Man Asking Social Scientist's Help, Sears Tells Graduates

Men have tried to live together for over 4,000 years and have failed, Prof. Robert R. Sears, director of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station at SUI, told approximately 630 midyear graduates and their guests yesterday afternoon in the Iowa fieldhouse.

Now the problem has been thrown on the lap of the social scientist, Sears said.

Billion-Dollar Drop Hits Stock Market As Slump Continues

CHICAGO (AP) — Prices of stocks, cotton, lard and some other commodities tumbled again yesterday, continuing a trend which started earlier in the week. Market value of all stocks dropped more than a billion dollars yesterday.

Stocks in New York fell again in the sharpest loss since the day after the presidential election. Declines ran from a few cents to more than $3, in the wake of extreme losses of $5 Friday. Many issues hit new lows for the past year or for longer periods.

Values Off

On Friday $800-million was chopped off the market value of all shares. Yesterday an additional $1.2-billion was lopped off.

Action of stocks nailed down a general decline which began in such basic commodities as grain, livestock, butter, eggs and cotton. It is a decline which has been going on for several months, but which picked up momentum in the present week.

Drops in commodity prices had a repetitious appearance, for it was just one year ago this week that the big post-war break hit grains and spread to other commodities.

Lower Levels

The one big difference from last year was that this time the price slump came from levels which, to begin with, were lower than in 1948. Nor were the declines as sharp as last year.

Many markets were closed yesterday, but there were enough open to send The Associated Press index of 35 wholesale commodity prices to a new two-year low at 167.95. That compared with 175.97 a month ago and 193.68 a year ago.

Chinese Peace Bid Reported Answered

NANKING (AP) — Close associates of Acting President Li Tsung-jen said last night the Communists had answered his proposals for ending China's civil war.

They gave no details, however. There was nothing from any other quarter to indicate the Communists had in any way receded from their demands amounting to unconditional surrender of the government.

(In fact, A Communist broadcast, heard later in San Francisco by The Associated Press, questioned whether a government still existed and heaped new abuse on the peace-seekers. This tended to support a strong hint from Communist-ruled Peiping that the Communists would have no dealings with the government but would treat with "the Chinese people.")

Li's associates said they nevertheless believed "at least the first step towards opening formal negotiations" had been taken. They evidently were more optimistic than they had been before.

Polish Police Say Foreigners Foiled

WARSAW (AP) — The Polish security police said yesterday they have crushed a foreign-financed plot to kill government leaders.

The announcement did not name the men said to have been marked for death. Neither did it identify the country alleged to have supplied the conspirators with money. Communist leaders, however, often have accused the United States of intrigue in Poland.

State department officials in Washington continued silent on the latest announcement by the Polish security police.

Burmese Troops Battle For Railway Facilities

RANGOON, BURMA (AP) — Karen rebels and Communist troops battled fiercely with National troops yesterday for control of vital railway facilities.

Official reports said the rebels seized one point on the Rangoon-Mandalay railway, and were fighting for control of another. This battle is being waged about 50 miles north of here.

Registration Begins Tomorrow

It Wasn't All Pomp — Graduation Sidelines

It wasn't all pomp and ceremony at yesterday's commencement.

A stream of latecomers, restless children, an indifferent dog of doubtful parentage, and a battery of box cameras added common touches to the exercises witnessed by approximately 2,000 persons.

Confusion

There was little confusion as graduates lined up before the exercises. "No trouble at all," Prof. F. G. Higbee said as he herded doctor candidates into their A-B-C order.

Highly polished shoes got rather dusty as the grads-to-be shuffled about in the sun-dust waiting for the long ceremony to begin.

Tossing tassels caused many a nose to twitch as the graduates filed into their respective places for the ceremony.

Tardy

A tardy law graduate took his place on the platform after the others were seated. A fellow student in the next seat helped the red-faced latecomer don his cap and cloak.

Liberal arts, engineering and commerce grads filed past President Virgil M. Hancher for their certificates at about a 60-per-minute rate.

Spectators took special note of James Arthur Peterson, Bandon, Ore., who faced the speaker's platform alone. Peterson was the only pharmacy student receiving a bachelor of science degree.

Lady Ph.D.

Necks were also strained to get a better look at Charlotte Roderick, Walkerville, Md., a biochemist and only woman among the Registration for the second semester at SUI will begin tomorrow morning at 8:00 a.m. in the fieldhouse.

Students will not be allowed to register at a time earlier than is indicated on the alphabetical schedule. Those who are unable to register at the scheduled times may register later, however.

Students in the colleges of engineering and pharmacy will register in the offices of the deans. Liberal Arts, commerce, education and graduate college students will register tomorrow, according to the following alphabetical schedule are:

Bucks Beat Minnesota

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio State's fire-house basketball team ran Minnesota's highly-touted defense into the ground last night for a 48 to 39 victory over the league-leading Gophers before 7,000 partisan fans packed into the ancient fairgrounds coliseum.

The defeat proved to the Western conference that the vaunted defense set up by basketball engineer Ossie Cowles of Minnesota could be pierced if the opposition ran fast enough.

Ohio ran away to a 12 to 4 lead in the first five minutes of play and thereafter the Bucks were never headed, taking a 29 to 23 margin into the dressing room at the half.

Contrary to pre-game dope, Minnesota, the team that had limited its opposition to date to an average of 39.1 points per game in league play, was the one that had the trouble with defense.

The Buckeyes used a tight zone with Bob Donham and Bob Raidiger sticking to the great Jim McIntyre like glue and holding him to 12 points.

The closest Minnesota could get to Ohio all night was in the beginning of the second period when it pulled up to within two points of the leaders at 35-33 with Bud Grant.

Bob Burkholder's long bucket then and Raidiger's tip-in gave the Buckeyes 39 points in a hurry and from there they were off and running.

The game was featured by Minnesota's constant attempts to use big McIntyre's talents in the pivot slot, but to no avail. Almost every time he got his hands on the ball Donham and Raidiger tied him up.

Guard Gene Brown of Ohio, by dint of good shooting from far out, led the scorers with 13 points. Dick Schnittker, though watched closely, Raidiger and McIntyre were runners-up with 12.

Nine Local Boxers Enter Cedar Rapids Golden Gloves Bouts

Nine Iowa City boxers, five of them University of Iowa students, will be bidding for golden glove titles when the Cedar Rapids Golden Gloves begin Tuesday night. The tournament will continue through Thursday night when eight champions will be crowned.

The Iowa City entrants include four former champions and one runner-up. Jack Scanlon, A4, Chicago, will be making his bid for the heavyweight title he won in 1947. He won the golden gloves that year with 3 straight K.O.'s.

Bob Berens, A1, Neola, middleweight champion at Cedar Rapids last year and state AAU champion in 1946, moves into the light-heavyweight class this year.

Roger Weitz, G, Dubuque, also moves up a notch into the welter-weight class. Weitz won in Cedar Rapids as a lightweight in 1942 and '43. He also copped the Olympic tryout championship last fall.

The Illini trailed 29 to 28 at the half, but hit two quick buckets to open the final period and then pulled away to win with ease.

Illinois abandoned its usual racehorse style and was content to do its shooting from medium and long distances. This worked with deadly effectiveness.

Burdette Thurlby, playing his last collegiate game, finished his career with a blaze of glory, plunking in 11 points in the final half, most of them from far beyond the free throw line.

Illinois led for most of the first period, but lost the advantage in the closing minutes.

At the beginning of the second half Don Sunderlage and Jim Marks hit two quick buckets to give the Illini a 32 to 29 edge.

Don Rehfeldt hit a gift toss for the Badgers, but then big Fred Green and Marks shot the Illini to a 39 to 31 margin and it was all Illinois the rest of the way.

Rehfeldt led the scoring on both teams with 20 points while the Illini were paced by Thurlby, Captain Dwight Eddleman, who had 11, and Marks with 13.

Wisconsin's number one forward, Fred Schneider, played only briefly due to a sprained ankle, but he was replaced effectively by Sophomore Danny Markham who hit 10 points and played an outstanding floor game.

Northwestern came back in the 128-pound division with George Halas, a smooth worker, who decisioned previously unbeaten Bill Quinlan, 6-1. It was Halas' fifth triumph of the year.

Iowa increased its lead to 8-3 in the third match. Ed Steinhoff scored his second win of the year with a 5-0 decision over Northwestern's Ed Fox. It was a comparatively easy victory for Steinhoff.

Only other fall of the evening came in the heavyweight match. Bob Geigel, Hawkeye heavy, threw Bill Ford in 3 minutes, 39 seconds.

The two closest matches were the 145-pound clash and the 175-pound match. In the former, Ken Keith of the Hawks scored a 9-7 win over Tom Hanson. The lead changed several times until Keith made his winning points in the closing seconds of the match.

Bob Lage in losing to Northwestern's Tom Ragouzis, held a slim lead throughout the three periods, only to be defeated in the very last second. Right at the mat's edge as the match drew to a close, Ragouzis scored two points on a take-down and snatched victory from defeat, 7-6.

Hawkeye George Telsa easily decisioned Dick Howard in the 155-pound event, winning 10-1. Only Hawkeye to go down by a wide margin was Ralph Thomas in the 165-pound class. He was decisioned by Bob Manning.

Iowa meets Michigan in the fieldhouse in their next dual meet, on Feb. 12. Two days later, Feb. 14, Minnesota will come to Iowa City for another dual meet with the Hawkeyes.

Gymnast Advises No Roughness for Babies

NEW YORK (UP)—Dad is making a big mistake when he thinks he's getting into the swing of fatherhood by swinging Junior willy-nilly around the living room after dinner every night, Gymnast Roderick Sigward said today.

The little fellow is likely to grow up with a sway back, a crick in his neck and a chip on his shoulder if some of the roughness isn't taken out of roughhousing, Sigward said.

"All over the United States, fathers are tossing children up into the air, and the children are squealing with delight," Sigward added. "Then both of them knock themselves silly by bumping their heads on the floor and fathers get stiff and cranky from all the exercise."

Sane Calisthenics

Naturally, Sigward, as a professional physical culturist, is plumping for a method of safe, sane, scientific home calisthenics. He's figured out a way for both fathers and sons to get good, healthy exercise and have fun at the same time. He guarantees that the Sigward flip-flops will punch a big hole in the old man's paunch and that Junior will be a potential Mr. America by the time he's 13.

Swedish-born Sigward is keeping his boyish figure and building up his two children through rigidly planned roughhousing for exactly 30 minutes every night before bedime. He demonstrated what he meant by calling in Ellen, 6, and Erick, 2, and putting them through exercises that would leave most grown men panting. For the children, however, it was a breeze, because they have been doing setting-up exercises since they were six months old.

Like the Old Man

"At first I exercised their arms and legs for them, because they were too little to do it themselves, but now they are becoming real gymnasts, just like the old man," he said.

Erick, a black-haired, black-eyed little fellow, came in carrying an eight pound medicine ball on his head. Ellen balanced a 10-pound ball on her head.

Sigward grabbed Erick by the hands and swung him from left to right. That's supposed to build up his back and arm muscles. Then he hoisted Erick onto his shoulder, around his head and swung him to the floor a few times. He held Ellen by one foot and hand and pivoted rapidly. It made Ellen dizzy but also made her a little less afraid of the world in general.

Head Standers

Both children stood on their heads — something their father can't even do — to strengthen their neck muscles, and then they scrambled up onto his shoulders and he gently set them on their noggin right on the floor. They repeated that one until Sigward had to pause for breath.

"Nearly any exercise is all right, if you keep doing the same ones every day and if you know the anatomy of a child and stretch the right muscles in the right manner," Sigward said. "You mustn't grab or twist or make any violent motions.

Around the Campus

Ode to Don's

The place is always packed so full

The smoke so thick and blue, occasionally there comes a lull But these are very few.

It's 3 p.m. and in they pour And in the booths they flop, "No thanks, I don't want any more

I'd rather table hop."

There goes a girl, splashed with foam

She's on her way to tidy, Her date just sits, and laughs and cheers

The cry, "Thank God it's Friday."

The crowd, the laughter and the noise

Provide that certain charm,

No one tries to put on poise For no one gives a darn.

In the booths you're apt to see Two lovers just a-talkin'

Another group with lust and glee

Sings "Hugging" and A-Chalkin'.

The popcorn scattered on the floor

The trays so heavily laden,

The constant shout of "Draw two more"

And "Who's with Ellie Maiden?"

The juke box always playing With the glitter of the dome;

There goes a fellow swaying "Bill Jones wanted on the phone."

Off to the quarries or formal ball

They come from Quad and Currier Hall,

Dressed in jeans or white bow tie

Phi Dell's, D.G., and Phi Psi.

For there you're sure to see your kind,

Tall brunettes or lovely blondes,

So come on boys, and grab your steins

And let's all hurry down to Don's!

Mother Brightens Her Baby's Birth

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Mrs. Charles Hines, 20-year old suburban Carnegie woman, held a flash light for a physician who delivered her first baby last night in the family auto.

Hines was driving his wife to Haddon maternity hospital when it became apparent the stork was winning the race. He spotted a doctor's office and pulled to the curb.

Dr. Stanley P. Balcerak wasn't in, but his receptionist put in a hurried phone call for him. Five minutes after he arrived, a 6 pound, 12-ounce girl was born in the auto with Mrs. Hines' flashlight furnishing the only illumination. Hines resumed the trip to the hospital, this time with a police escort. Hospital officials said the tot and Mrs. Hines "are doing just fine."

Business BRIEFS

Employees in Iowa City bookstores were rearranging shelves, tables, and books yesterday in preparation for this week's expected mass book buying spree. By late afternoon most of the bookstore managers reported they were ready for the annual midwinter scramble which accompanies SUI registration.

"The February rush isn't nearly so bad as the September one though," Ray Vanderhoef of Iowa Supply said. "The students know their way around much better now than they did in September."

Most of the stores were displaying lay-away slips which would enable students to select their books yesterday and avoid this week's rush.

Unveiling of the 1949 Pontiac took place yesterday in the showroom of the Mann auto market, 221 East College street, amidst the customary flourish which accompanies such affairs. Visitors by the hundreds trooped through to sit in, exclaim over, and wish for the newest addition to the current General Motors family. The particular model on display was a Wellington green, fender, eight cylinder, streamliner sedan coupe.

Roses for the ladies and pencils for the men were supplied throughout the day.

A number of people added their name to the long list of prospective customers for new cars, but Russell Mann, dealer, declined to make any promises.

The Laundromat, 243 South Van Buren, recently added two large extractors, a dryer and a "bundling" table to its equipment.

Oliver Forbes, Laundromat manager, said that the new large extractors and large drier facilitate processing of the laundry. Capacity of the new extractors is 27 pounds, dry, and the new driers will hold 32 pounds of laundry.

The "bundling" table, known to the layman as a table where you can fold your laundry, doubles the amount of space provided for that activity.

Business in general throughout Iowa City last week was, like the weather, a bit "cold." Most merchants explained the current weakness as merely the annual "seasonal slump."

Harry Wagoner to Take Water Safety Courses

Harry Wagoner, farm forester with the conservation commission in Johnson county, will attend a four-day school session in "First Aid and Water Safety" beginning tomorrow at Ft. Dodge.

Where, Oh Where Is My Little Sheepskin

THERE WAS CONFUSION DELUXE after SUI's commencement yesterday when graduates scrambled to get their "real-McCoy" diplomas. Over 600 students rushed to the west end of the Iowa field house to turn in their gowns and fake diplomas handed out during the exercises. This is only the second time that graduates have been given their real sheepskins immediately after the commencement exercises.

Serves Food With French Accent

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Ella Brennan, whose antecedents knew more about garnishing corned beef with cabbage than with truffles, appears to have cracked the French monopoly on French restaurants in New Orleans.

She reported that Brennan's Vieux Carre restaurant is making money, largely from New Orleanians who fancy themselves experts on Franco-Creole cuisine. And she is about ready to scratch the "Vieux Carre" from her neon sign and do business as plain "Brennan's."

This threatened to shatter another tradition in the French quarter, where a French name and atmosphere are considered essential to business success, even if the businessman has recently arrived from Kansas City.

Bought in 1945

Miss Brennan was 19 in 1945 when her father bought the restaurant. It is across Bourbon street from the old Absinthe house, another Brennan enterprise conducted strictly in the French quarter tradition.

She had just graduated from high school and didn't have a job, so her father, Owen Brennan Sr., made her manager of the restaurant. She had, while working in the old Absinthe house during the war, picked up a working knowledge of wines and liquors.

Miss Brennan went across the street to the restaurant and ate her way through the menu from hors-d'oeuvres to desserts. Nights she read through a stack of cookbooks that in the end reached as high as her head.

Sampled Dishes

Then she went to New York and Chicago to sample the most famous dishes in those cities. When she returned home, she had a general idea why customers weren't lined up in front of her restaurant's doors, as they were at Antoine's and Arnaud's.

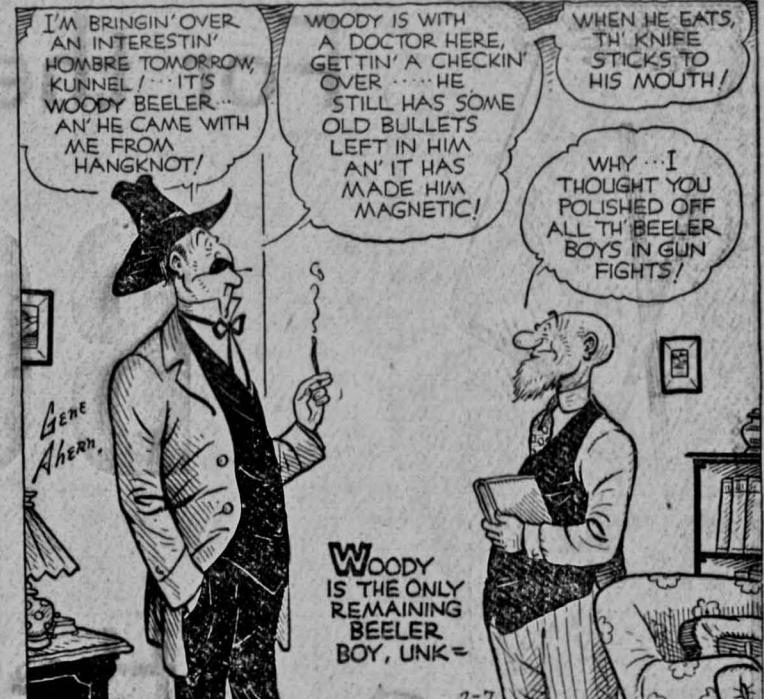

She first gave the place a face-lifting. She had the floors carpeted, the walls papered and candles substituted for electric lights.

There still remained the problem of specialties. New Orleans' best French restaurants have special recipes handed down from father to son. Getting one is hard er than getting a sample of gold from Fort Knox.

Business was so small at first that Miss Brennan had plenty of time for conference with her chef,

A few children, not too impressed with Dad's leaving the campus world, squirmed away from their mothers and played behind the bleachers.

An elderly woman, looking for the ladies rest room, wandered into the men's locker room and caused a mild panic.

A big dog, sleeping on the sawdust in front of the spectators, occasionally lifted a weary head when the SUI band increased its volume.

Pictures

Wives and mothers equipped with little box cameras took pictures during and after the services.

A woman commerce graduate met a steady stream of flash bulbs from her husband's shiny new camera during the exercises. The couple exchanged winks after each bulb flashed.

For some, yesterday's commencement was the culmination of a process that started seven or eight years ago and was interrupted by the war.

After the ceremonies grads sweated out more lines getting their "real - McCoy" diplomas. Gowns were taken off and tossed in heaping piles as the graduates waited for their official sheepskins.

State Senator Pledges Fight For SUI Funds, If Needed

State Sen. LeRoy S. Mercer Saturday pledged a "determined fight" for an increase in SUI's biennial appropriation if the amount recommended by Governor Beardsley is not enough "to run the school efficiently."

At home in Iowa City for a weekend respite from legislative duties in Des Moines, Mercer said he "doubted" if the university could get all that it has asked because of the governor's desire to spend only the income of the state without touching its surplus.

But despite a program like this, said Mercer, "We cannot let our schools deteriorate."

Governor Beardsley so far has recommended only slightly more for this biennium than had been appropriated in 1947, or about $4.5 million. President Virgil M. Hancher has asked approximately $8-million with which to operate the university and make capital improvements during the next two years.

The governor has recommended that approximately $3-million be appropriated for the University hospitals, slightly more than the amount given in 1947. The hospital's request was for $4.5-million for upkeep and expansion of facilities.

Mercer pointed out that costs of operation alone have risen above the recommended increases by Beardsley, and that no funds at all have been allowed for "needed" capital improvements.

The senator thought the slight amount of increase granted by the governor was largely in anticipation of a drop in revenue from veteran's tuition as large veteran classes graduate during the next two years.

Mercer said he didn't think Beardsley was hitting at higher education. "He has cut or denied other appropriations requests, too, in keeping with his program of spending only the state's income," said the senator.

Mercer thought appropriations would probably be made before the legislators recess Feb. 26.

Bands Appeal for More Clarinetists

Twenty more clarinetists are desperately needed in SUI concert and varsity bands, Prof. C.B. Righter, director of university bands, said yesterday.

Shortage of clarinet players may prove a serious handicap to the two bands during the second semester. This fact was announced by Prof. Righter in connection with his announcement of mid-year auditions to be held throughout the first week of the new semester.

The shortage has resulted from class and laboratory conflicts with band rehearsals, heavy schedules and failure of high schools to develop clarinet players during the war years.

Vacancies also exist in the flute, oboe, bassoon and tuba sections. Players of other instruments are invited to place their names on the band's waiting list.

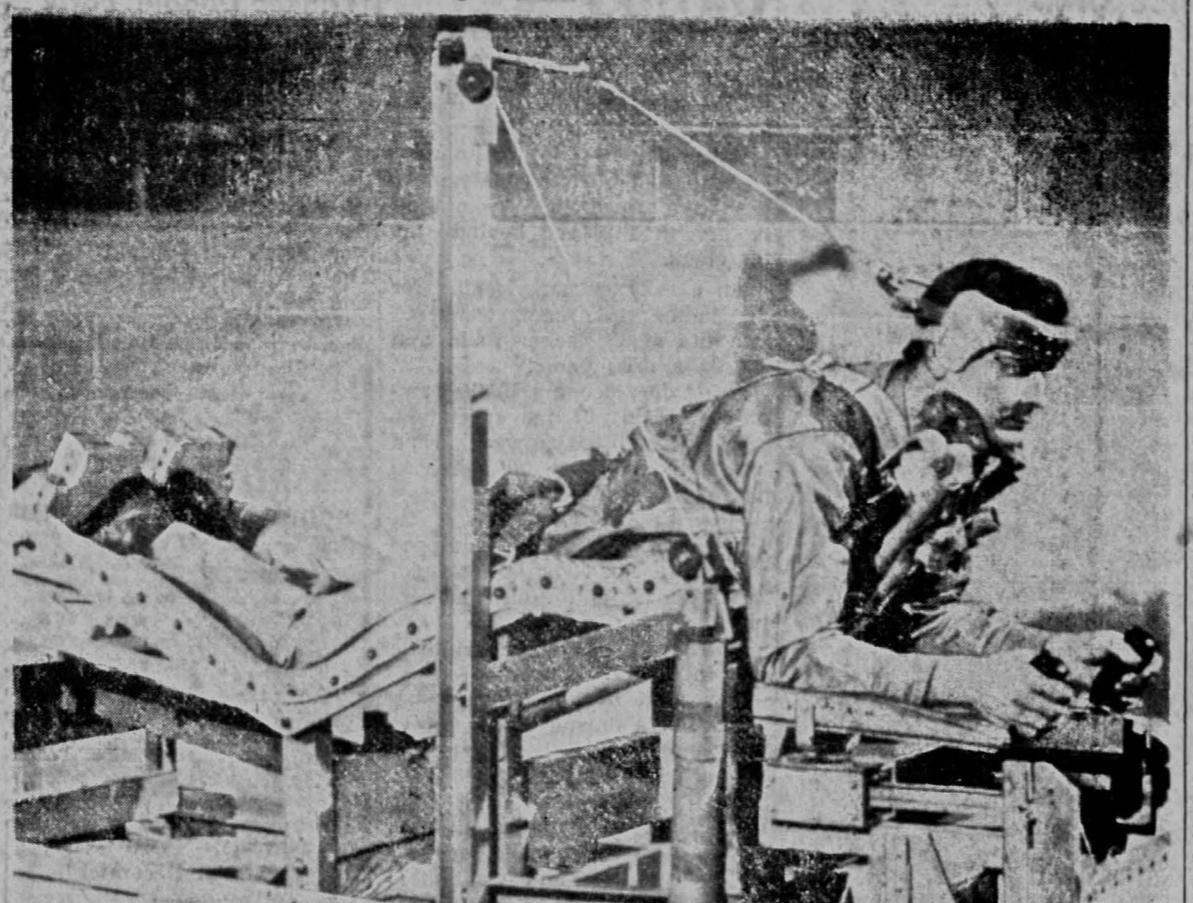

Inquiries may be made at the band office, Room 15, music studio building or by calling extension 2322.

Burglar Drops Match, Laundry Up in Smoke

MOBILE, ALA., WEDNESDAY — A cleaning establishment surveyed its premises yesterday and found 53 cents gone from the cash register and $3,000 worth of damage to the plant.

A burglar apparently dropped a match on some clothes. Most of the customers' cleaning and laundry went up in smoke.

Beds May Replace Pilots' Seats in Future

PILOTS OF THE FUTURE may use this prone position bed in place of the conventional cockpit seat for flying super-fast planes. H. T. Hertzberg, chief of the aero-medical laboratory anthropometric unit at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, demonstrates the pilot bed. In this position the pilot will be able to withstand about three times as much strain from gravity before blacking out. This arrangement would also permit planes with slimmer and faster shapes.

Officials Use 'Lie' Tests To Solve Chavis Death

NEVADA CITY — Lie detector tests were conducted here yesterday in the unsolved slaying of Henry Chavis, 55, Ames, who was killed last Nov. 8.

Leonard Keller, Chicago, inventor of the detector, conducted the tests. County and state officials, in a joint statement, said the tests were made primarily for elimination purposes, and to clear up rumors and corroborate findings. They said none of the test results would be made public and that all persons tested submitted voluntarily.

Executives Rate Personality High in Considering Employees

By JEAN STRONG

Personality is the first on the list of qualities which business executives consider when interviewing prospective employees, according to a recent survey made by the president of a Chicago management consultant firm.

Participation in activities is second and grade point comes third.

SUIT's placement Director Helen Barnes substantiates the survey which revealed that business executives consider six factors especially important when looking for employees among college persons.

Arrange Interviews

As director of the business and industrial placement office on the SUU campus, Miss Barnes arranges interviews between job-seeking seniors and prospective employers.

In order of importance, the other three factors considered in hiring college graduates are general courses taken, special courses taken and part-time work.

Although ranked third in importance, statisticians still insist that grades are indicative of success. Quoting from hard facts, one company executive said that with them one of every two A-students succeed, one out of four B-students; one out of eight students with a B minus average and one in every 15 students who have C averages.

Work Way Through

The survey shows the 70 percent of these business executives think it is desirable for a student to work part or all of his way through college.

The purpose of interviewing at colleges and universities is to make a better selection of employees than is possible by waiting for them to come to the company, one employment supervisor said.

However, the picture college graduates present to the working world is not entirely a pleasant one. The business executives contacted in the survey had eight complaints against college graduates.

Expect Advancement

Many college people have an unrealistic attitude, are impatient, expect too rapid advancement and fail to realize the importance of hard work, the executive said.

In addition, college people try to avoid routine tasks, lack tolerance for the non-college class, are unable to take criticism and are afraid to start at the bottom and work up.

The points of interest to most interviewers are:

1. Appearance, facial expression, physique, cleanliness and neatness.

2. Attitude toward the company interviewer.

3. Signs of intelligence.

4. Does he have good health?

5. Does he have an analytical mind?

6. Character and integrity.

7. Is he well informed in his field of specialization?

8. Originality and initiative.

9. English ability.

Many of these points can be determined in a short interview, but others will be obtained from the placement officer and from college professors. It doesn't hurt to make a good impression on these people, too.

Smasher Produces 440,000 Volts for A-Energy Research

At least 440,000 volts for atom smashing research can be produced by SUU's Van de Graaf generator, according to tests finished recently.

Atomic nuclei of three elements — boron, fluorine and lithium — were smashed in making the voltage tests.

Since it takes 440,000 volts to smash the lithium atom, it is assumed that at least 440,000 volts are being generated by the smasher. Boron and fluorine atoms are smashed at lower voltages.

To get this voltage, the generator tank is kept under about 10 pounds of air pressure. SUU's generator, one of the biggest of its type in the country, is about 50 feet long and eight feet in diameter. It looks like a long railroad car painted aluminum. Big as it is, it is a precision instrument.

Voltage is built up inside the tank at a large electrode in the center. Endless belts 22 feet long run from one end of the tank to the central electrode. Electric charges sprayed on the belts at one end are carried to the central electrode where they are deposited. Acting like a river dam, the central electrode stores up these small charges.

Leading from the central electrode to the target end of the tank is a hollow tube 22 feet long and called an accelerator tube. This is the gun barrel through which the atom smashing particles are fired at the target.

The particles are speeded up as they travel down the accelerator tube so they strike the target with enough force to smash atomic nuclei. An estimated ten thousand billion particles bombarded the lithium target each second.

To show when atoms are being smashed, a Geiger counter is placed behind the target. The Geiger counter lights up like a pin-ball machine as it counts a fraction of any gamma rays which may be given off when atomic nuclei are smashed.

In addition, college people try to avoid routine tasks, lack tolerance for the non-college class, are unable to take criticism and are afraid to start at the bottom and work up.

The points of interest to most interviewers are:

1. Appearance, facial expression, physique, cleanliness and neatness.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

AL JOLSON came home exhausted after appearing at one radio program and two benefits, and hurried into bed. His neighbor's airedale, however, kept howling through the night. The next day Jolson buttonholed his neighbor and said: "Confound it, do you know that dog of yours barked all night?"

"I know," said the neighbor, "but don't let it concern you. He sleeps all day."

After Calvin Coolidge had been sworn in hastily to succeed the late Warren Harding as President of the United States he drove to the White House for his first night in residence there, and proceeded calmly to pick up the evening paper and eat an apple. A close friend of the family, seated with Mrs. Coolidge, remarked, "Considering the circumstances, you don't seem too weighted down with your responsibilities."

Coolidge looked up from his paper and said, "You may have noticed that I swore to be President of the United States. I didn't swear to be a great president!"

Roving Eye Pays Off

By CLAIRE COX

NEW YORK (UPI) — Isidor Roth, a gay young blade of 63, still has a roving eye for the ladies, and his matronly wife doesn't mind a bit.

She likes it, in fact, because every glance gleans more money for Roth to give mama to spend. Girls not only are taller, but they are carrying a lot more weight around in their rumbly seats, he said. They also have more of what it takes to wear a sweater, and the way Roth looks at it, to wear a brassiere. Nor have the waists wasted away.

In sidewalk surveys throughout the world, Roth has beamed his x-ray eyes at foreign women, too. But Roth thinks he likes the South African damsels as well as any. He said the ones who wear clothes are the slickest chicks he's ever seen, and they just love to wear girdles.

By BILL McBRIDE

ONE OF THESE DAYS our civilization is going to break down to a simple conflict between two elements . . . pedestrians and motorists.

When that time comes there will be no such thing as neutral ground. Either you will join the forces of those who drive and honk, or enlist on the side of those who walk and curse.

If the time for decision should come today, it would be difficult to choose. At present my sympathies are divided.

On the one hand there are the motorists who are belligerent, discourteous, nuerotic and in a hurry.

The invention of the horseless carriage came to humanity, not so much as a beneficent machine of transportation, but rather as an instrument to challenge man's powers of coordination and inspire within him a false sense of urgency.

On the other hand there are pedestrians who are belligerent, discourteous, nuerotic and in a hurry.

Since Pithecanthropus Erectus first climbed down from his perch in a mahogany tree and started to develop athlete's foot, pedestrians have had a mad on against anything with wheels.

THE CRISIS is nothing new. Even as far back as Caesar's day there was trouble between chariot drivers and pedestrians.

There were few traffic signals in those days, and whistle tooting policemen were practically unheard of.

It was nothing at all for a high-speed chariot to come racing around the corner of Gracchus and Vine streets without even so much as a hand signal.

There were more hit-and-run drivers then than there were Grecian urns, and squashed pedestrians could be seen at nearly every junction.

AT THAT, the Roman pedestrians were better off than the walker of today. At least he was not lulled into a false sense of security by legislation saying pedestrians always have the right-of-way.

There was none of this "he wouldn't dare run over me, it's against the law" sentiment. It was every man for himself, and the nimble of foot survived.

ONLY RECENTLY I had occasion to observe lax pedestrian reasoning. It sticks in my mind because I was a party to the incident.

While standing on the corner of Washington and Dubuque, trying to make up my mind where would be the best place to buy a paint brush, I noticed a man of about 70 years start across the street.

I SUPPOSE he felt safe because the traffic light was in his favor. Being about 70 years old, he wasn't as agile as he might have been. The street was covered with snow, and he felt his way along cautiously.

Before he had completed the journey across Washington street the light changed to green. Any motorist knows that when the light turns green it is time to start moving.

Motors raced impatiently at the old man, and he hobbled as fast as he could.

IT WAS BEGINNING to look like he would make it to the curb where I stood when there came a crunch from down the block.

A 1939 Ford sedan was headed in our direction with flaps up and all eight cylinders beating out a symphony of speed, as the Indianapolis speedway writers say.

The fellow was in a hurry, and there was not much chance of mistaking that. He was in such a hurry that he couldn't wait to pass automobiles on the right hand side . . . to speed things up a bit, he passed on the left.

When he saw the pedestrian the motorist honked his horn, and the elderly gentleman did a pole vault act with his cane and somehow got out of the way.

I felt safe until it became apparent the Ford was going to turn the corner. There wasn't quite enough room in the street to make the turn, so the driver honked his horn again, and with much spinning of wheels made the turn by coming up and over the curb where I stood.

As I jumped to safety behind a mail box, I saw that it was not a young fool driving that car . . . it was an old fool.

That is the reason I picked up the hardest piece of ice I could find and threw it at the Ford's back window.

If the driver of the 1939 Ford whose back window was cracked by a chunk of flying ice recently will call at my office, I'll be only too happy to finish the job with a crowbar.

ANALYSIS OF THE WORLD'S NEWS AS IT HAPPENED LAST WEEK

Cold War

Truman Rebuffs Stalin's Proposal for a Meeting

In a new phase of the Soviet's "peace offensive", cagier Premier Stalin proposed a Truman-Stalin meeting and cautious President Truman — backed by most of the western world — said no.

Answering the questions of an International News service executive, Stalin states that Russia would "consider" signing a no-war pact with the U.S. He also stated that he had "no objection" to meeting with President Truman personally.

The western world was skeptical, but unofficial sources in the by-passed UN said they would offer UN facilities for the meeting. Sweden offered its capital, Stockholm, as a site.

President Truman repeated his old offer — Stalin should come to Washington. The Russian premier quickly answered saying that, because of his health, he is unable to go to Washington. He suggested instead several sites in USA for a meeting and threw in Czechoslovakia or Poland as second choices.

U.S. Secretary of State Acheson stepped in with the cold water. "The interest of the United States and all of the hundreds of millions of people throughout the world in peace is so fundamental that the matter of peace cannot be tampered with and it cannot be used as an instrument in any international political maneuver," he said.

President Truman backed Acheson, saying the U.S. would not desert her allies and talk with Russia alone. The west, especially Scandinavia, went on considering the North Atlantic alliance and the Stalin-Truman idea — for the moment — was dead.

A house committee approved a bill to extend export controls for another 28 months while another okay'd legislation giving the President broad powers to streamline the executive branch of the government, with no agencies exempted.

Completing hearings on tariffs, a house committee was ready to recommend repeal of the GOP 1948 tariff act and restoration of the old reciprocal trade law. ## Local Guard Company Plans Month-Long Drive for Recruits

A month-long recruiting drive will be launched tomorrow by the 34th reconnaissance company, Iowa City national guard. Sgt. Noel Knott, in charge of the drive, made the announcement yesterday.

The drive will be directed at men within the 17-35 age group who are physically fit for duty with the guard.

Present plans include recruiting visits to West Liberty, Sisson, Hills and other communities within a 20-mile radius of Iowa City, Knott said.

"We want new men before our T.O. (technical orders) promotions are filled, April 1," Knott said in explaining why the drive was being launched at this time. Another reason for the drive, according to Knott, is to better acquaint the people of this community with the activities of their local guard unit.

The sergeant reported special promotional opportunities exist for cooks, mechanics and radio men at present.

He explained national guardsmen receive pay, base pay on the regular army pay scale for the various grades, for attending company meetings and other activities. Guardsmen also receive money while attending specialty schools which better qualify them for promotions.

Three films will be shown prospective recruits during the drive. Included is a movie showing the effectiveness of infantry weapons, and another on the story of an American patrol behind German and Italian troops during World War II.

The 34th reconnaissance company, with 63 men at present, needs 65 more to come to full company strength.

Death Cheated as Ice Fall Buries Tot

If 28-month-old Greg Burham had been a foot closer to his barrack's home Thursday, falling ice might have killed him. No warning was given when six inches of ice fell off the barrack's roof and broke Greg's leg.

Greg, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Burham, 128 River-side, was playing outside when the ice and snow fell off the roof and broke Greg's leg.

His father was standing on the porch when the snow and ice fell. "It happened so suddenly I was unable to rush off the porch to grab him out of danger," he said.

Pulling the child out of the snow and ice, Burham, a medical student, noticed the child's leg was badly twisted. Taking the boy to the University hospital, Burham found that both bones in the leg had been broken.

The Burham's have another child, Pamela, one month old.

A few fences have been damaged in the housing areas by falling ice, but there have been no other casualties, Robert Coffer, manager of married students' housing said yesterday.

Operation Snowbound Reports

OMAHA, NEB. (UPI) — The following are excerpts from reports of field officers sent to headquarters of Operation Snowbound:

Rudolph Kubick, 75, nine miles south of Stuart, said when bulldozer reached him: "Hell, these young people nowadays haven't even seen bad weather; they don't know how to stock in food to take care of situation."

Bulldozer operator asked Kubick if he wanted roads opened to haystacks. Kubick said yes, but suggested that operator make a path to the stack farthest away. "I'm saving those close in for bad weather," he said.

Dozer operator south of Gordon checked a bridge for strength before crossing. He found three cows under it, one still living. It was believed they had been there since Jan. 2.

Weasel crew proceeded three miles to Molsworth farm near Sargent, Neb. Mrs. Molsworth had been grinding wheat by hand to make flour for bread. Feed for livestock critical—one day's
