Larger Meat Supplies Are Expected Soon

Increase May Mean Lower Retail Prices As Meat Hits Market

CHICAGO (AP)—The CIO meat handlers strike was over at most plants throughout the country yesterday and industry sources forecast this good news for housewives.

1. Meat supplies probably will start spurring next week as some livestock believed held back on farms is shipped to market.

2. The additional supplies may result in lower retail prices.

There are some "ifs" in the price outlook—the principal one being how strong a demand for meat develops. Even if receipts at livestock markets boom tomorrow, it will be a week or 10 days before these additional meat supplies reach the nation's butcher shops in volume.

The prices of meat on the hoof and on the butchers' shelves have been heading in opposite directions since the strike started March 16. Live cattle and hog prices have been tending downward because the strike reduced the capacity for slaughtering and butchering the animals. This decreased the demand, men in the industry say. In the retail markets, prices have edged generally ahead because demand was strong for the smaller than normal meat supplies.

Although the strike never caused any important meat shortages throughout the country, weekly meat production was only from 75 to 85 percent of normal.

However, the longer term outlook for meat supplies is not so bright. Meat production normally slumps during the summer months. The meat packers say the backlog of farm supplies that was dammed up by the strike could keep them running at high capacity for two or three weeks.

Group To Deliver Food to Strikers

Three cars taking food to the striking Morrell plant workers at Ottumwa plan to leave here today at 10 a. m.

They will carry food collected by the Iowa City Wallace for President committee, Students for Wallace and "Babies for Wallace," in their 10-day drive which ended yesterday.

Hayden Scott, chairman of the strikers' aid committee, last night termed "gratifying" the results of the drive.

Over a dozen cases of canned goods and other commodities were contributed directly, he said.

Money given to the drive was used to purchase 10 cases of canned vegetables, two cases of canned milk, five cases of oatmeal and 150 pounds of flour, he added.

Scott said "the amount of food will not meet the need in Ottumwa," but "our efforts will add moral support to the workers in their struggle."

Nine Wallace group representatives, including three members of the aid committee, will make the trip to Ottumwa today.

According to Prof. Bernard Baum of the Wallace for President committee, they will deliver the food to the Rev. Jack H. Telfer. The Rev. Mr. Telfer, Ottumwa, made the original plea to the Iowa City group for food contributions.

The Wallace group representatives will visit the homes of the strikers "to indicate to us the appeal was not on baseless considerations," Baum said.

Negotiations Under Way To Halt Waterloo Strike

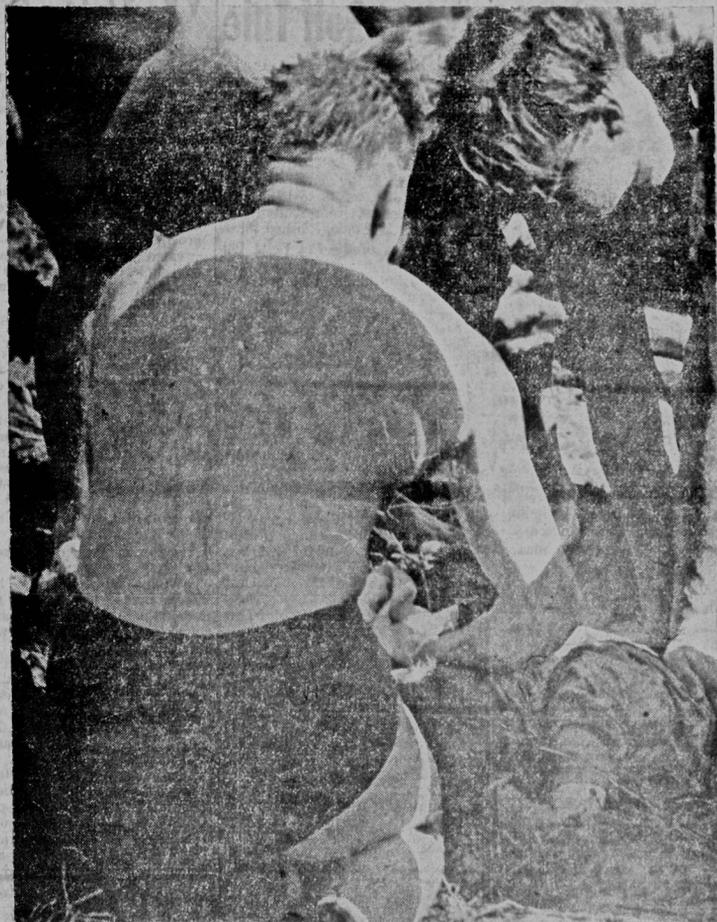

WATERLOO (AP)—Negotiations toward possible early settlement of the Rath Packing company strike were in the making following mass rites yesterday for the picket killed in a riot which brought out the national guard.

While guardsmen patrolled without incident in the plant area where strikers erupted at mid-week, most of the 4,500 members of the striking CIO-UPWA local attended Catholic rites for William J. Farrell, 38.

Meantime two federal conciliators from Kansas City conferred separately with union and Rath officials preliminary to a union-management meeting scheduled to come off at least by tomorrow.

The conciliators said they would stay in Waterloo until a settlement was reached and full operations were resumed.

Politics — Dewey Collects 12 More Votes

Dewey Wins Over Stassen In Oregon Primary Election

PORTLAND (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey stopped Harold Stassen in Oregon yesterday.

It was a major setback for the Minnesota contender for the Republican presidential nomination.

It gave the New York governor 12 GOP delegates pledged to support him at the convention.

Stassen conceded his defeat in Minneapolis as tabulations of Friday's Oregon primary balloting continued to maintain Dewey's margin at around 6,000 votes.

Late yesterday the unofficial count from 1,493 of Oregon's 1,861 precincts gave Dewey 76,318; Stassen 70,703.

With 82 percent of the precincts reported as counting stopped for the night, Dewey's lead had increased to 6,621 votes. The tally was Dewey 92,346, Stassen 85,695 in 1,530 of the state's 1,861 precincts.

Dewey's lead was compiled mostly in Portland, which gave him 5,412 of his advantage. Upstate he led by 1,209 votes.

Dewey flew from Seattle to Sacramento yesterday, and was congratulated on his Oregon triumph by Gov. Earl Warren of California. Warren is a dark horse contender for the Republican nomination and California's favorite son to whom the state's big block of 63 delegates is pledged.

Dewey described the efforts of his supporters in Oregon as "heart warming."

Greeting Dewey, Warren told him, "You seem to have done quite well in Oregon, Governor, and I offer my congratulations."

"Yes," Dewey answered, "apparently I have done well enough and I am very happy about it."

Dewey's victory was in large part due to his surprising up-state support, which had been largely conceded to Stassen.

The New Yorker was leading Stassen by a slight margin in up-state areas, as well as in the metropolitan Portland district.

Dewey's victory was assured when Stassen conceded with the count about three-fourths complete this morning.

The closely watched Oregon election climaxed an all-out effort by the two candidates to capture the last state primary before the GOP nominating convention at Philadelphia next month.

Stassen campaigned in the states four times, hitting hard on his assertion he was the west's favorite candidate. Dewey took the last three weeks from New York duties for an intensive village and hamlet tour to try to overcome the effect of Stassen victories in Wisconsin and Nebraska.

It was a sharper set-back for Stassen than the 12 delegates would indicate.

Dams of Smoke To Raise Oil Production

TULSA, OKLA. (AP)—Underground dams that would be built by smoke particles are part of plans to double the nation's oil and gas production, shown at the International Petroleum exposition.

These plans are seen in model oil wells, made by real oil sands, and actually producing oil. The models were made by the U.S. bureau of mines station at Bartlesville, Okla.

Normally oil and gas flow out of wells because of gas or water pressures on the underground oil. In most wells this pressure ultimately stops, and they have to be pumped. But pumping stops often with more than half of the oil still in the ground, beyond reach.

Pumping down water or gas has brought up some oil of these exhausted fields.

The new plan is not to wait, but to apply pressurized water and gas in new oil fields, on new wells. Oil fields would be laid out in geometrical patterns, with oil wells interspersed with water or gas wells. The latter two would pump water or gas down into the oil sands.

The underground dams are wanted because the oil sands have porous streaks through which the driving water or gas travels undesirably fast.

One experiment, to plug these streaks, is to pump down various kinds of smoke. The particles congeal in the fine oil sand holes and plug the streaks.

RAF Downs 4 Egyptian Craft

British Field Attacked By Mistake; Jews Trapped in Old City

TEL AVIV, ISRAEL (AP)—The British said yesterday that RAF fighter pilots shot down four Egyptian spitfires in engagements over a British airfield near Haifa. (An Egyptian communique said five of their planes were lost and that the attacks were a mistake. The Egyptian fliers, aiming at a Jewish airport southwest of Nazareth, were confused by bad weather, the communique said.)

Three Attacks

The Egyptians made three bombings and strafing attacks on the Ramit David airfield, 14 miles southeast of Haifa, the British said.

Four members of the British ground crew were killed and three were seriously wounded, British military headquarters in Haifa reported. Two British planes were destroyed on the runway.

(The Cairo communique said that Egyptian airforce planes began carrying out a planned attack on the Jewish airport at Megiddo, south of Nazareth, at 5:30 a. m. local time.

Mistook Airport

"But bad weather conditions," it explained, "made the planes mistake the British airport at Ramit David for Megiddo as it is situated about the same distance southwest of Nazareth and in the same latitude.

"In view of the similarity of locations, the planes caused damage and casualties to the British airport and we lost five planes."

A single Egyptian plane made the first raid, the British said. British spitfires took to the air and knocked down two of the four Egyptian planes which participated in the second attack. Two Egyptian planes took part in the third attack and both were shot down by the British pilots.

No Explanation

There was no explanation why the Egyptian planes attacked the British base. Jewish headquarters in Tel Aviv said that attack may have been made "either by accident or on purpose."

Israel's airforce struck again in support of Jewish ground troops making a last-ditch stand in Jerusalem against Trans-Jordan's Arab legion, a Jewish announcement said.

Jerusalem Fight

In Jerusalem, waves of Jewish soldiers charged Arab legion positions in the Zion gate early yesterday but failed to reach their comrades hemmed into a corner of Jerusalem's old walled city.

The legionnaires from Trans-Jordan and 600 troops of Israel fought at close quarters with grenades and tommyguns on a battle-ground lit by flares and a bright spring moon.

Several times the Jews swept up to the walls on the south side of the old city only to be thrown back. Some of them attempted to climb over the wall from the top of an armored bus which was used like an ancient assault tower.

A legion commander said the Jewish attack was inspired by a wireless SOS in which the hard-pressed Jewish garrison inside the wall appealed for help.

Mouse Holds Court in Contempt

BALTIMORE (AP)—A mouse broke up a trial of a damage suit in circuit court Friday.

There were four housewives on the jury but it was Bailiff David O'Dunne who let out the biggest yip.

The mouse ran up his sleeve as he was trying to chase it out from under Judge Michael Manley's desk.

The judge called a recess when the mouse ran under the jury box.

International — Russia Speaks Again

Tass Blames U. S. for International Discord

MOSCOW (AP)—The official Russian news agency last night blamed the United States for the present state of Russo-American relations and said "clearly the attitude of the United States government is not conducive to progress in international affairs."

The news agency, Tass, released a 13-page statement which it said reflected "the attitude of leading circles in the Soviet government."

Tass listed the same 11 spheres of disagreement which had been noted by Prime Minister Josef Stalin in his reply to an open letter by Henry A. Wallace. The United States state department on May 19 detailed its own position on these points, charging that Russia blocked settlements in each case.

After citing the Russian position on the points, Tass said: "From all that has been said above it is clear who bears the responsibility for the present state of Soviet-American relations."

The statement added that the "facts refute the assertion of the (U.S.) state department" that Russia's non-compliant attitude prevents the solutions of the problems.

"Everyone knows that under the Roosevelt government, the most difficult international problems were settled" by the United States, Russia and Britain, Tass said.

It added that now the United States not only violates the decisions made at the Yalta and Teheran conferences, but also violates "decisions of the Potsdam conference which were taken with the participation of Truman and which he signed."

The statement was the latest in a series of Soviet-American exchanges that began with a May 4 letter from U.S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith to Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

The Tass answer seemed to represent no deviation from previous Russian statements on Soviet-American relations. The list of Votes Down Use of Force To Stop Fight

LAKE SUCCESS (AP)—The security council failed last night to accept an American-Russian demand for strong United Nations action to stop the Palestine war.

Instead, it issued its second demand on Arabs and Jews to cease fire. It fixed a deadline at 36 hours after midnight, EST last night.

The final vote on a much-amended resolution was approved, 8 to 0. Syria, Russia and the Soviet Ukraine abstained.

The question of the UN using force really was decided, however, when the security council did not approve the United States demand. That preliminary vote was 5 to 0 with six nations abstaining.

Before the final vote taken at 5:26 p. m., CST, Warren R. Austin, U.S. delegate, served notice the U.S. will call for further action if this 36-hour cease fire order is not observed.

The council adjourned to meet Monday on Czechoslovakia and Palestine.

On the critical paragraph dealing with force, the United States, Russia, the Soviet Ukraine, France and Colombia voted for it; Britain, Syria, China, Canada, Belgium and Argentina abstained.

With that problem out of the way, the delegates lost little time in approving a cease fire order, a demand for the truce commission to expedite a truce for Jerusalem, and a call on Arabs and Jews to work with the UN mediator, Count Folke Bernadotte of Sweden.

The final resolution represented a triumph in the council for Britain, which had insisted throughout the week-long debate that the delegates must not approve use of force unless they were prepared actually to use United Nations armed forces.

Dr. Alfonso Lopez of Columbia said he voted for the resolution with a sense of futility.

Although Russia had joined the United States in pressing for action, Andrei A. Gromyko refused to approve the watered-down version. He abstained with the Soviet Ukraine on the last vote.

Shot Fatal to U. S. Consul

WASHINGTON (AP)—Consul General Thomas C. Wasson died in Jerusalem, the state department said early this morning.

The Vice Consul, William C. Burdett, telegraphed the state department that Wasson died at 6 a. m., Jerusalem time (10 p. m., Iowa Time).

The state department said Wasson presumably died in the Hadassah English mission hospital where he was taken after the shooting.

The top U. S. representative in Palestine, Wasson, 52, was wounded "gravely" by a sniper as he braved gunfire in the streets in trying to arrange a cease-fire agreement between Arabs and Jews, the state department reported.

Just outside the American consulate, a .30 caliber bullet from an unidentified sniper felled him.

DDT Spraying Begins in Food Handling Establishments

War On Fly Begins in D-L Grill

Iowa City's fight against the fly went into high gear last night when the first spraying of about 85 food-handling establishments began.

However, members of the mayor's fly control committee urged Iowa City residents not to stop their fight. DDT tends to break down on exposure, the committee said. Thus, the program is an all-summer project with special emphasis on sanitation. First applications of DDT to screens and garbage cans should have been made during the past week. Two or three additional treatments should take place during the summer.

The committee's goal is for businessmen and householders' efforts to be so complete that no flies will be evident in Iowa City throughout the summer and fall. Costs of the interior sprayings will depend on the number of establishments ordering the service. Suggestions as to payment will be sent later by the committee.

Money for the five sprayings scheduled for downtown alleys and the city dump will come from a fund-raising effort among non-food-handling businesses and professional offices.

Local — "Is There a Place for Communism in America?"

SUI Approves Forum With Communist

By KELLY RUCKER

The university administration yesterday granted permission to Young Democrats and Students for Wallace to sponsor a public forum, to include a Communist speaker, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Macbride auditorium.

Subject of the forum will be "Is there a Place for Communism in America?"

The decision, handed down by Dean Walter R. Goetsch, director of student affairs, contained three provisos. The sponsoring groups must present to Goetsch:

1. "Written acknowledgement of their sponsorship."
2. "A list of the speakers who are to appear on the program."
3. "The name of an acceptable moderator who will have charge of the meeting."

"Therefore, the YRL cannot, in my opinion, co-sponsor the forum..."

"It has been suggested that the executive board of YRL co-sponsor the forum. A contact of available members of the board shows a disinclination to use the board's name as part sponsor."

In a letter to Pres. Virgil M. Hapcher, James Goodwin, president of YRL, pointed out his organization's position:

"Due to the lateness of the hour, it is impossible for the YRL to contact the state organization on co-sponsoring the proposed forum..."

Forum speaker for Young Democrats will be Robert W. Iversen, instructor in the history department. Prof. Bernard Baum of the English department will speak for Students for Wallace.

Miller was designated to contact Warren Batterson, Omaha, chairman of the Iowa-Nebraska-Kansas district of the Communist party (USA), to find out who the Communist speaker would be.

After telephoning Batterson Friday night, Miller said that Al Rubio, Chicago, youth commissioner of the midwest Communist party, would be the speaker.

An attempt was being made last night to secure a speaker to represent the Republican viewpoint on the forum.

Perini Limits Iowa to Four Hits; Hawks in 4th Place Tie

(Special to The Daily Iowan) COLUMBUS, OHIO—Iowa could garner only four hits off Lefty Pete Perini here yesterday afternoon as Ohio State tripped the Hawkeyes in the last game of their Big Nine series, 4-1.

Iowa's defeat coupled with Wisconsin's loss to Northwestern puts Coach Otto Vogel's team back into a fourth place tie in Big Nine standings with the Badgers. Ohio State moves up to third with six wins and four losses.

Right-Hander Wes Demro hurled the entire game for the Hawks, allowing the Bucks nine safeties. Demro ran into trouble in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings when Ohio scored its runs.

In the sixth frame, two singles by Ranz and Bernhardt and a walk to Alex Verdova loaded the

East Waterloo Numps Little Hawk Nine, 11-0

East Waterloo dropped Iowa City's Hawkelets 11 to 0 here yesterday on the local diamond. Buzz Matous, Trojan pitcher, gave up one hit in the seven innings while the Trojans pounded three Iowa City pitchers for 15.

East knocked 'Whitey' Diehl, Little Hawk pitcher, out of the box in the first inning with a four run barrage. They worked over Maury Christensen for six more runs in the next three innings and got their last off Dick Doran, who relieved Christensen in the fourth.

Jerry Anderson spoiled Matous' chance for a no-hitter with a scratch single in the last of the sixth.

Zollners Hand Cards 3-0, 2-Hit Shutout

The world champions did it again. For the second time this season Iowa City's Cardinals lost by a shutout to the Ft. Wayne Zollner Pistons, this time by a 3-0 count.

Leo Luken, working the first five innings for the Zollners, pitched no-hit ball. Elmer Rohrs, his successor, was tagged for two singles by Catcher Joe Maher, the only Cardinal safeties.

Don Dannen went the route for the Cardinals, giving up five hits. Two of the Zollner runs were earned.

Merkel Sets Hurdle Mark

Iowa's do-or-die track squad swept the two-mile run and both hurdle events yesterday afternoon to jolt an under-manned Northwestern team, 70-62.

Russ Merkel, ace Iowa hurdler, won both hurdle events; establishing a new track record of :23.9 in the lows. Teamate Ike Johnson gave Merkel a close race and was breathing on the Quincy, Ill., runner's neck in the finish.

Jim Holland of Northwestern was the meet's leading scorer with 17 1-2 points. The versatile veteran won the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, the broad jump, was on the winning mile relay team, and placed fourth in the shot put.

Holland roared into the lead in the 100-yard dash, streaked down the track far in front, and snapped the tape in :09.9—some 10 yards ahead of Iowan Rex Ploen who finished second. Dick Washington gave Holland a terrific race in the 220-yard dash, but couldn't quite overhaul the flying Northwestern speedster.

Vern Coffey, long-stemmed Hawkeye jumper, bettered the old meet record in the broad jump but the amazing Mr. Holland outleaped Coffey to set

Phi Delta Phi Wins Golf Title

Phi Delta Phi successfully defended its all-university golf championship yesterday, edging the Sigma Alpha Epsilon foursome with a 186 10-hole tally.

The two teams were knotted at 168 at the end of the regulation nine holes. In the extra round, the winners shot an 18 to the SAE's 20. Upper C, representing the Quadrangle league, finished third.

Members of the Phi Delta Phi winning team were Ben Birdsall, Charles Finch, Hal Beck and William Tucker.

Four intramural tennis championship contests are scheduled for this afternoon to wind up most of this spring's net competition.

Both the singles and doubles crowns will be at stake in the Quadrangle league. William Nelson, Upper A, goes after the singles title against William Spurbeck, Upper B. In the doubles play, Robert and Russell Guthart, Upper A, meet William Buhs and Al Esfendyari, Upper C. In the semis, the Guthart brothers downed Robert Billings and Robert Stuckenbruck, Quad E, 6-2, 2-1, while Buhs and Esfendyari dropped John Ellis and Roger Menges, Quad E, 6-2, 6-2.

In the South Quad-Gables-Law Commons league, Charles Allee, North Grand, plays Oreson Christensen, South Quad I, for top singles honors; Allee teams with Paul Sawyer, North Grand, to tackle Warren Dare and Gordon Taylor, South Quad II, for the doubles championship.

WSUI Meets Iowan

Station WSUI's Sports Announcer Bob Brooks and his "Eight Golden Crooks" will take to the diamond behind the field-house this afternoon for a 1936 inning softball game with The Daily Iowan's "Scribes." For better or for worse, the contest will begin at 3 p. m.

Both teams are at full strength for the long-awaited struggle. Practices have been long and gruelling. All the players have sweated away excess poundage. Of course, any resemblance to a softball game will be purely accidental.

But both managers, WSUI's Spunk Broder and The Iowan's Bill Porter, claim their teams are ready and willing for the fracas. They said no more—both are confident of victory.

However, after the radio-men held their open practice yesterday afternoon, The Daily Iowan's head scout rushed into the newsroom shouting, "What chumps! We'll moister de bums!" Therefore, a late change in the betting odds shows The Iowa as a 2-1 favorite.

The Iowan's crew, led by sorem arm Pitcher Turnbull, and his eight hunt-and-peck typists held a secret practice session early yesterday morning behind locked gates. Press and radio-men were barred while the "scribes" ran through fielding drills.

WSUI did manage to sneak one scout into the workout. His report said that the Iowan's success rested with Third Baseman Sam Gottsefeld, who is still 25 pounds over-weight.

A rumor from the downtown area said that Brooks was being followed last night by a wood-pecker after the sportscafter's wooden arm. The report was unconfirmed. Three top-notch umpires are on tap for the tilt. Bill Seward, sports editor of the Press Citizen, Herb Wilkinson, Iowa's former all-American basketball player, and Harold Yeglin, staff correspondent of the Des Moines Register, will do the officiating. Glasses and sun-glasses have been ordered for the trio.

Both the Iowan and WSUI wish to express their gratitude to Dr. Frederick Beebe, head of the intramural department, for the loan of the necessary bats, balls and bases.

UNPARALLELED PRAISE
from the HERALD TRIBUNE!

By Joe Phodna
"The King's Jester"
Italian producers have done a singularly fine job presenting the libretto of "Rigoletto" as a straight dramatic piece.

"The Scapella Film production called 'The King's Jester' is an unusual combination of acting, writing and direction. With its Verdi musical background, the film is a perfect example of the costume drama brought to life by skilled artists and technicians.

Although the conquests of the tetchous French king are explicated in detail, the film has such an overpowering moral lesson to offer that one is inclined to regard the philandering as a mere plot convenience.

For Michel Simon, that excellent French actor, in the title role dominates the action. No matter what direction the plot takes, the inescapable punishment which must follow the machinations of the hunchback is evident. Simon's every move is like a brush stroke filling in the lines of a horrible portrait completed in a terrifying climax. By now Simon has become a familiar figure to American movie-goers and there is no doubt he has now established himself here as an important box-office figure.

As the king Rossano Brazzi is superb. Given the opportunity he will no doubt achieve a feminine following in this country comparable to James Mason's. Four beautiful and competent Italian actresses have been chosen to play the king's mistresses. This reviewer's choice for the most fetching of the group is Tacha Baracca. As the cutthroat Juan de Lando is stolidly sinister.

Mario Bonnard, the director, hereby receives a vote for the best directorial job so far this year. He has managed the intimacies of the court with infinite finesse and a knowing eye for detail. The photography, credited to Ubaldo Arata, is excellent. The costumes and scenery are eye-opening. Here, indeed, is a picture that is completely satisfying in all its ramifications. It is adult entertainment from which Hollywood could learn many lessons.

SUI Council To Confer

Faculty Group Plans To Improve Contact With Administration

The recently established University council will hold its first regular meeting at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Council Chairman Lloyd A. Knowler said yesterday the meeting will be open to university faculty members, "any of whom may, if he chooses, present any matter appropriate for the consideration of the council."

The University council election was completed May 3, 1948, Knowler said, and it met to organize May 4, 1948. Knowler was elected chairman and Prof. L. K. Tunks was elected secretary.

The meeting Wednesday is the first the council intends to hold regularly.

The council was created because of the faculty's and President Hancher's wishes to improve communication between administration and faculty and to provide a means for expressing faculty desires to the administration, Knowler said.

Section 4 of the document establishing the council says:

"The council shall consider matters of university policy and discuss them with the president; Consider communications (oral or written) from members of the faculty for transmission to the president, and

"serve as a means for two-way communication—from the president to the faculty, and vice versa."

"The council may be used by any members of the academic staff as a means of communication with the president; initiate suggestions to the president or to the faculty, and appoint committees from the faculty to study problems as they arise.

"The existence of the council shall not preclude independent communications of members of the faculty with the president."

His Daughter's Keeper?

How far the campaign of fear will reach is illustrated by the voluntary resignation of a government official because his daughter is working for a Russian news agency. He wanted to save his boss embarrassment.

Commerce Secretary Sawyer neatly phrased the essential question: "Does a man of good qualities and record become unfit for public service because his daughter, against his wishes and to his great regret and dismay, has decided to associate herself with a Communist group?"

"To me the answer is clear—he is in no way disqualified." The fanatic witch hunt of guilt by association has thus more ridiculously than ever before exposed its bitter fangs. And we wonder why good men will not work for the government!

Student Interest in Politics—Hopeful Sign

Student interest in politics is one of the few bright shafts of hope in this, our "brave new world."

Over a cup of coffee, a between-class cigarette, or during one of those long evening discussions, talk now turns to politics, political candidates and world affairs, in a manner that is new to the average college campus.

Interest is high, and where parties and dances once held sway, ERP, Henry Wallace and the draft now have top priority.

Reasons for this change in attitude, this serious attention to national and world affairs, are probably many. But perhaps the most important reason may be found in the fact that today's students are acquainted with war.

War for them is a recent horror and one in which few went untouched. War is no longer just a history book term. As a result, this generation of students knows the urgency and the tremendous need to keep the peace—they no longer can, nor desire, to retreat to the ivory tower that was once college.

Another reason, and an encouraging one, is that professors have begun to realize that teaching is more than the imparting of a collection of facts. Professors who once felt naked when more than a foot from a textbook, have begun to look up and around and to make the world and its happenings a part of their textbook.

Education has long been a favorite United States creed. The fruits of that creed, under a governmental system which places emphasis upon the individual, should be a body of citizens who are intelligently and actively interested in government.

That education has finally begun to "pay-off" on its home ground—the college campus. That pay-off is full of promise for democracy.

The Symphony at the State University

(FROM THE DES MOINES REGISTER)

Clearly many in the audience felt that they had touched a high point in their musical experience in Iowa City Wednesday evening when Mahler's Third symphony was performed by the State University of Iowa orchestra.

There was even spontaneous cheering when the work came to its triumphant finale.

If more compelling music has ever been written, we have yet to hear it. Mahler, as interpreted by Prof. Philip Greeley Clapp and his student orchestra, booked no distractions.

Nothing But Music From beginning to end (and not withstanding the intermission, which came between the long first movement and the remaining five) it seemed that nothing existed for orchestra and audience except the music.

This musical miracle apparently was brought about by the combination of composer's and conductor's genius.

Gustav Mahler's work contains "everything but the kitchen sink." All sorts of unusual effects are obtained through a series of ingenious devices, all perfectly "legitimate" musically.

The long first movement is extremely "modern" for having been written before 1896. It seems to depict the struggle between Man and rude Nature.

One of the striking features of it is the play between brass and "deep" strings. The cellos, especially, fairly bite out their rough answer to the powerful challenge of an augmented brass section.

Part two begins with a delicate, flower-like second movement which Mahler once entitled, "What the flowers of the meadows told me." What the beats say in the third movement is definitely playful, and is pointed up by a post horn solo offstage.

Words by Nietzsche An unusual contralto solo with words by Nietzsche is featured in the fourth movement. It was sung beautifully at Iowa City by Faye von Draska.

Somehow, even the inclusion of two choruses in the fifth movement does not detract from the orchestral music itself.

Since the boy-choir called for by Mahler could not be provided, women's voices were used to accompany the lightly joyous women's chorus which carried out the theme, "What the angels told me." Although everything up to the last movement was beautifully or dramatically conceived and as well executed, the climax comes in the quiet finale, "What God told me."

Here is as beautiful "pure music" as exists, without a doubt. No one need apologize for Mahler's drawing on the best of such music by the best of composers. The use of theme which are strikingly similar to those of Beethoven, Wagner, and others, justifies itself through his sublime handling of them.

Conductor's Part

As for the conductor's part in the "miracle," it would not have been possible unless he were in rapport with the composer. Dr. Clapp has had the good fortune to hear Mahler conduct several times, even though he did not hear him perform the Third symphony. He feels that it is the conductor's first duty to present the music, insofar as possible, as the composer intended it to be heard.

But the main reason for this superb performance must surely lie in Dr. Clapp's complete faith in his student performers. He assumes that they have the ability to play great music well. They are inspired by his confidence. They play magnificently for him.

This Third symphony is neglected by professional orchestras in America because it involves expensive extra rehearsals. The work takes about one and one-half hours to perform, and probably eight extra practice sessions are required. The Iowa student orchestra prepared this work in four weeks, rehearsing twice a week.

The solo work within the orchestra was uniformly fine. Chorus fitted into the pattern perfectly.

To Des Moines?

There are tentative plans afoot to bring the university's student orchestra to Des Moines for a public concert next year. If this comes about, we hope that it will mean an opportunity for more music patrons to hear this one of the world's greatest symphonies, superbly performed.

The performance of the Mahler Third at Iowa City was considered important enough by the Bruckner Society of America that it sent its executive secretary from New York for the concert.

But, Can You Brush Off John L.?

Book Review

By JIM BECKER

Lost Boundaries by W. L. White. Harcourt, Brace and company. $1.50. Available at THE BOOKSHOP.

The plight of the American Negro is often defined in economic terms—in income, such as it is, or in housing, if you can call it that.

Similarly, the story of one democracy's failure (to date) may be laid bare in terms of political or social relations: the poll tax, segregation and discrimination.

But these approaches tell only part of the truth. They are inadequate in measuring and defining the frustration, sorrow and humiliation that is part of the Negro's daily diet.

W. L. White's story of the light-skinned Johnston family, whose forbears included both white and Negro, carries the emotional impact and power that the truth in other terms can only hint at.

Central character is Albert Johnston Jr. who, at the age of 16, discovers he is colored and is thrown headlong into that world of lost boundaries shared by an estimated 13 million cross-bred Americans.

It is a world of uncertainties, a world of indecision for Albert. There are the words and phrases that meant little before. They have new meaning now: "Gee, he could be colored." "He has the hair for it." "I bet you've some nigger in you." "Jig."

Americans' Failure To Vote Presents 'Unmistakable Challenge' to U. S. Educators

It is no secret to those persons who know the American voter best—those experts who do research into his political activity—that he is an apathetic individual when it comes to going to the polls.

Of the 79.8 million "potential" voters (those over 21 years of age) reported by the Bureau of Census in 1940, 30 million failed to vote. Forty million adults out of a potential of 88.6 million failed to vote in 1944. A total of 94.8 million voters is predicted for this November by the bureau.

These figures are the maximum figures, never obtained, because they contain large numbers of persons who have not satisfied requirements of citizenship, residence, registration, or payment of poll taxes.

The National Education association was interested in discovering the part education plays in the disregard, by so many persons, of this responsibility in a democratic government, and issued a study, entitled "The Voter and Nonvoter," which shows that inadequate education is one of the major causes of the failure of these millions of "potential" voters to use the ballot.

"Analysis of the characteristics of voters and nonvoters reveals a direct relationship between education and the act of voting, and presents an unmistakable challenge to American educators and legislators today," the association reports.

Eighty-one percent of those who had gone to college cast their ballots in 1940, as compared with 67 percent who had not gone beyond high school and 61 percent who had not gone beyond elementary school, according to the study. This is attributed to the fact that "the nonvoter is less informed than the voter and is, therefore, reluctant to participate politically."

The states with the smallest percent of voters are invariably among the state with the lowest educational attainment. For example, 10 of the 13 states in which the smallest percent of adults went to the polls in 1940 were among the 13 states ranking lowest in educational advancement

With imagination and insight, White tells of the breakdown of the boy who could scarcely comprehend his problem.

In desperation Albert turns to the Negro to help him. There too he finds the prejudice and those elusive boundaries beyond which he is not allowed to "pass." He discovers the deep pride that is its own barrier to freedom.

He learns, as many both white and colored refuse to learn, that conquering prejudice is a two-way proposition. To be solved the problem must be consciously examined and attacked from both sides of those boundaries.

Albert Johnston Jr.'s decision to which side of the boundaries he is to live is made in a classroom. There he decides to face the problem with no attempt to "pass" for something other than what he is—a cross-bred American.

If there is no moral thrown in the face of the reader, there is one obvious truth: Of most unsolved social and individual problems, the only ones impossible of solution are those we are unwilling to face.

The simplicity with which White writes lends force and strength in a measure far disproportionate to the size of this brief novel. White is the author of "Queens Die Proudly," "Report on the Russians," and "Report on the Germans," among others.

These states were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Iowa was one of the states showing up favorably in the study, with between 75 and 85 percent of its "potential" voters going to the polls.

"The need, by the American people of more and better schooling, and particularly on current political, social, and economic questions" is thus demonstrated, the study says.

Present inequalities in educational opportunity can be alleviated, according to the study, only when the federal government assumes its "fair share" of the cost of public education—"as a direct investment in our human resources, and an ultimate investment in our representative form of government, bringing more effective use of the ballot and a strengthening of our democratic processes."

The senate recently passed the federal aid to education bill by a vote of 58 to 22. The corresponding bill is pending in the house of representatives, where it also has strong bi-partisan support.

The Psychologist's Role in Religion

He Studies Its Past To Determine Its Future

(The following article first appeared in Religious Education for March-April, 1948—The Editor.) By DEAN EMERITUS CARL E. SEASHORE Graduate College, University of Iowa

The practice of religion is a phenomenon in nature and as such is the object of scientific description and explanation. Such an account constitutes a natural history of religion.

This natural history draws upon a great many material sciences: such as anthropology, physiology, hygiene, and geography; and, among mental sciences, psychiatry, ethics, sociology, logic, and esthetics.

It has come to be recognized as a function of psychology to bring all available scientific, historical, literary, and common-sense facts into a unity for the purpose of describing religious experience and religious behavior, quite apart from their theological and philosophical implications. This inceptive science we call the psychology of religion.

In this approach to religion, the psychologist proceeds in the same manner that the botanist proceeds in his study of plants. The botanist collects adequate samplings of particular plants from different parts of the earth. As information about them grows, he classifies them systematically.

In that branch of botany which is called ecology he studies the relation of plants to their environment and the laws of survival. He traces the origin and evolution of species, evaluates their possible uses, and experiments in plant breeding and plant improvement.

Just so that the psychologist proceeds in examining the natural phenomena of religious experience and religious behavior. He is concerned with all religion—good, bad, and indifferent.

He analyzes religious diseases and religious health. He attempts to classify types of religion at all culture-levels. He traces their origin; their survival values; their relation to environment; their relation to progress of knowledge and culture. He makes a critical analysis of the values that religion serves in the interest of health, morality, society, truth, goodness, and beauty.

On the basis of such facts he attempts to show why certain types of religion have failed. He considers substitutes for religion. On the basis of established facts in the theory of religion as a permanent urge and drive in human nature, he even attempts to predict future trends in the process of the evolution of religious experience and religious behavior.

This is a stupendous undertaking, of which we are seeing the merest beginnings at the present time.

When religion was regarded primarily as the art of saving souls for the future life, there was but little interest in science. But in modern times, when religion has come to bear more specifically upon the function of religion in our daily life upon this earth, the demand for a scientific approach is made imperative.

Therefore, the science of religion is coming to play a very important role in the development of religious education, forms of worship, functions, and services.

The psychology of religion, like all psychology, can be divided into the pure and the applied. It may be experimental or theoretical. It may be clinical, psychiatric, statistical, or educational. It may be approached from the point of view of any and all the prevailing schools of psychology.

Thus progressive churches are conducting religious clinics. Psychiatrists are using and evaluating the religious behavior in the improvement of mental health. Countless more or less superficial statistical studies are made to determine present conditions and tendencies.

The Bible is revised in the light of historical and linguistic study. Attempts are being made to put religious instruction on a basis equal to that of secular instruction. Religious social case workers are employed. Efforts are made to establish the brotherhood of mankind.

All of these activities may be approached in a scientific attitude and with some degree of competence in a scientific understanding of the situation.

Thus, the church has taken an attitude toward the development of world peace; attempts are made to analyze various attitudes of religious and social rebellion among modern youth psychologically.

Millions of dollars and the best efforts of nationally recognized leaders are devoted to this psychological analysis of the youth problem. In all of these, the religious promoter sends forth a cry for help in the search for psychological facts, psychological methods of procedure, psychological values.

It is not within my competence to tell all that can and should be done by psychology in religion; nor have I the right to promise much at the present stage. I have no professional interest in seeking adherents to psychology.

The deeper insight the psychologist has within his own field, the more he knows, the more skillful he becomes in putting questions to nature, the more he realizes the littleness of what is in comparison with what can be or ought to be done psychologically.

It is an observable fact that when a scientific fact becomes common property it becomes a matter of common sense.

Thus theoretical science discovered electricity and practical science invented a way of turning on a light by pressing a button. But the person in this country today who does not press a button to turn on his electric light lacks common sense.

This is a very significant fact in the science of religion. The countless and marvelous revelations about the evolution of religion were once matters of abstruse science, often regarded as anti-religious; but the religious person in America today who has a common school education accepts the theory of evolution as a matter of common sense observation.

Indeed, that is the goal toward which science always works: namely, to make a scientific fact simple, understandable, and useful for the common man on a large scale. Science, at first difficult and abstruse, becomes a working tool in the daily activities of life. It develops insight into hope, trust, recognition of mystery, and the witness of personal experience in the practice of religion.

Theological schools throughout the world are changing their themes and purposes on the basis of the assumption that religion as a mode of life functions in accordance with the natural law.

Thus, the church tends to become a social institution, an institution for community service, an association for the cultivation of fellowship among kindred spirits.

Statesmen of the world, religious leaders, and thinking youth in general, see in the vitalizing of religion of the good life a means of reshaping our toppling civilization in the present crisis.

In face of such bewildering masses of exhibition of human nature, the psychologist even adds to the confusion by recognizing genuine religious values in currently discredited practices: such as the worship of idols, of the sun, of tribal gods, and of sacred animals as steps in the evolution of man; and in some cases he points out how such practices were appropriate to the culture-level of the people and had religious value.

Again, he adds to the confusion by pointing out the weakness or error in dominant religious movements of the day.

When I say that psychology does this, I should say rather that the scientists in all their realms contribute pro and con, and that the preacher and religious layman who come under the influence of modern knowledge are the banner-bearers.

Thus, as a psychologist, I would say that, while these problems are all distinctly psychological, the workers in the field are the workers in the specific sciences, the philosophers, the religious leaders, and the religious worshippers in general who attempt to make religion reasonable.

To the student of religion there are three broad avenues of approach; namely, theology, philosophy, and science, each essential to the understanding of the other. Let each of the adherents to one of these respect its limitations and define its realm sympathetically.

SUI Organizations Women's Association

(This is the 13th of a series of articles dealing with university organizations. Others will appear on this page from time to time—The Editor.)

By BEVERLY OLTMAN If you're an undergraduate woman in the college of liberal arts, commerce or pharmacy, you're automatically a member of the University Women's Association—the largest women's organization on campus.

The women at the University of Iowa aren't on the "outside looking in" at student government, student life and administration. The UWA—which began in 1920 as the Womens league—is an important group and enables women students to voice their gripes, suggestions and praise, and to carry out worthwhile projects.

The six-fold purpose of the UWA, as stated in its constitution, are:

- 1. To further in every way the spirit of unity and fellowship among the women of the university.
- 2. To enrich each individual's college experience.
- 3. To promote high scholarship.
- 4. To develop leadership.
- 5. To be of service to the university.
- 6. To act as the coordinating body of all women's organizations.

The governing council is composed of the executive officers, project chairmen, freshman UWA council president and representatives from the Independent Town Women's association, Panhellenic, Judiciary board, Currier and Westlawn, Creston, Westlawn.

Elaine Lenney, Cleveland, has been president of the organization this year. She presided at both the meetings of the executive board and the council, both of which meet once each week. Joan Gavronsky, Centerville, was elected as the 1948-49 president by university women during all-campus elections.

Serving as vice-president this year has been Betty Dickinson, Newton. It was her job to assist the president in planning and guiding the work of the association, and to organize the responsibility for a freshmen council subsidiary to the general council. Marian Rees, Carroll, has been president of the freshman UWA council. Jaelyn Fitch, Clinton, who was the losing UWA presidential candidate, will act as vice-president next year.

Other executive officers for this year have been Patricia Fox, Charles City, secretary; Ginger McDonald, Lima, Ohio, treasurer, and Joan Gordon, Moline, Ill., sophomore representative. Replacing them for next year will be Pat Lounsbury, Des Moines, secretary; Maxine Erickson, Boone, treasurer, and Marian Rees, sophomore representative.

These officers were elected by the popular vote of undergraduate women. The candidates are nominated by a committee of retiring seniors from the council, and are required to have had a gradepoint average of 2.5 the previous semester.

Pvt. Finley was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Finley, route 1. Funeral services will be held at the Oathout Funeral home.

City To Consider Bond Issue

A public hearing for issuance of $276,000 in bonds for the Benton street bridge will be the main order of business in tomorrow night's city council meeting.

If there are objections to the bond issue, they must be on file in writing with the city clerk before tomorrow night. Objections from five or more persons will mean proceedings of the hearing will be certified to the state appeal board.

Then no further action will be taken until the board communicates with the city.

However, if there are no objections, the city will receive bids on the bonds until June 1. The council plans to act on the bids that night.

A public hearing will also be held on the rock program for streets in east Iowa City. This program will cost an estimated $12,317.

Bids on sidewalk improvements will be opened tomorrow afternoon and will be acted upon at the council meeting.

Alderman William Grandrath said a paving program to cover about 15 blocks will also be introduced at the meeting.

Iowa City Craft Guild To Hear Silversmith

Raoul Delmare, G. Emporia, Kansas, will address a general meeting of the Iowa City Craft guild Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the social room of the women's gymnasium. He will speak on "Silversmithing and Jewelry."

Delmare was recently chosen one of 12 teachers in the United States to attend the annual national silversmithing workshop at the Rhode Island School of Design this summer. He formerly taught arts and crafts at Emporia State Teachers college, Emporia, Kansas.

Dean Tells How To Pick Major

 Says Interest Should Motivate Students ***

By CHUCK KROUSE
Having trouble deciding upon a college major?

Dean Earl J. McGrath of the college of liberal arts offered a few suggestions in a recent interview.

Said the dean, "If I were picking a major, I would lay aside all other considerations . . . and take something I liked."

McGrath doesn't believe outside influences (parents longing for a doctor in the family, or eager friend's suggestions) should have anything to do with this "important business."

"Genuine interest" comes first, he said. He cautioned students not to "kid themselves" into choosing a field they dislike because they think they "ought to."

"Success rests on motivation," he said, and motivation comes through an active, honest interest. How can you tell what you like?

Psychological aptitude tests are "excellent indicators" in many cases, according to the dean. He doesn't believe a person can determine what he really likes until he has had a taste of several different fields.

"All college programs should give students an opportunity to find their interests," he said.

He suggested student pay attention to their high school records. Here he offered a word of warning. For example, if a person has had poor grades in math and science in high school, he should think twice before entering medicine.

McGrath, who was on President Truman's committee on higher education, suggested after deciding upon a major, a student should contact fairly old grads active in the field. They will have sound information on what courses should be taken, what is an asset in the profession.

Although McGrath says a major is important, he believes it is a "misconception" that students should concentrate on "learning all there is about one subject."

Such people are "inflexible," he said. The dean emphasized that it is "better to take a variety of courses" in connection with a major. He gave two reasons:

1. Approximately 50 percent of college grads end up in work they did not train for in school.

2. There is no evidence to show that the highly specialized person is most successful.

Pick Four Students For NSA Congress

Four university students were named yesterday to represent SUI at the national congress of the National student association in Madison, Wis., Aug. 23-28.

Dale S. Bingham and Ruby L. Scott will act as delegates for the local NSA organization. Richard A. Dice and William L. Showers were named as alternates.

Jean S. Gallaher and Thomas Gray were chosen as Student council delegates by that group. Evan E. Hultman and Valerie Dierks will serve as alternates.

The congress will be made up of 10 workshops in which students will discuss "Problems of Student

Loan Drive Lags; State Director Says Iowa Below Quota

Johnson county has reached 38.35 percent of its quota in the Iowa Security Loan drive, Roger F. Warin, state director of the savings bonds division, said yesterday.

The Johnson county quota is $1,442,536. Total sales of the U.S. savings bonds to date are $553,304. The state of Iowa as a whole has reached 30.48 percent of the $100,000,000 Iowa quota.

Warin said Iowa is six percent below the point necessary by this date on the basis of the treasury department's anticipated sales.

"This is not discouraging, however," Warin said, "since the counties are just now getting fully organized, and there are still seven weeks before the drive ends June 30."

Warin said the leading counties in the bond drive are Grundy with 50.84 percent of the quota, Sioux with 49.30 percent, Pocahontas with 48.33 percent, Mills with 45.09 percent, Mitchell with 43.90 percent, Floyd with 41.34 percent, Bremer with 41.12 percent and Carroll with 41.07 percent. Johnson county is 12th on the list.

Life on Campus," Miss Scott explained. Delegates are expected to exchange ideas on student government and discuss national and international subjects as they relate to universities and colleges.

The Student council will pay each representative's expenses, Miss Scott said.

Bill Martin has learned the lesson that every spot in Iowa isn't quite as casual as his own Clear Lake. Seems Bill went into a local cleaning establishment to have his tux trousers let down and pressed. It was on a hot afternoon and he was ready to go to the quarries swimming, so he just put his trousers over his swimming trunks. Several ladies working at the cleaners didn't see Bill come in with just his trunks on and pull his tux trousers over them so as he started to leave, he took off his trousers to leave them to be pressed. Just then the ladies turned around . . . Bill was just a bit red to say nothing of the shocked women!
