

Then, too, there are such operators as Pep Panelli, the fullback and Red Sitko at half and, of course, there's Johnny Lujack. As a matter of fact, when Johnny's himself who else do you need?

Buses to Madison
The Iowa squad trip to Madison for the Wisconsin game will be made in two chartered buses, leaving Iowa City Friday at 8:30 a.m. Overnight headquarters will be Janesville, Wis., 30 miles from Madison. The return trip will start soon after the game.

Hawks Drill For Invasion Of Wisconsin

It's Wisconsin at Badger homecoming next week for the University of Iowa football squad, so Tuesday the Iowans were scheduled to start their three-day hard work schedule.

With an even break in four conference games, the Hawkeyes meet a team with the same record. Iowa has beaten Indiana and Purdue and lost to Michigan and Illinois; Wisconsin whipped Ohio State and Purdue and lost to Northwestern and Illinois.

"Our scouts say that Wisconsin plays mighty good football much of the time. The Badgers have a good offense which has scored at least three touchdowns in the last three games but opponents have been able to average 20 points per conference games," Dr. Eddie Anderson said.

The coach reported that Dick Woodard was the only bad injury in the Illinois game. Dick Hoerner banged up his knee again and the usual crop of minor bruises resulted but the men should be in good shape for the Wisconsin game.

Statistics for the seven games show Iowa leading their opponents in total yards, 1,752 to 1,391. Rushing plays gained 1,475 of these yards and the team hit 29 of 70 passes for the other 277.

Leader in total offense is Em Tunnell with 496 yards on 116 plays followed by Bob Smith with 413 on 86 plays. Smith has taken over the rushing leadership—396 yards for a 4.7 average and Hoerner has 335 yards for a 4.6 average, with Tunnell third with 313 for 4.4.

In passing, Tunnell is tops, with 21 of 46 and Hoerner is his best receiver catching 6 for 72 yards. Smith has averaged 36.9 on 23 punts and Bob Sullivan is high scorer with 22 points.

Injured Badgers Back in Action

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Wisconsin's Badgers resumed practice yesterday with the outlook that they would be stronger in the manpower department in their homecoming with Iowa Saturday.

Reserve tackle Frank Lopp returned to the squad, and Stan Heath, third string quarter who was left at home during the Purdue game because of injuries, showed improvement and was running signals yesterday.

Don Kindt, held out of the Purdue game because of a muscle bruise, and John Pinnow, Kindt's understudy, out with a wrenched knee, were not in uniform but their condition was much improved.

Center Fred Negus, who was the severest casualty in the Boiler-maker game, spent the day under the lights but is expected to be in good condition by Saturday.

Gerri Cannon--End

GERRI CANNON

Versatility seems to be a common feature of the Iowa City high grid players and Gerri Cannon is no exception. The six foot, 175 pound senior is one of the four topflight ends that coach Herb Cormack has alternated successfully all season.

To see Cannon play the flank, one would think that he had played at that spot all his high school career. Actually this is Gerri's first season at the position. Last year Cannon won a letter as a reserve tackle and center. As a sophomore, Gerri played at quarter and fullback.

A fine punter and passer, Cannon has had no opportunity to show these talents with Bill Reichard and Jim Sangster on hand.

Instead Gerri has turned his attention to the routine tasks of an end, blocking, tackling and pass catching, and has done them well. Cannon has become a fine short pass receiver in addition to being a terrific offensive blocker. On defense he plays either linebacker or end.

Cannon does not limit his activities to the gridiron. In basketball Gerri is a smooth ball-handling center at which position he won a letter on last year's state championship squad.

In the spring, Cannon turns his talent to the golf links. Last year he paced the Little Hawk team and was one of the two local golfers to reach the state tournament.

Luckman Sees Irish Victory

By JERRY LISKA
CHICAGO (AP)—Quarterback Sid Luckman of the Chicago Bears, who saw both teams play and occasionally helps Notre Dame brush up on its "T" attack, yesterday picked the Irish to defeat Army in their heralded New York meeting next Saturday.

"Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis are two of the greatest players who ever lived," Luckman told the Herald-American quarterback club. "but I feel that Notre Dame's power and line play will keep them from gaining too much."

"I think Notre Dame will win, but I'm not saying by how many touchdowns."

Notre Dame also got an indirect boost from coach Ray Eliot of Illinois, whose current Big Nine pace-setter lost to the Irish, 28-6, in the latter's season opener.

"So far, Illinois has made the best showing against Notre Dame," said Eliot, "and it may be that future developments will indicate the Illini made the top showing of the season against the Irish."

Michigan State, hopeful of a bid to Western conference membership, soon will remodel its stadium at East Lansing, Mich., to accommodate 50,000 persons, athletic director Ralph Young reported.

Auto Accidents Hit New High

A new weekend auto accident record was set in Iowa City when 12 accidents were reported to police Saturday and Sunday, Chief O. A. White said yesterday.

This represents an increase of nine over the number of accidents during the weekend of the Iowa-Notre Dame football game, when three minor accidents were reported Saturday, Oct. 26.

Chief White attributed the increase to the fact that more fans drove to the game last weekend.

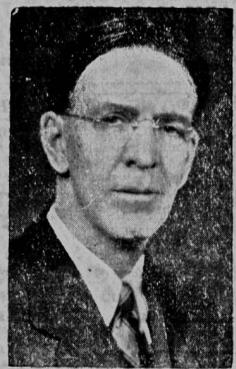

Although 52,000 attended both games, only one or two special trains brought fans to the Iowa-Illinois game, he said. Six trains were used to bring fans to the Iowa-Notre Dame game.

A car driven by Robert A. Darr, 20 N. Van Buren street, received $200 damage Sunday morning when it skidded on wet pavement and struck a light pole at the corner of Riverside drive and highway 6.

Eight other cars were involved in accidents Saturday night.

Dawson Attends Meet

Dean Francis M. Dawson of the college of engineering went to Des Moines yesterday for a two-day organizational meeting of the Iowa section of the American Waterworks association.

THANK YOU

This Has Been a Clean Campaign

Thanks to all — Democrats and Republicans, alike — who have helped to make it so.

But the campaign is not over until the votes are counted.

MEANWHILE REMEMBER THAT:

1. The Iowa House of Representatives is predominantly Republican.
2. The best committee appointments will be given to Republican members of the House.
3. To obtain the best results in legislation for the University, for Iowa City, and for Johnson County,

Car Accident Victim Condition Improved

Don Ohlsen, 20, Dubuque, seriously injured Saturday in an automobile accident five miles north of Iowa City on highway 218 was reported by University authorities yesterday to be somewhat improved. His skull was fractured and he had possible internal injuries.

Betty Hoerner, who suffered a dislocated hip, and Joyce Reindinger, who received cuts and lacerations in the accident, were reported in good condition yesterday.

Tom Nacos, also riding with Ohlsen, was released from the hospital yesterday after being treated for cuts and lacerations.

Bulldogs Ready

DES MOINES (AP)—With all hands on deck except Ken Whitney, Drake's Bulldogs yesterday started final preparations for their "big" game of the season against Iowa State at Ames Saturday.

It's Fun When—

Sally Pulls the Strings

—For Marionettes

Puppet consists of eight strings attached to two pieces of wood. By pulling the right string at the right time, the puppet can be made to walk, lift his arms, sit down, quiver, and perform other actions the operator is acquainted with.

The hands and feet of the marionette are weighed with lead, to make them fall to a natural pose after they have been raised.

According to Sally, operating a marionette is easy, and she is having fun as an amateur puppeteer. But right now she is looking for another girl who can help her work out a new act. She wants to get Clippo into the "big-time."

Work in Pantomime Lacking a squeaky voice didn't stop her and a young friend from trying to make a fortune when Sally first received a marionette as a Christmas gift. Working in strict pantomime, the two girls rehearsed an act similar to a Punch and Judy show.

The girls had their theatrical ambitions nipped in the bud when Sally's father, a salesman, was transferred to another state.

The interest of the entire Zimmerman family in marionettes started in 1936, at the Dallas, Tex., exposition. The idea of puppets traveled with the family until the purchase of the first marionette five years ago.

Eight Strings Since then, all three Zimmermans have learned to manipulate the dolls, and to make them act as though they are small human beings.

The new low fare as set up by member airlines of the International Air Transportation association, were given final approval by the governments of Canada, Great Britain, France, Sweden, the Netherlands and the United States, according to the statement.

Sales of the 1947 Hawkeye, university yearbook, have been extended until Nov. 15, Charlotte Penningroth, A4 of Cedar Rapids, business manager, said yesterday.

Hawkeye notes may be signed at a booth in front of Old Capitol today, tomorrow and Thursday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Students may sign pledges to pay $4 with next semester's tuition, until Nov. 15.

The Hawkeye price will be raised to $5 after Nov. 15.

Harriers Race Again
