framework of local Republican party harmony. The split between local Democrats over primary candidacies was echoed in the Republican pa-ty when Carl E. Redenbaugh, favored candidate of the Republican Veterans league, filed for the primary elections ystrday.

Redenbaugh seeks nomination as alderman for the fourth ward, a position on the ticket that Robert T. Davis has already filed for with approval of the Republican central committee.

Young Republicans in town have no objection to Davis' candidacy but many are expressing indignation at the special caucus at which the Republican slate was determined.

Spokesmen for the Republican Veterans league and the Young Republicans say they were not represented at the caucus.

Feeling runs high among the young bloods at the slight. One member of the Republican Veterans league said his organization had been invited last December to help select candidates but was ignored when the party caucused on the quiet last Friday to draw up the slate.

Chairman William Meardon Jr. of the Republican Veterans league, said last night that "Redenbaugh and all other veterans on the slate have our unqualified support."

"However," Meardon added, "in the interests of party harmony we will support those who win the Republican nomination."

Not all of the younger Republicans feel such party loyalty, however, and for a time there was even talk among some factions of drawing up a separate slate to oppose what they called "the old guard" in the spring primaries.

Differences may or may not be dissolved this afternoon when Chairman Fred V. Johnson meets with the central committee to select candidates for park commissioner and alderman for the first ward—the only existing vacancies on the slate.

Local Murder Trial Takes Surprise Turn

Eyewitness of Fight Testifies Brown Had Open Knife in Pocket

By CAROL RACKER

The first degree murder trial of William W. Patton took a surprise turn yesterday afternoon when two persons taking the stand for the state indicated by their testimony that Patton did not initiate an attack on Ernest R. Brown, fatally knifed in the Patton home Nov. 24.

In his opening statement yesterday morning, Attorney Clair Hamilton, who is defending Patton, indicated the defense would base its case on a self defense theory.

In answering questions put by the defense attorney, both witnesses testified that Patton never advanced beyond the kitchen door and made no threat by word or action to the trio in the living room.

Dora Parsons, sister of Mrs. Patton, told the jury in response to questions by Attorney Edward L. O'Connor, that she saw Brown stand up, take a pocket knife from his hip pocket, and open it after Patton had come into the house.

"When Stucker told him to put it back, he put it back open in his front pocket," Miss Parsons testified.

In the barrage of questions that followed her statement, O'Connor inquired:

Q.— Why didn't you tell this to the grand jury?

A.— I didn't tell it because Swisher told me not to.

Q.— Who is Swisher?

A.— My attorney.

Q.— Who told you to tell the pocket knife story?

A.— No one told me. I saw it.

Questioning of Stucker and Miss Parsons revealed that Mrs. Ruth Patton and Miss Parsons left Iowa City, Fri., Nov. 22, went to Des Moines, met Stucker and Brown, stayed in Des Moines Saturday and returned to Iowa City early Sunday morning.

After they had been at the Patton home (207 E. Benton street) a short time, Miss Parsons answered a knock and Patton came in, they testified.

"Patton came in, bareheaded and wearing an overcoat, said 'Hello' to us and walked between Brown and I into the kitchen," Stucker revealed.

Neither Stucker nor Miss Parsons overheard the conversation between Mr. and Mrs. Patton in the kitchen. Miss Parsons said she heard Patton go into the bedroom and move something she thought was a suitcase.

"The next time I saw Patton he was in the kitchen doorway dressed in a T-shirt and he had a butcher knife and a dagger," Stucker said.

According to Stucker, Patton said, "I want you people to leave," so he and Miss Parsons started toward the front door as Stucker called "Let's go, Ernie," to Brown.

"I thought Ernie was following me," Miss Parsons explained, "but instead he was going toward Bill. I saw him kick Bill (Patton) and heard a clatter."

Stucker said the pair turned back when they heard Brown call to them, and saw Patton and Brown close together. Patton had blood on himself and had his hand on a knife that was in Brown's abdomen. After Patton and Brown separated, Brown slumped to the floor, they said.

Stucker told the jury that Patton said, "I guess we're even now," to Brown, whose reply was, "We're even."

"Brown took something from his pocket after Patton entered the house and I told him to put it away and not to start any trouble. I didn't know whether it was a pocket knife," Stucker said.

In cross-examination by Hamilton, Miss Parsons said she heard

Court Gets Battle of Governors

ATLANTA (AP)—Georgia's battle of the two governors entered the courts late yesterday when Attorney General Eugene Cook filed suit to enjoin Herman Talmadge from functioning as governor on the basis of his election by the legislature.

Cook filed a petition for the injunction at Arnall's direction. The suit asked Judge Walter C. Hendrix to decide title to the office, leading to a supreme court appeal.

Throughout the day Arnall and Talmadge had operated as governor from offices less than 20 yards apart at the capitol and engaged in battle for control of the state militia to bolster their claims to the office.

Talmadge had left the capitol when the suit was filed but his secretary, Benton Odom, described the action as "merely a maneuver."

"In accepting the order from Governor Arnall directing me to file a petition for a declaratory judgment in this matter, and in filing this petition, I am recognizing Gov. Arnall as the lawful governor," Cook said. "I feel that the supreme court of Georgia should have an opportunity to pass on it," Cook added.

Judge Hendrix directed Talmadge to show cause Feb. 7 why he should not be barred from the office.

Arnall contends a legislative election is illegal. Talmadge says a constitutional provision required such an election and that he should take over for his father, the late Eugene Talmadge.

Each appointed an adjutant general to command the militia. Marvin Griffin, who has served under the Arnall administration as adjutant general, resigned and was promptly re-commissioned by Talmadge. Arnall countered by naming Col. R.W. Collins adjutant general.

Then Talmadge issued an executive order dissolving the state guard on the grounds it had served its purpose and that the reorganized national guard, with Griffin in command, was in position to take over if needed.

Talmadge made several appointments to state offices during the day but when his appointees moved to take over the Arnall men on the job just sat tight. The rival appointees chatted amiably, pending a court decision to settle the question of who is governor.

Mine Blast Kills Fifteen

PLYMOUTH, Pa. (AP)—Edward Griffith, president and general manager of Glen Alden Coal company, announced last night 15 miners were known dead in a gas explosion at the company's Nottingham colliery.

Three other were removed, two of them badly injured.

Griffith said the explosion occurred in the top rock vein, about 850 feet below the surface. Miners expressed belief the blast resulted from an accumulation of gas.

The blast was about 2,000 feet from the shaft entrance where the Carey avenue bridge crosses the Susquehanna river.

About 700 feet of gangways leading into the mine workings were affected, Griffith said, adding most of the bodies were in one of the gangways which was struck violently. Tracks were torn up and mine timbers shattered.

Rescue crews battled fumes to get to the bodies while on the surface hundreds of anxious relatives and friends gathered at the colliery entrance, some weeping. A police cordon was formed quickly to expedite the work of the rescue crews.

Grant to Present House Bill Continuing Luxury Tax Today

WASHINGTON (AP) Rep. Grant (R., Ind.) announced yesterday he would introduce today his bill to continue beyond July 1 the so-called luxury taxes on liquor, furs, jewelry, lipstick and other items.

Promptly, Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the tax-framing house ways and means committee announced Grant's measure would be given priority over all other tax legislation, and might be approved at the first committee meeting on Friday.

Great Britain, France Agree to Security Pact To Be Signed Soon

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee's office announced last night that Britain and France had agreed to a treaty of alliance.

The statement said an agreement was reached, during the visit of French Premier Leon Blum, that the Anglo-French alliance "should be concluded at the earliest possible moment within the framework of article 52 of the charter of the United Nations."

The British press association said that both the United States and Russia were informed.

The buttons pinned on his pajamas represent contributions to the Campus Chest drive now in progress. ### Green, Capehart Hit Portal Suits; 42,000 Idle in London

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Green and Sen. Capehart (R-Mo.) announced that federal officials would be called to describe the effect of the suits on their departments. He said that congress can not "even consider reducing the tax burden now" unless legislation is passed to curb them.

Green said in a letter to AFL affiliates that such claims could be settled better by collective bargaining between employes and employers, rather than by taking them to court.

London Transport Tieup Goes Into Eleventh Day LONDON (AP)—London's 10-day old truck strike spread among dock workers and Thames lightermen yesterday and prospects for an early settlement dimmed.

At least 42,000 men were idle—more than half of them in protest against the use of troops to supplement the truckers in moving food—and observers said that the walkout threatened to involve all of the Port of London's 24,000 union workers.

Optimism that the end of the unauthorized strike might be in sight faded during a six-hour conference among strike leaders and union heads at which no decision was reached.

Senator Accuses CIO Of 'Pressure' Tactics WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Capehart (R-Ind.) accused a big CIO union yesterday of conducting "a high pressure sales campaign" in pushing suits for portal to portal pay.

No Nude Swimming Mothers Order Girls Back Into Suits

DETROIT (AP)—Chaste swim suits enwrap the girlish figures of the Liberty elementary school's gym class yesterday after irate mothers protested their daughters' nude bathing in the school pool.

The 150 Liberty girls, ages from nine to 13, were given permission six weeks ago to doff their suits to speed their class routine and give them more time to splash in the pool.

The optional system was modeled after that followed by boys at the school for several years. The two sexes are completely segregated during physical education classes, Dr. H.L. Shabler, superintendent of Highland Park schools, emphasized.

Similar nude bathing is permitted in two other Highland Park elementary schools where 200 young girls paddle twice weekly.

A delegation of mothers, claiming to represent 117 parents of Liberty girls, protested against the nude bathing at Tuesday's board of education meeting.

Mrs. Leo Wessinger claimed the custom would lower the girls' moral standards "and get them off on the wrong foot."

Mrs. Alma Vickers told the board she had forbidden her daughter to go into the pool without a suit and suggested nude bathing was akin to participating in nudist colonies.

Mrs. Anna Brenner said there is no telling what the practice "could lead to" and demanded that it be stopped "at once."

Dr. Shabler, "in deference to the mothers," ordered the Liberty girls back into their suits, adding "I don't care either way, myself."

The children, themselves, asked to be rid of the suits, he said, and "there is no moral issue involved here whatsoever."

The young ladies at the other two elementary schools, Ford and Willard, will continue to take their dips in the altogether if they so desire, the superintendent added.

The World Watch—

Student Federalists

By STEVE PARK
Daily Iowan Columnist

World government these days has become something of a panacea, a quick cure-all for all of man's chronic ills, a shimmering Utopia wooing the dreamer and the idealist who seeks a quick simple solution for the most difficult and complex problems of human kind.

Too much it protagonists fritter away valuable time concocting grandiose plans for a future world state without also attempting to discover a durable vehicle through which the same plans can be made real.

Too much they confine themselves to petition circulating, to oratorical flights of fancy, to attempting to incite mass hysteria via the atom bomb whose frightful power ordinary people are unable to comprehend, therefore, making their emotional responses shallow and temporary.

Too seldom the world-governments are willing to concern themselves with the tedious, unaccommodating task of seeking practical solutions to real and pressing problems which affect every one of us every day and which, in the aggregate, stand as almost insurmountable obstacles to true international harmony.

There is one group, however, which, I feel sure, is willing to attack the problems of creating international good will and of setting the stage for a future union of the nations of the world in a practical realistic manner. That group is the Student Federalists organization, whose national president, Colgate Prentice, will be in Iowa City today and will speak in Macbride auditorium tonight.

This group is fully aware that the future will not be secure when the peace treaties have been signed, when the atomic bomb has been outlawed, even when the disarmament treaties have been ratified. They know that the peace, to be effective, must be progressive, stopping not when the weapons of war have been eradicated completely.

They know that there can be no real peace and no world government until a common basis of understanding has been established among all people. They know also that unless a common basis of understanding is discovered that the peoples of the world—all peoples including you and I—must suffer increasing deprivations and restrictions of personal liberty for the sake of national security.

That means high military budgets which create a mountainous debt; it means restrictions upon trade and the existence of monopoly conditions in the world market; it means constant police supervision to prevent the discovery by other powers of secret information; it means restrictions upon movement even within national boundaries.

However, the problem of finding a firm basis for understanding is no easy one. High barriers to any real international development stand squarely in the road to peace. They are not new; most of them existed long before there was an atom bomb, and should the bomb be abolished, they will exist still.

This is the immediate problem. If there is to be understanding—which we must achieve if we are to have peace—then we must isolate each of the barriers; we must study the problem carefully, breaking it down, not with words but by finding practical methods by which it can be erased and by using these methods to erase it.

This means that we must root out the barriers to trade, to movement of peoples and goods, to the free flow of information and ideas, to the transference of culture activities.

Student Federalists has a hard job outlined for it. It needs members and it needs money, but most of all it needs people who are willing to work and to work hard in the struggle for peace. It needs researchers, it needs speakers, it needs men with knowledge of politics, economics, geography, social institutions; it needs them badly.

It needs you if you are willing to give your time and give generously of it.

Where's the Opposition?

What's the matter with the Democrats in Washington these days? Were they so completely winded by last November's campaign that they lack the breath to utter even a feeble note of protest against the abrupt right hand turn the Republicans plan to make for the country?

The vote-happy Republican majority with its theme song, "We've the Mandate of the People," certainly has given the minority enough to protest against. There's the GOP-proposed tax slash, for example. Is this politically expedient but economically unsound move to meet only token opposition from the Democrats?

Also there's the Republicans regressive and oppressive plans for labor legislation. Will the Democrats, the party through which the Wagner Labor act came into being, stand idly by while the majority party hacks this law to bits? Can't they find anyone within their ranks who will take a vigorous stand against Senator Ball's anti-closed shop bill?

And there's that ominous trend toward high tariffs, smacking so much of economic isolationism, which has suddenly reappeared in Republican thinking since they received their "mandate." Isn't some good Democrat going to raise his voice in defense of Cordell Hull's Reciprocal Trade agreements?

The Republicans have plugged their legislative program over the air and in the newspapers with the air of omniscience that only a recently elected majority party has. They're quite certain they have just what the doctor ordered for the country. But this program must not go unchallenged.

The Idea Man of Washington

We're going to start calling Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas the idea man of Washington.

Senator Fulbright, you will remember, was the man who after the Republicans took control of congress Nov. 5 suggested that President Truman appoint a GOP secretary of state and then resign. The idea was to turn the executive over to the Republicans and thus eliminate possible stalemates resulting from two parties controlling the government.

Now Senator Fulbright, who is a Rhodes scholar and apparently an admirer of the British parliamentary system, is preparing a constitutional amendment empowering congress or the president to call new general elections in the interests of a more effective government.

His amendment provides machinery for a congress and a president of opposite political faiths to order an election whenever warranted by the political situation—which might be a political stalemate. The theory of this as in British law is to allow the voters to resolve the differences which exist between the legislative and executive.

In addition, the Arkansas senator proposes that the president, vice president and the congressmen be elected for six year terms, and as he says, "thereby preventing recurrence of the situation existing today where congress is controlled by the Republicans and the executive branch by the Democrats."

Fulbright's amendment would, in effect, force the American people to vote on issues. If, for instance, the president and the congress became seriously deadlocked

It's about time that the Democrats got up from the floor and started slugging back. After all they're not so badly outnumbered and they still, technically, have control of the White House. They too have "mandates" from quite a large group of voters.

As the minority party, they have an important function to perform. They're the opposition party now that the GOP has so gleefully seized the initiative from the executive branch and they have a job to do. How well they do this job may have a lot to do with our future.

They must hold up for public scrutiny the weaknesses and anachronisms of the Republican law making plans. They must let the people know that current Republican thinking has not changed much since they took over after World War I. This type of thinking failed then and it stands an even smaller chance of success in the atomic present.

The Democrats must regain their articulateness. It's their duty to present the other side of the picture to the nation. But they shouldn't confine their attacks to congressional debate; they should borrow some of the GOP's techniques and give their own ideas the widest possible circulation. Surely the party that gave birth to Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt isn't suddenly devoid of constructive thinking.

It's possible that if the Democrats in the house and the senate take a strong and determined position in defiance of Taft's, Ball's and Wherry's ideologies from out of the ancient past, Mr. Truman might even be able to stop his frightened wooing of the majority party.

on an important issue, one or the other could call an election which, of course, would be based on that particular issue.

There are people who shudder at the mere thought of such an amendment. These folks usually maintain that we shouldn't choose our public officials for their views on only one issue but on many issues.

This argument overlooks the fact, however, that a man's views on an issue will usually indicate fairly accurately what his views on other issues will be. The use of the words "liberal" and "conservative" to describe certain public officials shows that we are already able to do that to some extent.

Our purpose, however, is not so much to defend Senator Fulbright's new amendment as it is to air it and perhaps start some of you thinking about it. You must admit it presents many interesting possibilities.

CARL L. BECKER IN "HOW NEW WILL THE BETTER WORLD BE?": Political power exists in the world and will be used by those who have it—for good ends we hope, but at all events for some ends. In this very real sense all politics is power politics, and every accession of power redresses the balance in somebody's favor or to somebody's loss.

I'D RATHER BE RIGHT

How Many Beans in a Bowl?

One of the most disturbing public spectacles in years has been the strange Republicans waltz around the budget, with each member pausing briefly to intone a guess as to how many billions can be peeled off, then careering on his way. The ceremony has been conducted like one of those contests in which you try to guess the number of beans in a bowl; and with something like the same innocent merit over wrong guesses.

Representative Taber, of New York, for example, made the first lovely set of headlines with a flat declaration that eight billions could be taken out of the budget. By next morning he had cooled off, saying that a careful study would be required before savings could be predicted. That, of course, could have been an extremely sensible remark in the first place.

Mr. Stassen thinks five billions can be saved; he reaches this by cutting all figures except those for the military and for debt service, etc., by a flat and positive 25 percent, a brisk and brash 25 percent, an even quarter, a trim one out of four. But why not 25.5 percent, or 18.9 percent? Ah, those round numbers! Oh, those beans in the bowl!

By far the most popular set of guesses, however, are those, by Mr. Taft and some others, that run around three to four billions as the proper, the right, the delectable, the pre-ordained, the destined, the most admirable amount to cut.

By SAMUEL GRAFTON

But this figure is not reached on the basis of any internal evidence in the budget itself as to what is possible or desirable. It happens to be the amount that must be cut to justify a reduction of 20 percent in personal income taxes. This isn't household budgeting at all; it is more like a dream of a mink coat.

And as one looks over these approaches, one is suddenly, strongly, oppressed by the almost total absence of method. These crude pie-cuts, these boisterous estimates, this rough gouging may perhaps be emotionally understandable, as natural reactions by tax-paying man to his fiscal environment, but they can in no way be described as the application of a method to a problem.

At this point the shadow of a kind of intellectual disorder falls across the national scene. For one notices also, for example, an ebbing of the passion for debt reduction among leading Republicans. Mr. Taft throws in an occasional mention of the problem, so does Mr. Stassen; but with the majority of the Republicans who meet the reporters for the purpose of kicking the budget around, tax cuts far exceed debt cuts as the subject of choice.

The effect is odd; a conservative who is not a debt-reducer hardly qualifies for the name at all; and to commune with conservatives and hear so little mention of debt-reduction is like spending a day among fiddlers and never hearing a word about music.

Under these circumstances, the conservative promise comes to seem like a word spoken from a great distance, and with a dying fall. One begins to wonder about the nature of American conservatism, whether it is dedicated to good housekeeping and careful living, or whether it is primarily a movement of a more primitive kind, chiefly interested in the short, gaily run.

One senses an echo of the heedlessness of 1928, and recall; but one senses almost no recollection of the dreadful things which happened to conservative prestige after the moralists and novelists and satirists had finished writing about those years.

To see the boys now, budgeting with their thumbs, and offering to conduct the public business by (See GRAFTON, page 5)

Rest camps, employment agencies, student living co-ops, rehabilitation work and health projects are also part of the WSSF program (which is limited only by the smallness of our contributions.) This is a chance to aid students the world around; WSSF offers American students a share in establishing an international student community able to overcome the disruption and degradation of war.

A generation of students will lack an adequate opportunity and education to do their part in building tomorrow unless immediate relief is given them today. WSSF provides such relief. By giving to WSSF you can shape tomorrow's world today. It is a concrete opportunity and should not be ignored or bought off cheaply.

Physicists Cite Atom, Radar Advancements

Dozens of artificially produced radioactive substances have opened up bright new horizons in biochemistry, organic chemistry and medicine, Prof. Louis A. Turner, head of the physics department, told members of the student affiliate of the American Chemical society, last night.

Including artificially radioactive materials—products of the atomic bomb and atomic piles—there are from 225 to 250 separate atomic species whose atoms "blow up," calling "here I am" to electronic equipment that will detect radioactivity.

Turner said radioactive atoms were like the proverbial "whistling golf ball—they speak up every now and then to disclose their presence."

Radioactive minerals and chemicals eaten by humans or animals can be traced with special equipment, and their use by the body discovered, Dr. Turner said. By counting the "explosions," scientists can even determine how much of a specific substance is used by each part of the body.

Possibilities of the application of micro waves to scientific problems and to practical life were outlined yesterday by W.W. Salisbury, research director of Collins Radio Co., Cedar Rapids.

In a luncheon address to 35 members of the Iowa Engineering society, Salisbury explained that these waves lie in a frequency range in which the waves are 10 centimeters or less in length as compared to the few hundred meter length of the regular broadcast radio waves.

An essential part of radar, the waves are involved in modern aerial navigation. This is one of the reasons, he said, why further research in the field is pressing. "There may also be scientific applications in chemistry among the complex gases which have their spectrum in this frequency region," Salisbury said. He pointed to astronomical applications in the measurement of temperatures in the sun and in space.

Describing the postwar development in this field as "slow," Salisbury placed part of the blame on the impossibility of obtaining surplus government equipment and on shortages in materials and trained personnel.

A whole field of scientific techniques has developed, he said, to facilitate the use of these extremely short waves.

"They (the waves) are an important part of our workshop of scientific tools," Salisbury concluded, "and they may bring about important changes affecting our civilization."

D.A.R. Radio Show To Feature Music By Former Student

Compositions by Mrs. Valjean Phillips of Cedar Falls, formerly a student at the University of Iowa, will be featured on the Daughters of American Revolution radio program Saturday morning at 9 o'clock over WSUI.

Other performers will be Mrs. Eudora Lindeman Shepherd, contralto, and Dorothy Phillips, oboist. Mrs. Shepherd is a student at the University of Iowa school of music and Miss Phillips is a student at Iowa State Teachers college in Cedar Falls.

The program will be: "Scherzo in B major," piano solo performed by Mrs. Valjean Phillips; "Beyond the Years," vocal solo sung by Mrs. Shepherd; "Imps," a piano solo by Mrs. Phillips and Dorothy Phillips; "Death, Dive and Hope," a vocal solo by Mrs. Shepherd, and "Prairie," a piano solo by Mrs. Phillips.

Former Iowa Citian Dies in Wisconsin

C. H. Ramsey, 80, former Iowa Citian, died Tuesday afternoon at a hospital in Green Bay, Wis. He had made his home in Seymour, Wis., the past 30 years.

Survivors include a brother, G. S. Ramsey, 624 S. Lucas street, and two half-brothers, E. Loraine Lawyer, 248 Hutchinson avenue and E. E. Lawyer, 1121 E. Burlington street.

Funeral services and burial will be held in Solon. The date has not been set.

450 to Receive Degrees At Mid-Year Graduation

Some 450 degrees and certificates will be conferred upon graduates Feb. 1. This is the largest mid-year graduating class in the university's history.

Prof. Frederick Higbee, director of convocations, said yesterday this total is only about 100 less than the number at the June Commencement. Only 131 awards were given at last year's mid-year exercises.

Some Grades Are Just A Pain in the Neck!

Some students crib and others "apple-polish" for grades, but Gus Peterson, G of Iowa City, does it the hard way. In fact, he wrenched his shoulder.

Yesterday he took a run and jump off the three-meter board in the swimming pool. To the instructor of humaneals, Peterson said, "How was that?"

"Worth a C," said the instructor. "Oh, no!" Peterson screamed. Not downhearted he made another running jump off the board. This time he wrenched his shoulder.

Writhing in pain, Peterson said, "How—glub, glub—how was that dive?" Said the instructor, "Worth a B."

Ideals With Wit Prentice Gives Views On Blue Jeans

By JIM BECKER

Blond, pipe smoking Colgate Prentice, who will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in Macbride auditorium, arrived in Iowa City yesterday afternoon and was immediately surrounded by campus advocates of federal world government.

The 22-year-old idealist, student of political science at Swarthmore college, is convinced that "Old concepts are obsolete." He says quietly that world federalism must come or another war may result.

The national president of the 4,000-member Student Federalist organization emphasizes with a wave of his pipe his belief that "federalism must ultimately become a political issue."

Queried on other topics, Prentice gives evidence of a quiet sense of humor. "Blue jeans on co-eds are demoralizing," he observes, adding quickly, "to the co-eds themselves, I mean."

"What do I think of the new secretary of state? Marshall appears to me to be an exception to the usual military man. He has shown a grasp of international politics that makes some aspects of the future look a little brighter."

"I believe," he said in answer to a question on U. S.-Soviet relations, "that it is possible for these two nations to avoid conflict."

Prentice will be guest of honor at a dinner given by local Student Federalists and their guests at 6 o'clock tonight at Hotel Jefferson.

Forensics to Discuss Social Security Acts

A discussion on whether the United States government should enact a new social security legislation will be conducted on the weekly forensic broadcast over WSUI at 3 p.m. today.

Students who will participate in this afternoon's broadcast are Larry Butler, A3 of Iowa City; Jean Collier, A4 of Freeport, Ill.; Betty Ann Erickson, A4 of Spencer; Virginia Rosenberg, A3 of Burlington, and Don Kreymer, A4 of Niota, Ill.

Cooks' Caprice

By DEE SCHECHTMAN

Dessert parties seem to be all the rage around town now and are well liked by both hostesses and guests. They are easy for you homemakers to plan and carry out too. Your guests will like them because they are informal, congenial affairs that make no great demands upon anyone. Normally, dessert parties are planned for about an hour in length after the dinner hour, and guests are supposed to eat at home, but skip dessert. A simple dessert and coffee is all you really need to plan; however, you can enlarge upon the idea and add salted nuts, mints or other tasteful accompaniments.

Any kind of pie or cake, served with or without ice cream, is always good for your dessert parties. If you like to serve it with whipped cream, you might try flavoring the whipped cream with jam. Three of the best flavors to mix with whipped cream are peach, apricot and pineapple, or all three together. Here is a good recipe for whipped cream jam sauce you could use with pie or cake at your next dessert party.

½ tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup of cold water
½ cup peach jam
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup whipping cream

Combine the gelatin and cold water and let it stand 10 minutes. Place this mixture over hot water and stir until the gelatin dissolves. Add the jam and lemon juice and place the mixture in the refrigerator to chill. When it starts to thicken, whip the cream until it is stiff and fold it into the jam mixture. This sauce is especially good with white or angel food cake.

New Course Offered Women P.E. Majors

An integrated natural science course including geology, astronomy, ornithology and botany will be offered for the first time next semester to women physical education majors and as a required course for recreation leadership majors.

The two-hour course, one hour of lecture and two hours of laboratory or field trips a week, is designed to familiarize the student with the most common elements of nature and the application of this knowledge for use in recreation, camping and education.

The first four weeks of the course will be in geology under the instruction of Prof. Carlton Condit. Prof. C.C. Wylie will teach two weeks of astronomy; Prof. G.L. Martin, five weeks of botany, and Mrs. T.L. Jahn, five weeks of ornithology.

The course has also been made a requirement for no credit for graduates in pre-school education.

Military Ball Tickets
Tickets for the Military ball Friday night are still available to the general public, students and faculty members at Iowa Union lobby desk. The $3.50 price includes tax. Men not enrolled in ROTC may wear tuxedos in lieu of uniforms.

Up from the Ranks

These are presidents of operating telephone companies of the Bell System. They all started at the bottom of the ladder . . . Nine years ago the Bell System first published an advertisement like this, except that there are now thirteen new faces in the pictures. These new presidents also started at the bottom.

The Bell System aims to keep the opportunity for advancement open to all.

One of its traditions is that its executives come up from the ranks. That has been true of the business for many years and nowhere is it better illustrated than in the careers of the men who now serve as presidents of Bell Telephone Companies.

As a group, they have put in 611 years of telephone service, an average of 36 years each.

Six Hawkeye Swimmers Honored

Five members of the University of Iowa swimming team have been given all-American rating or honorable mention in the 1946 collegiate swimming squad and another was on the inter-scholastic group. The rankings were made by swimming coaches and were published in the National Collegiate A.A. swimming guide.

Highest rated Hawkeye is Dick Maine of Des Moines, who placed second in the 150-yard back stroke with a time of 1:36.2 which was a freshman intercollegiate record. Kenny Marsh of Cedar Rapids was named on the squad in the 100-yard free style with a time of :53.3 and got honorable mention in the 50-yard sprint.

Others honored are: Bob Korte, Chicago, honorable mention in the 50-yard free style; Arthur Van Havern, Rock Island, Ill., honorable mention in the 440-yard free style; Bob Matters, Waukesha, Wis., in the 300-yard medley swim, and Dick Lake, Clinton, an All-American in the 100-yard breast stroke.

Three Iowa Teams In Action Saturday, Monday

Sports Shots

By Bob Collins

There's a $64 question coming up in Iowa sports this Saturday night when the Hawks open their five-game road series with conference teams by taking on the hot and cold Hoosiers of Indiana.

The Hawks who haven't traveled farther than from their homes to the fieldhouse for any of the 10 games to date are now faced with the prospect of coming down the Big Nine stretch away from home before hostile crowds and on strange floors. How they perform at Indiana Saturday and Purdue Monday will either answer or support the critics of the Iowa schedule policies who felt that a couple non-conference warm up games away from home would have helped.

Meanwhile Iowa is claiming a modern single game team free throw record after sinking 27 charity tosses in the Minnesota game. The Big Nine Record book which is a rather complete and detailed document has no mention of this department. It is the highest for Iowa teams as far as anybody around here can remember and betters the single game record of last season set by Indiana at 23 free throws. In that trend this year has been for rough and tumble exhibitions, Iowa proficiency on the free throw line is going to count.

Part of the fun in this business is reading what the other writers have to say. And just now if you could believe all you read there is a storm brewing in the north around Wisconsin and Minnesota with our Hawkeyes right in the middle.

Now there's no sense in getting embroiled in senseless arguments or adding fuel to a fire that could set off unpleasantness in any basketball contest. That's not the purpose of the game. However, some of the charges made against the Iowa team, crowd and desire of victory are ridiculous, untrue and downright malicious.

So to pass along some information on some questions you may have in mind as well as to discuss some of the things people are saying about us we'll ramble a little.

First of all there's been a lot of criticism of the officiating which has been termed "Strictly Home-Town". The whistle work admittedly has been just so-so in the conference games but certainly Iowa has not been unduly favored. The Wisconsin game viewed objectively would probably show the Badgers received the short end of the deal while the Iowa team took a slight nudge from the officials in the Minnesota game.

But the charge that the officials are "Home Towners" is way off-base. The truth is that the officials for both conference and non-conference games are selected, not by the home team, but by Western conference headquarters in Chicago. Commissioner Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson's office publishes an approved list of officials for the conference games and a supplemented list for non-conference games and from this list the men are assigned specific games. If their work has not been good, it is not the fault of the Iowa athletic department.

The second major criticism concerns the unsportsmanlike conduct of the Iowa crowd. On this point there's a lot that can be said about the trend not only at Iowa but at every school in the conference. The Iowa crowd as everybody probably realizes should discipline itself back to a point where the school doesn't receive dishonorable mention in regard to sportsmanship. And by that I don't mean that natural enthusiasm is out of order.

So that criticism may be considered constructive which can't be said for the one from a Madison paper which deplores the "Win at any Cost" attitude at the University of Iowa. We don't now, never have and I hope never will apologize for winning. Be it football, basketball, baseball, swimming, marbles or ping-pong, Iowa plays to win. Not at any cost, of course, but within the bounds of the letter and intent of the rules and regulations.

We're glad we have good teams—things were mighty dull when they weren't up to standard. We're glad we have a good coach who we consider a gentleman and a good sport. As long as his only fault is enthusiasm, will to win, and desire to take care of his players, there is no room for criticism.

We at Iowa plan on continuing supporting the teams wholeheartedly and at the same time acknowledging the good play of our opponents and overlooking their heat-of-battle faults. As far as we are concerned both Wisconsin and Minnesota have good basketball teams and we look forward with interest to the return games with the two schools.

Basketball, Swimming Teams Away; Matmen Meet Bradley Here

A Saturday-to-Monday schedule which includes two basketball road games and the opening of the swimming and wrestling seasons will be followed by University of Iowa athletes Jan. 18 to 20.

The basketball squad, having completed ten straight home games, hits the road for vital contests with Indiana at Bloomington Saturday and Purdue at Lafayette Monday.

Potentially one of the strongest wrestling teams in Iowa history, the 1947 grapplers open their seven-meet schedule against Bradley university in the fieldhouse Saturday afternoon. Heading the Iowans are Captain Ed Kemp, 155 pounds; Leo Scarpello, 175 pounds, former National A.A.U. 165 pound champion; Romeo Macias, 128-pound champion of the conference in 1944 and 1945; and Duane Hanson, former Big Nine 136-pound champion for Northwestern.

Swimmers go to Northwestern Monday for their first meet, buoyed by hopes of a powerful team. Leaders include Wally Ris, National A.A.U. indoor 100 and 220-yard champion; Dick Maine, conference back stroke titlist; and Kenny Marsh, sprinter. Northwestern was defeated by Purdue, a later Iowa opponent, 44-40, in the last yards of the final event Saturday.

Meanwhile, track and field athletes, who do not open their intercollegiate season until Feb. 1, will warm up by competing in the university relay intramural carnival Saturday afternoon. It is being held for the first time since 1943 and includes varied relays and individual events.

Chicago in Olympic Bid

CHICAGO (AP)—The city council yesterday authorized Mayor Edward J. Kelly to extend Chicago's official bid for the 1952 Olympic games.

A resolution, prepared by Kelly and adopted by the council, also authorized the formation of a 100-man committee to work toward bringing the Olympics here.

Chandler Accepts Bonus Rule; Minor Loop Approval Needed

CINCINNATI (AP)—Baseball's bonus rule moved a step nearer enactment yesterday as Commissioner A.B. Chandler's advisory council reached an agreement on the measure and sent it to the Minor Leagues for approval.

Chandler told newsmen that upon approval of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs (Minor leagues), he would notify Major and Minor league that the bonus regulation had been adopted. The rule becomes effective, he said, 30 days after the date of his notice to the leagues.

The advisory council made only slight changes in the bonus provision which earlier had received the affirmative nod from each of the Major leagues at separate meetings.

The bonus plan provides that any free agent (a player not under contract), who signs a player's contract with a Major or Minor league club in consideration of a bonus or promise of a bonus, shall be classified as a bonus player throughout the remainder of his baseball career.

It also stipulates that any such free agent shall be deemed to have signed his contract in consideration of a bonus if the aggregate amount or value exceeds: $6,000 for a Major league club; $4,000 for a class AAA club; $3,000 for class AA; $2,500, class A-1; $2,000 class A; $1,500, class B; $1,200, class C; $800, class D, and $500, class E.

Under terms of the rule, no bonus player's contract shall be assigned outright to a club of lower classification unless waivers first have been obtained in the assignor club's league or leagues, and no such waiver requests shall be withdrawn.

Bruins Skate to 6-3 Win Over Black Hawks BOSTON (AP)—Sparked by four new players, the Boston Bruins strengthened their shaky hold on the National hockey league's third rung by storming from behind for a 6-3 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks last night before a packed 13,800 crowd at the Boston Garden. The last-place Black Hawks, winners of their three previous games, got off to a flying start by scoring three times during the first 12 minutes of play.

Dear Joe & Jane — Well here it is at last—today your old PASTIME Theatre goes out and your new CAPITOL comes into being. Not much of a surprise, huh? Why the change?—Well we feel we've made so many changes down here that a new name was appropriate. We've redecorated (and still are) we've renovated, we've changed the policy bringing only the top pictures you have chosen yourselves.

We feel the theater belongs to you because actually you've been running it. You've selected at least 80% of the pictures we play and we are going to continue on that basis.

There are times when we are unable to bring back some of your requests as certain film companies do not retain their prints after 30 months. However when ever it is humanly possible you may be assured we will play only the pictures you want to see.

We want you to continue to make suggestions and requests. Our door is always open so drop in any time. So we haul down the PASTIME colors and hoist the new CAPITOL emblem. Remember it's only a step from the old Capitol to the new. Its Capitol in entertainment.

Sincerely Ernie Pannos P. S. We're starting off with 2 great requests. Don't miss these two great pictures.

Piatigorsky Concert Is 'Triumph'

Reviewer Praises 'Delicate Artistry'

By BILL YATES
Iowa City will never again hear violincello music until Gregor Piatigorsky returns to the scene of Wednesday night's triumph in the Iowa Union.

Over the years, many fine artists have visited the university but in the estimation of this writer, Mr. Piatigorsky is the peer of them all. Mr. Piatigorsky was master of his instrument at all times and demonstrated most adequately why he is ranked the foremost living cellist performing on the concert stage.

Outstanding selections on the program seemed to be arrangements by the artist himself. The Haydn "Divertimento" displayed delicateness of artistry usually not heard more than once or twice in a lifetime.

Highpoint of the evening was Brahms' "Sonata in F Major." At times the sonata seemed to become lost within itself but the soloist kept the work moving by sheer musicianship; the allegro movement was played with such skill as to be nothing short of tremendous.

The short selections of Schubert, Schumann and Weber were immediate favorites with the huge audience since here the cello returned to a lighter vein demonstrating beautiful finger dexterity and perfect interpretation.

The "Capriccio" by the young pianist, Lukas Foss, smacked of extreme modernism and completely captivated the audience.

Mr. Piatigorsky played two of his own compositions, unaccompanied—"Syrinx" and "Procession." The first number was a brief song-like composition into which the soloist poured all of his interpretative genius. The "Procession" was extremely reminiscent of Prokofiev but at all times retained positive originality in the sonorous-rhythmic strains.

Paganini's showpiece, "La Campanella," received a technical treatment the like of which Iowa City musicians will never hear again.

To a dynamic personality and a superlative artist we say—thank you.

State governments spent about half a billion dollars on highway construction in 1948 as compared with a billion and a half spent in 1930.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, before presenting a university concert last night practiced in his hotel room and visited with his old friend Prof. Hans Koebel of the music department.

Piatigorsky's 'Old Friend' Serves Him Well

By PAUL SMITH
An old friend served Gregor Piatigorsky well last night. His Iowa Union concert was played on the 200 year old Montagnana cello, which came to Piatigorsky back in 1934 when he was in despair because his old cello was "sick." For the first half of the present concert season, Piatigorsky used the famous "Lord Aylesford" Stradivarius, which he purchased last summer. But when he undertook his current tour he went back to the Montagnana. Caressing the cello's strings as he would a favorite child, Piatigorsky said, "I looked at my old friend and said—

"I'll take him along this time." Another old friend was with Piatigorsky yesterday—Prof. Hans Koebel, the university's solo cellist. As Piatigorsky idly bowed his cello, the talk soon turned, inevitably, to music. Piatigorsky, who has done many cello transcriptions, deplored the "snobs" and "purists" who say transcriptions are no good. Many great works dead for centuries have been revived by transcribing them he said, though he admitted the transcriber must know intimately the instrument for which he transcribes. Of audiences Piatigorsky said

New York City is artistically "over-erfed," and that he much prefers those of small communities. He finds them receptive to great music, and if most of them do not know music he is not disturbed. "It is not what an audience knows that is important; it is what it feels."

Feeling is likewise important in musical interpretation, and of that he gave a striking illustration. He struck a note on his cello and asked us what it was. Koebel guessed it was an E. Piatigorsky guessed it was an F sharp. "You see," Piatigorsky exclaimed, "I don't know." Upon hearing him play, one is convinced that he doesn't need to know.

REPUBLICANS—

night Johnson had no comment to make on the candidacies but said, "I'm going to contact Mr. Meardon tonight to ask him to attend the meeting tomorrow afternoon."

Inasmuch as Republican Veterans leaguers have candidates of their own in mind for these positions, some compromise may have to be reached.

The issue of Redenbaugh's qualification to run for public office has been raised by at least one Republican party source. Redenbaugh is commander of the Roy L. Chopek post 17 of the American Legion and local chairman of the civil service commission.

In some quarters it is thought that neither position is compatible with holding public office.

The Daily Iowan had not succeeded in reaching Redenbaugh at edition time last night to determine if he must resign both posts to run for election in the primaries.

Early oil production methods recovered only 20 percent of the existing oil, but modern methods recover as much as 80 percent.

The demand for leather for seats is so great that several leading tanneries specialize in production for this purpose.
