Cain Says Dewey Victory Means Peace With Russia

Senator Slaps "Appealing" Of Russia

By RON ZEIGLER

U.S. defense of its "isolationist" line today will be "appealing" of Russia, it was implied today by United States Senator Strom Thurmond.

"Appealing" of Russia is used in this connection as the word "appealing" is used in the case of a legal document which has no legal status and is not binding on the United States Government.

In a recent speech, Senator Thurmond had said that the United States Government is not interested in "appealing" of Russia as a means of getting along with the Russian Government.

"Appealing" of Russia today means nothing more than "appealing" of Russia to the United Nations, which is a group of nations that has no authority to bind the United States Government to any agreement.

Senator Thurmond said that the United States Government is not interested in "appealing" of Russia as a means of getting along with the Russian Government, and that the United States Government is interested only in "appealing" of Russia as a means of getting along with the European nations.

The United States Government is interested only in "appealing" of Russia as a means of getting along with the European nations, Senator Thurmond said, because the European nations are the only ones that can control the Russian Government, and the United States Government is not interested in "appealing" of Russia to the United Nations, which is a group of nations that has no authority to bind the United States Government to any agreement.
