WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said flatly yesterday that he "could not accept nomination to high political office," and thereby eased the anxieties of politicians who had feared the popular "Ike" might upset 1948's presidential apocalyptic.

Eisenhower said "necessary and wise subordination of the military to civil powers will be best sustained" if lifelong professional soldiers like himself do not seek high political office.

The 57-year old retiring army chief of staff, who will become president of Columbia university June 7, made his flat declaration in a letter to a New Hampshire supporter, Leonard V. Finner, publisher of the Manchester Evening Leader.

Most supporters of other candidates interpreted the Eisenhower announcement as increasing the chances of their GOP hopefuls, although Senator Butler (R-Neb.), a backer of Senator Taft, of Ohio, said he doubts the positions of others was changed by the action. On the Democratic side, Senator Fydenko of Maryland said Eisenhower's "withdrawal, in the emphatic fashion he has used, foretells the election next November of President Truman."

PAC Against 3rd Party

WASHINGTON (AP)—The CIO's political action committee lined up with opponents of a third party yesterday. The committee promptly opened a drive for a minimum of $1-a-head from 6,000,000 CIO members to build a block, ward and precinct organization.

Switzer To Be Nominee?

DES MOINES (AP)—The Des Moines Register said last night that Carroll O. Switzer, Polk county attorney, may emerge from conferences started yesterday as the Democratic candidate for Governor of Iowa.

Democrat, the Register said it was revealed by a reliable source, are trying to get agreement of a half dozen prospects upon one man who could be given a clear field in the Democratic Governorship primary June 2.

National—Taxes, Inflation Move, Distillery Grain Hope to Block GOP Tax Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democratic leaders yesterday called a mass meeting for Jan. 28 of all their house members, determined to consolidate opposition to the Republican-backed bill proposing a $6,200,000,000 tax cut.

"We are going to discuss the Knutson bill," said Rep. Rayburn of Texas, the Democratic leader. "We are just going to show how nefarious, dishonest and contemptible the character of the Knutson bill is."

Rayburn announced the meeting after both Speaker Martin (R-Mass) and Knutson had predicted that an expected presidential veto of the Republican bill will be overridden.

Deposit Reserves For Banks Raised

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal reserve board yesterday raised reserve requirements of New York and Chicago banks from 20 to 22 percent of their net demand deposits, effective February 27.

The amount of reserve required minus the lending power of banks by withdrawing funds required as "reserves" from lending resources of the banks.

The increase still left reserve requirements at New York and Chicago banks four points under the maximum of 26 percent that the federal reserve board can order.

Russia Bars Entry Into Soviet-Korean Zone

LAKE SUCCESS (AP)—Russia yesterday officially rebuffed the first attempt by the United Nations assembly's Korean independence commission to enter the Soviet zone in northern Korea.

Andri A. Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign minister, notified the U.N. by letter that Russia maintained her "negative attitude" toward the commission. He refused to amplify this statement but the U.N. and delegates accepted it as a rejection of the commission bid.

Warren R. Austin, chief U.S. delegate here, told newsmen that the commission now in Seoul "ought to go ahead and organize the (U.S.-occupied) southern zone." Austin said, however, this was only his personal view.

Adopting a proposal by Secretary of State Marshall, the 1947 assembly established the commission to facilitate and expedite Korean independence and supervise national elections. The Russian bloc fought it, contending that "truly elected representatives of the Korean people" should take part in the U.N. assembly debate here.

House Receives Bill On Grain Allocation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate yesterday passed and sent to the house legislation extending to Feb. 29 the agriculture department's authority to allocate grains to distillers, as a federal court weighed its decision in a case challenging validity of the law.

The anti-inflation law enacted last month contained a provision renewing the president's wartime power to restrict the use of grain for whiskey making, but set Jan. 31 as expiration date.

Meanwhile a three-man federal court was expected to hand down its ruling shortly on two suits brought by Schenley corporation contesting (1) the constitutionality of the allocation authority and (2) a subsequent order by Anderson rationing grain to distillers.

Meanwhile the American Bankers association began a nationwide drive to put a brake on inflation by a voluntary restriction on loans which do not contribute to the nation's economic productivity.

The ABA program has been endorsed by President Truman and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, as well as by Senator Taft (R-Ohio).

Sentence Amish Leader

GOSHEN, Ind. (AP)—Samuel Hochstetler, 75-year-old, white-bearded leader of a rural Amish church, was sentenced yesterday to six months on the state penal farm for keeping his 41-year-old daughter, Lucy, roped and chained for ten years because she refused to join the strict religious sect.

Later, Sheriff Luther Yoder said he would ask the court to conduct a sanity hearing for the daughter.

Immediate precautions were taken against the possibility of fire.

There were 5,000 gallons of gasoline in the tank when it burst, but tank wagons managed to save 1,500 gallons.

Pauley Probe Ends in Turmoil

Speculation Investigation Under the Cameras' Klieg Lights STASSEN: You Did! PAULEY: Poppycock, I Didn't!

Pauley Denies Stassen's Charge of 'Inside Deals'

WASHINGTON (AP)—A senate investigation of commodity speculation recessed last night in an uproar during which Edwin W. Pauley, shouted that the charge he used "inside information" in trading on the grain markets was "a bunch of poppycock."

Senator Dworshak (R-Idaho) shouted that he resented Pauley's "insinuations," inasmuch as Democratic members, he complained, had used up most of the time in hostile questioning of Stassen.

"I have sat here all day," Pauley shouted as Stassen concluded replying to written questions put to him at Pauley's request, "and I have never seen or heard of such a bunch of poppycock."

Ferguson told Pauley to be quiet adding that the latter will have a chance to testify before the committee today in reply to Stassen's charges.

Pauley subsided. Taking up the first of 21 questions submitted by Pauley, who is resigning as assistant to the secretary of the army, Stassen said Pauley as a war reparations commissioner participated in government decisions on commodity questions.

"Do you accuse Pauley of trading on the basis of inside information?" Chairman Ferguson (R-Mich) read from the list of Pauley's questions.

"I do," Stassen replied quietly as Pauley, sitting nearby, frowned.

"If answer to question No. 1 is yes, what specific items of inside information did Pauley trade on? When did he get them?" Ferguson continued.

"Continuously as he served as special (preparations) ambassador of the United States, as he served as assistant to the secretary of the army and as he associated with government officials," Stassen replied, adding:

"He couldn't carry on his duties officially without having information that he could use privately for profiteering in food," Stassen declared.

Senator Green (D-RI) protested that Stassen had no proof that Pauley used his knowledge in trading. Pauley himself has specifically denied that he did so.

"He had top level knowledge of what this government was going to do on commodities this country was going to purchase and ship to foreign countries, Stassen replied.

He added that it didn't seem reasonable to assume that Pauley would disregard this knowledge when he was speculating on the markets.

"I think one of the truest things Mr. Pauley testified to before this committee was that he was not gambling," Stassen said.

Stassen declined to give the names of the 11 he said were profit-making "insiders."

He said, however, that two of them are Edwin W. Pauley, special assistant to Secretary of the Army Royal, and Ralph Davies, former petroleum administrator for war.

Stassen, a Republican presidential aspirant, specifically excluded Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, President Truman's personal physician, who he said was only a small operator.

During sometimes uproarious daylight hearings yesterday, Stassen testified that Pauley undertook "new speculation" totaling $1,414,997 in the first four months of his service in the army department post.

Pauley cried "falsehoods" when Stassen declared that Pauley's trading followed a "pattern" closely linked to government purchasing programs.

Pauley, who demanded a chance to reply to Stassen's "pattern buying" statements face to face, has said previously that when he took the army post Sept. 4 he began to sell his holding as fast as he reasonably could.

In another highlight of yesterday's testimony, Stassen said that Pauley made a quick profit of $40,175 after Secretary of Agriculture Anderson put out what the witness described as "an erroneous statement" which depressed grain prices last fall.

But Stassen added later, under sharp Democratic questioning, that he was not saying Anderson made a "false statement" deliberately or otherwise.

Bavarian Strike Ends; Fight Black Market

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—A paralyzing 24-hour strike by 1,000,000 Bavarians came to an assembly close last night. Swift action was taken by two German governmental agencies to stamp out black marketing and food hoarding and thus boost food rations.

The economic council of the British and American zones passed the most severe law of its half-year existence. All farmers and food handlers are now compelled to report their complete stocks under threat of heavy punishment.

The Bavarian state government—chief target of the strike—announced it will wage a drive against black marketers and food hoarders. The government plans to enlist trade unions and farmers' associations in a program to divert food from illegal channels into a common rationing pool.

Under the new law of the bizonal council food not reported can be confiscated. Fines up to $3,000 can be levied for false reports. In aggravated cases a farmer can be punished by having his farm placed under operation by a state trustee.

Unite With Communists

ROME, (AP)—The Italian Socialist party will continue its alliance with the Communists in the April parliamentary elections. This was shown last night by an unofficial tabulation of votes at the Socialist National congress.

The Communists are depending upon Socialist help in their attempt to defeat Premier Alcide De Gasperi's Christian Democrats in the coming elections.

Anne Meets Mihai

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP)—Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma came to Switzerland yesterday and met former King Mihai of Romania. Her blonde hair blowing, she rushed into his arms and kissed him.

Interviewed as he emerged from his hotel, Mihai said there would be no immediate formal announcement of an engagement.

'Democratic Union' Urged By Churchill to Stop Russia

U.S. Accepts Bevin's Western Bloc Idea But Wants Europe to Start It

WASHINGTON (AP)—Britain's plan to organize a western European bloc was endorsed by the United States yesterday as a means of reinforcing "the efforts which our two countries have been making to lay the foundation for a firm peace."

While thus giving its support to the undertaking announced Thursday by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, the state department carefully emphasized "European initiative" in forming the organization.

It apparently sought thereby to encourage European leadership in forging ahead with the project and to counter possible Soviet charges that the whole thing is an American plot to dominate Europe.

At the same time the state department took a hand in the controversy between Britain and France over the French plan to revalue the Franc.

Undersecretary Robert Lovett took time out of a cabinet meeting for a brief, unscheduled conference at the White House with Lord Inverchapel, the British ambassador.

Michael McDermott, state department press officer, said last night they touched briefly on Bevin's speech but reported that "matters before the International Monetary Fund" were the chief topic.

This obviously meant that they talked about the Franc revaluation dispute, which has been the only matter before the fund for the past five days.

NAM Wants Separate Agency To Run ERP

WASHINGTON (AP)—Spokesmen for the National Association of Manufacturers and the committee for economic development, a businessmen's organization, joined yesterday in urging that the European Recovery program be freed from state department control.

They also aligned themselves with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in pledging full support to the purposes of the program—a circumstance that Chairman Vandenberg (R-Mich) of the senate foreign relations committee called "very significant."

Labor-management agreement on the "fundamental objectives" of large-scale aid to Europe, Vandenberg commented, "is a coincidence that ought to be underscored."

Support of the recovery program also was reaffirmed by the CIO executive board, which ended a two-day meeting. The board acted despite objections by west coast CIO leader Harry Bridges.

Hoffman, appearing for the committee for economic development, said direct control of the program would give the state department "a back-breaking load" of detail as well as "undesirable responsibility for matters of domestic policy."

Curtis E. Calder of the NAM called for a "separate government agency or board" to run the recovery program.

Wants Matters 'Brought to a Head' Before Russians Develop A-Bomb

LONDON (AP)—Winston Churchill yesterday urged the "western democracies" to unite and "bring matters to a head" at once with the Soviet government before the Russians develop an atomic bomb possibly in a year or two.

There is "very real danger" in delay, he warned.

Churchill voiced full conservative support of a proposal for a western European union announced yesterday by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, but Prime Minister Attlee said Britain's labor government would move carefully in consolidating a bloc to halt Communist expansion.

Winding up a grave, two-day foreign policy debate in the house of commons, Attlee indirectly challenged Churchill's plea for a speedy east-west diplomatic showdown.

The prime minister said Britain planned "to get the idea (western European union) formulated and propagated and then, through conversations, to build up support for it, rather than have some kind of dramatic gathering with a concrete plan in which all the difficulties would come out."

Bevin announced yesterday that the "time is ripe for the consolidation of western Europe" and revealed that Britain and France already had invited Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg to join in treaties designed to halt what he called the "tremendous expansion" of Russia and Communist attacks on the Marshall plan.

He indicated there was no thought at the present time of joining in a customs union with France or the Benelux (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg) nations.

Attlee also mentioned only the "political and economic integration" of western Europe — although French officials yesterday said in Paris that military treaties with the Benelux countries were being sought as well.

Attlee attacked Communism, just as Bevin and Churchill had done before him, and served notice on Prime Minister Stalin to "give up the idea that Britain is going to turn Communist."

Britain's 73-year-old wartime prime minister, looking fully recovered from his recent illness, talked to crowded benches and packed galleries.

After recalling his wartime conference with Prime Minister Stalin at Yalta, Churchill said: "It is idle to reason or argue with Communists. It is, however, possible to deal with them on a realistic basis. In my experience, they will keep their bargain as long as it is in their interests to do so, which might in this great matter be a long time once things were settled."

He recalled that when the present parliament convened he predicted Russia would have the atom bomb in "three or four years." Now "two years have already elapsed," he said.

List Additional Aid Funds for Europe

WASHINGTON (AP)—The state department yesterday allotted an additional $97,121,000 of American winter aid funds to France, Italy and Austria.

The funds will be used mostly for February purchases of cereals and coal.

France's share was $49,539,000; Italy got $35,477,000, and Austria received $12,105,000.

The allotments were from the $522-million voted by congress last month for interim aid to the three countries, and increased the total committed to $244,437,000 or approximately 47 percent.

For France, the new allotment covers 165,000 long tons of cereals costing with freight charges $22,789,000; and 1,300,000 tons of U.S. coal costing $26,750,000.

Italy's share was 177,000 tons of cereals costing $23,477,000 and 600,000 tons of U.S. coal costing $12,000,000.

The Austrian allotment was 39,000 tons of cereals, costing $5,478,000; 240,000 tons of coal from sources other than the U.S. $3,800,000; and 7,000 tons of peanuts, $2,827,000.

Thus far France has been allotted aid costing $118,839,000, Italy $92,199,999 and Austria $33,399,000.

Says ERP To Need One-Third of U.S. Petroleum Exports

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The national petroleum council estimated yesterday the 16 European nations in the Marshall recovery plan will need in 1948 about one-third of the petroleum products available for export from the United States.

On the basis of figures submitted at the Paris economic conference last September, the council said, the 16 nations want from this country 112,000 barrels daily this year, 87,000 daily in 1949, 76,000 a day in 1950 and 31,000 daily in 1951.

The United States, it said, will be able to export this year 125,000 barrels a day of crude oil and 240,000 barrels daily of other petroleum products, after providing for domestic demands.

These estimates do not take into account, the council said, Europe's estimated daily need for 130,000 barrels of residual fuel oils. The United States is not shipping oils of that type because of heavy demand at home.

Kay Francis Takes Overdose of Pills

Stage and Screen Actress Kay Francis She Had Been Nervous and Couldn't Sleep

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Kay Francis, star of the stage play "State of the Union," became seriously ill from an overdose of sleeping pills. Yesterday Police detained her stage manager, Howard Graham, 37, for five hours while they investigated.

Graham was released after the 43-year-old actress regained consciousness and confirmed Graham's story of what caused her illness. He had been booked for "investigation of assault to kill."

Graham had reported that he was called to her hotel room about 6:30 a.m. That she fainted and she burned her legs on a radiator when he took her to a window in an effort to revive her.

The Columbus assistant chief of detectives said:

"The detectives talked to her and she said she had been nervous and couldn't sleep. She had been taking these pills so she took more than she thought she was taking."

Her condition was reported serious but not critical.

Taking Time Out

With Buck Turnbull

Three cheers for Referee Matty Begovich!

The eastern official has taken it on himself to try and do something about this rhabarb called basketball. And if the nation's cage coaches were half as energetic as Begovich, this ear of corn hovering over the great sport would be cleared up in no time.

Begovich, who has been very disturbed over the heated situation which coaches have called "poor officiating," has proposed a five-point program to slow down basketball. We won't say we agree with all the points but it's certainly a step in the right direction, anyway.

Begovich, who referees big-time games in the east and also coaches John Marshall college in New Jersey, offers these five proposals:

"1. Basketball adopt the delayed whistle (similar to hockey) so that a player fouled at the start of a play would be able to complete the play without being interrupted by the whistle. If the shot is missed at the end of the play, the foul would be called and taken. If the player makes this shot, no foul would be called.

"2. After a foul shot, or shots, the offensive team would retain possession of the ball rather than give it up to the team that committed the foul. This would hold whether the shot was made or not.

"3. The rule on kicking the ball clarified or defined. At present the official must judge whether the kick was intentional or not.

"4. On a tap-in basket following a rebound, only one point be allowed for the score instead of two. There is no science or skill, only size attached to a rebound tap-in, and the only way a small man can defend against the big man on this play is to check him and check him hard. That makes for more fouls.

"5. After all scores the officials stop play momentarily and handle the ball, either at center court or end court, until both teams are ready. This would, of course, eliminate the firehorse type of basketball in which the sphere passes back and forth faster than a tennis ball."

There no doubt are plenty of arguments pro and con on the five-point program but it will give the National Association of Basketball Coaches something to think about when they hold their annual meeting late in the season.

For instance, the nation has now been schooled to fast basketball, a game which makes hockey players shudder. A complete turn-about in the revolutionary manner presented by Begovich would undoubtedly lessen crowd appeal.

In regards to point No. 4, this would probably result in a lot of difficulty. The referee would have to use his own discretion as to whether a ball player was tipping the ball back into the basket or whether he had regained possession with both hands and then shot again.

Some coaches have disagreed vehemently with the "new look" but others seem to like the plan. In fact, Clair Bee, Long Island university coach, went a little further. He proposed the return of the center jump.

The National Association of Basketball Coaches also has a "Doors Open 1:15-9:45"

Ris Rates Iowa Swimmers 'Tops' Praises Their Spirit, Ability

By JOE NOBLE

Two jumps behind jet propulsion comes Wally Ris, and the SUI sprint splasher announced yesterday that he has his sights set on Olympic recognition.

The lithe six-foot, two-inch king of the pool, who already has cornered more than his share of water trophies, relaxed against the white tile of the fieldhouse pool and practically challenged the rest of the Big Nine conference. "Our boys are going to be darn rough to whip," he remarked.

Ris, holder of the national indoor 100-yard free style record, is virtually assured of an invitation to the Olympic try-outs next summer in Detroit, and five will get you ten that he dons the U. S. colors when the elimination series is over. To date he has beaten the best in the 100-yard free style events, including Michigan's vaunted Dick Weinberg and Smith and Hirose of Ohio State.

"Start early," is his advice to the pollywogs. Ris first hit the pool when he was four years old, but the Chicago speed merchant is still in the market for advice. Bill Smith, the Ohio State claimant to the national 220-yard free style title, lauded Ris during their naval Great Lakes stay. Ris responded by whipping his teacher in the 100-yard heat from then on. Ris entered SUI last year after grabbing seven high school tank championships in Chicago, to put

WALLY RIS Iowa's jet propulsion . . .

Crane Tech out in front on the swimming calendar. A brief spell of ineligibility brought his career to a halt at SUI, but not for long. He took the national AAU indoor 100-yard title in :50.9. He holds the 100-meter outdoor American record of :57.6. The sprint king was a member of five relay teams which set world records in the Hawaiian jaunt last summer.

"The 400-meter relay record will surely be accepted," Ris declared. He referred to the team record set by the squad he anchored in their trip to Hawaii. It consisted of Bill Smith and Halo Hirose of Ohio State, Dick Weinberg, Michigan, and Ris.

That excursion alone netted him five trophies. How many awards does Ris own? He doesn't know exactly. "Some of them aren't of too much importance," he grinned. "They gave a few medals for merely taking a shower."

One thing is sure. Local fans will have the opportunity to see at least 50 percent of the Olympic tankers in action here in the Big Nine conference meet in March. "The Ohio State Anderson-Harlan diving aggregate is worth the price alone," Ris warned.

The 23-year-old veteran has numerous water hours behind him. In three years naval service he has instructed swimming at Great Lakes, Bainbridge, Md., and Notre Dame. He referred to the Great Lakes swimming squad of which he was a member, as "the greatest team that ever competed in amateur paddling."

player regards his blockers, so Ris praises the Hawkeye swimming team. "As far as I am concerned," he said, "they're tops in spirit and ability." And of the freshman tankers he summed it up confidently: "They are the best in the country today. If we were allowed to use them, the Big Nine title would go to Iowa this year."

The Western conference race is narrowed to three possibilities for 1948. Ohio State, Michigan and Iowa are the big three with Purdue given a slim chance to upset the cart. "We will have to concede the distance and diving points," Ris declared, "but from then on out they had better be prepared for trouble."

What does the king think of SUI's tank coach? "Name just one better" in Ris' books Dave Armbruster is the dean of swimming mentors and as far as Ris is concerned he will train under Dave until the time to leave for Olympic majoring.

Although majoring in physical education he plans to go into business for himself after graduation, preferably in the Windy City. The king is only a junior in school, so Big Nine swimmers can sweat out a few more headaches before Ris bows out of the race.

Bluehawks Tip West Liberty In Close Ball Game, 33-29

By STU JAHNSON

University high snipped the Comet's tail here last night, squeezing past West Liberty, 33-29, in a nip-and-tuck basketball battle.

Eight times the score was knotted; three times in the final period. The lead changed hands seven times in the frenzied contest. Only a point or two separated the teams much of the game.

Both teams chalked up 22 personal fouls, losing two men via the too many rule. Both added 15 points to their final score as a result of charity tosses.

Bluehawk Forward Bob Rasley paced the scorers with 12 points, swishing six out of seven free throw attempts. Guard Earl Jehle led the Comets with eight counters, half on charity throws.

West Liberty took the lead on the opening tip-off play, Jehle dumping the lay-up. The Comets held a slight edge until late in the second quarter when Bluehawk Guard Bob Ojemann knotted the count at 12-all with a follow-up shot.

Each team netted a free toss setting the halftime score at 13-apiece. The third period found the lo-casts out front, 23-20. Rasley broke a knotted score with a setup late in the fourth quarter. The Blues hit two free throws while the Comets nailed one.

A left-handed hook shot by Rasley, with thirty seconds left in the game, settled the matter at 33-28, for the largest Bluehawk lead of the night. The Comets had only time to squeeze in a free throw before the final gun.

The boxscore: Uni. W. 33, West Liberty 29. Dunks: U. W. 6, 2; West Liberty 4, 2. Rasley, 12; Ojemann, 8; Jehle, 8; Miller, 6; Neuhl, 6. West Liberty: 12, 11, 10. Total: U. W. 33, West Liberty 29. Halftime scores: University high 13-13, West Liberty 13-13.

Mason Suffers Sprained Ankle

Sparkplug Charlie Mason became the second Hawkeye in three days to drop out of drills yesterday when he withdrew with a twisted ankle. Leonard "Red" Metcalfe is the other performer on the disability list. He suffered a similar accident in Wednesday's practice.

CHARLIE MASON Injured ankle . . .

However, neither injury is serious, and both players are certain to be ready for the tilt with Regis college here Jan. 31. The squad will have enjoyed a two-week layoff from competition by that date.

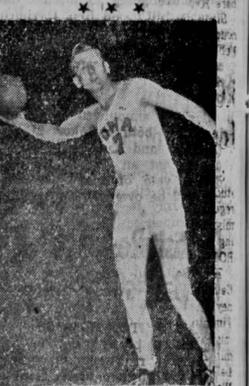

Murray Wier, with an average of 19.1 points for eleven engagements, ranks seventh among scorers on major collegiate teams, revealed yesterday by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau.

Top ranking in the nation, goes to Norman Hankins of Lawrence Mich. Tech., with a 23.8 average in 15 games, bettering Yale's Tony Lavelli who has 23.2. Wier ranks higher than any Big Nine player in averages over total games played.

The problem of how to coax more punch from Wier's four teammates is getting Coach "Pops" Harrison's attention currently.

Bob Schulz, whom Harrison considers a good shot, falls far below Wier's and Metcalfe's scoring pace. Schulz's average, third best on the Hawkeyes, is 4.8 per game.

Harrison feels that if Schulz would take more shots than he has been, his points would climb, as he hits often on the medium long ones.

Olympic Withdrawal Threatened

Hockey Row Prompts Fire From Canada

LONDON (AP)—Threat of a general withdrawal of all hockey teams from the winter Olympics was voiced yesterday by a Canadian spokesman. This followed failure of two United States groups to settle their own quarrel.

George S. Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Hockey association, delivered his threat at Southampton after arriving on the Queen Mary with Avery Brundage, president of the U.S. Olympics committee, and Walter Brown, vice-president of the Amateur Hockey association.

"If there is any interference from the international Olympic committee," said Dudley, "I am in favor of withdrawing all hockey teams from the winter games and conducting our own world championship."

The Canadian Hockey association works in close cooperation with the A.H.A., whose team has been accepted by the Swiss organizing committee as the U.S. representative. Brundage has been empowered to withdraw all American teams from the games if the A.H.A. team is allowed to play. The U.S. Olympic committee has sent over its own team, on whose behalf Brundage will appear before the international Olympic committee next week.

"Unfortunately this has gotten beyond an ice hockey controversy," Brundage said after the finish of what both he and Brown agreed was an "amicable" discussion. "It has become a challenge against the organization of the Olympic games."

Brundage has charged the A.H.A. is "tainted with professionalism" and is under the domination of commercial interests.

Both the Canadian Hockey association and the A.H.A. are recognized by the international federation as governing bodies for the sport in the two nations.

DeLong Tops Small Colleges in Scoring; Marty Rates 4th

NEW YORK (AP)—Big Nate De Long, sophomore center for River Falls (Wis.) State Teachers college, tops all collegiate scorers among both major and minor basketball teams with an average of 26.3 for 12 games.

Figures released yesterday by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau show De Long has scored 316 points on 106 field goals and 104 free throws through games of Jan. 17. He tops Eppa Rixey of Kenyon college who has an average of 24.1 on 64 baskets and 41 charity tosses in seven games for 169 points.

The leader among the colleges of major classification is Norman Hankins of Lawrence (Mich.) Tech, who rimmed 149 field goals and 59 free throws for 357 points in 15 games and a 23.8 average. Lawrence Tech is listed as a major basketball team because it plays one third or more of its games against members of major conferences.

John Wilson of Anderson is third among the lesser schools with an average of 23.6 for 10 games and Mickey Marty of Lorain is fourth with 22.2 for 13 games.

Listed in tenth place among minor college scorers was Jerspenson, Iowa Teachers, with 54 field goals, and 45 free throws for 155 points in nine games, or an average of 17 points per game.

Minor team defensive leaders had Luther in eighth place with a won-lost record of 12-2, having allowed 607 points for a 43.4 average, and Dubuque in tenth place, with a 7-2 won-lost record, having allowed 394 points for a 43.8 average.

Louis to Quit Golf Until July

CHICAGO (AP)—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis yesterday vowed to spurn his "distracting" hobby of golf until after he tees off on Jersey Joe Walcott in their expected return match in New York next June.

Louis, opening training for a four-round exhibition here against hard-punching Bob Foxworth of East St. Louis, Ill., next Thursday, greeted reporters with an easy nonchalance at Eddie Nichols' gymnasium, a picturesque basement training quarters, but his eyes narrowed as he drawled:

"From now on I'm gonna try to hit somebody, like I didn't hit Walcott last December."

Louis said he weighed between 220 and 225 pounds and that he planned to face Foxworth at 220. On the subject of weights, he made it unspeakable plain that if he meets Walcott again — it won't be at 211 pounds, his famed "dried-out" weight when he took his much-disputed decision from Walcott.

"I'll go against him at exactly 214 and that's the only change I'll make in my plans," Louis said. "I'm gonna be much stronger next time and I'll be able to catch him. That means no more golf for me until around July first. Golf is out and maybe that'll make a difference. Course, I'm not saying that my next fight definitely will be against Walcott. He hasn't signed for the fight."

Louis, donning gloves and boxing togs for the first time since the Walcott bout, seemed a little off timing when he punched the bag before a packed house in the tiny gym in the Negro district.

The Gestapo Comes to Iowa City

(Second of a Series)

Yesterday we talked about the FBI coming on campus to intimidate the political thinking of some students with whom we happen to be entirely out of sympathy.

The fact remains, however, that their right to think as they please and act in a legal manner—providing they don't resort to violence—is protected by the Constitution and should not be subject to the snooping of the FBI.

Not only did their presence tend to intimidate students, but its effect on faculty persons was about the same.

Just let it be known that the FBI is in town, and even faculty persons get scared. As a matter of fact, the agent had quite a few things to do in the line of legitimate FBI activity. But let him go to the office of the French department and bingo! Everybody gets worried. "Did I say something to my class that could be construed as 'subversive'?"

He goes to a dean's office—on a perfectly justifiable mission of verifying some one's application for federal employment—and the word spreads around. "The FBI is in town. Everybody cover up. For God's sake don't deviate from the NAM line. You might get in trouble. You don't know when they'll pounce on you."

Now a lot of this is pure emotionalism on the part of those who say it. But the point is they think these are the consequences. And events have given a shadow of truth to it.

Once having embarked on the road of government thought control, there is no stopping. That's what Hitler found out, that's what Stalin is experiencing.

You start with the people who admittedly are thinking thoughts most dangerous to the established order. Then you get less sure.

Maybe this man over there is thinking thoughts only less radical. Well, look him up. Then the terror spreads. Stool pigeons and gossipers run riot. The government strikes out in blind fury. The Gestapo becomes more vigilant.

You may think there is a neutral zone—of not caring one way or another. You say "Well, I'm not going out of my way to think much at all—either way, neither for the sanctity of an individual's thought or against it. I'll just mind my own business and I'll never get in trouble with the Gestapo."

But it hasn't worked that way—in Germany, Japan, Italy or Russia.

It finally becomes not a negative matter—thinking thoughts against the established order. It becomes a matter of fervent affirmative action—shout "heil" the loudest, strut the most arrogantly, stand the longest to see the leader, raise the arm in salute the most vigorously, be sure to attend every "patriotic" rally. Only by these affirmative actions can you prove your loyalty in a police state which starts by intimidating opponents.

God forbid that the time shall ever come when life for every citizen depends on bowing down before the Rankins, Thomases, Peglers or Bilbos!

And from a School Board Member, Too

You never know when an idea, once mentioned, is going to pop up again. We casually picked up a Cedar Rapids newspaper and there it was—right on the front page.

It seems a member of the Cedar Rapids board of education thinks students should grade professors. What heresy! Usually, it's the students (the upstarts!) who have the audacity to offer such disturbing ideas to the academic world.

But here was a full-fledged member of a large city board of education proposing the same thing. We couldn't believe it. We wrote for confirmation. Yes, it was all true—right down in black and white.

What we've been plugging for actually has happened in a few classrooms. This week students in sociology courses were given part of a class period to write a constructive criticism of the course. The psychology department has done the same thing for years in some classes. There are other classes where it is done as a regular assignment.

The professors who do it—at least the ones we've talked to—agree that it's helpful. It helps them to know the students' attitude. That doesn't mean they have to accept every petty gripe or complaint. But it gives them a pretty broad and comprehensive picture of how the students react to the course.

We aren't proposing that the students run the university. That would be the tail wagging the dog. But we do think the university could do a better job if it knew what the students—who are supposed to be the prime reason for the existence of a university—thought of some courses.

Some professors would be shocked, others wouldn't care, some would be pleased. And it might help just a little bit to make the university better.

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

Defense Treaties and the Cold War

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR., AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Bernard Baruch and Foster Dulles, in their testimony on the Marshall plan, have finally given something approaching official standing to the often-made suggestion that mutual defense treaties must eventually play their part in the cold war.

The United States, traditionally opposed to military treaties with European nations and still hoping to make the United Nations the main peace-keeping agency of the world, has been slow to entertain the idea.

But the ice was broken at Rio de Janeiro when the nations of this hemisphere—all except Canada—agreed that in any dispute with outsiders they would stand one for all and all for one.

Well, the United States has, in effect, established similar lines elsewhere in the world. Lines beyond which we do not intend to permit the expansion of Communist imperialism. We have enlisted in this effort, or are trying to enlist, the aid of all the countries on the Communist perimeter.

The Russians are attempting to counter this effort with warnings to her as yet unconquered neighbors that, while the U.S. may be strong now, people who fail to consider how strong Russia will be in a few years are likely to find themselves in hot water.

Russia has immediate designs on northern Iran, parts of Turkey, northern Greece, and may be preparing some sort of move against the northern industrial section of Italy. These countries are in no position to resist her pressure except through outside aid. They would very much like to be told that, if they stand up for themselves, we and their nearer neighbors will stand with them. France, in return for her agreement to our plans for reviving German industry to aid the Marshall plan and also to insure her against Russia, would especially like a mutual assistance treaty.

European countries, often put out with the vaccinations of American foreign policy in the past, would like every assurance that in siding with us in the cold war they can depend without reservation on the promise that we are in the fight to the finish.

The Atlantic coast region of the United States has the lowest divorce rate in the country and the rate increases with the distance west until the western mountain area is reached, this district having the highest divorce rate in the country.

Personal and Social Adjustments of the Atomic Age

(The following article was transcribed from shorthand notes taken of the Thursday night speech by Robert Blakely, chief editorial writer of the Des Moines Register, at the last of the atomic energy lecture series. He spoke temporarily and was unable to revise the notes before returning to Des Moines—The Editor.)

I make no pretense that I know very much about this field. I am writing about it merely because I feel some one should. I want to talk about some of the adjustments I believe necessary.

First, I want to make a comparison between the democracies on one hand and certain forces they have met up with in the course of history. Let us compare the relative attitudes between democracy and its opponents in World War II.

Here was a democracy that had begun the war with the people feeling somewhat unconfident in their ideal. Nazism said, "We are the democracy of the future. Nazism will look out for the best interests of the German people."

Now, look today at the comparison of the people of the United States with the spokesmen of the Soviet Union, and you see the trend developing further, so I suppose that today our faith in democracy is lower than before World War II and we are competing with a philosophy which claims to be more democratic than ours.

We are in the currents of transition, and I am going to try to pay attention to that transition. Generations sometimes feel that they are close to the previous ones; others, like ourselves today, feel a wide chasm between themselves and those of previous generations.

Now, we can draw a line at Jan. 1, 1901. The young man born on that day differed from his colleagues born a few years earlier. He differed from them in this way: This man born at this time missed World War I, and in 1940, he was too old to be drafted in World War II. So, he lived through those catastrophes without actually being a part of them. He probably shared the anguish, but he missed the war personally.

I want to take this same person and compare him with older and younger people. Before 1900, the effects of the industrial revolution had done more to industry than to the personal lives of the people. You had inventions but the real impact of the industrial revolution came upon the individual about 1900 so that the life that faced the people's personalities became different.

I want to take this person who grew up in that environment and compare him with a person who grew up before that time. I grew up in a world which I could understand and control. I knew how to build a fire when it went out—I could carry the wood and pump water. I could understand the environment in which I lived.

Take the environment in which the particular type of individual lives today. That person is afraid to light the gas burner when it goes out because it may blow up. He goes out and pushes certain things on his car. If things go well, he can get downtown in a hurry. If not, he doesn't know what to do. Here is the atomic age—an environment in which we grow but do not feel we can understand.

When this atomic environment was finally released, many persons did not know what atomic energy was. Its experiments were conducted in secret—under ground—in dramatic situations.

The problem has been stated by George Bernard Shaw—either we must frankly recognize that we must go back to the native medicine man or we must get rid of this mumbo-jumbo attitude toward science and the methods of science.

Our society is based upon a contradiction between two types of skill—our technological skills and our skills with people—our sociological skills. Technologically, our methods are invented upon an advancement of judgment. Social-

100 Years After California Discovery

Gold-Digging Still Has Many Devotees

Little did James Marshall realize, way back on Jan. 24, 1848, that he would someday deserve the reputation of being the founding father of a vocation that would enable ex-chorus girls to keep themselves in jewels and furs long after their stage-worthy talents had faded.

It was on that day, exactly 100 years ago, that an event took place which was to change the course of history in the United States and to provide plots for numerous screen epics, not to mention myriad "B" pictures.

"January 24, 1848—this day some kind of mettle was found in the tail race that looks like gold, first discovered by James Marshall, the boss of the mill."

This entry in the diary of a young worker in the Coloma valley of California first recorded the event which inflamed the nation and the world—the famous Sutter mill gold discovery—and which sent a great stream of migration toward

The El Dorado of the west. A year after the initial discovery, early in 1849, the New York Herald wrote:

"The excitement relative to the gold in California continues with unabated fervor. It is daily fed with all sorts of reports. Every statement is caught up and swallowed with the greatest avidity."

And don't think the present-day chroniclers of California doings aren't keeping up the good work, with, to them, equally satisfactory results.

"In every Atlantic seaport," the Herald continued, "vessels are being fitted up, societies are being formed, husbands are preparing to leave their wives, sons are parting with their mothers, and bachelors are abandoning their comforts."

The same situations were to develop during the next 100 years after the vocation of gold-digging became co-educational and the practitioners among the "weaker sex" realized the potentialities of the profession and their own powers.

"All are rushing head over heels," wrote the Herald, "toward the El Dorado on the Pacific—that wonderful California, which sets the public mind almost on the highway to insanity" (in itself an indictment of Hollywood that was 100 years ahead of its time).

That the "public mind" eventually was set on the "highway to insanity" when the gold fever isn't strange when we recall the legends of wealth in the west which for 500 years formed a backdrop to western expansion.

The Spanish conquistadores, especially Cortez in 1525, thought there was gold in California. In England, a contemporary of Sir Walter Scott wrote of "great pearls and much gold in the isles of California."

So, it really wasn't strange that, when the news of the discovery leaked out, the greatest migration of the times began, bringing out the scene-ville Americans from every walk of life.

With the prospectors and miners came violence and crime. Gambling, shooting and bandit gangs reigned supreme for a fitful period (a prelude, in a way, to the fitful period of a later day—the Roaring Twenties.)

One young Forty-niner, who arrived in San Francisco by ship "round the Horn," wrote:

"I have seen some who have been up to the mines who are sick of the doings up there. There are no laws there except the old Lynch law."

During recent years, modern gold-diggers were ruled by a law peculiar to their kind—"Never give the sucker an even break."

Four years later this same young man, Cyrus Hurd, Jr., wrote home to his Connecticut family of his failure as a gold-digger. (Probably lacked the necessary physical attributes, as measured by later standards of the vocation.)

"I am now a retired gold-digger," he wrote. "Have laid down the shovel and pick and have taken up the hoe, and have resolved to be a potato digger."

Today, to commemorate the gold discovery, a new three-cent postage stamp, picturing Sutter's mill, will be issued.

And all the retired gold-diggers in the United States will face west and bow in silent homage to their profession's founding father.

Bach Takes 1-Term Leave To Finish Book

Prof. Marcus Bach, of the university school of religion, said yesterday that he is taking leave of absence from his position next semester to finish his book on Protestantism.

Planning to do most of his writing in Iowa City, Bach requested leave so that he will be free to travel and contact religious leaders of the major Protestant faiths throughout the country.

The new book is to appear this fall about the time of the First World Assembly of churches meeting in Amsterdam. A "popular" story of Protestantism, not a text, will be published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Bach has conducted university classes in Protestantism and in the field of little known religious groups for the past five years.

A previous book, "They Have Found Faith," written by Bach, deals with eight American religious groups and is in its sixth printing.

Offer Greek, Latin Course

Greek and Latin for Vocabulary Building, a new course designed to build the student's English vocabulary through the study of Latin and Greek will be offered next semester.

Prof. Gerald F. Else, head of the classics department, announced yesterday that Prof. Dorrance S. White will teach the course.

The classics department has scheduled the 2-hour class for 10:30 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

Else said the class this semester will be limited to 30 students and the first 30 applicants will be enrolled.

The course will be practical and non-technical, said Else, and will not be a substitute for a course in Greek and Latin.

Hermann was born and spent all but the last few years of his life in Muscatine. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and an honorary sixty-year member of Knights of Pythias.

Surviving are six sons; two daughters; 13 grandchildren, and three great grandchildren.

Portrait of Doge Andrea Gritti
Stern, Aristocratic Nature

(Because of the unusual importance of the Metropolitan art show being exhibited in the art building gallery, The Daily Iowan is presenting daily an illustration of one of the famous paintings with an accompanying article.—The Editor.)

Titian, Master of Rich Color

By JOAN LIFFRING

The genius Titian (1477-1576) is one of Europe's greatest painters. His deep rich color masses and varied tones are in tune with Venetian love of splendor and worldliness.

Titian painted portraits, religious subjects, and pagan myths. He had the patronage of the courts of Ferrara, Mantua, Urbino, Emperor Charles V, and Charles' son, Philip II of Spain.

In his portraits, Titian relates facial expression, gesture, pose, costume, line and color. They become a unit characterizing the subject. Surface details are not overlooked by the artist. The man's costume and hat in this painting aid in portraying his stern aristocratic nature.

The portrait of Doge Andrea Gritti was purchased by the Barbarigo family from Titian's son after the artist's death.

Titian painted in the Doge's palace in Venice. He was a fellow pupil of the artist Giorgione in Giovanni Bellini's workshop. His services were constantly sought by Venice.

His beautiful color and free use of the oil medium with delicate glazes led painting into new fields. His work is sensuous and emotional. He influenced Rubens, El Greco and Tintoretto.

Portrait of an Unknown Man, The Man with the Glove, Entombment, and Education of Cupid are among his famous paintings.

The Metropolitan exhibition at the art building is open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. Sundays.

Visitors' Preference Of Paintings Sought

The university art department is trying to find out what the visitors to the Old Masters exhibit in the art building think of the paintings.

Persons attending the show are asked to give their age, occupation, preference of pictures at the exhibit and art education.

The set of 15 queries, drawn up as a staff project by the art department faculty, is designed to determine the artistic tastes of visitors.

The results of the survey will not be tabulated until the end of the exhibit in March.

In French Film, Reviewer Finds—

He's Caught In Ad-Man's Grasp

By JACK O'BRIEN

The French have sent us a nice little thing called, "Cage of Nightingales," which is being propagandized as "the French 'Going My Way'" and "the new 'Good-bye, Mr. Chips.'"

This is in keeping with the movie ad-man's delusion that, for nationalistic preference to survive, every foreign film must be compared with an earlier and, supposedly, superior American product.

This seems like a dubious sort of salesmanship to me. Would any American modiste try to pass off a Mainbocher original as a duplicate of a Mother Hubbard from Macy's mezzanine?

I don't know about you . . . but the prospect of encountering another "Going My Way," French, Swedish or even Italian, is enough to send me rushing in the direction of a Roy Rogers double bill or, better still, the Brown Derby.

I am happy to report that the half-closed eyes of the ad men are off-focus again. Comparing "Cage of Nightingales" to "Going My Way" is like comparing a slightly bent but very real wild flower with a perfect potted petunia (wax) . . . or fresh spring air with an efficient, slightly noisy, cooling system.

I found "Going My Way" embarrassing, sentimental, "good" to the point of nausea and, occasionally—thanks to Barry Fitzgerald—funny.

"Cage of Nightingales" is none of these things.

There is a basic similarity of plot. But the French film settles for one or, at most, two themes. A blissfully faulty memory has reduced the number of plots I can recall from the McCarey-Crosby film to seven—but that's still too many.

Unfortunately, the last few minutes of the French picture are almost melodramatic (the fire, etc.) as most of the American film, but for its greater part it is sheer delight.

Mr. McCarey suggested before the J. Parnell Thomas "inquisition" that the Russians hadn't liked "Going My Way" because God collaborated with him on it. Like most of the utterances during that congressional coma, I wish he'd never said it.

I'm sure the French didn't call upon the deity to aid in the production of "Cage of Nightingales" and it seems almost heretical to have to admit that, despite this, it's still a vastly superior film.

It is pleasant and charming. The story is simple but delightfully told.

I confess that I am allergic to the usual cinematic efforts to over-dramatize the obvious truth that "There's no such thing as a bad boy." I'm convinced. But if some brat is determined to disguise the fact that he's really an angel with a dirty face, I'm perfectly willing to let it go at that and just keep out of his way. Why sensationalize it with psychologically dubious dramatizations? Most children seem insane when they get in front of a camera anyway.

The French have handled this wisely, I think. The youngsters are likable miscreants in the first place, not pint-sized assassins, and after their "reformation" they may tie their ties but their haloes are still cock-eyed.

The humor in "Cage of Nightingales" has, what I regretfully identify as a "continental touch." It's subtle, slow-moving but warming. Even the old sandwich man gag shows new vitality. It's not side-splitting but the chuckles are consistent.

The cast is very nice. There's a beautiful girl, about a brigade of wonderful kids and Noel-Noel (probably the most ridiculous name ever marqueeed).

M. Noel has been branded as a combination of Chaplin and Crosby. A blending of these talents and personalities could, it seems to me, only produce the most hopeless kind of artistic schizophrenic.

The Frenchman is like Chaplin only as every likable person is like another likable person—they're both likable.

As for the Crosby reference, let's just say it's strained. Noel-Noel isn't trying hard not to look middle aged, for one thing. He's easy going, but never guilty of excruciating efforts to be funny. And he gets along fine without Bob Hope.

Many times the French movie-makers have made my previous antipathies tolerable to me but this time they've achieved the impossible. Not once did the caged boy soprano send my knees up to my chin or my teeth through my head.

The music, both background and coral, is splendidly done.

As for the comparison to "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," the French themselves answer this better than I could. Just as a familiar looking face appears on the screen and the audience winces, "My Gawd, it's Mr. Chips . . ." the hero remarks, "You look just like Mr. Chips." And the character replies, "I know. Everyone tells me that." Very nice.

"Y'see 'Cage of Nightingales' isn't like any other picture. It's more like a surprisingly superior bottle of a not particularly favorite brand . . . or a familiar song sung for the first time by someone it might have been written for.

Now they've got me doing it.

Nursing Institute Ends With Hearing Clinic By Dr. Dean Lierle

The five-day public health nursing institute ended yesterday afternoon with a hearing clinic conducted by Dr. Dean Lierle, head of the department of otolaryngology.

"This is a diagnostic clinic," said Lierle. "It's function is to decide among the representatives here the best thing to do for hearing cases."

for the nurses, staff members and students. The speaking and hearing ability of the children were demonstrated by asking them questions or having them name pictures held up before them.

Medical, social and psychological findings were presented by members of the clinic connected with the cases. The problem of each child was discussed and recommendations were made for his future care.

Among those taking part were Miss Jacqueline Keaster, assistant professor of speech, and Dr. Marshall Jones, assistant professor of psychology.

Hearing clinics are held at University hospital once a month for seven or eight children. The children are brought in a few days beforehand and given physical examinations, speech, hearing and psychological tests.

A tentative date of Mar. 26 was set for the next clinic.

Sentence Two For Disorderly Conduct

James L. Phelps and Mrs. Irma Marie Whitcomb, charged with disorderly conduct, were sentenced to 30 days each in the county jail in police court yesterday. Police Judge Emil G. Trotter sentenced them after they were unable to post $2,000 security.

They were arrested yesterday morning in the Van Meter hotel by police officer Harland Sprinkle. Phelps gave his address as 811 21st avenue, Cedar Rapids. Mrs. Whitcomb listed her address at the home of her brother, 317 1/2 avenue N.W., Cedar Rapids.
