The alienation of affections suit against Walter and Mary Siamak, operators of the Moonlight Gardens night club, charged they "maliciously and deliberately" enticed Mrs. Siemen away from her husband and two small children.

Truman Hits, Signs GOP 'Inflation' Bill

WASHINGTON—President Truman signed the Republican anti-inflation bill yesterday, but blasted congress in strong terms for making such a "feeble response" to his demands for broader powers.

He said the credit control measure, which was the only part of his eight-point anti-inflation program enacted by the recent special session of congress, "is but a tiny fraction of what we need."

West Snubs Danube Treaty Draft Group; East Bloc Continues

BELGRADE, YUGOSLOVIA (UP)—United States, British and French delegates to the Danube river conference refused yesterday to take part in the work of the drafting committee which will draw up a new treaty to replace that of 1921.

American ambassador to Belgrade Cavendish Cannon, explaining the western stand, said the committee's work will consist merely of placing three or four amendments in their correct order.

Cannon implied the conference, dominated by eastern European states, will adopt almost in its entirety the draft treaty proposed by the Soviet Union.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, who is directing the Soviet Bloc strategy here, declared, "we will continue without the United States." He said the attitude of the western powers was not justified.

Chief British delegate Sir Charles Peake, who was serving as conference chairman yesterday, eventually declared the drafting committee constituted. It consists of representatives of the Soviet Union, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

The British delegate also proposed an amendment providing for the new Danube river commission to report periodically to the United Nations.

Iowan Adds UP News Coverage

The Daily Iowan today becomes probably the only daily newspaper published by students to carry news dispatches from two top wire services.

Stories filed over the leased wire facilities of the United Press appear in this morning's Daily Iowan.

The additional news service will supplement coverage of the day's events by the news wire and Wirephoto of The Associated Press.

The United Press maintains a large staff, covering local, national and international events. Included in the organization's list of correspondents are Henry Shapiro in Moscow, Robert C. Miller in Palestine, Edward M. Korry at the United Nations conferences, Walter Rundle in Berlin and Stan Opatowsky, a sportswriter for the New York bureau.

Envoys Leave Kremlin Talks Grim, Taciturn

By HENRY SHAPIRO
MOSCOW (UP)—The three western envoys emerged grim and taciturn from a record three hour and 40 minute session last night with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

The Soviet press had prefaced the meeting with a dispatch blaming the United States in advance for the possible failure of the current "peace" talks, but there was no positive indication that the meetings were at an end.

(Unofficial sources, in Paris said that last night's meeting would probably be the last before a final session with Molotov and Soviet Premier Josef Stalin.)

U.S. Ambassador W. Bedell Smith, French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau and special British envoy Frank Roberts went into the Kremlin at 5:45 p.m. (Moscow time). Their meeting with Molotov began 15 minutes later.

When they emerged at 9:40 p.m., the three envoys appeared tired and unsmiling, in contrast to an air of cheerful confidence which they had displayed after previous meetings. They went at once to the British embassy—rather than the U.S. embassy—as in the past—to prepare their reports.

Under pressure, Smith finally said "no comment" and strode into the embassy.

Roberts volunteered the statement: "It was our usual meeting with Molotov and Smirnov. No comment."
(Andrei Smirnov is the Soviet Foreign office's German expert.)

Vladimir Pavlov, crack government linguist, acted as official interpreter at the meeting.

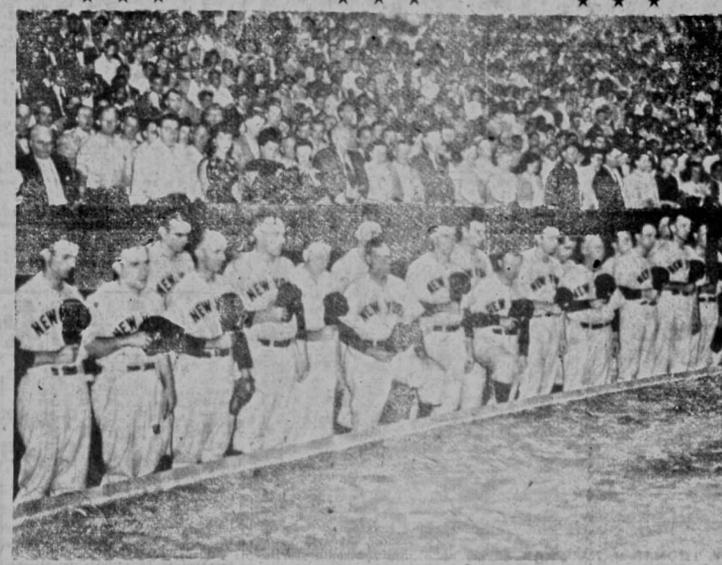

Some observers thought the fact that Stalin did not attend last night's meeting was an indication that at least one more session could be anticipated.

Second Blast Jars Reno As First Is Investigated

RENO, NEV. (AP)—Another Reno fire and explosion sent four more men to hospitals yesterday while investigators probed downtown rubble for the cause of Sunday's disastrous blast.

Five men were killed and more than 130 injured in Saturday's fire and subsequent explosion.

Fire broke out yesterday at the Ransome company while three employees were filling steel cylinders with gas.

MOURN THE BABE'S DEATH—New York Yankee players stood in their dugout and were joined by thousands of fans in a minute of silent prayer following Babe Ruth's death last night. The scene is at the Polo Grounds in New York City where the Yankees played an exhibition game with the New York Giants. The mighty home run king, idolized by Americans young and old, died at 6:01 p.m. (Iowa time) last night after an illness of more than two years.

Claims Russ Ordered Purge In German Communist Party

BERLIN—The German language newspaper Montag Echo said yesterday Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky made a recent secret trip to Berlin to order a purge of the German Communist party, including high government officials and police.

Montag Echo is published in the western sector and is the organ of the Liberal Democratic party.

It said Vishinsky ordered the Communist party's reorganization into a tight fighting unit, not unlike prewar European Communist parties. No western observer could confirm his visit here. Vishinsky is now in Belgrade, attending the Danube conference.

Vishinsky also ordered an end to the policy of cooperation with non-Communist groups, the newspaper said. It added that with Vishinsky's trip Moscow is bypassing Marshal V. D. Sokolovsky, Russian commander in Germany.

The new chief is said to be Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, defender of Stalingrad, who arrived in Germany two months ago.

The Liberal Democratic newspaper also said the Communists had prepared a purge list of "hundreds of thousands" of anti-Communists upon whom they will take revenge if the western Allies quit Berlin.

"The communist spy system has worked its way into industrial workers' councils, into commerce, into postal and telegraph systems of western Berlin, and there makes systematic preparation for 'X-day'—the day the Communists hope the western Allies will leave Berlin," the newspaper said.

The newspaper appealed again to the western powers not to negotiate "a new Munich" in the four-power Moscow talks.

Says Russ Teacher Attempted Suicide

By LUCIEN CARR
NEW YORK (UP)—Russian consul-general Jacob Lomakin said last night that Mrs. Oksana S. Kosenkina was attempting to take her own life when she leaped from a window of his consulate and blamed "white guard bandits," New York police and courts, and the American press and radio.

In the consulate, where he took her after the "rescue," all necessary measures for restoring her health and peace of mind were taken. . . she gradually began to recover from the horrors lived through by her and more, she even expressed her will to work in the consulate office while waiting to go back to her motherland.

"The only reason which irritated and depressed her were the increased, in the last days, continuous flow of hostile and malicious fabrications of the U.S. press and radio concerning the future of Mrs. Kosenkina, and the threats of the U.S. police and courts through the press and radio that she would be called by force to the American court," the statement continued.

Thomas Committee Queries Alger Hiss In Search of 'Truth'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The house un-American activities committee investigating reports of Communist spies in the government quizzed Alger Hiss for three hours yesterday and reported it still doesn't know whether he or his accuser is telling the truth.

Hiss, former state department official, has been accused by Whitaker Chambers, an avowed ex-Communist, of being a member of an "elite" Communist movement in Washington in the early 1930's. Hiss has denied it and testified that he never knew Chambers.

Hiss was questioned in private yesterday.

The committee set August 25 for Hiss and Chambers to come face to face with their contrary stories. Whether this session will be open to the public has not been decided, Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R-NJ), told reporters.

Meanwhile, the committee's spy investigation will continue through subcommittees, with public hearings to be resumed September 7.

Since the original Chambers accusation and the Hiss denial under oath in public hearing, the committee has questioned both men behind closed doors.

After Hiss' turn yesterday he declined to comment to reporters but committee Chairman Thomas made this statement: "From the testimony of the two witnesses it is impossible at this point to tell which one is telling the truth. The committee is taking every step to determine the true facts. The committee will have the investigative staff check on every possible corroborative detail, this to be implemented by daily executive sessions of two subcommittees meeting in Washington and other places."

The committee set August 25 for Hiss and Chambers to come face to face with their contrary stories. Whether this session will be open to the public has not been decided, Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R-NJ), told reporters.

Ban Austrian Papers

VIENNA (UP)—A ministry of interior spokesman said yesterday that eight daily and weekly publications of Austria's two non-Communist parties had been banned in the Soviet zone for two months by Soviet authorities. He said no reason was given.

Judge Pushes Communist Case

NEW YORK (UP)—Federal Judge Harold Medina refused yesterday to extend until after the November elections the case of 12 key Communists indicted for plotting to overthrow the government.

The Communists had asked an extension from Aug. 23 to Nov. 23 to file motions questioning the constitutionality of the Smith act, under which they were indicted. Medina granted an extension until Sept. 27, but refused to postpone the case until after the elections.

U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohy said undue delay would "permit the defendants to continue the very things they are charged in the indictments with doing."

"If we let them do that sort of thing they will destroy the government," Medina said. "I think the case is important to the defendants but the interests of the government and the people are a little more important than the interests of the defendants."
"No, they merely want to wait until they get everything set," Medina commented. "Then the acts will come. The quicker this case gets disposed of with finality, the better for all concerned."

53-Year-Old Home Run King Succumbs in Sudden Relapse

NEW YORK (AP)—Babe Ruth, who rose from the obscurity of an orphan to become one of baseball's immortals, died last night of cancer.

The once-mighty Yankee slugger, his frame and strength weakened by a long and painful illness, lapsed into unconsciousness shortly before death came to him—peacefully.

He was 53 years old.

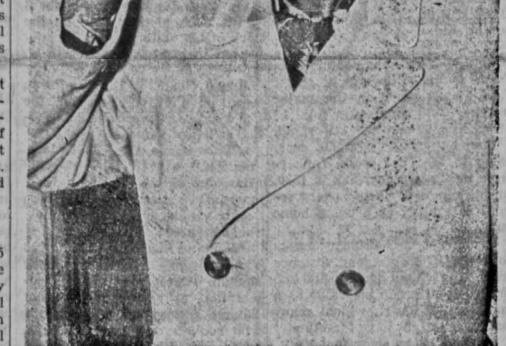

"The Babe," said a Catholic priest at the bedside of the long-time home run king, "died a beautiful death."

"He said his prayers," the priest added, "and lapsed into a sleep—and he died in his sleep."
Death came to one of baseball's brightest stars at 6:01 p.m. (Iowa time) in New York City's Memorial hospital center for cancer and allied diseases.

At the end of Ruth's prayers, the priest, the Rev. Thomas H. Kaufman of the St. Catherine of Siena parish, administered the last rites of the Catholic church.

It was the Catholic church which took over the training of George Herman Ruth when he was seven. Six years after Ruth entered the orphanage his mother died.

'Greatest Player of Them All,' Barrow's Tribute to the Babe

LARCHMONT, N. Y. (UP)—Elderly Edward G. Barrow, the former president of the New York Yankees who converted Babe Ruth from a southpaw pitcher into the all-time home run king, almost collapsed last night when informed that the great player had died.

"Oh my God," he said. "I just can't believe it. I am terribly shocked and terribly sorry. He was certainly the greatest player of them all. This is a tremendous personal loss to me and an even greater loss to all America."

Barrow's last reunion with Ruth was June 13 at Yankee stadium when all of the players on the 1923 world championship Yankee team

Truman Condolences To Wife of Bambino

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman, advised of the death of Babe Ruth, arranged last night to send a message of condolence to Mrs. Ruth.

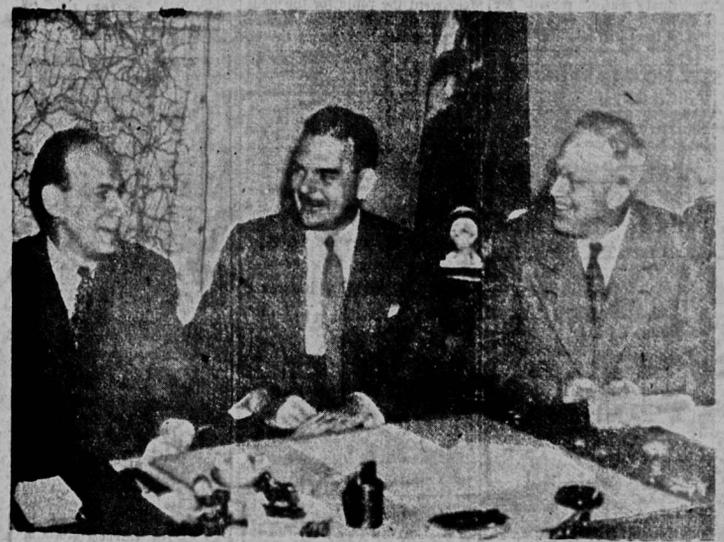

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, said the President had been informed of the baseball star's death not long after it occurred.

The President's message to Mrs. Ruth will not be made public here.

The White House called the hospital in New York last week, at Mr. Truman's request, to inquire how Ruth was getting along.

Barrow, now past 80, had many differences with Ruth, mostly over the slugger's fabulous salary and his nonchalance of training rules. But beneath the bickering both admitted to a deep personal friendship.

was a last tribute from the youngsters who, throughout the world, had idolized the Babe.

The final tribute, typical of the many which had come from Ruth's millions of admirers, was a wreath of 37 orchids, fashioned in the shape of an Hawaiian lei.

With the wreath came a message from Hawaiian school children who sent their "best wishes for speedy recovery to our all-time baseball favorite."

The flowers were shown to Ruth before he became unconscious. He said nothing.

Throughout Ruth's long illness of nearly two years, the exact nature of his sickness never had been disclosed. But last night, Dr. Hayes Martin, the Babe's personal physician, announced that Ruth's death was caused by cancer.

Throughout the day Ruth's condition had grown steadily worse. His fever had soared, and he had been unable to take nourishment. Yet only the previous day he had surprised everyone by leaving his bed and sitting in a nearby easy chair for a 20-minute visit with relatives and intimate friends.

Ruth had been on the critical list since Wednesday. Much of the time since then his wife, Claire, and other relatives had been at the hospital with him.

At the bedside when Ruth died were his physician, the priest, another physician, Dr. Loton Rasmussen, and two male nurses, Frank Delaney and George Moser.

Among the relatives at the hospital were his wife, his two adopted daughters, Mrs. Daniel Sullivan of New York and Mrs. Richard Flanders, of North Conway, N. H.; his sister, Mrs. Wilbur Moberly of Baltimore, and two long-time intimate friends, James Chapman and J. Paul Carey.

Outside the hospital at the time of Ruth's death were more than a hundred children. They had gathered in the afternoon. When word of his death came, they moved away quietly—speaking in hushed tones.

Ruth entered the hospital last June for further treatment of his illness. He was wan and in almost constant pain from what was described as a throat ailment. The following month, however, July 26, he left his sick bed to attend the world premier of "The Babe Ruth Story," a movie based on his life.

Last night, Father Kaufman was asked if Ruth knew he was dying and he said: "The Babe has been prepared since July 21 for his death."

Set 76 Records
In his 22 years in the major leagues, Ruth amassed a total of 76 records, 62 of which still stand. The battering Bambino, who came to the New York Yankees from the Boston Red Sox in 1920, at one time held nearly every record in the art of blasting home runs.

In addition, he had many marks in runs batted in, long distance hitting other than homers, and one or two to attest to his value as a southpaw pitcher, which many present-day fans have forgotten. Record books show that Ruth clubbed a total of 708 home runs in regular season games during his 21 years in the American league. He hit six more in two months of the 1935 season with the Boston Braves of the National league.

To this record figure of 714 homers may be added the 15 he blasted in ten World Series, but which are not included in his lifetime total.

The last flash of his greatness was on May 25, 1935, at Pittsburgh when the Babe, then closing out his illustrious career with the Braves, cracked three four-baggers in successive times at bat.

Most World Series
Ruth participated in more World Series than any other player—three with the Red Sox and seven with the Yankees. When Ruth hung up the then astounding record of 28 home runs in 1919, it brought about his purchase by Col. Jacob Ruppert and Col. Til Huston, then the owners of the Yankees.

That season he astonished the baseball world by driving 54 homers, and the next year beat that mark with 59 to help the Yankees to their first pennant.

It was not until 1927 that he set the major record for homers which still stands, 60. He followed with 54 in 1928, and after that gradually slowed down. In 11 of the years he was with the Yankees, he made 40 or more homers.

On 70 occasions in his career he made two homers in a single game and on four times he slammed three in a game, twice in World Series competition. In 16 occasions, he walloped home runs with the bases full, being topped only by Lou Gehrig in that department.

Ended Career in 1935
Ruth was released by the Yankees in 1934 and wound up his playing career the following year in a brief, two-month stint with the Boston Braves.

Although he was mentioned often in succeeding years as a likely candidate for various managerial

'The Babe Died a Beautiful Death'

REV. THOMAS H. KAUFMAN (right), who administered last rites to Babe Ruth, tells youngsters of the Babe's death as he leaves Memorial hospital in New York City last night. Rev. Kaufman said, "The Babe died a beautiful death. He said his prayers and lapsed into a sleep and he died in his sleep."

berths, the offer of a job that would have made Ruth's life complete never came.

One of five children of a Baltimore butcher, Babe was born George Herman Ruth Jr., Feb. 6, 1895.

Ruth's mother died when he was 13 and his father lived only long enough to see Babe reach his second year in the major leagues.

When he was seven years old, Ruth's parents placed him in St. Mary's industrial school at Baltimore, run by a group of Catholic brothers.

He was trained to be a tailor and a shirt maker and remained at the school, off and on, until 1912, when he entered baseball as a career.

Greatest Tribute
One of the greatest tributes to the popular star came last June 13, when the Yankees celebrated the silver anniversary of their big Bronx stadium, built with money the Babe helped pull through the gate.

On that day the famous No. 3 which Ruth always wore on the back of his uniform was officially retired in his honor, never to be worn again by a member of a Yankee team. His uniform, worn on that occasion for the last time, was presented to baseball's Hall of Fame.

"Babe is one of baseball's immortals," said President Will Harridge of the American league in his speech that day. "His contributions to the game cannot be measured."

All living members of the 1923 Yankee team—first to play in the stadium—were present for the celebration, as were stars of other Yankee teams and all the fans who could crowd into the huge, triple-decked ballpark.

The Babe himself, leaning heavily on a bat and with tears streaming down his pain-wracked face, made only a short talk. But into it he packed all the pride and happiness that went with his memories of the game and the tribute he was being shown.

Routine Checkup in 1946
The first indication that the Babe's health was failing came Nov. 26, 1946, when he entered French hospital here for what was considered a routine checkup.

On the following Jan. 6 he underwent a serious operation on his neck for "relief of intractable pain" after consultations in which six specialists participated. Ever since his famous "stomach ache" of 1925, during the spring training season, the Babe had been a frequent visitor to hospitals, but always before he was able to shake off the ailment and return to active life.

When he was admitted to French hospital in 1946, it was announced that the moon-faced slugger was there only for "observation," but it was announced later that he was suffering from a sinus infection.

On Dec. 15, 1946, his personal physician said Ruth's release would be delayed because he had a "severe headache." The disclosure on Jan. 5, 1947, that a "serious" operation would be performed the next day came as a shock to the thousands of friends and admirers of the home run king.

Hospital officials said he came through the two-hour operation in "satisfactory" condition. But he remained in the hospital another three months before being released, his once robust frame was wasted to a mere shell.

In the following months he vacationed in Florida, took a job as a consultant to the Ford Motor company in connection with the American Legion Junior baseball program and made frequent public appearances.

But he returned to the hospital periodically, always coming out smiling, apparently rested although continually in pain.

Kaisershot Ineligible To Register This Fall

Quentin (Bud) Kaisershot, University of Iowa fullback, will not be allowed to register in the university this fall, it was announced yesterday by Dean Earl J. McGrath of the college of liberal arts.

McGrath termed Kaisershot's ineligibility as "scholastic deficiency." Kaisershot had been a member of the Iowa squad for the past two years and Dr. Eddie Anderson, Hawkeye head coach, had counted on him for heavy duty this fall.

The youthful Milwaukee, Wis., athlete entered the university in the fall of 1946 after having starred in football, basketball, track and gymnastics at North Division high school in Milwaukee. He received all-state mention in football.

Kaisershot was a halfback in 1946 and 1947 but an early season leg injury hampered him most of last year. He was converted to a fullback in last spring's drills and Coach Anderson had planned on using him in that position next season.

Kaisershot had announced following the eight-week summer session that he was ineligible. However, no confirmation came from the university until McGrath's statement yesterday. It was believed that Kaisershot had not failed any subjects during the summer course but his overall grade point average was too low for re-admittance.

Running as a halfback last season the 195-pounder gained an average of 4.7 yards in 33 trials. He started the UCLA and Illinois games but an injury to his right leg in the latter contest kept him out of the lineup for the majority of the season.

Moose Beat CR Team On Drake's 4-Hitter
A four bagger with two men on base by Warren Conrad in the first frame was the big blow of the game as the Iowa City Moose baseball team downed the Iowa Manufacturing Co. of Cedar Rapids 7-2 on the City park field Sunday.

The locals scored four more runs in the seventh on five hits. Dick Drake gave up only four hits as the Moose sailed to their thirteenth victory against four losses.

Taking Time Out

Babe Ruth's Name Will Never Die

The mighty Babe Ruth has passed away. Although many of the younger generation never saw him play, they have heard from their fathers and grandfathers of the great feats accomplished by the Sultan of Swat.

Cancer finally caught up with the man who revolutionized baseball in its most trying period and made it, in later years, our national pastime. The name of George Herman (Babe) Ruth will never die in the hearts of Americans.

The color of his name and the home run which he made so famous brought millions of fans through the turnstiles of major league ball parks to see him and him alone.

Ruth started his amazing career as a pitcher with the Boston Red Sox in 1915. His pitching helped guide them to the American league pennant that year and again in 1916 and 1918. During the 1916 series and carrying over to the 1918 championship playoff, the Bambino pitched 29 successive scoreless innings.

Ruth held in all, 76 major records. His most famous mark, and one which will stand for many years to come, was his 60 home runs in one season, accomplished in 1927. The Babe's lifetime record of 714 circuit smashes is probably a feat which no other major league baseball player will ever realize.

Ruth was born George Herman Gerhardt, son of a butcher, in Baltimore. His early history in the slum districts and his life in an orphanage are legendary to sports-loving Americans. It was at the orphanage that he changed his name to Ruth and first began to blossom into a ball player.

He spent the season of 1914 with the Baltimore Orioles, then was sold to the Boston Red Sox in 1915. The Sox sold him to the New York Yankees in 1920 for $125,000 and several players. He more than repaid that purchase price with his big bat.

But in 1919 baseball was rocked by the "Black Sox" scandal, the year six Chicago White Sox players "sold out" the world series to the Cincinnati Reds. The future of baseball was further threatened by the death of Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, as a result of being hit by a pitched ball.

But in 1920 along came Ruth and his home run bat to pull baseball out of the doldrums, following the darkest period in the national pastime's history. With the Yankees of 1920 the Babe turned into an outfielder and cracked the then unbelievable total of 54 home runs. The diamond public quickly forgot the "Black Sox" scandal as Ruth continued his rampage the following year with 59 homers.

Edward G. Barrow, who managed the Red Sox during Ruth's stay in Boston and moved on to the Yankees to become the president of that organization, once said:

"There never has been anybody like Ruth and there never will be—and not only for his home run feats, either. The Babe was a wonderful, natural, versatile ball player. He could do everything on the diamond and do it well. He had what is called baseball brains. He never made a mistake on the ball field. He knew instinctively just what to do."

Typical of Ruth's happy-go-lucky life was this comment made following his retirement. "Shucks," he said, "I could have hit a 600 lifetime average easy. But I would have had to hit singles. The people were paying to see me hit home runs."

Fate of UN's Palestine Truce Hinges on 4-Day Test Period

TEL AVIV, ISRAEL (UP)—The United Nations' tottering month-old Palestine truce will be made or broken in the next 100 hours, an Israeli army spokesman said yesterday. Moshe Perlman specified the four-day test period as fighting in Jerusalem increased and Tel Aviv had its first air raid alert since the truce began July 18.

There is virtually no truce in Jerusalem, Perlman told a news conference.

He said Israel does not consider itself bound by UN mediator Count Folke Bernadotte's ruling that truce violations by one party should not be returned by the other.

Asked how Bernadotte's stock stands in Israel, Perlman replied: "The count is not on our stock exchange. He is not our baby, but a United Nations child."

An air raid alarm sent Tel Aviv residents scurrying into shelters after a hostile plane reportedly was sighted. The all-clear was sounded a few minutes later.

Israeli reports from Jerusalem said Jewish quarters were being shelled continuously from Arab hilltop positions—northeast and south of the city.

Perlman declared the Jews will not take Arab "impertinence" much longer. He charged the Arabs "ignore even the basic principle of the truce and go on occupying new strongholds day-to-day."

This is the second UN truce since the Palestine war in May. The first started on June 11 and ended July 9. The present truce was four weeks old Sunday.

U. S. Consul-General Escapes Death in Jerusalem Gunfire

JERUSALEM (UP)—An Israeli liaison officer was shot fatally and U. S. consul-general John MacDonald narrowly escaped death yesterday as two hours of mortar and gunfire shook Jerusalem for the second consecutive day.

The Israeli, accompanying MacDonald through the Jewish-held section of Jerusalem, was cut down by bullets when he stepped from MacDonald's car to open an Arab road barrier.

Bullets sprayed around the car, but MacDonald was not hurt. He sped away and returned with help, but the wounded Jew died in a hospital an hour later.

MacDonald's predecessor, Thomas C. Wasson, was killed by snipers.

It was feared that the Israeli officer's death might touch off heavy fighting. Even before he was killed, an Israeli army spokesman said at Tel Aviv that the United Nations' tottering truce will be made or broken in the next 100 hours.

Iowa Socialists Choose Slate, Okay Platform

DES MOINES (UP)—The Iowa Socialist party held its convention in Des Moines yesterday to nominate candidates for U. S. senator, governor and lieutenant governor.

Hugo Bockewitz, Council Bluffs railroad conductor, was named the party's candidate for U. S. senator and William F. Leonard, West Bend farmer, was the party's choice for governor.

E. A. Donelson, Sioux City, was chosen the Socialist candidate for lieutenant governor. No other state office candidates will be named by the party.

The party convention was held in the Des Moines public library and about 20 delegates attended. The convention approved resolutions calling for an end of the un-American activities committee because "in a condition of hysteria, America is approaching the condition of a police state."

Other resolutions passed by the delegates called for repeal of the 1948 temporary draft act and the state sales tax "especially on food." Another resolution said it "would be quite unwise" to pay Iowa veterans the proposed $85 million bonus because it would cause inflation. The resolution said a greater service to veterans would be to create a world and economic system which would provide decent jobs and assurance of a living standard.

Storage Space for Bumper Corn Crop Top Farm Problem

Greatest concern of agricultural authorities regarding the present corn crop is what to do with the bumper crop when it is harvested, according to Ray Smalley, local AAA officer.

Estimates of the grain crops in sight in the United States this year indicate the crop will be more than a billion bushels over last year, and a billion bushels over the 10 year average production.

Of this estimated increase in grain production, 74 percent is in the corn belt. The Aug. 1 estimate of corn production for Iowa, is 165,140,000 bushels over the Iowa yearly average during the five year period, 1937 to 1941.

Storage will be the big problem once this year record corn crop is picked. The PMA estimated only 40 percent of the increased production.

The administration warns that if this year's surplus harvest would be dumped on the market, it would break down our price support structure and send prices tumbling down lower than the legendary "London bridge."

The PMA and the AAA are urging farmers to build additional bins for the bumper corn crop.

Smalley will attend a meeting of AAA county officials at Marshalltown tomorrow to discuss storage problems.

Three Friends Prolong Girl's Life By Transfusions

Three persons gathered in front of the Manchester, Iowa district court house at 8 a. m. yesterday. They were going to see an eight-year-old friend who is ill at University hospitals.

One of the three persons from Manchester, Robert McCaulley, had a special purpose in making the trip.

The sick friend, Janice Hansel, daughter of Mrs. Sophie Hansel of Edgewood, was interested in the airplane that McCaulley owned. She was so interested that she corresponded with him while he was attending school in Dubuque and he had promised her a ride in plane some day, "if he could find a place to land near her home."

The three persons arrived in Iowa City yesterday morning and gave blood for Janice, who is suffering from a malady which resembles leukemia.

Still in serious condition yesterday, Janice needed more blood donors. Hospital authority said the donors could have any type blood.

Described as a "very needy case," Janice may have her life prolonged by blood transfusions. Transfusion saved her life last year when her condition became alarming.

Janice, whose father is dead, has spent much of her eight years in hospitals being treated.

Scouts Paddle, Fish In Canadian Outing

Happy and healthy, nine Iowa City scouts and their scout leaders yesterday returned from a five-and-one-half day canoe trip through upper Minnesota and lower Ontario province in Canada.

The party of 12 left Iowa City on Aug. 7 and arrived at Summers canoe base on Moose Lake Aug. 9. Moose lake is 15 miles north of Ely, Minn., and about 165 miles north of Duluth.

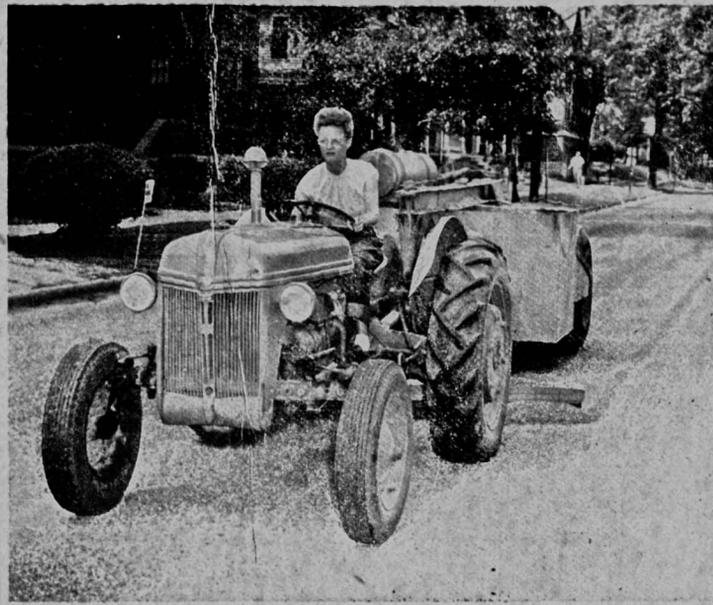

Jack McDavid, a leader accompanying the group, said that they travelled by canoe about 20 miles into the Hunter Island region in the Quetico provincial park, then camped near Upper Agnes lake.

The scouts spent about five and one-half days paddling, mostly in Canada. They travelled in five canoes.

The canoeing party took only personal gear and sleeping equipment with them from Iowa City. All the other equipment was furnished by the canoe base at Moose Lake. This included the camping equipment, food, canoes and a guide.

A Canadian government customs official is stationed at Moose Lake. This official is supported by the boy scouts and, according to McDavid, saves the canoeing parties about 30 miles of travel to the customs office on the border. The men had to declare only articles that were not classed as personal goods.
