PAINESVILLE, OHIO, (AP)—The annual "disarmament" of Christmas toy displays in Painesville stores has been resumed this year. Acting under regulations of a 45-year-old city ordinance, the police uncovered three miniature "depots" of toy guns and pistols in local stores—and ordered them removed from the sight of admiring youthful eyes. The ordinance prohibits sale of toy guns "of metal or any hard substance" as a precaution against possible injury to overzealous be-knickered "bandits."

Students Plan To Act Dec. 11 On Central Governing Proposal

By ROGER MENGES

Representatives of 26 student organizations decided last night to go ahead with plans to set up a central student body to coordinate campus activities.

They voted to request, that each student organization send one official delegate empowered to act for that organization to a meeting Dec. 11. The delegate is asked to bring his group's definition of student government.

One or more faculty advisers will be invited to attend the meeting, it was decided. No faculty members were invited to last night's meeting in University hall since it was felt their absence would promote freer discussion.

Representatives decided not to take any definite action regarding the formation of a central student governing body since they were not empowered to speak for their organizations.

Plans proposed were a new student constitution and an all-campus congress. Discussion centered on the constitution idea.

Virginia Anderson, A4, Harcourt, Ia., said campus organizations have just "popped up" as needs arose. She pointed out that no one has ever decided where their powers and responsibilities should begin or end.

"We must first develop a constitution to cover all campus organizations and then sell it to the administration," she said.

Other persons suggested the Student council be given authority to coordinate campus activities. One representative said a central student governing group would be ineffectual at this time.

Last night's meeting was called by an interim committee which has been investigating student government. The interim committee grew out of a student activities conference last October conducted by Prof. H. C. Hand of the University of Illinois college of education.

Begin Filling Ruts On Finkbine Roads; More Rain Predicted

Crushed rock and cinders were placed on some Finkbine park roads yesterday to help fill foot-deep water filled ruts caused by traffic and recent rains.

The university's physical plant and the housing office will continue to work on the three miles of roads in the temporary housing areas, according to J. Robert Cotter, manager of married student housing.

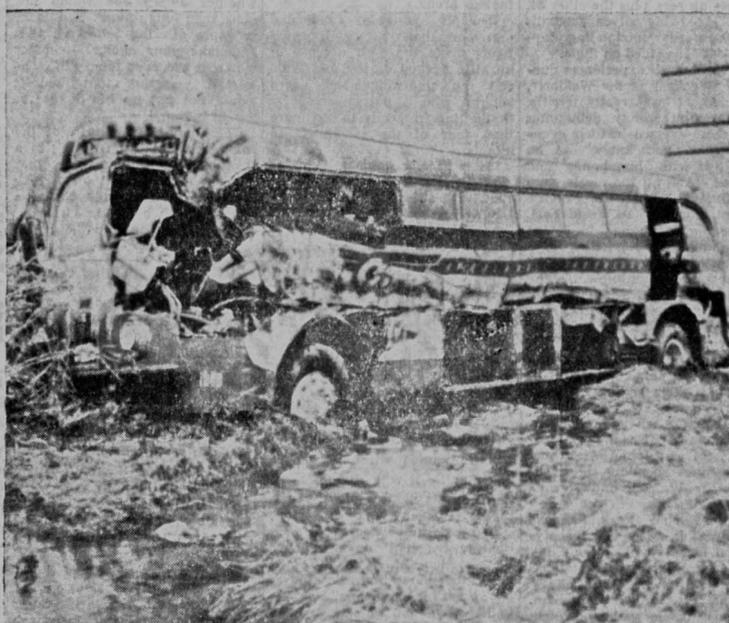

"Our action will speak for itself," Cotter stated concerning improvements to deteriorating roads. Light rain possibly turning to snow is predicted by the weather bureau for Iowa City this morning. The temperature at 11:30 last night was 37 degrees.

De Gasperi Gains Backing for Cabinet

ROME, (AP)—Premier Alcide de Gasperi appeared last night to have nearly completed the organization of a new cabinet with three and perhaps four small parties reported ready to help his Christian Democrats handle the political disorders sweeping Italy.

If all four of the small parties line up behind de Gasperi they would add 135 votes in the constitutional assembly to his Christian Democrats' 207. The Communists and pro-Communists Socialists, who were dropped from the government last May, muster 170 to 175 votes.

Meanwhile, a new series of disorders broke out in various parts of the nation which has been plagued for the past month by strikes and demonstrations as extreme leftists exerted pressure on the middle-of-the-road cabinet of de Gasperi.

Arab Action Hints at Invasion

The possibility that the entire Arab world will invade Palestine with organized armies to fight the United Nations' partition of the Holy Land was hinted today as Arab leaders lent their support to overt recruiting campaigns throughout the Middle East.

The enlistment program was reported in full swing in many Middle Eastern states last night as Arab rioting against Jews and nationals of other countries which favored partition reached new heights of violence.

It was reported without confirmation in Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, that the British minister in Aden, a British protectorate at the foot of the Arabian peninsula, had been killed in Arab disorders there.

Three hundred British soldiers traveling in 19 C-47 transport planes made a brief stopover at Khartoum last night, reportedly en route from Palestine to Aden to stamp out disorders. The secretary-general of the Arab league, Abdel Rahman Azam Pasha, begged Egyptian

Two men were killed at Valence and 22 persons were injured at Nice as police battled mobs at the post office. F. K. SCHMIDT of Eldora, president of the Iowa State Education (teachers) association, yesterday urged legislators to maintain present state income tax rates till provision is made for full payment of state school aid formulas. He said Iowa schools need $7 million more annually than in the past due to an expected rising operating costs caused by increased school enrollment from the higher birth rate.

Besides relaxing, he completed work on a conservation policy address which he will give Saturday at the dedication of the Everglades National park.

THE LINN COUNTY chapter of American Red Cross will conduct no fund-raising campaign in 1948, William P. Whipple, chapter chairman announced yesterday in Cedar Rapids. He said the chapter felt "it would be unjust to" do so when they have what they believe is enough to see them through another year without curtailing its program in any way. The chapter will hold an individual enrollment campaign to continue membership.

Reports Agriculture In Iowa Could Use 250 to 500 DP's

DES MOINES, (AP)—A preliminary estimate of the number of farm laborers that could be absorbed in Iowa and a first-hand report from a European displaced persons camp were given yesterday to the Iowa committee on resettlement of the displaced persons of Europe.

Howard Hill of Minburn, who heads a farm subcommittee, said his group estimated "without substantiation of a survey" that 250 to 500 people could be used in agriculture in Iowa.

Hill said his group was making plans to conduct a farm survey involving personal interviews with farmers. He said such a survey could not be completed before Jan. 10th or 15th.

Eugene Spencer of Des Moines, who recently returned from Salzburg camp for displaced persons in Austria, told the committee he strongly favored the displaced persons program but wanted careful procedures used.

He advocated that any persons brought to the United States be "thoroughly screened by police." Spencer explained that this would assume that the U. S. would get the most desirable type of displaced persons.

Propaganda Cited as Weapon

By CARL BERGER

The Kremlin is waging a cold war in Europe to capture the people's minds, Henry C. Wolfe, noted author, magazine writer and lecturer, last night told an audience assembled in Iowa Union in the third lecture of the 1947-48 series.

Speaking on "What's Happening in World Affairs Today," Wolfe declared that propaganda is a "very important part of this 'cold war'."

"The American way of life is under violent attack and anti-American feeling is manifesting itself in many countries," he said. "The Soviets are attempting to show the American system has failed and that theirs is the coming way of life."

The Ohio-born author, who recently returned from Europe, said the Soviets had one big advantage over the U. S. in the propaganda campaign.

"In all countries of Europe there are Communist parties," he said, "which are the Kremlin's medium for spreading anti-American propaganda."

See interview and picture, page 8.

Wolfe, who was banned from pre-war Germany for his anti-Nazi book "The German Octopus," termed that country the central problem of Europe.

"I don't believe we can revive Europe unless there is recovery in Germany," he said. "Before the war Germany was a big market

Williams Promises Improved Relations With High Schools

"Too many good Iowa high school athletes are leaving the state to play for other Big Nine schools," Rollie Williams, assistant director of athletics, told the Town Men last night.

In the past, he said, the athletic department has not had enough contact with high school coaches and their teams. They were invited to the university, Williams said, but after arriving they were more or less on their own.

"We fed them and paid their hotel bill, but in the future, we hope to be able to entertain them and acquaint them with university life," he said.

Williams declared that the athletic department must work like the big baseball teams. Average material, he said, will not do for Big Nine competition.

"There are a lot of good high school athletes around, and we're not going to leave a stone unturned to find them," he emphasized.

"We want the cream of the crop." "We will be glad to talk to anyone who can help us. If you know of someone who might interest us, contact someone in the athletic department," Williams pleaded. "If they sound good, we will invite them here and try to sell them on the university."

Roll Will Be Used To Check Government Employees Loyalty

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The government's official list of "totalitarian, Fascist, Communist or subversive" organizations appeared last night, with far fewer names on it than had been generally expected in Washington.

In all, 71 organizations and 11 schools were listed by Attorney General Clark, and made public by the President's loyalty review board. But 47 of the organizations were carried over from a 1943 list which included some supposedly now-defunct German and Japanese groups.

The list will be used in the current check on federal employee loyalty to the American form of government. Whether certain people are fired, or others are refused federal employment, may depend in part on any connection they may be shown to have with any of the listed organizations. Membership is not in itself, however, to decide their fate.

Clark noted that the listing is a continuing thing. The Communist party in the

A complete list of the "subversive" organizations appears on page 6.

United States and its predecessor, the Communist Political association, appears on the list with many "affiliates and committees."

The list also includes the Ku Klux Klan, the Proletarian Party of America, the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee committee, National Council of American-Soviet Friendship and many others.

The loyalty review board will act as a sort of supreme court of appeals from decisions of agency and regional loyalty boards as to the fitness of persons to work for the government, from the loyalty standpoint.

Legislators Clash Over Whether Aid Would Halt Russia

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Friends and foes of emergency aid to Europe clashed on the house floor yesterday over the question whether the relief program would halt the march of communism on strengthen Russia in a possible war against the U. S.

Quick help to western Europe "as an investment in national security" was urged by Rep. Cox (D-Ga.), who declared that past American policies of "appeasement" had built Russia from a second rate power into a "monster" that now has the entire world trembling in its boots.

Rep. Leo Allen (R-Ill.) called for rejection of the bill, asserting that Europe might go Communist despite American help and that "all we give in the way of aid may eventually be used against us."

Majority Leader Halleck (R-Ind.) announced that debate was progressing so quickly that it may be possible to reach a vote by next Monday night.

Irish After 3rd Straight at CR Tonight

The Irish of St. Patrick's high school will go after their third consecutive victory of the basketball season in against St. Wenceslaus, at Cedar Rapids tonight.

The exact strength of the St. Wenceslaus cagers is not known, although they recently lost a close battle to Immaculate Conception of Cedar Rapids.

Father R. J. Pacha will probably string along with his regular starting line-up, Duffy and Grady at forwards, Dalton at center and Herdliiska and O'Connor at guards. Grady is leading the scoring for the Irish at present with Duffy a close second.

The veteran Herdliiska has continued to play his usual steady game in the backcourt, while O'Connor and Dalton are improving rapidly. O'Connor is a scoring threat as well as a good ball-hawking guard and Dalton has been doing a good job of rebounding.

Taking Time Out

With Buck Turnbull

Late Thursday night, Nov. 6, Earl Banks received a telegram from New York City telling him that he had been voted one of the outstanding football players of the year. And furthermore, he was also invited to attend a banquet at the Waldorf Astoria on Saturday night, Nov. 29.

But little did the chunky Iowa guard realize what was in store for him. Meeting the outstanding football players of the country . . . all expenses paid . . . breakfast in bed . . . dining and dancing in New York's swankiest hotel with New York's swankiest society . . . and to add to this dream, being named on the first team of the 95 players in attendance.

Earl returned to Iowa City Wednesday with nothing but lavish praise for the great city of New York. "It was an experience I'll remember for the rest of my life," chuckled the rotund, good-natured Banks.

When he received the telegram inviting him to New York back in early November, Banks' only remark was, "I can't believe it." Upon returning Wednesday, he was in agreement with his first statement. "I still can't believe it," Earl repeated.

"It was really a thrill to meet all of the great players who were there," he said. "But the biggest thrill of my life was being picked on the first team of all the players attending the banquet."

This honorary team consisted of Paul Cleary, Southern California, and Bill Swiacki, Columbia, ends; Bob Davis, Georgia Tech, and John Ferraro Southern California.

Bookies Say Louis To Win In 4 Rounds

By GAYLE TALEBOT

NEW YORK, (AP) — Joe Louis will fight in Madison Square Garden tonight, and because the great heavyweight champion never has given other than an honest, thrilling exhibition of the manly art, he is virtually certain to draw the biggest gate in the history of the famous arena.

Receipts yesterday indicated that more than 18,000 will watch Louis make the 24th defense of his title against Jersey Joe Walcott, an undistinguished negro veteran who is not expected by the betting fraternity to last more than four of the scheduled 15 rounds.

It is a remarkable tribute to the Brown Bomber's drawing power that the big spenders are showering down $30 for ringside chairs at an affair which originally was booked merely as an exhibition because a worthy challenger was not available. The previous garden record of $201,613 was set more than 20 years ago by Jack Delaney and Jim Maloney.

It is expected that Louis would scale a hefty 212 to Walcott's 194, giving the champ a pull of 18 pounds.

Even with the bookmakers offering 10 to 1 against Walcott's chances of winning the title, there was understood to be almost no action along those lines. There were reports of brisk business, however, on the question of whether Jersey Joe would last more than four rounds. The bookies were offering 5-to-6 on this, and take your choice. In other words, it was even money in man-to-man wagering that Walcott would not put up his dukes for the fifth round.

Chairman Eddie Eagan of the boxing commission, replying to a request by Walcott's manager that some referee other than Arthur Donovan be used, said that the commission would, as usual, choose a third man without any outside help.

NO HANDSHAKE TONIGHT—Joe Louis (right) shakes hands with the challenger for Joe's heavyweight boxing championship, Jersey Joe Walcott (left), when the two signed for tonight's bout in early November. Louis will be gunning for his twenty-fourth consecutive victory since wresting the title from Jim Braddock in 1937. Louis will tip the scales at about 208 pounds, Walcott at 192. ## Rickey Will Announce Bums' Manager Soon

MIAMI, FLA., (AP)—The manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers probably will be named within 48 hours but whether it will be Leo Durocher or Burt Shotton only Branch Rickey, Dodger president, knows.

In a terse announcement, Branch Rickey, Jr., told newsmen here that Branch, Sr., "has informed me by telephone that Shotton has answered his summons to come to Brooklyn and he is scheduled to hold a conference with his 1947 manager tonight (last night)."

Rickey, Sr., added that they would hold a special conference with his three coaches, Clyde Sukeforth, Ray Blades and Jake Pitler, some time tomorrow to discuss the managerial situation.

Following this Rickey, Sr., told his son, he will then be in position to announce his manager.

"By Saturday Dad should be able to announce his manager," Rickey, Jr., said.

Rickey, Sr., denied a report that he had already signed Durocher, but admitted he had spoken to Leo last Tuesday night at his Chestertown, Md., home.

Shotton, who was not at the minor league meeting here despite the fact he lives at Bartow, Fla., not too far away, was summoned to Brooklyn yesterday and lost no time in hopping a plane to see his boss.

The Durocher-Shotton puzzle partly overshadowed the work accomplished by the National Association of Minor leagues in the most important bit of legislation thus far.

The Association adopted 41 amendments and rejected 11 others, including the Pacific Coast league's request for major-minor status and the Southern association's attempt to eliminate the bonus rule. Four other amendments of the 56 proposed were withdrawn.

Among those approved were the adoption of a uniform ball for all leagues in the association and the formation of a draft structure for umpires similar to that used for players.

The session, held behind closed doors, was harmonious, producing little of the fireworks which usually marks these confabs. Only the coast's proposal brought about what some termed heated discussion.

That settled, the Coast's representatives were satisfied with the result despite the fact the 52 leagues rejected their demands.

St. Mary's Plays at Burlington Tonight

St. Mary's Ramblers journey to Burlington tonight to engage St. Paul's of Burlington on the latter's floor.

It will be the second meeting between the two schools this season. In the previous contest, St. Mary's had little trouble knocking out a victory.

Paul Flannery, who missed Wednesday's game due to an injury, has been found to be suffering from a far less serious ailment than originally determined. However, it is doubtful whether he will see action in tonight's contest.

Coach Frank Sueppel will probably rely on the same lineup that started Wednesday's game against St. Mary's of Clinton.

AAU Meeting Expected to Turn Down Rule Change

OMAHA, (AP)—Sentiment at the National Amateur Athletic union convention here last night was that the delegates would turn down, for the second time, a proposal that no foreign athletes could be designated as a National American AAU champion.

Such a change in the rules is expected to be presented. Under its terms, a foreign athlete winning an event would not receive a championship medal. Instead the championship medal would go to the American competitor placing highest in the event.

The foreign athlete would get "an award" certifying his "victory."

Police Chief Warns New Meter Users

Police Chief E. J. Ruppert yesterday warned drivers that when money is put into the new parking meters the handle should be turned to the limit. If this is not done, he said, a shield will cover the coin slot and will not allow other coins to be inserted.

He made this statement after policemen at the station were kept busy Wednesday repairing jammed meter heads. Much of the damage was caused when the preceding user of the parking stall failed to give the handle a complete turn, Ruppert said.

An unusually high number of persons, 67 in all, came to the station Wednesday with meter violation tickets, according to Joe Dolezal, assistant chief of police.

Dolezal said the 67 tickets returned did not include all that were written, since some receivers had not come to the station to pay the fine.

List Civil Service Jobs For Accountant, Auditor

The civil service commission announced yesterday applications for career appointments as accountant and auditor will be accepted until Dec. 29. Vacancies exist in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, North and South Dakota.

Preferred Wants Engineers For Roomers

Mrs. Clarice Miller York, 906 E. College street, prefers mechanical engineering students for roomers.

"You'd understand why they're handy to have around if you had an 18-room house," Mrs. York said. "The faucets leak, the lamps need re-wiring, the drain in the cellar is clogged and some other things need fixing."

Mrs. York bought the house when she came here from Cedar Rapids several months ago. She has 25 roomers, several of them mechanical engineering students.

Market Basket Shows Stability

Butter, Eggs, Cheese, Reach All-Time Highs

By MERRITT LUDWIG

Butter, eggs, and cheese edged up to all-time highs in the Daily Iowan market basket index this week. However, the survey, featured by seven price increases and seven declines, showed stability in overall prices as the index stood at $16.96.

The index was $16.97 two weeks ago. That figure represents what an average student family of three will spend for groceries in any given week.

Eggs took the most decisive increase—seven cents a dozen—to sell at an average 62 cents yesterday.

Butter was up two cents to 86 cents a pound, a penny higher than the previous record set September 12.

Cheese, which has been steady around 98 cents for a two-pound package, went to $1.02 yesterday to set another all-time high this year.

These increases were attributed to general high level dairy prices as well as seasonal price variations which usually come this time of year.

Lard rose three cents a pound yesterday over the figure two weeks ago. Lard at 38 cents a pound yesterday was ten cents higher than it was less than three months ago.

A large size box of soap flakes sold at 38 cents yesterday and minor increases were also noted in chocolate and vegetable shortening.

The housewives' food budgets were saved by substantial meat and fish declines yesterday.

"Choice" grade round steak which has been steady at 75 cents a pound during the fall months, dropped to 70. A one-pound can of red salmon yesterday sold for 69 cents, three cents less than Nov. 20.

Slight decreases were found in canned good prices as well as sugar and flour.

There were indications this week that more of the family budget will have to be set aside for groceries. The Dunn and Bradstreet index hit a new high as well as The Associated Press wholesale price index.

In the face of expected meat price rises, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson again asked congress for price control on meat.

An Iowa City butter maker yesterday stuck by his September prediction that butter would be a dollar a pound by the first of the year.

The Daily Iowan market basket index is based on prices of 24 food items found by previous survey to be in most common use by student families in Iowa City.

Prices listed are an average of those in seven representative Iowa City stores.

In calculating the weekly index, cost per food item is weighed in accordance with the amount of that item a student family uses in a week.

Herman Band Plays At Dance Tonight

Woody Herman and his Herman herd will play for the Woodchopper's Ball from 8 to 12 tonight in the main lounge of Iowa Union. The informal tri-dorm dance is being sponsored by the Quadrangle, Hillcrest and South Quad.

WSUI will broadcast the music of the Old Woodchoppers and his orchestra from the Union from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

Guests of the dormitories at an Intermission tea will be Miss Elizabeth M. Englert, Mrs. Marie S. Swords and Mrs. Verne Spencer, directors of the three dorms; Mr. and Mrs. M. I. Huit, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Rehder and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Brecka.

The committee for the dance includes Dan Dillinger, Jack Pederson and Paul Lange, Quadrangle; Roger Hanson and Aaron Jones, Hillcrest, and Jim Doyle, South Quad.

Fumi Saito, Husband To Entertain Sunday At Methodist Church

Mrs. Fumi Saito, Japanese concert artist, will appear with her husband Sunday evening at Wesley Foundation in an informal entertainment program.

The public is invited to the "Hour With the Saitos," in the sanctuary of the Methodist church. Mrs. Saito will sing and her husband, nationally known youth leader, will lead the audience in carol singing.

Mrs. Saito sang here last spring while on a concert tour of the country to raise funds for the churches of Japan.

Says 'Children of Paradise' Has Appeal for 2 Audiences

By JACK O'BRIEN

In a profession that is wrought with problems and considerations, theatre people have long been torn between split emotions to two audiences. Two distinct audiences in one.

Should they direct their performances to the carriage trade, high-priced seats occupied, supposedly, by more intelligent observers? From these they can enjoy more critical but also more restrained recognition.

Or should they play to the balcony trade for their, again supposedly, less intellectual but also less restrained appreciation? If has always been the "groundlings" who were not afraid to boo, to hiss, to laugh, to cry. It is they who have not been afraid to admire . . . and to be out-spoken in their admiration as they have been noisy in their condemnation.

Across the channel and by the time of Victor Hugo, the "groundlings," whose ears had won Shakespeare's consideration, had moved from the rim of the stage to the upper balcony. They had become the "Children of Paradise."

Marcel Carne's film, "The Children of Paradise," proves again that as movie-makers the French are much better about a lot of things.

If they've learned to "play to the balcony because that's where the laughs come from," it isn't apparent in their better cinematic exports.

Twentieth-century "groundlings" on both sides of the Atlantic will be attracted to Carne's film by the melodrama and romance of its simple and not overly consequential story. The story of the affairs of a lovely, if not very talented, actress and the several men in her life—particularly the tragic-eyed little mime, Baptiste, whose love knows no words.

More will be attracted by the much-publicized sex-appeal of its star, Arletty.

But for the carriage trade there are more worthy considerations. There are repeated instances of high production technique (the handling of crowds has a naturalness and unutilized flavor that DeMille has never achieved with his most responsive Indians).

The music is unobtrusive and particularly interesting in the pantomime scenes.

With only two semesters of French to my credit I am unqualified to speak for the dialogue (fortunately, the sub-titles are better than usual), but one who is French and should know assures me that one of the greatest virtues of a Carne production is the scenario provided by Jacques Prevert.

Gifts for Veterans

WRAPPING CHRISTMAS GIFTS for veterans at University and Mercy hospitals and Oakdale and for patients at the Children's Convalescent home are Mrs. L. A. Van Dyke, Mrs. Kenneth Spence and Mrs. Dewey Stuit, members of the University club. The packages, which were wrapped yesterday by the club under the auspices of the Johnson county chapter of the Red Cross, contain toys for the children and books or toilet articles for the veterans.

'Man of Year' Contest Opens

Iowa City's "outstanding young man of the year" will be announced Jan. 21 at the Junior Chamber of Commerce banquet, according to Ted Stuck, president of the group.

The winner, he said, will be nominated by residents of Iowa City and surrounding area and be selected by a group of leading citizens, separate from Jaycees. The young man will receive the first postwar "distinguished service award," Stuck said.

Iowa City's award winner will be entered in the nationwide Jaycee contest to select the 10 outstanding young men in America, Stuck said.

Nominations should be addressed to Awards Committee, Junior Chamber of Commerce, P. O. Box

No. 784, Iowa City, and must be on file by Dec. 24.

They should include reasons for believing the nominee should be a candidate for the award.

Bases of the committee's selection will be:

- (1) Personal character and ability.
- (2) Achievement, leadership and service to the community during 1947.
- (3) Candidates must be at least 21 years old and not more than 35.

The young man who the judges believe has "contributed most to the community's welfare during 1947" will be presented the award at the Jan. 21 banquet. On the same date, 1,550 other young men will receive similar awards at Jaycee banquets elsewhere throughout the nation.

The U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce will salute the 10 young men selected as most outstanding in America the same evening in a radio program from Chattanooga, Tenn.

But greater than all these things is the excellence of the performance. The entire cast is

During the course of the film there is some discussion as to whether Jean-Louis Barrault is really an actor or a mime. He is both. He has the face of an actor. He has the graceful body of an actor who has been trained on the stage. With heavy, dark eyes and a lean, hungry look, his most passive expression breathes of great drama. As an actor he is fine. As a mime he is magnificent. Since Chaplin has recognized the sound-track, pantomime (except for Jimmy Savo's night-club stunts) has become a lost art in America. Barrault may well help to rediscover it in its true dramatic worth.

Arletty is a fascinating sort of actress. Quiet and restrained in her performance, she exudes a mature, almost decorous, kind of sex-appeal that is far more disturbing than the too hearty cavortings of the leggy, perennial school-girls of Hollywood who seek to compete with her on this level. Arletty carries the atmosphere of the boudoir with her through the streets and into the taverns. Her sleepy gaze speaks of moonlight through open second-story windows.

Rather oddly, it seems to me, her Garance (that's her name in the movie—and even if it weren't it's only the name of a flower) has been compared to Scarlet O'Hara, a Selznick-Southern belle who is also advertising her screen charms locally.

Scarlet, for all her well-photographed allure and her entourage of lovers (all duly wed), was no more real on the screen than she was on paper. Thanks to the Hollywood concept of morals, her much-talked about "wickedness" boiled down to little more than a keen business sense and a bad disposition.

Arletty's Garance is less hysterical and much more alive. She is never tiresomely and shallowly wicked. She is natural—resigned to what she feels is her destiny . . . merely to be loved (it's so simple"). She is a woman.

"Children of Paradise" has been publicized both as France's first million dollar production and as her answer to "Gone With the Wind." I'm happy to be able to report that it survives both afflictions.

People who might still prefer the French in their more quiet, less expensive and more pastorally-philosophical cinema-moods will be pleased to discover that the spending of money does not necessarily mean the loss, or even the over-shadowing, of performances at least.

Superior acting is still France's most welcome gift to the international film trade. And if the film must be compared to "GWTW" then I'd say the reply has more legitimate value than the challenge.

National Policy Now Has Burden—Johnson

Jack Johnson, associate professor of political science, last night warned members of the atomic energy forum, "fear of one another has never brought about international cohesion."

"The discussions relative to atomic energy have made us realize that national policy has always international implications," he said, "and national decisions, in part, must be determined in the light of their international implications."

Johnson spoke to a large crowd, attending the tenth in a series of 16 lectures on atomic energy. The meeting was held in Macbride auditorium.

"Basic decisions regarding atomic energy," he continued, "must be made by governments and in the absence of international government it stands that fundamental policies must be made on a national governmental level."

Therefore, the greatest competition in the development of the uses of atomic energy must be between nation-states.

"Atomic energy has emphasized a new role for government," he advised, "with attendant complications. Future scientists must be trained and it poses the question, 'Should social scientists be trained also?'"

"Atomic energy has fired the imagination of the common man," he concluded, "and it has awakened a new social responsibility. It is the hope that the secrets of science will be used for human betterment rather than human destruction."

Repaired Union Clock—

Will Tell Time, Chime

—Show Moon Phases—

By MAX ELDER

The grandfather clock in the Iowa Union main lounge has broken a two-year silence. The "grand-daddy" of grandfather clocks is running again.

It has stood since 1931, watching students come and go, and has kept a wary eye on young romance flourishing in the soft lounge chairs nearby. But for the past two years, said C. C. "Charlie" Snyder, janitor of the building, it has read 29 minutes and 22 seconds past 8 o'clock.

Frank R. Bruge, assistant director of the Union, and Snyder became tired of waiting for a jeweler to repair the timepiece. Snyder began polishing and cleaning. He tightened, loosened, twisted and oiled the parts.

His efforts had not been in vain, he said, when the old clock began slowly ticking. With a little adjustment here and there, it was working perfectly. At 1 p.m., the soft, clear tones of Westminster chimes sounded through the usual confusion of the lounge, causing the students resting there to stare amazed.

Hand carved and engraved, the clock was manufactured by the Revere Telechron Clock company, Cincinnati, Ohio, and was given to the Union by the graduating class of 1931.

Nine glistening chime tubes are visible through the glass in the front and sides of the walnut case. The clock may be set on Westminster, Canterbury, or Whittington chimes.

When ordered, it was intended to stand in an archway just west of the present soda fountain door. This location proved unsatisfactory, so the clock was moved to the rear center, between the doors. Finally, it was moved to the present location in the northwest corner of the lounge.

When it was ordered, Snyder recalled, the manufacturer said it would take ninety days to build. But, he added, it took "considerably longer than that."

Union officials can recall many embarrassing moments when the clock was running. It was always the janitor's duty to turn the chimes off when any performance was being held in the lounge, but this was not always done.

Often, the officials said, at the height of a performance, the old clock would begin to chime, embarrassing everyone from the janitor to the director.

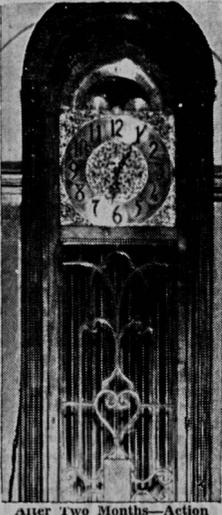

"To the best of my knowledge," Snyder reflected, "the clock cost in the neighborhood of $1500."

An electric timepiece, the clock is controlled automatically by a master clock located in the university power plant.

If you want to know the phase of the moon, said Snyder, this is one clock that will tell you. Above the face is an open semi-circle, where a mechanical moon is pictured against a background consisting of a castle and a mountain scene.

As the real moon moves in the yearly changes, the janitor explained, the moon on the clock moves with it, pausing at numbers around the semicircle that correspond with the phases shown.

"It wasn't such a job to repair the clock," Snyder said. "It is accurate now, and I just hope we can keep it that way. You just can't get a jeweler these days."

After Two Months—Action

J. J. Schillig Dies: Funeral Tomorrow

J. J. Schillig, 80, resident of Iowa City for 36 years, died at his home at 433 S. Johnson street Wednesday afternoon after an illness of several months.

Mr. Schillig was in the grocery business in Iowa City from 1911 to 1937, when he retired.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the Holy Name society of St. Mary's church.

Surviving are his wife; two sons, Vern, Dubuque, and Gerald, Colorado Springs, Colo.; two daughters, Mrs. O. Pando, Buenos Aires, Argentina, and Mrs. C. A. Alexander, Corona, Calif.; two sisters, Mrs. Richard Ryan, Cedar Rapids, and Mrs. Agnes Lally, Dysart, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at St. Mary's church, with burial in St. Joseph's cemetery.

The rosary will be recited at the McGovern Funeral home 3:30 this afternoon by Monsignor Meinberg. The Knights of Columbus and the Holy Name society will recite the rosary at 8 p. m. this evening.

Distillation of hardwood produces methyl alcohol, charcoal and grey acetate of lime.

Clifford E. Jorgensen, Research Psychologist, To Speak Saturday

Clifford E. Jorgensen, personnel director and research psychologist for the Minneapolis Gas and Light company, will speak at the psychology colloquium tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in room 221A, Schaeffer hall.

His subject will be "Areas of Conflict between Theory and Practice in Industrial Psychology." A graduate of Carleton college in 1935, he received his M.A. in psychology from the University of Iowa in 1937.

Jorgensen has made contributions to research in industrial psychology and has written a series of articles for psychology journals.

Town Women To Sing Carols at Hospital

Members of Town Women's association will sing Christmas carols in the halls of Mercy hospital Monday evening, according to Ruth Reese, president.

Miss Reese said the group would meet at 7:45 p. m. in the Y. M. C. A. rooms of Iowa Union. There will be a social hour in the Y. M. C. A. rooms following the caroling.

Stores To Observe Late Closing Hours

Starting with "family night," Dec. 17, most Iowa City stores will observe special 9 p.m. closing hours three times before Christmas, according to Robert L. Gage, Chamber of Commerce secretary.

The Chamber's retail trade division voted to remain open Monday and Tuesday nights, Dec. 22 and 23, as well as "family night," Gage said.

This is in addition to the regular Saturday 9 o'clock closing time on Dec. 20, he explained.

Most stores plan to close at their regular time Dec. 24.

Music Professors Broadcast Tonight

A new weekly program of chamber music will be broadcast each Friday from 8 to 9 p. m. over radio station WSUI by faculty members of the music department.

The first program in the series will be presented tonight by the faculty string quartet composed of Imre Waldbauer, Mary Ann Miles, Egon Kenton and Hans Koelbel. The program will consist of compositions by Beethoven and Ravel.

Tighten Up On Loose Lobbyists

By the most conservative of expert estimates, there are at least 1,000 lobbyists on the prowl in Washington.

Yet tabulations by the clerk of the house and the secretary of the senate show only 536 of these 1,000 lobbyists on the official registration lists.

It should not be too hard for the congress to figure out that at least 500 of the pressure fronts still have not registered as legally required.

It furthermore should not be too hard to figure out that those reluctant to tag themselves are precisely the ones that should be brought into the fiercest spotlight.

Frankly, we aren't convinced that mere registration is going to solve the problem of undue pressure and special privilege in enacting legislation. But it does drag the lobbyist onto the center stage for a little inspection, in which the bare facts of his existence can be made known.

As it stands, the lobbying law is practically sterile. There has been no group appointed to check the lists and insure the rounding up of strays. There has been not the slightest hint of any effective enforcement of the penalty provisions of the law.

High on congress' list of reminders for actions, once immediately pressing business has been disposed of, should be a tightening up of the present statute.

Campus Chest Fights Infantile Paralysis

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, which will receive funds from the current Campus Chest drive, is carrying on an all-out fight against a disease that cripples thousands of persons annually.

A tough and slow battle, the study of infantile paralysis is beset with pitfalls.

Virus so small it cannot be seen by an ordinary microscope is thought to cause the disease. It apparently can multiply only within special nerve cells of a few animals, thus making it difficult to study.

No drug is known that will prevent or cure infantile paralysis. No method of immunization has been developed.

Existing for thousands of years, infantile paralysis has gained greatly in importance during the present century. An average of about 6,500 cases is reported annually in the United States.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was organized in 1938 to seek out the disease, remove its means of spread, overcome the obstacles to prevention and provide better treatment for its victims. The foundation's activities include virus research, after-effects research, education, medical publications, epidemics and public health.

Half of the funds allocated to infantile paralysis in the Campus Chest drive will go to the foundation's Johnson county chapter for treating local emergency cases. The other 50 percent will go to the national office.

Through grants, the foundation has aided many universities and medical schools to establish or improve laboratories to study the disease. The University of Iowa college of medicine has received several research grants for the study of prevention and treatment of after-effects.

The foundation's research program involves more than grants. It provides for an overall planning, calls for the development of new ideas and gives a stimulus for more work and study.

If a cure for infantile paralysis is developed, a large share of the credit will be due to the unceasing labor of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Those Highway Blues

We reserve decision until we hear further reports. New Jersey, an up and coming state that commutes to New York, has instituted a singing road on a main highway.

As we gather it, as soon as cars get over a line separating the lanes of traffic, a mechanical device starts to hum as the tires roll over a corrugated strip. Theoretically, this is to tell the driver to get back in his lane.

We foresee certain complications. The younger generation will want blues and jive—and this is all right, but in order to get votes, the politician will have to learn the latest hit songs—and this is all wrong. Never must a politician admit that he knows a popular tune.

On the other hand, old timers will appreciate Annie Laurie, Flow Gently Sweet Affton and Down by the Old Mill Stream.

Either way, and a pretty predicament it is, part of the travelling public will enjoy straddling the line and adding its sopranos, tenors and basses to the music engendered beneath the chassis.

As we said before, we're neutral—but skeptical.

say there is great danger of French bureaucracy, through privileged groups are asked to work, will prevent from sifting down to the people who must be convinced democracy can do more for them than communism.

It is that danger can be overcome, these observers say, there is a good chance of defeating Communist efforts to take over France.

The story in France is practically the same everywhere. "Them as has, gets," and the remainder, especially in the cities, are having a tough time. The Communist vote does not represent true party adherence, but rather a protest against things as they are. People work for money without being able to find the necessities on which to spend it. Even supplies which should not be too short are found to have gone principally to someone with an

An offering will be taken for the World Student Service fund.

Dr. Osborn Urges Teachers Specialize

The past five years has seen a crisis in the education system with as many as one-fifth of Iowa's teachers on special war emergency certificates. This was revealed by Dr. Wayland W. Osborn, executive secretary of the board of examiners in Des Moines.

He outlined the trends and problems of certification before a group of Future Teachers of America in East hall last night.

Teacher specialization and greater reciprocity were the main trends he stressed. He urged that future teachers give attention to the demand in special fields and avoid becoming "major and minor" minded.

Certification in not a "cure all," Osborn said, but a floor of minimum requirements under our teaching methods. It insures a common background and lends some orderliness to teachers' problems.

Triangle Club Dance
Members of the Triangle club will hold a formal dinner-dance Thursday night, Dec. 11, at 7:15 in the club rooms of Iowa Union. Jimmy Russell's orchestra will furnish the music.

Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. J. H. Allen, at 5134, Newark, New Jersey.

I'D RATHER BE RIGHT

We Are About Six Months Late

By SAMUEL GRAFTON
New York Post Syndicate

In re-saving democracy in France and Italy, it seems to me that we are chugging majestically along the track about six months too late. We have no notion that we are late, of course, as we gravely debate how much aid we are going to send to Europe, and when.

For us, the nick of time is always next month.

We have all the airs and graces, and the stately consequential manner, of beings who are convinced that they are shaping the future of the world.

We are sure our least word is of great importance, our smallest action of immense significance. We know we matter; that is the first article in the credo of our national egoism.

But the startling truth may be that, so far as events now unrolling in France and Italy are concerned, we do not matter at all. We may already have lost our chance to matter, and are perhaps only chopping air and writing belated and confused footnotes to swift events.

It is going that rapidly. The Communists of France and Italy possess the reality of on-the-scene power, of a kind hard to counter from the outside with either spitballs or lollypops.

They can call a strike, settle it, and then call another while the rejoicing at the end of the first is still going on. They can manage their power with executive skill and strategic grace, making sure that no coal is dug while trains are running, and that no trains run when coal is being dug.

They can cry "strikebreaker!" when efforts are made to stop them, and to the laboring millions a strike breaker is a strikebreaker, regardless of the motives behind a strike. When a frustrated and rather formless state tries to hit back, they can shout "fascism!" and call for a defense against what they themselves have provoked.

They can paralyze the middle millions into endless metaphysical discussion, while they push France and Italy on toward accepting a new way of life for a century in the belief that they are only solving a spot problem of the moment, concerning wages and the price of bread. They have the goods on part of the opposition, in the shape of bad records; almost a whole generation of French conservatism has rendered itself "hors de combat" by past evil and silliness.

It is against this process, wild and galvanic, that we are opposing our puffy current debate on how much to help Europe, and for what reasons, and when.

Why is it so hard for us to help those great majorities in France and Italy which obviously do not want communism? Why do we wheeze along, so very late? I have thought of, and discarded, many reasons which might account for our curious powerlessness. The controlling one, it seems to me, is a certain cynical something in our approach to post-war problems, which has, I am afraid, communicated itself to the world.

Our dilly-dallying with European relief, our in-again-out-again approach to it, our present return to it, not because we suddenly fell in love again with European democracy, but because we became scared of Russia; our own swing to the right, and the stories which have crossed the ocean about our own growing unconcern about social problems—all these, I think, have hurt.

A different course on our part might have made of America a glowing spot on the compass, a moral reliance for the French and Italians today. Now, I think they wait, rather curiously, to see what we will do, but without much warm, active sense of kinship; they do not quite dare, after listening to us, to make us again a large part of their consciousness.

Nor is the cry, "Quicker!" to congress the complete answer. We might still save freedom in western Europe, but it is not quicker aid alone that we need; it is something bigger, as well as something quicker, that is required, a blazing American demonstration that we love democracy very much, and are with them to the end, without counting, and through no matter what unscheduled events. As to how one goes about explaining this to the present Congress, I have no idea.

Butchers' Union Calls Third Meeting for Wage Negotiations

A third attempt to conduct wage negotiations between Iowa City grocers and representatives of the Meatcutters and Butchers union, 750 (AFL) will be made Monday night in Hotel Jefferson.

Kenneth Sowers, Cedar Rapids, organizer of the union, declared yesterday in a letter to members and grocers that it may be necessary to call union members off the job unless satisfactory agreements are reached.

Previous meetings held last Nov. 6 and 19 were postponed because of lack of representation of both union men and grocers. Contracts were ratified Oct. 22 by union members calling for "shorter hours, higher wages and better working conditions," according to Sowers.

Skepticism exists among part of the membership concerning Sowers' power to call the men off the job if the wage negotiations fail. One local member said:

"There are no contracts and no organization. Until we get that we can have no cooperation."

It was further indicated that some members will remain on the job if strike action is necessary.

The amalgamated Meatcutters and Butcher workmen were organized in Iowa City last September. Exact strength of the union has not been released but the membership includes grocery clerks, produce clerks and cashiers in addition to butchers.

Wolfe Discusses World's Scene

Hesitates To Write In Changing Times

By CARL BERGER

"It scares the daylight out of me when I think of writing another book," Henry C. Wolfe, author and lecturer, declared yesterday as he reminisced about the world scene.

"Everything moves so fast," he said. "The world spotlight jumps from one place to another making it a big gamble to write about current events today."

Wolfe spoke to the interviewer for an hour before his lecture at the Iowa Memorial Union last night.

Gesturing in the air with his hands, the Ohio-born author described the long years of research on his book "The German October," which came out in 1939.

"I put in years of basic work on it and when it came out it received good reviews because the critics knew it was well-documented," he said.

Now, with things moving so fast, Wolfe said, it's a gamble to plan exhaustive research about a current subject and write the book. "It's virtually dead if the world spotlight changes," he said.

Wolfe, who has received half-a-dozen civil decorations from foreign countries, is a slight built man, not over 5 feet 7 inches tall, with blue eyes and a friendly smile.

Almost shyly he described a project which he had "been fooling with for a long time."

"I've wanted to write about early Ohio history," he said. Something, he added, that is more permanent.

The 49-year-old writer recalled his work as army correspondent during the war.

He told of entering Paris with the 2nd Armored division three years ago. He talked feelingly about his experience on the U. S. Marblehead, as the old battlewagon readied to fight an unidentified ship that turned out to be a Portuguese merchantman instead of the Nazi dreadnaught they had supposed.

In England Wolfe was attached to the communication zone under Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, the stiff-backed officer recently under fire by Scripps-Howard columnist Robert C. Ruark.

Wolfe said General Lee, to his mind, had "delivered the goods" during those tense days of the war.

"What a job! What a job!" Wolfe declared and, turning to the bigger war scene, he remarked that "what Americans can do is remarkable."

HENRY C. WOLFE

Wolfe, who has traveled to Europe once every year since 1934, returned from the continent last September. He said he visited Denmark, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Australia and other countries.

When questioned about the many decorations he has received, Wolfe unassumingly told about the decoration of which he is most proud—the Order of the Southern Cross, Brazil's highest decoration.

"I went to Brazil in 1940 and returned to the U. S. convinced she was not the Nazi-minded country that 'naive' Americans had been led to believe," he said. "I proceeded to lecture and write about Brazil as a great friend of the U. S."

"Then Pearl Harbor came and Brazil declared war on Germany and aided us in many ways. So six years later I was given the decoration 'for furthering the good neighbor policy'."

Wolfe seemed particularly enthused about Brazilian statesman, Oswaldo Aranha, now president of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

"He is a very great man and a very great world citizen," Wolfe said.

Par Means Nothing

ORLANDO, FLA., (AP)—Par didn't mean a thing to the nation's top golfers yesterday as they opened the winter season with the first round of the $10,000 Orlando Open over the Dubsread Country club course here.

In all 34 finished from one to five strokes below par 71.

Associated Students Of Journalism is Reactivated at SU

The reactivation of the Associated Students of Journalism was announced last night by a committee composed of the presidents of the four professional journalism and advertising fraternities.

The purposes of the organization, inactive since 1943, are to:

1. Provide journalism students with a medium through which they can communicate their complaints, suggestions and criticisms to the journalism faculty.

2. Establish a job placement service.

3. Form a guidance service for journalism students, and

4. Sponsor social events.

Amendments to the constitution of the association as proposed by the reactivation committee would open membership to all students who indicate journalism as their major field, and would provide for the election of three officers from each of the four classes. The proposed amendments together with the original constitution are posted on the journalism bulletin board in the basement of East hall.

Action on the constitutional amendments and nomination of officers will take place at an informal party for all journalism students to be held Sunday night, Dec. 14, in the River room at Iowa Union.

Members of the committee on reactivation are Bill Miller, Sigma Delta Chi; Carolyn Anderson, Theta Sigma Phi; Leora Zahaitz, Gamma Alpha Chi, and Loy M. (Bud) Booton, Alpha Delta Sigma.

Physiologists Meeting Today and Tomorrow

Midwest physiologists will meet at University hospital today and tomorrow to view a round-robin of nearly 20 exhibits of recent medical research by members of the physiology department here.

More than 30 guests from five midwestern states are expected to attend.

The exhibits will be supplemented by reports from other departments of the college of medicine. Subjects run from thyroid physiology to electric brain waves.

Laboratory procedures will be demonstrated and research techniques and results will be discussed.

The exhibits have been set up under the direction of Prof. H. M. Hines, head of the physiology department.
