Browns Peddle Two More Stars

All-American Trio Heads Iowa Riflemen

Last year's SUI rifle squad was the only 1947 Hawkeye team to end up on top of the Big Nine heap. Their chances of duplicating the feat are very good for this year.

Three nationally recognized all-Americans are back to lead Sgt. H. W. Wendlandt's firing group for 1948. Bill Voelckers and Charles Rogler of Iowa City and Gerald Eckhart, Davenport, are the three men chosen on the National Rifle association all-American squad.

Voelckers, present team captain, was a fighter pilot in World War II and shooting was his hobby. He made the second NRA squad and, according to Wendlandt, might have made the first team had he not fired in anchor position. Rogler, Eckhart and Voelckers finished 1, 2, 3 in the Western Conference Individual meet in Omaha last spring. Eckhart also won the Club Members match with a healthy score of 286 out of 300. He and Rogler were first team all-American selections.

Since 1926 the Hawk rifle unit has won the Russell Wiles trophy 10 times. Minnesota has held it eight times while no other Big Nine school has ever been successful in winning the trophy.

In the National Intercollegiate Rifle matches, the Hawks placed second. There were 59 teams in the meet. They were first in 1929, 1940 and 1946, setting a national record in 1940 with a team total of 1403 points.

Postal and shoulder-to-shoulder matches are now being scheduled for this season. A twelve-man team will be chosen from candidates trying out.

Coach Wendlandt would like to see some additional men turn out for practice when it begins Tuesday. Those interested may report to him in room 8, fieldhouse.

Plan Grade School Basketball League

Director of athletics at City High, Howard Moffit, has announced that this year's basketball program will feature a grade school cage league.

Wolves, Bucks Top Grid Card

Big Nine Schedule Will End Tomorrow

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

CHICAGO, (AP)—A season of record breaking total attendance in the Western conference ends Saturday with Michigan's undefeated Wolverines playing before their sixth sellout crowd of the campaign against hapless Ohio State at Ann Arbor.

A rough total of 2,827,933 fans will have witnessed the 54 conference games, an increase of approximately 175,000 above the records smashing total of 2,652,933 set in 1946. Michigan alone will have drawn 453,933 for six games played at home.

The Michigan-Ohio State game, heretofore one of the classics of the Big Nine season, probably will result in another slaughter of Ohio's Buckeyes as the Wolverines prepare for Pasadena's Rose Bowl game Jan. 1.

Michigan crushed the Buckeyes 58 to 6 last season. Now Ohio State, winner of only one game—the controversial 7-6 victory over Northwestern after the elapse of the regulation 60 minutes—is weaker and the Wolverines are speedier and more powerful. The season is Ohio State's worst on the gridiron since it joined the Western conference in 1912.

Nevertheless, despite prospects of a one-sided contest, a sellout crowd of 85,938 will be in the stands at Ann Arbor tomorrow. It will be the third time the Wolverines have packed in this total on their home field this season.

Coach Fritz Crisler of the Wolverines plans to use the same offensive and defensive lineups that he has used all season in rolling up a total 324 points to 53 for all opponents.

Illinois, battling to gain second place in the final standings of the conference, engages Northwestern at Champaign.

Wisconsin meets Minnesota at Minneapolis and Indiana and Purdue hook up in their traditional battle at Bloomington.

Iowa finished its season a week ago in upsetting Minnesota.

Thief 'Burns One' Past Dizzy Dean

DALLAS, (AP)—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean was plumb burned up yesterday.

Some person whom the former big league pitcher and present radio announcer would like to meet, stole all the trophies of his greatest days in baseball.

The valuable Dean, mad as a hornet, said "it ain't gonna be healthy for that guy if Old Diz ever lays his hands on him."

Dizzy reported to police the trophies were missing when he unpacked some boxes of his belongings which had been in storage.

Thatcher Tops Spencer, 40-0

Thatcher rolled over Spencer, 40-0, yesterday to win the Town league intramural touch football championship.

It was definitely Eddie Colbert's day as he passed for four touchdowns and two extra points, ran 40 yards to score on a punt return, caught a touchdown pass, and ran for two more conversions.

Spencer started fast with Jack Dana hitting Willie Orr on a pass, moving the ball to Thatcher's 10 yard line. But that was all the farther they got with Jack Shay nailing Dana for two heavy losses.

Thatcher took over, and on the first play Colbert pitched to Otto Proehl for a touchdown, and ran over the extra point.

The next two touchdowns came on Colbert's 40 yard punt return, and on a pass from Colbert to Jack Shay. Colbert passed to Proehl for one extra point, and ran for the other to give Thatcher a 21-0 halftime lead.

In the second half Colbert heaved two passes to Harold Hartvigson and Johnny Quinn for 12 more points, and caught a pass from Quinn for the final touchdown.

Colbert passed to Red Diehl for the conversion.

The victory left Thatcher undefeated, racking up 144 points to their opponents six.

USC, Michigan Given Edge; Bowl Bound

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

NEW YORK (AP)—Some teams wind up their seasons tomorrow and others rest for Thanksgiving day games, but there's no rest for this weary football forecaster who offers another series of gridiron guesses after boosting his average to a flat 800 in 517 correct predictions and 129 misses over the past eight weeks:

Southern Methodist vs. Baylor—A confident vote for Southern Methodist.

Penn State vs. Pittsburgh—Here's where the Nittany Lions complete a perfect season and avenge last year's 14-7 defeat with a shower of touchdowns. Not much chance for an upset. Penn State.

Braves' Bob Elliott Named Most Valuable In National League

NEW YORK, (AP)—To Bob Elliott goes the distinction of having been the first third baseman in the major leagues ever to have been proclaimed the most valuable player of his circuit.

The hard-hitting Boston Braves infielder was named the National league's MVP yesterday by a 24-man committee of the baseball writers' association. He received 205 votes in the balloting for the Kenesaw Mountain Landis memorial award to win handsily over Ewell Blackwell, Cincinnati's no-run, no-hit pitcher, who placed second with 175 votes.

Johnny Mize, New York first baseman who tied with Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner for the home run championship of the majors with 51, was third with 144 and Bruce Edwards, aggressive Brooklyn Dodger catcher, was fourth with 140.

It was Elliott's fine work both in the field and at bat that enabled Billy Southworth's Braves to finish as high as third and won him the regard of the writers. The solidly built San Franciscan, who was named The Associated Press' all-star team third baseman, batted .315 last season and drove in 113 runs. Twenty-two of his blows went for home runs.

Jackie Robinson, the Dodgers' rookie first baseman, got 106 votes just beating out Kiner for fifth place. Kiner had 101.

Yanks Demand Investigation Of 'Break-up'

ST. LOUIS, (AP)—The St. Louis Browns turned another player deal yesterday—their third in less than a week—as American league rivals expressed growing concern and the New York Yankees announced they would seek a "complete investigation."

As Browns General Manager Bill De Witt plunged ahead with plans to lift the club out of the cellar, provide new faces and acquire much needed cash, the Yanks declared they would ask Commissioner A. B. Chandler and President Will Harridge of the American league to open a thorough inquiry into the situation.

De Witt declined comment on the Yankee statement which came after the Browns' latest transaction sent two more of their regulars—First Baseman Walt Judnich and Pitcher Bob Muncrief—to the Cleveland Indians for three players and an undisclosed amount of cash.

The statement said the Yanks are "not concerned" with the Browns peddling their star players to pennant rivals of the world champion Bombers, but that they "are concerned with the effect it has on the St. Louis situation."

Chandler, contacted at his Versailles, Ky., home said he had no comment to make at this time, but indicated he would have something to say later.

Yesterday's Browns-Cleveland deal followed two trades with the Boston Red Sox which drew criticism from the veteran Connie Mack and left the Browns with only three regulars from their surprise pennant winning club of 1944 still on their roster.

These trades, in which the Browns acquired a bundle of cash reported around $300,000 but no players of established renown, were noteworthy, in the view of rival American league moguls, from the standpoint of what the pennant contending Red Sox obtained.

The particular Boston acquisitions causing concern to these rivals are Shortstop Vern Stephens, American league home run king a few seasons ago, and unpredictable righthander Jack Kramer, both of whom can come up with stellar performances when in the mood.

De Witt declared: "We are not interested in 'name' players. We had 'name' players last year and finished in the cellar. We want younger men who will help the club in years to come."

All-Staters, All-Americans Dot Freshman Basketball Roster

Everybody's doing it! Frosh coach Vince Harsha thought so yesterday as he watched 55 freshman cagers parade through the fieldhouse gym. He expects at least 20 more to report for drills in the near future.

A few high school headliners have appeared in the sessions and proceeded to prove why they were awarded top honors in the business.

Diminutive Dick Riecks, the Danbury dribbler who caught the hearts of thousands of Iowans in the 1947 state tourney, started to work at once. His floor work was certainly up to par, and the hoop mess bore the brunt of the attack as Riecks poured in shots from all over the court. One look is all that is necessary to see that he is ready and willing to mix it up with the "big boys."

Newcastle, Pa., contributed the heralded Bill Andrews to the Harsha herd. An experienced ball player, Andrews drew nationwide attention last year when he scored 26 points against Duquesne, which was whipped only twice during the season. He has the polish of a varsity contender and lives on the court.

one forward to watch this season. 'Skip' Sexton, Danbury teamster of Riecks, is out and he indicated his intention to end up on the first squad before the season is over.

Kenny DeKoster was the point-getter for a good Spencer quintet last year and received all-state honors without even coming to the state tournament. Harsha watched him and muttered, "good boy."

Stewart Tunnell, younger brother of football's Emlen, represents a mass of enthusiasm from Garret Hill, Pa. They said he was good and a little thing will tell.

"One thing we don't lack is height," boasted the frosh mentor. We have a lot of them around the size of Glenn Dille. Dille, the six foot six inch center from Tulsa, Okla., came to SUI with a reputation that cannot be ignored. As far as Oklahomans are concerned he is all-state, all-American . . . in fact all-everything.

The first cut will undoubtedly occur after a week of practice. Due to the large number of candidates, no equipment was issued. After the original group is shined to around 20 members, equipment will be given out.

Rollo Bergeson To 'Talk Back' At Annual Wayzgoose Banquet

Rollo H. Bergeson, youngest elected official in Iowa's statehouse, will "talk back" to the newspapermen of the state Sunday night in an address at the annual Wayzgoose banquet for journalism students.

In recent months, the 36-year-old navy veteran and secretary of state has:

1. Criticized attitudes of church groups in an address to a state church convention.

2. Criticized veteran organization practices in an address to a state veterans' convention.

Bergeson has indicated he will give his views on the "moral and public responsibilities of a newspaperman with special emphasis on government."

He said his title, "A Politician Talks Back" was suggested "by the fact that the journalist is usually enjoying open season on politicians."

Political observers writing in Iowa newspapers have tabbed Bergeson as the most promising of the younger politicians in the state. Several have gone so far as to mention him as a possible candidate for governor next year.

With Iowa newspapermen at the Wayzgoose banquet will be prominent Republicans from this area, anxious to see Bergeson in action.

Tickets for the banquet are being sold by Bill Miller and Don Scannell, president and treasurer respectively of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity. Tickets can also be obtained from other members of SDX and are available in the school of journalism office.

Scout leaders are still needed and anyone interested is urged to call Mrs. Barker.

Game Prosecutions Light For October

October game prosecutions were the lightest in recent years, the Iowa Conservation commission announced yesterday.

Conservation officials arrested 125 violators during the month and secured convictions in each case, the report said. Total fines of $2,760 were assessed by courts in the state for the violations.

Forty-two arrests were made for fishing violations, 43 for hunting and the remainder for miscellaneous infractions of conservation laws.

In October, 1946, almost three times as many violators were apprehended. Total fines then were $9,700.

The university architect's office will investigate the bids and forward its recommendation to the board of education within two weeks.

The Winger Construction company, Ottumwa, submitted five bids for different types of equipment. Their offers ranged from $136,000 to $154,000. Four bids were presented to the board by the J. F. Pritchard company, Kansas City, Mo. These ranged from

Says Russia Can Win in Political Poker

Russia holds six high cards in her hand which she can play and win in the European poker game despite the United States' $20-billion Marshall plan bankroll. This was implied yesterday afternoon by Prof. Hew Roberts, of the college of education before a large audience in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Roberts, who recently returned to the university, served in the U. S. army and in the Australian army's directorate research. He gave the second in the fall series of Information First current affairs lectures, sponsored by the University Women's association.

Roberts explained Russia's cards, which can foil the Marshall plan and push Communism in Europe, as follows:

1. She can give direct orders to her satellite nations. Poland withdrew from the Marshall plan because of Russian influence.
  2. She can give direct instructions to nations with which she has an alliance. This is possible when she and the other country have a common frontier. Czechoslovakia, which withdrew from the Marshall plan, is an example of this.
  3. She can create political chaos. "When the Communist party is strong in an unstable European government, it can take over by constitutional means, as in the case of Czechoslovakia."
  4. She can take over the government of a country which is not strictly a satellite nation.
  5. She can create economic chaos. "Wildcat strikes," stimulated by Communist laborers in Europe's "key industries, will knock down production."
  6. She can direct economic sanctions in Europe. "Russia can keep her standard of living low in order to raise Poland's."
- On the other hand, Russia "can say to France, 'You can't buy our grain with American money.'"
- This sixth card, which Roberts doesn't think Russia will play, would result in an "economic deadlock" in Europe.
- The slow formation of the Marshall plan is the reason that fast-acting Russia has the upper hand in Europe, explained Roberts.
- "The strong line is the only line to take" in dealing with Russia, he emphasized.

Danish Gym Show Given at Fieldhouse

A Danish gymnastic team—complete with tumbling and folk dances—performed at the fieldhouse last night before 1,500 people.

The team included a mixed group of 40 performers who are on a tour in the United States after banding together in Denmark in 1946. They have given over 240 shows in this country since November of last year.

After being organized in Copenhagen last summer, the group toured the American occupation zone in France for six weeks before coming to the United States.

Regal Splendor Marks Elizabeth's Wedding

THE WEDDING OF A FUTURE SOVEREIGN transfigured London on the day of its greatest splendor in more than 10 years as Princess Elizabeth became the bride of Lt. Philip Mountbatten. Before the ceremony the princess told friends she was "overwhelmed" by the drama of her wedding day. When it was all over, in the seclusion of the palace, Philip told friends he had had "butterflies" in his stomach. (AP WIREPHOTO VIA RADIO)

Old Capitol Redecorated

Old Capitol has had an internal "face lifting."

Walls have been redecorated, partitions moved and offices changed.

The work will be completed when asphalt tile flooring material arrives. Offices will be ready for occupancy soon.

Moving out of the building to room 111, University hall, are the offices of Dean C. Woody Thompson of the office of student affairs, Helen Reich, assistant dean of student affairs, and Helen E. Pocht, counsellor to women.

This location will be occupied by the alumni service office under Loren L. Hickerson.

The office of M. L. Huit, counsellor to men, in the northwest section will be taken over by Robert D. Noble Jr., executive assistant in the alumni service.

In the southeast corner, the offices of Richard E. Sweitzer, manager of off-campus housing and advisor to foreign students, and Imelda C. Murphy, manager of the dormitory assignment office, have been replaced by the office of the dean of the graduate college, E. T. Peterson.

Files of the graduate college are now in the extreme southeast corner office formerly occupied by Mrs. Mary Jane Mickey, supervisor of off-campus housing.

The president's files have been moved across the hall into the old student affairs workroom.

On the first floor of Old Capitol three offices have been built in the northeast corner room formerly used for meetings of the education and athletic boards.

These offices will be occupied by Dean Carlyle Jacobsen of the division of health services and sciences, and Dean E. T. Peterson, in the capacity of executive dean of the division of research and teaching.

The education and athletic boards will meet in the future in the northwest corner of the first floor when that space is vacated by the alumni office and information service.

The 'Yoakam Story' In Radio Mirror

The hobby of former SUI journalist Dick Yoakam rated a full page story in the December issue of Radio Mirror magazine, just out on the newsstands.

His hobby is sports, and the article says it paid off this fall when Yoakam became sportscaster for WHO in Des Moines. He broadcast the play-by-play of Iowa's football games this season.

"Yoakam," as he was known on the campus, saw his athletic aspirations cut short by an attack of infantile paralysis. So he turned to sports writing. He was news editor of WSUI until last August when he received an M. A. degree. At present he is a news bureau staff member at WHO.

Progress for Democracy

Several encouraging events indicate progress in making democracy work in one way by discouraging racial discrimination. The Freedom Train will not stop in Memphis if discrimination is practiced there in separating Whites and Negroes while viewing our historical documents which breathe "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

This should be answer to Communist opposition to the train on the basis that it would itself practice discrimination.

Delegates to the national Sigma Delta Chi convention of the journalism fraternity report that a Negro delegate attended all sessions, made a speech and ate at all dinners without any demonstration by the southern whites.

A Negro was elected a delegate from South Carolina to the recent Young Democrats national convention.

And a Negro travelled through the south wearing an Indian turban under the guise of a visiting dignitary. The south recognized in fact that a Negro can be allowed the privileges expected by any citizen of a democracy.

A few disturbing events cannot be overlooked, but we're hopeful—a little progress is being made.

Upholds Iowan's Right to Criticize Eddie

(From Waterloo Courier)

Just because the student newspaper, The Daily Iowan, published a few moderately critical articles of the way in which the football team is being run, some SUI factions are talking about a reprimand for the editor.

It is encouraging to note that President Hancher says that there will "no censorship" of the paper.

The question that arises is not primarily whether the criticism of Coach Eddie Anderson in The Daily Iowan was well taken, although a poll taken among students shows that the student newspaper was voicing the views of a majority of those who expressed an opinion.

The issue is whether the students who edit the Iowan are to be muzzled because they dare to print in public what the majority of students are saying in private.

What is the purpose of a student newspaper, if it is not to voice the opinions of the students?

We will readily admit that the university could not grant to students the absolute right to print anything they please.

It has some responsibility which bears its name.

But we deplore even the pressure brought against the editor of the daily Iowan for no more serious a fault, if it is a fault, than criticism of the coaching staff.

The Iowan has had in the past editors of the "parlor pink" variety who freely expressed extreme left-wing views which obviously did not represent majority opinion of the student body.

Yet the public reaction was, "Let the editors say what they think. That's what a student newspaper is for."

And they never received a public reprimand and nobody publicly proposed to put a faculty member in control.

Yet because The Iowan happened to be involved in the uproar over Dr. Anderson's resignation, certain factions at the university now want to intimidate the student editor so that no embarrassing comment shall ruffle the sensitivity of the coaching staff.

It would seem that a veritable mountain of resentment has been created by a little molehill of criticism.

One of the outstanding advantages of the university of Iowa school of journalism in the past has been the fact that students themselves get experience as desk editors on The Daily Iowan.

This is not done in most other journalism schools and it certainly creates headaches for university officials at Iowa City. But the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages.

The usefulness of The Daily Iowan in training journalists would be gravely restricted if the system were changed.

The question of whether Dr. Anderson remains as coach is a side issue here. More important is the question of whether the student newspaper is to remain a student newspaper.

That will have more influence on the caliber of education at the university than beating Notre Dame twice in as many years.

Next 100 Days Will Be Critical

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR., AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The next 100 days may turn out to be one of the critical periods in the history of the world.

By the end of that time we will know how Europe has passed the winter, expected to be a cold and hungry one. We will have a good idea as to the immediate future of Germany. The Marshall plan will have taken definite form. In all probability the immediate outcome of the current outbreaks in France and Italy will have been decided.

These 100 days may not produce the conclusive battle between democracy and totalitarianism—that looks like a campaign which will go on for years—but the outcome will have an important bearing on the form which the conflict will take from here on out.

As anticipated, the recent tide of conservative voting and the imminence of the arrival of additional relief from America have goaded the Communists of western Europe into violent reaction.

The French and Italian governments are mobilizing to meet the crisis. Italy is mustering her armed police strength. France, torn by strikes and violence, has called 140,000 additional troops to the colors.

There is talk of imminent civil war in both countries. However, the Communists, so far, have not demonstrated the strength for it. I hope it is not wishful thinking to believe the present outbreak of violence will reach its peak before Christmas and then subside. It looks more like an attempt to bluff the governments into according them greater power than a truly definitive effort to take over right now.

Civil war in France or Italy would almost inevitably bring on World War III. Russia doesn't want that. She wants to keep the pot boiling, as in Greece, where it is noticeable that nothing is being done to increase the size of that bonfire. But she doesn't want it to boil over. She could and probably would call off the French and Italian Communists before anything like war develops.

Following the expected failure of the Big Four foreign ministers to reach an agreement in London next week, France, England and the United States will face an immediate decision on the German problem. What they do will affect the history of Europe for a long time. How they approach it will depend at least in part on developments in London.

However, they are leaning toward development and re-integration of the western German economy into that of all western Europe under continued strict control, leaving Russia to go her own road in her occupation zone but not formally surrendering the idea that, one day, Germany must be reunited. This means using Germany to the fullest extent in the economic war with Russia. The three powers may resort to some sort of central German administration, but retain the real governing power themselves, just as we have done in Japan.

This period we are now entering, then, is one of gathering fensive and holding on until the front lines, organizing for the European recovery program is really under way. How well this job is done now may have a definite long-term effect.

It is a new "Battle of Midway."

Union Bosses Are to Blame

By WESTBROOK PEGLER, King Features, Syndicate, Inc.

If the working-people, the wage-earners, of the United States, have suffered any loss through the adoption of the Taft-Hartley law, the blame must lie with the great, greedy bosses of the union movement.

under him and pay their dues and fines and submit to his tyrannical discipline so that they might earn a few extra dollars on weekends.

Jimmy's powers are really terrible. Other union bosses have written out for him in an article of his constitution which permits him to rule absolutely by whim, subject to no challenge or appeal.

The cruel gangsters of the hodcarriers' and the operating engineers' unions and some of the machine politicians of the teamsters exercised practically the same despotic authority but they had to go in for subterfuge and terror, not that this embarrassed those who ruled by these methods.

The majority of the union workers of today never realized that they actually had rights. But they believed, because they had been raised that way, that unions were a private government unto themselves with no responsibility to the nation or the various states.

This is where unionism under Roosevelt and the New Deal tricked and oppressed American labor and finally so provoked the people, including labor, that they turned on the bosses.

And this is where Senator Taft, whatever his future, showed honesty, force and integrity to the chagrin of other candidates for the Republican nomination. On his western trip, Taft was saluted with picket signs calling him a rat. This was an organized display of the brutal vulgarity of an element which for so many years had enjoyed a warrant from Roosevelt to boss and abuse not only American labor but whole areas of homes and industry and to vilify decent men for daring to fight back.

Actually, the only important batters of labor during those years were not the National Association of Manufacturers nor any of the journalists or candidates, but some of the presidents and vice-presidents of unions.

Jimmy Petrillo by now has convinced himself that he actually does serve his "boys" but, a few years ago, he openly smirked about his holy mission and the enormous proportion of Saturday night saxophonists in his American Federation of Musicians. The union did nothing for them. It merely preyed upon them, compelling these clerks, students and carpenters, men of a hundred occupations, to buy membership in the union.

Big-4 Hopes at London Meeting

Britain Needs Solvent Europe

(This is the first of a series of dispatches outlining the purposes and hopes of each of the four powers participating in the foreign ministers' conference which opens in London next Tuesday. Tomorrow's story will deal with the Soviet viewpoint.)

By ALEX SINGLETON and ARTHUR GAVSHON
LONDON (P)—War-weary, care-beset Britain wants peace and time to rebuild at home and in her commonwealth, and in that mood will seek a moderator's role when the foreign ministers of Britain, the United States, Russia and France meet here Nov. 25.

Here is a summary of the state of mind in which Britain approaches the gathering, gleaned from the best available authorities:

Britain's is not an attitude of apsement; it is not a philosophy of "peace at any price," but one rather which would tone down the angry exchanges between the east and the west.

She takes account of her close ties with the United States. But, conscious of the common European identity she shares with Russia, she seeks to stake her tomorrow on a course somewhere between the extremes.

No soft-tongued statesman by choice or by training, burlly Ernest Bevin expressed what most Britons hope when he called upon his fellow foreign ministers recently to curb their "slanging matches" and get down to the "basic facts of Europe."

He has made it plain what Great Britain wants. Basically it is a unified Germany, an independent Austria and an economically-solvent Europe.

Why?

A unified Germany would cut down the economic drain on Great Britain in terms of money, manpower and material. She needs all these things at home.

A strong and independent Austria would decrease the danger of a new German-Austrian alliance with war-making potentials.

A solvent Europe is essential to Great Britain, which is dependent primarily upon a re-export trade.

But what happens if the council fails to agree on the future of Germany and Austria? If the rift widens? If Germany remains divided and, with that division, Europe remains divided economically and ideologically?

Officially, Great Britain has refused to acknowledge plans of her own based upon such a possibility. But, step by step in recent months, she has demonstrated the path she will pursue if it occurs.

Primarily, it would be based upon strengthening that part of Germany under control of the western powers, as evidenced by the recent agreements to stimulate coal production and to raise the level of industry in western Germany.

Upon Bevin will fall the task of presenting the British case.

At a recent ambassadorial reception, while talking to diplomats, politicians and reporters, he wagged his finger solemnly and said:

"My job is the toughest any foreign secretary in Britain has had for 1,000 years."

Great Britain is occupying part of Germany to ensure that she does not launch a new war; to help her develop and reconstruct along democratic lines; and to obtain some material compensation for the immense war damage Germany caused, associates of Bevin say.

In some aspects of these talks, common to each of the Big Four, this country has had the cooperation of her three partners, but in others only the United States has seen eye to eye with her.

British administrators regard the process of disarming their zone of Germany as having been completed successfully. Still to be completed, though, is a joint American-British program for dismantling the industrial plant considered surplus to the peaceful needs of their part of Germany.

But they claim less success in the overall policy of democratizing the Germans.

While the big four deputy foreign ministers have been sweeping up the withered leaves of past conferences, the British design for the success of the coming council sessions has taken shape. It looks something like this:

Priority would be given to writing a peace treaty with Austria.

In the preparation of a German peace settlement, all states which contributed "substantially" to victory would be consulted from the earliest stages. (The French agree with this. But the United States wants consultation with all other allies from the start. And the Russians, though they agree on the need for consultation, suggest the final peace conference be called only after the formation of a central German government.)

The rights of the state governments would be safeguarded when it comes to framing the country's provisional political structure. The British view of the powers and character of the provisional government was substantially the same as that of the United States and France. But it coincided with Russia's only in regard to the need for creating central administrative agencies.

Four power supervision of all major German industries in the eastern as well as the western zones of Germany would be set up if the British line were adopted at the coming council sessions. Russia, moreover, would join in paying for past and present financial deficits in the western zones before receiving reparations from current production. In short, this country would seek to ensure that its version of Germany's economic unity" be reestablished.

Bevin, it is reported on good authority, will go into the Lancaster house talks with this formula:

1. Whatever happens to the conference, Great Britain will not accept any east-west breach a final. But, just as certainly, she will not go on pouring $30-million annually into Germany as her share toward its upkeep while the other zones pay their way.

2. Under no circumstances will she repudiate her obligation of seeing the occupation through, both in Berlin and her own zone.

3. Great Britain believes that German reconstruction is vital to European prosperity and that at least the western, industrialized part of the country should and must take part in the Marshall plan for European recovery.

Bevin openly admits to his aides that he is pessimistic about the prospects of the coming council meeting. Many foreign office officials talk just as openly about the "inevitability" of an east-west partition of Germany.

But there is little tendency to minimize the danger and the tragedy which would be implied in the division of Germany.

The global split in conflicting ideologies would be given a geographical definition, and this is a factor widely acknowledged in Whitehall, in the newspapers and on the streets. Transcending this consideration is the fact that there is nothing in Nordic history to suggest that the German people themselves would for long accept partition or that they would ignore the challenge to their latent nationalism.

German unity, in the eyes of many British policy makers, will appear as a kind of steel link holding east and west together in understanding and in peace.

I'D RATHER BE RIGHT

Senator Taft's Thrift Is Costly

By SAMUEL GRAFTON, New York Post Syndicate

What does Senator Taft want the Republicans to do, get a reputation for blowing money around?

The Senator's proposal that we spend about five billions a year to aid Europe, instead of the seven billion which might be needed to put the Continent on its feet, according to the Marshall Plan, is one of the most spendthriftly ideas that has come out of Washington in fifteen years.

That is really burning the taxpayers' money up, the Senator suggests that we spend not quite enough to do the job, that we thriftily put our savings into building two-thirds of a house and buying half a car.

The Senator's proposal is like that; it gaps with holes and crevices and missing walls. And to build this wreck from a torn blueprint, as Taft suggests, would cost five billions a year. It is hardly a bargain.

The New Deal never threw money around like that, not even in the years when Roosevelt was popularly supposed to spend his evenings sitting on a pile of billion dollar notes and tossing them above his head for the amusement of Hopkins.

Taft is afraid that if we spent seven billions a year under the Marshall plan, we would need price and rationing controls. He dislikes price and rationing controls. He believes that if we spend only five billions we can avoid them.

To cut further means to kill the Marshall plan as a plan for putting Europe on its feet, as a plan for recovery. It means reducing it to the level of just another hand-out. It means to blow the five billions.

As a matter of fact, the Republicans are in deep political trouble, from which they are not going to save themselves by making a hundred-yard-dash to the radio with an off-the-cuff plan, as Taft did, a few hasty hours after the President spoke.

They are in trouble because some of their theories have blown up. Their theory that we would not have to help Europe at the end of the war has exploded, leaving their eyebrows singed. Their theory that prices would return to normal once controls were ended is also very dead. They are even in trouble on their pet theory that voluntary methods of rationing can work, because they have been unable to resist kidding the President when he tried it, and they have thus thrown dishwater on their own cherished alternative.

They cannot make up for this theoretical collapse by putting together, with flour paste and tissue paper, a flimsy plan that tries to combine some spending for Europe, a few allocations of scarce goods here, and a pious wish or two. That wouldn't last a minute in today's winds. Nor can they get out of trouble by pointing a scornful finger at the President and charging him with playing politics, as if playing politics were a dreadful novelty, utterly new to Washington and recently invented by Harry Truman.

No, the Republicans must face the facts if they are ever going to reform their lines.

Paul Terms Fear Of Cancer Worse Than Disease Itself

"Cancer phobia," especially among women, is far worse than the disease itself, Dr. William Paul of the University hospital staff last night told the Haddasha society.

Paul raked the fear of cancer and the social stigma connected with a patient who has cancer.

"Cancer and syphilis were once words that were only whispered. I believe that a disease such as small pox would better be frowned upon, because small pox can be prevented by vaccination," Paul told his audience.

"Fear of cancer brings people to quacks," Paul stated.

According to Paul, cancer is no longer the hopeless subject it once was. Prior to 1940 the death rate for patients who entered the University hospital with cancer of the stomach was 100 percent. Today more than 20 patients who were operated on for cancer of the stomach or bowels are living after five years.

"We see more cancer of the stomach and rectum than any other tumor," Paul said.

"Today we suspect everyone who comes to us of cancer, even if they have only a cough. If discovered, it is possible to remove one lung. The outlook for patients so operated on is very good," the doctor said.

Market Basket Climbs to $16.97

Butter, Pork Lead Food Price Jumps

By MERRITT LUDWIG
Iowa City grocery prices leaped again this week to set The Daily Iowan market basket index at $16.97, one cent below this fall's all-time high.

In defense of increased prices, one grocer said, "There's nothing we can do about it when a manufacturer sends me a notice like this."

It was a circular from a soap company announcing a second general price increase. The first one came a month ago.

Grocers eyed each other to see who'd be first to raise soap prices with the result that yesterday prices stayed the same as last week.

However, butter, another highly competitive item, shot up five cents a pound to lead all price increases.

Pork chops were close behind with a four cent rise, priced at 69 cents a pound yesterday. Canned red salmon was up to 73 cents a pound, a three cent jump over last week.

All chocolate items are due for a general increase, according to one grocer. A half pound of unsweetened chocolate was priced at 31 cents, a two cent increase.

A pound of vegetable shortening and a pound of lard each took a timid one-cent increase yesterday.

"Egless Thursday" may have been responsible for the four cent drop to an average 55 cents for a dozen eggs yesterday.

Grocers said eggless Thursday is catching on better in the east with the result that local farmers have been selling more eggs to Iowa City stores. "Not only are there more eggs for sale," said one, "but they're bigger and fresher than we've been getting before."

Two other price declines were registered yesterday — bacon was down four cents a pound, and a ten pound sack of flour was down four cents to $1.15.

Prices listed in The Daily Iowan survey are an average of those in seven representative Iowa City stores.

The market basket index is based on prices of 24 basic food items found by previous survey to be in most common use by student families in Iowa City.

The index is an estimate of what a student family of three persons will spend for groceries in a given week. Cost per food item is weighted in accordance with the amount of that item a student family uses in a week.

License Six To Wed

Marriage licenses yesterday were issued at the Johnson county courthouse to Marion E. Braddock of Solon and Marie A. Donohoe of Solon; Alfred C. Mueller of Davenport and Hilda Busch of Davenport; James P. Smith of Menasha, Wis., and Helen McCue of Kirkwood, Ill.

Long-Hairs Carry Action To Sidewalks

Barbers Stand Pat; They Won't Meet Picketing Students

Picketing of seven local barbershops by Long-Hair society members began yesterday afternoon at 2:30.

Shops picketed were Peter's, Dick and Joe's, Winter's, Ward's, Carl's, the Hotel Jefferson barbershop, and the one at 105 1/2 S. Clinton street.

Two Long-Hair representatives walked in front of each local shop carrying signs on which were printed such slogans as "A Buck a Throw, Let It Grow" and "G.I. Clip Not in Style, Let the Long Hair Grow Awhile."

A sound-truck, driven through the business district, reminded shoppers of the Long-Hair's vow not to get hair cuts until the price is reduced.

"We've tried to meet with the barbers, and we're still willing to meet with them," Long-Hair Tom Dorsey, A2, Keokuk, said. "We really want to hear their side and to tell them ours. We have resorted to picketing to unify student action."

Dick Johnson, A1, Bloomfield, Long-Hair picketing chairman, said the group will picket again today from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

"Picketing will continue until the barbers consent to meet with us," Johnson added.

The Long-Hair society was formed last week to protest the Nov. 3 haircut price increase from 75 cents to $1 by local barbers. The society is composed of representatives from fraternities, men's dormitories and the Town Men's association.

Frank Spratt, president of the Iowa City Master Barber's association said yesterday that the barbers have "no intention" of meeting with the Long-Hairs. Spratt emphasized that the haircut price was increased only after careful consideration by the barbers.

"We have been talking about this for two years," Spratt declared. "The only thing the barbers are trying to do is make a living. We don't want to extort money."

In answer to complaint of ex-G.I.'s that the haircut price increases will make it even more difficult for them to live within their $65 monthly government allotment, Spratt said:

"That $65 was not meant to send ex-servicemen through school but merely to help them along. They must remember that most barbershops in town employ ex-servicemen."

Spratt, an Iowa City barber for 27 years, remembered only one or two cases of picketing by university students. He said in 1927 they picketed theaters after a ticket price increase and drug stores over the price of malted milks.

"The students wanted malted milks reduced from 15 cents to 10 cents," Spratt laughed. "They weren't successful either."

"I reserve the right to make up my own mind," Leo Tucker, West Branch, declared yesterday while having his hair cut in Carl's barbershop. "I'm going to pay $1 for my haircut; too," Tucker added.

Bob Daasch, A1, Davenport, also had a haircut at Carl's yesterday. "I'm influenced by necessity in this case—not pickets," he said.

A. M. Winters, proprietor of Winter's barbershop, refused to comment.

Attend Associated Press Meeting in Des Moines

Two journalism faculty members and two Daily Iowan editors will attend the annual state meeting of The Associated Press in Des Moines today and tomorrow.

They are Prof. Fred M. Pownall, director of publications, instructor Charles E. Swanson of the school of journalism, Editor R. Bruce Hughes of the Daily Iowan and Phil Miller, city editor.

Big A-Bomb Secret Told at Hiroshima

The greatest secret of the atom bomb was released by the United States government when it destroyed Hiroshima. Prof. Arthur Roberts of the university's physics department declared last night.

Speaking on the "secret" of the atom bomb in the eighth of the atom lecture series in Macbride auditorium, Roberts declared the biggest secret about an atom bomb was whether or not one could be made. By dropping the bomb on Japan, he said, that secret was let out much to the chagrin of German scientists who had decided such a bomb could not be made.

"There are a dozen or more people in any country who know what has to be done to make a bomb," Roberts claimed. He emphasized that Molotov was right when he said the "secret" of the atom bomb had ceased to exist long ago.

"The facts of nature are not a secret," Roberts pointed out. "Anyone can find them out if he's smart enough."

Roberts listed the considerations for any country to make an atom bomb as: first, does the country want the bomb; second, does it have the materials; third, does it have the technical personnel and sensible directors.

A movie entitled "The Tale of Two Cities" showing the destruction of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki atom bombing was shown following the lecture which concluded the part of the atomic series devoted to scientific aspects of atomic energy.

Next week's meeting will be

Says U. S. Losing 'Cold War'

Next to the atom bomb and its control the most urgent problem facing the United States is that of education in Germany. Prof. John Haefer told PTA members yesterday in a talk on "Post War Schools in Germany."

Haefer, who is head of social science studies in University high school, was a member of a nine-man commission which went to Germany last spring to study schools.

"We see in Germany a meeting of the United States and Russia in a battle of ideologies," he said. "The people are pulled in both directions."

So far we have not done very well in the education field, he reported. "We have spent only about one-tenth as much as Russia."

He said that the problem is made more difficult because 75 percent of the school buildings were bombed out in the war and only about one-fourth of those undamaged have been returned to school use.

The few textbooks which exist are pitifully outdated, he added.

In this respect the Russians are beating us, he said. Nearly 90 percent of the paper is produced in the Russian section, and because of the shortage in our zone we have not published one book in 18 months of occupation.

The Russians have published a lot of books and Haefer said that in some of our Berlin schools the students are actually using Russian texts. These, he said, do not present the facts but are colored with Russian views.

Besides lack of books and equipment, German schools are short of teachers. "Two-thirds of the teachers had to be dismissed because of Nazi party membership," he said.

The average age for teachers in our zone of occupation is 39. Children, the most promising group because they are not thoroughly indoctrinated in Nazism, are being taught by old and often inferior teachers, he said.

However, Haefer commended the British and American hot lunch programs in the schools. "Had it not been for hot lunch programs sponsored in schools, children literally would have died by the thousands."

"People cannot think of democracy when their stomachs are empty," Haefer asserted.

If we want to give the German people concrete evidence of democracy we will take direct action, he said. He suggested that school and PTA groups could help by sending food, clothing and school supplies.

Ames, SUI Students To Discuss Education

LeRoy Cowperthwaite, graduate assistant in the speech department, will accompany the women.
