Taft May Vote Against Strike Plan in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) served notice last night he will vote against his own "national emergency" strike-settling machinery if the senate strips it of injunction powers.

This may happen, in crucial senate roll calls due today. Two or three votes may make the difference.

If the court injunctions go out, and if Taft helps vote his own plan into defeat, President Truman's original labor proposals on this point will stand untouched. They call only for a 3-day "cool-off" period in emergency cases.

This was the situation on the eve of a crucial day in Mr. Truman's campaign to repeal the Taft-Hartley act and replace it with a modified Wagner act:

1. Sen. Taft proposes to amend the Truman plan by giving the government power not only to halt strikes by injunction, but to seize plants for up to 60 days.
2. Sen. Holland (D-Fla.) proposes to amend that by striking out the seizures.
3. But Sen. Lucas (D-Ill.), the majority leader, would strike out Taft's injunctions and keep the plant seizure powers only. He told reporters Mr. Truman "does not object" to this solution.
4. If the Lucas amendment wins, Taft feels it will have torn the heart from his proposal — the power of injunction. He declared seizure powers alone would be "one-sided and ineffective"; therefore he would vote nay on his own plan, as amended by Lucas.
5. That might mean the collapse of senate forces supporting Taft's proposal. If so, the White House program would emerge from one of the worst parliamentary snarls of the session, to stand or fall without amendment.

Witnesses Dispute Noble Auto Speed

SOUTH BEND, IND., (AP)—Defense witnesses gave testimony yesterday in the reckless homicide trial of Robert Noble, 30, Iowa City, which contradicted that given earlier by state witnesses.

Particularly in dispute was the rate of speed Noble's car was travelling Oct. 25, 1947, when it struck and killed two college students here.

Killed were 18-year-old Marie Des Pres, St. Mary's college student, and Joseph Haller, 20, a student at Notre Dame.

A former coroner, Dr. Marion W. Hillman, testified that two Mishawaka sisters who were riding with Noble told him "under oath" that they didn't know how fast the car was going.

The sisters, Mary and Ann Lentine, testified earlier that the car was travelling at a high rate of speed. They both have a $33,000 damage suit filed against Noble alleging he was going about 70 miles per hour.

Ralph Martin, an insurance investigator, also testified that the Lentine sisters told him that the car "didn't seem to be going very fast."

Report British Parley Over Financial Crisis

LONDON (AP)—Great Britain faced an economic crisis last night and well informed sources said that finance ministers of British commonwealth countries had been invited here to discuss a drain on gold and dollar reserves which is part of it.

So serious is the situation that experts believe a political crisis may result, and bring a general parliamentary election this fall.

Widow, 39, Berales Lover, 73

CHICAGO (AP)—One of the women who liked Sigmund Engel well enough to give him $8,000 described the dapper swindler yesterday as "a cold-blooded, calculating and vicious man."

As Mrs. Reseda Corrigan, 39-year-old red-haired widow, gave her revised estimate of the little man she was going to marry, Engel mopped his brow and paled his unshaven face.

The scene between Engel, 73, and his latest victim occurred in a felony courtroom packed with women anxious to see the harmer who has bilked well-to-do widows of millions during a half

Not Quite Good Enough to Fool the Secret Service

U.S. SECRET SERVICE Chief U.E. Baughman displays nearly $100,000 in counterfeit bills, seized yesterday when secret service agents swooped down on a counterfeit ring operating a short distance from the White House and secret service headquarters. Baughman points to comparison chart showing faults in the bogus money. When this picture was taken, the count of the phony federal reserve notes had not yet been completed, but Baughman estimated the count might rise to a total $150,000. Five men and the wife of one of the men were arrested as agents seized elaborate photographing equipment and an engraving plant in a raid almost in the shadow of the world bank. Investigation began when bogus bills began appearing in various parts of the country.

Seek Missing SUI Student

Lamar Aaron, 23-year-old SUI student and Iowa City resident, disappeared from his home at 123 Evans street Thursday and has not been heard from since, police reported yesterday.

Police said they believed either foul play or amnesia may be behind the youth's disappearance.

His mother, Mrs. Martin Aaron, said yesterday she last saw him Thursday when he said he was going to pay his university tuition and thereafter to work at the Princess cafe at 3 p.m. He was carrying $50 which he had given Mrs. Aaron to keep until his tuition was due, and possibly $10 or $15 more, she said.

The university said no tuition had been paid and his employers at the cafe said he had not appeared for work.

His fiancée, Beq Falkvitch of Rock Island, came to Iowa City at Aaron's invitation to spend his 23rd birthday with him Sunday. Miss Falkvitch could give no reason for his disappearance. Mrs. Aaron said.

Aaron is described as six-foot, two-inches tall, weight, 210, with light brown wavy hair and blue eyes. When last seen he was wearing blue-gray trousers, a white shirt and tan oxfords. He walked with a slight limp.

Belgian Church Group Wins Senate Majority

BRUSSELS (AP)—Final official returns from Sunday's general election yesterday gave the Catholic Social Christian party an absolute majority in the senate and brought them within three seats of an absolute majority in the chamber of deputies.

The margin, however, was not believed quite strong enough either for the Catholics to ask exiled King Leopold to return to the throne, or for them to form a one-party cabinet.

Canada's Liberal Party Wins Sweeping Victory

TORONTO (AP)—The Liberal party government headed by Louis St. Laurent won a vote of confidence in the Canadian people yesterday, sweeping to victory in nationwide elections for 262 house of commons seats.

The Liberals thus got a mandate to continue for five more years the government they launched in 1935. They defeated the Progressive Conservatives, whose national leader is George Drew, former Premier of Ontario. A third party, the Socialist Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, was an also-ran.

After the judge's instructions to the jury tomorrow morning, it will be up to the eight men and four women to decide whether Miss Coplon, a former justice department analyst, is guilty or innocent.

Nab Counterfeiters, Supplies; Arrest 5

WASHINGTON (UP)—The secret service yesterday smashed a clever counterfeiting ring operating in the shadow of the world bank by arresting four men and a woman and seizing their plant.

Secret Service Chief U.E. Baughman reported his agents pointed on the alleged counterfeiters just after they had completed a swing around the country, while they palmed off bogus bills on small businessmen.

They also seized at least $100,000 in faked federal reserve notes, plus an elaborate photographing and engraving plant located in an H-street suite in downtown Washington next to the headquarters of the World Bank. The count of the bogus money had not been completed; the total may be as high as $150,000.

Because of the speed with which the secret service acted, the ring actually was able to pass off only about $2,000 of the money.

The five arrested were identified as Eugene Hammond Creighton, 25; Walter Wilbur Kidwell, 30; William F. Hughes, 28, and his wife, Josephine Hughes, 25, and Arthur Bebar. All gave Washington addresses.

The secret service had been investigating quietly for several months since phoney bills began showing up in various parts of the country. Baughman said confidential information given to his agents enabled them to clamp down on the ring.

Spy Trial May Go To Jury Tomorrow

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government and defense rested their cases in the Judith Coplon spy trial yesterday, and the fate of the former government employe is expected to be placed in the hands of the jury tomorrow.

Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer and Prosecutor John M. Kelley Jr. will present their summations today. Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves over-ruled all defense motions to throw the case out of court.

She is accused of stealing secret FBI documents for transmission to Russia through Valentin A. Gubitchev, suspended Soviet employe of the United Nations. Miss Coplon contends her only interest in the married Russian was romantic.

Flanders Asks Ban Of Atomic Bombs

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Ralph E. Flanders (R-Va.) yesterday introduced a resolution to outlaw use of atomic bombs by the U.S. armed forces unless an aggression launches an atomic war.

Chairman Brien McMahon (D-Conn.) of the congressional atomic energy committee, countered that this country is already following a "clear and wholesome policy" of seeking airtight international control of atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

McMahon, whose committee has jurisdiction over Flanders' resolution, said the action of the Vermont Republican was "well intentioned," but McMahon made it plain the result had little chance of approval.

Professor Noland Resigns SUI Post

Prof. E. W. Noland has resigned his position in the SUI sociology department, Prof. Harold W. Saunders, department chairman, said yesterday.

Noland, a specialist in social statistics and industrial sociology, has accepted a position as sociology professor at North Carolina university, Chapel Hill. He also will serve as research professor of the institute of research for social science there, Saunders said.

Noland taught social statistics at SUI since coming here in February, 1949. He previously was director of industrial relations of the American Yarn and Processing company, Charlotte, N.C.

Canada's Liberal Party Wins Sweeping Victory

TORONTO (AP)—The Liberal party government headed by Louis St. Laurent won a vote of confidence in the Canadian people yesterday, sweeping to victory in nationwide elections for 262 house of commons seats.

AEC Loyalty Oath Signed by 2 SUI Physics Assistants

Holders of fellowships financed by atomic energy commission funds will be required to sign a loyalty oath to the government, Prof. George Glockler, head of the SUI department of chemistry and chemical engineering, said yesterday.

Glockler, who has just returned from a meeting of the atomic energy commission fellowship boards in Washington, D.C., said two SUI graduate physics students, Robert Holland and Phil Malmberg, have already signed such oaths. Both hold pre-doctoral fellowships.

Glockler said that to his knowledge this is the first time SUI students have signed a loyalty oath.

The oath states that the signer is not a member of the Communist party or any organization advocating overthrow of the government.

Members at the fellowship board meetings were unanimous in approving the policy that all holders of fellowships should sign pledges, Glockler said. He explained that other government employes have been required to take the oaths for some time.

RUSS INVENT SUB

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet navy claimed yesterday a Russian peasant built a submarine "50 years before it was invented in America," Moscow radio reported from Leningrad.

Trumanites Win Major Housing Bill Support

'Bossie' Stuck Her Neck Out

TRURO, ENG. (AP)—It's a good thing cows don't fly—often. One did near her yesterday. She landed on top of a passing double-decker bus full of people. The people weren't hurt, but "Bossie" broke her neck and had to be destroyed.

She had wandered onto a railroad bridge. When a freight train approached, she jumped.

Church Communications Banned By Czech State

PRAGUE (UP)—The Communist state last night banned pastoral letters and other Catholic church communications unless they have been approved in advance by the government. The government also banned unauthorized meetings of church officials.

It was announced also that sponsors of religious celebrations would be held responsible for them.

Excommunications and other penalties against priests and laymen who co-operate with the state were declared invalid and those who incurred them were promised support.

The government took its action in three decrees announced in a special issue of the "Catholic Gazette" which it now publishes. The decrees said:

- 1.—Church decrees, instructions and pastoral letters have been issued without notification to the government, as required by law. The ministry of education must be asked for approval of "pastoral letters, circulars, instructions, orders and other proclamations of this kind intended either for priests or for the public."
- 2.—Church authorities have threatened priests who co-operate with the government. The penalties threatened are for political, not religious reasons. They are contrary to law and are punishable. The state regards them as ineffective and priests who co-operate with the state will be given full support.
- 3.—Meetings of deacons and parish authorities must give, in accordance with the law, at least three days notice of meetings in parish or deacon's offices. Such meetings may be held only after permission has been given by the district national committee.

Hickenlooper Calls Probe 'Red Whale'

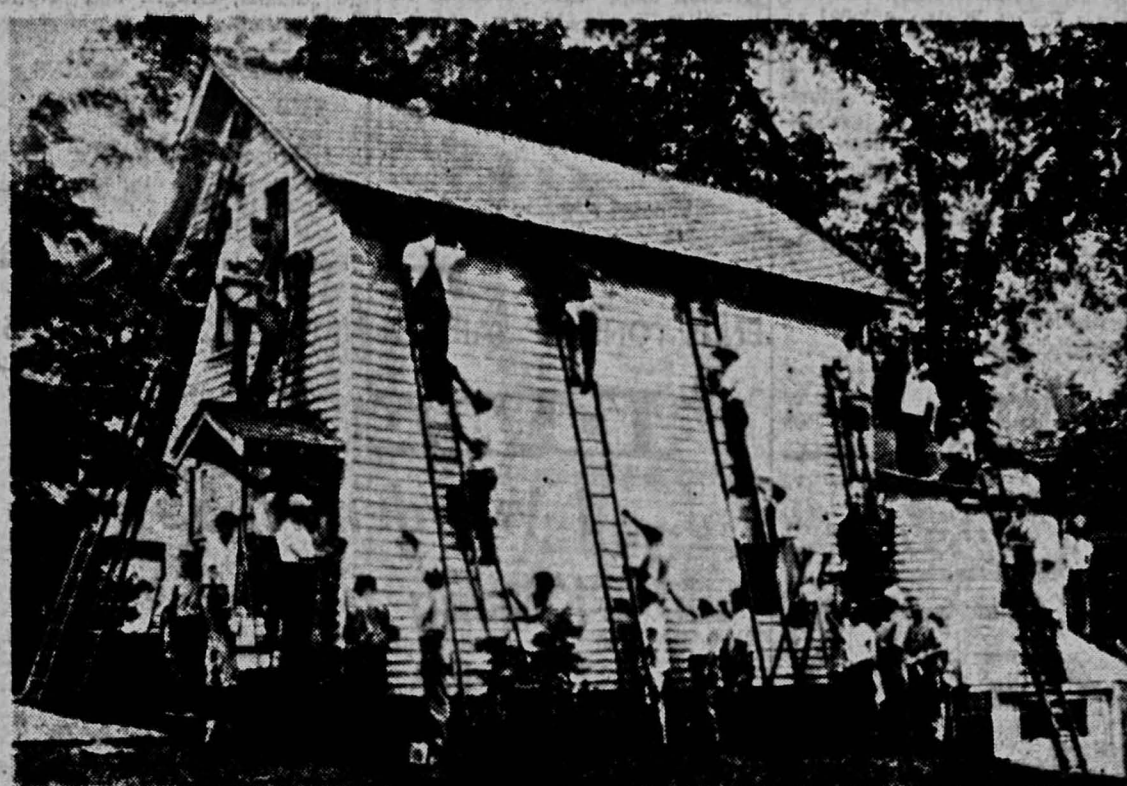

DES MOINES (AP)—Sen. Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) asserted yesterday the probe of the atomic energy commission "is not a red herring—it's a red whale."

The senator declared the senate committee conducting the investigation already has built "a very substantial case" of laxity in AEC management. He said the next week or so would bring additional "substantial factors."

Hickenlooper, who is expected to seek re-election next year, flew here to address a state "grass roots" Republican meeting. He made his remarks about the AEC at a news conference.

The senator said reaction from Iowa had been "about 10 to 1 in favor of the investigation."

House Painting Record Set in Davenport

IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG to paint the Mt. Ida Presbyterian church parish house in Davenport when 31 members of the congregation and pastors from other churches pitched in to do this job. In fact, the two-story frame dwelling of the church's new pastor was painted in 14 minutes and 23 seconds early Saturday night which established a housepainting record for the city.

Hope for Plan's Passage Today, Rayburn Says

WASHINGTON (AP)—Grabbing complete control, house administration forces yesterday won a series of smashing victories for President Truman's big housing bill and then drove hard toward passage today.

The Truman forces won all the major tests in the first voting on the bill. Foes cried "socialism" and warned against bigger federal expenditures. But the Republican opposition was badly split, with some seeking a compromise bill, and others opposing any bill at all.

After five hours of wrangling, the house quit for the day.

Passage of the housing measure, which Speaker Rayburn predicted by tonight would hand Mr. Truman the first major victory for his "fair deal" domestic program. The senate passed a similar bill April 21 by a 57 to 13 vote.

Democratic strength not only beat down substitute bills that would have killed the authorization for publicly-owned housing, but also defeated 10 Republican substitutes that proposed to add a privately-owned housing feature.

Administrationists first assumed the upper hand when they forced a shutoff of debate by a narrow 111 to 108 margin. Apparently not as many southern Democrats were opposing the administration measure as some Republicans had expected.

Then the house killed, 150 to 50, a substitute by 10 Republicans that embodied most of the provisions of Mr. Truman's program, but proposed to go further with a program of government low-interest, long-term loans for private construction of 350,000 dwelling units.

Not one Democrat joined in support of the 10 Republican bill after Rep. Patman (D-Tex.) told the house it involved about $10.5 billion and had not been studied by a house committee.

Several of the 50 Republicans who voted for this bill have indicated they now will vote for the administration bill.

Koser Decides Vote On Meter Question; Teeters Votes No

Mayor Preston Koser last night cast the deciding vote to approve the city council's contract with the Dunan Parking Meter corporation for installation of 280 Miller meters.

The vote followed Alderman Wilber J. Teeters' lone stand against the contract at the city council meeting. Aldermen Frank Fryauf Jr., James Callahan and Charles T. Smith voted yes; Aldermen Wayne E. Putnam, Gordon Webster and Teeters opposed. Alderman Clark F. Mighell was absent.

Teeters and Putnam opposed a resolution not to install more than 280 meters.

Two ordinances amending parking meter zones and fines, hours and limits were given their first readings and referred to committees for further study.

In other action the council deferred decision on Capitol street improvements and received and filed a chamber of commerce recommendation that the council work with the community parking committee.

Cites 'Politics' . . .

Iowa City's chamber of commerce yesterday blamed "partisan politics" in city affairs for hindering development of community projects and asked in a chamber publication that businessmen make an effort to remove "this stumbling block."

"It seems strange, indeed, that the 20 men who direct the affairs of your chamber of commerce and the seven men who direct the affairs of your city government should have such vastly different ideas about how to achieve the same objective—namely a more attractive Iowa City," the article said.

Sauer's Homer Raps Cards, 6-4

Cubs Triumph In Sloppy Tilt

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hank Sauer poled a terrific two-run homer in the fifth inning to give the last-place Chicago Cubs the margin by which they defeated the red-hot St. Louis Cardinals in an error-riddled game last night, 6-4.

It was the only game scheduled in the major leagues and dropped the Cards a full game back of the pace-setting Brooklyn Dodgers.

The contest started out to be a comedy of errors, each team committing three in the first four innings. Every run scored in those frames was tainted.

But there was nothing tainted about Sauer's four-base clout in the fifth. The ball cleared the left field bleacher wall and landed in Sullivan avenue. Gene Mauch, who had singled, scored ahead of Hank Sauer had previously singled in a run in a three-run rally in the third.

Reds, Phils, Dodgers Exhibit on Winners

DETROIT (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds scored five runs in a wild first inning and went on to beat the Detroit Tigers of the American league, 10-4, in an exhibition game yesterday. Lefty Johnny VanderMeed was the winning pitcher for the National League.

BROOKLYN (AP) — Scoring one run in the ninth, the Brooklyn Dodgers snapped a 3-3 tie to nose out the Cleveland Indians, 4-3, in an inter-league exhibition game last night. Paul Minner, who relieved starter Erv Palica in the sixth, was the winner. Sam Zoladak, Satch Paige's successor in the sixth, was the loser.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies of the National league routed their inter-city rivals, the American league's Philadelphia Athletics last night by the horrendous score of 19-2. The exhibition was played for the benefit of sandlot baseball. Willie Jones and Del Ennis homered for the Phillies.

VIRGINIA, MINN. (AP) — Kenneth W. King and Richard Sheppard went fishing in Sand Lake Sunday.

King hooked a small perch. As he lifted it over the side of the boat, an 11 1/2 pound northern pike jumped at the perch and landed in the boat.

Now King and Sheppard are debating over who caught the pike and who gets it.

White Sox Sign Two Young Stars to Pacts

BOSTON (AP) — The Chicago White Sox yesterday announced signing of two schoolboy pitching stars to three-year bonus contracts.

George Torporcer, Sox field director, said Frank Gardner Hamlen of Marblehead and Gus Kerziazakos of Montclair, N.J., will be assigned to the Muskegon, Mich., farm team of the class A Central league. They will report in 1950.

Terms of the young stars' contracts were not disclosed.

Hack Fined $50

DES MOINES (AP) — Stan Hack, manager of the Des Moines Bruins of the Western league baseball loop, said yesterday he had been fined $50 for arguing with Umpire Bob Phillips last Saturday night.

Hack said Senator Edwin C. Johnson, league president, advised him of the fine in a wire which described Hack's actions as "intended to inspire fans against umpires."

Ted Schroeder Only Remaining American In Wimbledon Meet

WIMBLEDON, ENG. (AP) — Backed down twice within a single point of defeat, top-seeded Ted Schroeder of LaCrescenta, Calif., rallied in a courageous last ditch stand yesterday and became America's last hope in the semifinals of the Wimbledon tennis championships with a gruelling five set victory over 23-year-old Frank Sedgman of Australia, 3-6, 6-8, 6-3, 6-2, 9-7.

Schroeder's gallant comeback saved the day from becoming a complete humiliation for the U.S. Defending Champion Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood and Frankie Parker of Los Angeles both went down to five set defeats under a broiling sun that lifted the temperature to a year's high mark of 84 degrees.

Falkenburg was eliminated by John Bromwich of Australia in a replay of last year's final round match, 3-6, 9-11, 6-0, 6-0, 6-4, when the lanky Californian's strategy of deliberately tossing away two sets to conserve his speed for the fifth backfired under the Aussie's persistent pressure.

Parker, tiring so rapidly in the closing stages the umpire asked if he were sure he could continue, was beaten by Eric Sturgess of South Africa, 3-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Big Ten Baseball Crown 16th for Iowa Varsityes

The share of the 1949 Big Ten baseball title was the sixteenth championship, clear or shared, for SUU in its 49 years of membership in the conference.

Baseball now has the edge on the other sports in number of titles, with one clear and four shared. Football and basketball each have one clear and two shared and indoor track has won two clear honors.

One championship each has been won in wrestling, swimming and gymnastics.

Football in 1899 Made $800

Hawkeyes of 50 Years Ago Were Undefeated; Grid Team Expenses Totaled $953

Football was economical, simple, but successful half a century ago at SUU.

The team of 1899, which may have its 50th reunion at homecoming next October, had a "clear gain" of some $800 at the end of its nine-game schedule.

Captured by Moray Eby, now a Cedar Rapids business man, the Hawks scored shut-out victories over eight opponents and played another to a 5-5 tie. Iowa's goal-line was uncrossed, the five points being scored by a field goal.

The Hawkeye, university yearbook, praised the management of the team with this statement:

"Not a player lacked for any article which would make him more safe or his work more effective. The report for the season showed profits from games, $1,678; from the Mikdao concert benefit, $361; and from the alumni, $95; total, $2,134."

"Out of this was taken $953 as current expenses for keeping the team on the field, leaving a balance of $1,181, of which over $800 is clear."

For the amount of $953 spent to "keep the team on the field" 50 years ago, the Iowa athletic department now can provide complete equipment for just four varsity players and have $9 left.

DiMaggio Plays Full 9 In Yank-Giant Exhibition

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe DiMaggio played the entire nine innings but did not contribute to the New York Yankees' 5-3 victory over the New York Giants in an exhibition game at the Yankee stadium last night.

Making his first appearance of the season, the ailing Yankee outfielder popped out on all his four trips to the plate. The Yankees broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth when Kirby Higbe walked two men with the bases loaded.

Knot Hole Club Members To See All Hawk Games

The school kids of Iowa will get a chance to see five Iowa football games this fall, Business Manager Frank Havlicek said yesterday.

With Knot Hole club membership cards, signed by the school principal, pupils will be admitted to each of the five home games upon payment of one dollar at the gate. A special section at the south end of the stadium will be held for the Knot Hole club.

AMES (AP) — Rain halted play in the first qualifying round of the National College Golf tournament yesterday on the Iowa State college course with 76 of the starting 225 golfers still on the links.

Some of the collegians will have to shoot up to 31 holes of golf today to finish their qualifying rounds.

Harvie Ward, Jr., North Carolina, led the first 149 finishers in the battle for medal honors with a two-under-par 69 for his first 18 holes. He barely edged past two other sharpshooters, Arnold Palmer of Wake Forest, and L. M. Crannell, Jr., North Texas State, who tied at 70.

Three SUU golfers went over the 18-holes before rain halted the qualifying round. Skip Carlson shot a 37-39-76, Bob McCarahan a 39-42-81 and Warren Strout a 44-42-86. Whether they will qualify for the finals will be known after play today.

Two other golfers fired even par, Robert Travenick, University of Southern California; and Gene Towry, North Texas state, finished with 71's.

Intermittent showers late in the afternoon relieved some of the heat and humidity but delayed late starters. However, afternoon scores were well below the early totals. Morning shotmakers, hampered by a stiff breeze, failed to approach par.

The collegians were playing the difficult course carefully because of long tees, moved back for the tournament.

The low 64 qualifiers after today's scores are posted will swing into match play tomorrow. Finals are slated Saturday.

The team title, defended by San Jose State, will be determined at the close of today's qualifying.

Park Picnic for Girl Scout Troop 15

Unusual Scouting Program

Three Girls Enjoy Novel 'Hikes'

By JOHN B. HERMANN

The three members of Girl Scout Troop 15 don't "hike" when they go on hikes, but it isn't because they don't want to.

The girls are all students at the Iowa School for severely handicapped children in Iowa City. They are Phyllis Sterling, 11, Davenport; Kathleen O'Brien, 13, Iowa City, and Joann Baker, 11, West Des Moines.

When the troop goes on "trips," as the girls call their hikes, the therapists do the hiking and the scouts ride in wheel chairs.

Beverly Cabbage, occupational therapist at the children's hospital, who is in charge of Troop 15, says "We try to carry out the same program that other Girl Scouts follow."

"However, we have to adapt everything we do so the girls can participate in spite of their handicaps," she added.

The girls are, of course, conscious of their handicaps. Miss Cabbage said, but they don't want to be helped with anything if they can possibly do it themselves. Thus Joann, who can walk, takes great pride in helping Phyllis, who cannot, into her wheel chair.

Besides the hikes and picnics, the girls learn songs, sew, learn to care for animals and plants and to receive instruction in first aid, art and color design.

All three have completed the tenderfoot requirements and are now working for their badges. For their first badge they chose working with colors.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

In his autobiography, the late William Lyon Phelps tells of a day when he had been delayed feared that his dinner had been bringing himself to sit down without saying grace, but he did rush through the ceremony as quickly as possible, mumbling the words more than usual.

As he sat down, his wife said reprovingly, "William, I couldn't understand a single word you said." "It's all right, my dear," he assured her. "I wasn't speaking to you."

Lon Tinkle, whose book reviews have established him as one of the foremost critics in the southwest, also gives occasional lectures at Southern Methodist university. He was speaking about Shakespeare one morning, and seeking to discover how much his students knew of the Bard's early writings, inquired, "Can anybody here tell me what Shakespeare did in his experimental period?" A pretty young co-ed answered promptly, "He married Anne Hathaway."

I. 81st Congress, Politically —

Last fall when Harry Truman made his successful defense of the title he inherited from Franklin Roosevelt, his biggest club was an attack against the "do-nothing" 80th congress.

President Truman carried his message all over the country, lamprooning the Republican-dominated congress at every whistle-stop where more than a dozen persons gathered.

After the dust cleared last November, President Truman found himself in a comfortable position. Not only had he confounded the nation with his personal triumph, but he also had good working majorities in both legislative chambers.

The house of representatives was stacked with 262 Democrats and there were 54 Democrats in the senate.

The nation sat back and expected to see the executive and legislative arms of the government working together harmoniously, making beautiful music together.

However, it soon became apparent that the 81st congress was not willing to play ball with the President. On just about every turn, Mr. Truman's legislative program took a beating.

Now, after nearly six months in session, the 81st congress can easily claim a title of its own. If the 80th congress was a "do-nothing" congress, the 81st is a "do-even-less" assembly.

On a purely quantitative basis the 81st congress has unquestionably fallen far behind the record of its immediate predecessor during the comparable period of 1947.

By June 15, 1947, the Republican congress had passed nine pieces of major legislation. Two other important bills were on the point of passage, and seven existing laws had been extended.

The current congress has passed only five major measures. The 81st congress has extended European aid, rent controls and export controls. It has also provided for additional facilities for storage of government loan crops and has ratified the international wheat agreement.

At this time two years ago, congress had passed the Taft-Hartley law, portal-to-portal pay, Greek-Turkish aid program, general foreign relief, elective branch, constitutional amendment on reorganization of the executive branch, constitutional amendment on two-term presidency, ratification of peace treaties with Italy and Axis satellites, income tax reduction and continuation of excise tax increases.

The "do-nothing" congress had also extended export-import bank, security purchasing authority of federal reserve banks, certain wartime allocation powers, sugar price and rationing controls, distribution and use of rubber and wartime farm labor supply program.

If President Truman had to fight a Republican-ridden congress during the current term, the congressional record could hardly be any worse.

II. 81st Congress, Economically —

A large part of the 81st congress' inactivity can be traced directly to economic uncertainty. Congress — nor anyone else — knows exactly what's going to happen to the economy in coming months. While others shrug their shoulders and wait, congress does the same by stalling.

The Democratic leadership is not unified. It is split between north and south. Southern Demos are not keen on revamping the Taft-Hartley act; northern Demos refuse to horse-trade Dixie votes for T-H repeal in return for northern votes against civil rights. Consequently, the Democrats are unable to fulfill promises to labor.

Further, the Democrat camp is split between the urge to enact the "fair deal" program and to economize. Until very recently, the President's economic advisers have said inflation is the real economic problem. Now they are not so sure.

Former Secretary of State Jimmy Byrnes recently shook things up by accusing the Democrats of pushing for a welfare state at the expense of a sound economy. The Brannan farm plan is hanging around, counting on more support as price indices fall.

In short, the administration majority is split over economic issues. Georgia's Sen. George has shelved Mr. Truman's request for a $4-billion tax increase. Such freshman fair dealers like Douglas of Illinois suddenly are plumping for economy.

The Republican opposition is split likewise. The liberal wing — the Lodges and the Morges — is urging a certain amount of reform. They have made drives for public housing and aid to education bi-partisan efforts.

But a large faction has taken the battle-cry "economy" as a slogan for doing absolutely nothing and for opposing any attempts to legislate anything.

Sen. Malone told a Young Republican convention last weekend that the country is headed for its "biggest" depression. But Sen. Taft still thinks some "social" legislation is essential for the GOP in coming political campaigns.

In brief, the GOP minority in congress is split over economic issues. Instead of presenting one minority bill opposing such administration bills as the T-H repealer and the Truman health plan, the GOP comes up with two or more conflicting proposals. Tack on at least one alternate bill sponsored by a southern Demo, and you have grand confusion.

Foreign policy, for the first time since V-J day, is running into congressional trouble — because of economic issues. There is little opposition toward the north Atlantic pact as such. But many congressmen are afraid the nation cannot foot the arms bill that must accompany it.

On specific issues, the rule of economic uncertainty can become an effective yardstick for predicting the fate of any specific piece of legislation.

The $4-billion tax increase, for instance, is out. Labor legislation will be a slightly modified T-H law. Too many congressmen fear the thought of strong unions in a depression.

Civil rights, mixed up in a north-south horse trade within Demo ranks, will not go far. A token bill may be passed, no more. The senate-passed housing bill has a 50-50 chance of slipping through the house.

Social security extension and other social legislation stands little chance of passage.

Congress, then, has done little because it is not sure of which way it is to legislate. The administration — with a request for a $4-billion tax boost in congress — is now drafting a bill to revive public works in case of a serious recession.

The Republican party has not equated any legislative goals with the question of economy. Some members seem willing to continue with no rule of thumb at all, making up their support or opposition as they go along.

A large part of congress' inactivity is a magnification of the uncertainty now widespread throughout the country. Until the business cycle definitely dips, climbs or levels off, congress is not likely to change.

McBride Still Travelling

Child Psychology and Development May Be His Real Vocation in the Long Run

(Bill McBride is attempting to prove what he always told the staff of the Daily Iowan, that he's different from other people. Falling to find the type of newspaper job he wanted when he graduated this month, he set out to tour the country in seek of THE job. McBride has kindly kept the Daily Iowan informed of his whereabouts and his doings with columns which we are publishing as received.)

By BILL MCBRIDE

the job prospects in Rapid City aren't much brighter than they were in Pierre (pronounced Peer) S.D. at midnight. At present, this is being written on a borrowed typewriter in the Rapid City bus depot. I am seated behind the baggage counter, and a whole roomful of prospective passengers are cocking eyebrows in my direction.

Well, I left Minot yesterday at 10 a.m. and have been bouncing along by bus since then. During the trip I managed to accumulate several things with which I didn't start. The most prominent in my mind at present is a blown-in-the-bottle head cold. Along with this goes the burned umber taste in my mouth. It's strange how they'll allow those owls to perch in the baggage rack.

The fellow who invented the word monotony must have taken a bus ride through North Dakota to get his inspiration. There are no fences, no trees, no people, no houses . . . no nothing. It was while riding through this paradise that I received the two blisters on my sitter the size of arterial highway stop signs. There is nothing like travel to broaden a man.

It was also during this tour through the wilderness that I gained the reputation of being no small punkins in the area of child psychology and development.

It all began in the bustling little community of Turtle Lake, N.D. where a mother and her five year old blessing boarded our land yacht. The mother and child climbed into the seat behind me where Junior promptly occupied himself diligently by beating me over the head with a comic book . . . Blue Cockroach or something of that sort.

Mother informed him that such goings on weren't nice, and I sided in with her. Finally Junior also agreed it wasn't nice and took to crumbling his Hershey bar down the back of my neck. What sport!

Tiring of the chocolate game, the adorable child decided to give the whole bus a taste of his energy. Up and down the aisle he raced, treading on corns, snagging nylon hose and in general, being the gay, healthy little bugger that he was.

The situation rapidly grew worse instead of better, and Mother reasoned with Junior as a good mother should. "I wouldn't do that Junior . . . not the nice lady's hat. Please come back and be quiet, Junior. I don't know why you can't mind."

Several eons (and three Hershey bars) later, we pulled into the town of Herried, S.D. It was a three-minute stop on our schedule, and Mother had to sell a tea kettle to a lame Eskimo, but figured she might not make it if she took Junior with her. Seeing her plight, I volunteered to care for the little rascal while she went about her business in three minutes.

No sooner had Mother left when Junior began to put on a rodeo in my lap. He kicked, punched, whooped, tore a comic book into shreds, and behaved rather poorly all around. For 60 of the 180 seconds, I tried to reason with Junior. But he just didn't seem to want to listen.

Finally I said, "Junior, if you'll lean over here I'll tell you a secret." His bright little face beaming, Junior leaned, full of expectation. So I told him the secret; "If you don't shut your fat little face and be quiet for the rest of this trip, I'm going to kick your little kiester all the way back to Turtle Lake."

It's odd how a little adult reasoning can make a child see the light. He sat in his seat and never made a peep for the rest of the day. Mother marveled at the change and said I certainly had a way with children.

I had a way with the passengers too. With the possible exception of two nuns and a rabbi, I had placed myself in the good graces of all fellow travellers. But then, I suppose you can't expect to please everyone all the time.

Illegal Search, Seizure OK'd for State Courts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The supreme court ruled yesterday the states, as well as the federal government, must guarantee citizens protection against illegal search and seizure, with one big difference.

The difference is that evidence obtained by such means may be used in the state courts if state law says so. But such evidence still can not be used in federal trials.

The court was unanimous in affirming the constitutional guarantee against "unreasonable" search and seizure by all authorities — local, state or federal. But, on the specific case at hand, it split 6 to 3 in favor of permitting illegally-seized evidence to be introduced at state or local trials.

Use of illegally-seized evidence in federal cases has been banned since the turn of the century.

TO THE EDITOR:

My mail brings a clipping from the Daily Iowan entitled "Prof. Roberts Opens Lectures on Atom" enclosed in an anonymous note.

Now my mother told me it is polite to ignore anonymous letters, or at least to permit only the police to answer them. But this one put me in such good humor that I feel impelled to share it.

"There may be sillier things (writes Mr. Anon) than a Prof. of education talking about the atom but I can't think what."

Seldom is it my pleasure to feel so completely in accord with a kindly critic. At the same time my teacher's conscience is stirred to duty. I must enlighten this enquiring mind.

There is one thing sillier than a prof. of education talking about the atom and that is an educator NOT talking about education for the atomic age.

There is another thing that strikes me sometimes silly enough for a chuckle, namely, forming and stating opinions without reference to facts. But that is just my perverted sense of humor.

There, there, Mr. Anon, I do not wish to be rude or return malice for your altruistic attempt to guide me into sanity. I know you cannot read.

But had you asked your grandson to read the article instead of just the headlines, you would have learned that the Daily Iowan can report with accuracy.

Said the reporter: "Roberts declared that the only way we can learn to understand the social problems that the atomic age will present is to look at them through the eyes of the scientist!" which is precisely what will happen in Iowa City each Tuesday night.

My correspondent asks a serious question. As he overlooked the minor matter of signature and address, you will I feel sure, Mr. Editor, permit me to reply in your columns.

He asks: "Do you think possibly someone from the physics department might be a happier choice?"

Sure. A physical chemist suggested presenting this series. It will be given by him, by a bio-chemist and by a nuclear physicist. Believing their work to have educational value, these gentlemen gave me the pleasure of introducing them and their subject.

Hereafter, I am one of their audience. You, Mr. Anon, are most cordially invited to sit with me. You will be given ample — and official — time for uncensored criticism. Indeed, your criticism will be invited and earnestly studied.

And together with the other critics you may share a privilege apparently dear to your modest heart. They will be anonymous.

Hew Roberts
Department of Adult Education

TO THE EDITOR:

Why don't the teachers here break down and be natural as well as comfortable as do teachers in other institutions?

We students will like them just as well if they wear informal clothes, sport shirts open and free, just as we do. Besides, we do not think that scholarly knowledge and dress in the hot summer have any relationship.

So come now, profs, be sensible as well as honest with yourselves. We shall have more respect for you if you discard the hot coats and jackets, and stop acting in a foolish, though hypocritical and conventional way.

Interpreting the News —

Snyder May Talk Currency

By J. M. ROBERTS JR.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder is going to Europe and the middle east soon to inspect his department's offices there. But if he runs into a lot of European officials who want to discuss currency and other economic difficulties with him he'll have to listen, of course.

One of the world's chief worries now is the situation in Berlin, where a combination of factors serves to keep prices on an exportable goods above the level of a declining world market and seriously threatens both British recovery and the Marshall plan.

Snyder is in the habit of leaving such matters to the world monetary fund, ECA and the other agencies specifically set up to handle such business abroad. But he also acts frequently as a carrier of news about the problems of American business to the white house, and he represents the United States on the fund.

Abroad, from all indications, he's going to hear a good many references to the pegged price of the British pound at $4.03 whereas in a free market it actually brings, on occasion, no more than $2.50. His conclusions may have an important bearing on Anglo-American financial relations.

American exporters have worried off and on ever since the war over the British pound. A year ago the British were considerably resentful. They argued there was no point in discussing revaluation as long as they could sell, in an eager world market, everything they could produce.

That situation is coming to an end — has already come to an end in some lines. For example, one of Britain's important sources of dollar income has been drying up rapidly as American automobile production catches up with demand.

For many years Britain's textile industry has provided an important part of her exportable production. Yet, like the same industry in New England, it was based on "imported" raw materials. As the New England industry has been moving south to the source of supply, so the world industry tends to develop nearer the cotton fields and sheeplands, and Britain's position in the industry becomes uneconomic. The British have fought back with restrictive monopolistic practices which are no longer effective.

These are just two of the fields in which continuing high production costs are pricing British exports out of the market. And business practices, although important, are not the only factors. Labor demands, traditional precision work in competition with modern mass production methods, inefficient plants which they have not been able to retool since before the war — many factors are involved.

But to Britain's normal customers, many of whom have been encouraged to go into competition with her in the post-war sellers' market, the price of the pound seems an arbitrary and uneconomic thing, affecting their own currencies and generally acting as a brake on the American effort for free and constantly expanding world markets in a cooperative rather than the old competitive trade system.

Snyder has no regular mission to perform in these matters. But his trip will take him to places where the pound and the dollar come more and more into competition.

When foreign financial officials come to Washington they always pay him little courtesy calls even if their business is more directly with other agencies. They naturally "talk shop."

Just as naturally, Snyder will reciprocate while abroad, probably collecting some ideas in which the white house, state department and ECA will be highly interested.

Basic Traynor

By NORM TRAYNOR

Now that the new swimming pool is in full swing, I thought I'd better get the bathing suit out and see if I could get another year out of it.

Have had it for some time but it looks as though it will finally need replacing. Seems there's a small hole starting in the knee and I'm the last person that would be seen in public with a hole in the knee of my bathing suit.

So I took a trip down to the local merchants and asked to see some of their suits. Now, as I say, it's been some time since I bought a suit, but what I saw I never thought could happen. In one store the salesman pulled out something that looked like an old pants rag and held it in front of me.

"Gadzooks, man," I said. "Do you expect me to wear that?" Obviously he did because he looked quite hurt, but he soon got over it. Then he dug around in the pile and came up with something that looked as though it would fly away if he took his hands off it. Now wouldn't I look silly in that thing?

I can just see myself walking along the beach with nothing except something that looks like a bird wrapped around my hips. I can see some sense in the suits with the fish on them. Obviously, they'd be a great asset in helping you get acquainted with the fish you might meet while swimming around on the bottom of a lake.

But what that bird is supposed to do I'll never know. Maybe it's supposed to scare the fish. But even a fish must have enough sense to know that birds belong in the air. Well, I rejected that one and then he pulled out a pair of those matching suits.

These I'm convinced can be very valuable. If your wife, or girl friend, or whoever you're matched up with ever gets accosted on the beach, all you have to do is go up and stand by her side. Without saying a word, you'll get your point across.

The clerk can see that I'm getting interested and he starts telling me about other advantages.

"You can get matching towels to go with them," he says.

Then he produced the towels and they have "Hers" and "His" printed on them. This always seemed like a foolish custom to me and I told him so. He told me that if I thought it was too personal that he had something else.

This time he got out a towel and it had "To Whom It May Concern" printed on it. That did it. He lost a sale right there. I can stand just so much. I decided I'd see what I could do about repairing my old suit.

State Historical Society Elects Coleman to Board of Curators

Carroll Coleman, SUI typographer, was elected to the board of curators of the State Historical society at the society's biennial meeting yesterday in Old Capitol. Coleman replaced Charles E. Snyder.

Eight persons on the nine-member board were re-elected. They were W. Howard Smith, Cedar Rapids; Carl H. Mather, Tipton; Raymond J. Heikel, Mount Pleasant; L. H. Kornder and H. J. Lytle, Davenport, and Lawrence C. Crawford, William R. Hart and S. T. Morrison, Iowa City.

William J. Petersen, superintendent of the society, reported that membership had reached an all-time high of 2,294, compared with 1,123 members in 1947. Ninety-one Iowa counties has gained 72 active members and 101 life members during the past two years.

Iowa now ranks 3rd in historical society memberships of states in the upper Mississippi valley, Petersen said.

The board of curators yesterday elected 72 persons to membership—69 from Iowa and three from out-of-state. New Iowa City members were Glen D. Baylan, E. F. Lenthe and Russell M. Ross, associate professor of political science at SUI.

Out-of-state members included

ed Carlos Alvarez de la Cadena, Mexico City journalist and recent SUI visitor.

Iowa City persons elected to life membership were Charles Beckman, L. F. Cerny, Mrs. John M. Fisk, W. J. Parizek, O. Clyde Sutherland, Myron J. Walker and Mrs. Edward H. Weber.

Earl E. Harper, director, school of fine arts; M. Willard Lampe, professor, school of religion; Lothrop Smith, professor, chemistry department; Wilber J. Teeters, dean emeritus, college of pharmacy, and C. M. Uptegraff, professor, college of law.

After a 6:30 p.m. dinner at the Hotel Jefferson, society members and guests heard a talk on "History and Hobbies" by J. A. Swisher, society research associate.

Highlighting the evening program were colored slides and comments on a river steamboat trip by Curator Carl H. Mather, E. F. Lenthe and Russell M. Ross, associate professor of political science at SUI.

Overcoming Handicaps Can Be Fun

LEARNING TO OVERCOME SPEECH HANDICAPS, these children staying in the SUI speech clinic's dormitories at 8 and 12 E. Bloomington street, take time out from their lessons to play a few games. The boys' housemother, Mrs. James Doolittle, supervises the fun. The children work and play together to help overcome their fears of ridicule and distrust of others. They are here for the SUI summer speech clinic program, which concludes July 29.

Clinic Corrects Speech Through Recreation

By CARL BRACH

Square dancing and speech correction may seem far apart, but how is a fellow going to ask a girl to dance if he stutters?

Those in charge of the SUI speech clinic dormitories at 8 and 12 E. Bloomington street are trying to answer this question through well-planned recreation periods for the 22 boys and 11 girls who are living in the clinic dormitories this summer, according to Dorothy J. Jamison, dormitory program supervisor.

The two recreation periods daily for the children include ball games and swimming in the afternoon and mixed get-togethers in the evening for more games, songs and square dances.

Since there is a shortage of speech correction schools in Iowa, children come from all over the state for help. Some are sent to the six-week session by the state, while others are enrolled by their parents. Enrollment is limited so that teachers can give individual attention. About 20 children staying in Iowa City foster homes are also taking part in the recreation program.

SUI speech department said "other children sometimes laugh at and criticize children with speech handicaps, and they become nervous, shy and distrustful of others. He said that as a result, they miss a lot of things that other children experience and their social life becomes one of fear and loneliness.

This effect is combatted, according to Brown, by having the children live and play together with others their own age who don't laugh or criticize them. Thus they learn to understand their problems better so they can work on them and improve.

Each house has a housemother in direct charge, a proctor and a clinician, with one nurse serving both houses. "Each child keeps his part of the room clean and makes up his bed," according to Mrs. James Doolittle, boys' housemother. This, she says, teaches responsibility and judgment.

IC Committee Talks About Public Health

Problems of food handling, restaurant sanitation and public health organization were discussed last night at a meeting of the Iowa City Public Health committee.

Mrs. J.C. Pryor, vice-president of the Burlington board of health and Mrs. L.B. Ringold Jr., Burlington's restaurant and food sanitarian, spoke to the committee in the Johnson county courthouse at 8 p.m.

A movie entitled "Hashling" to "Foodhandling" demonstrated the ways in which communicable diseases could be transferred as a result of improper and careless food handling and storage.

"You have to get out and sell public health just like anything else," Mrs. Ringold said. She explained the grading system and standard ordinance by which certain standards of cleanliness and sanitation of the city's food and drink dispensers are maintained.

Fall meetings of the Iowa City committee will start in October.

Eviction, Payment Ordered by Court

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Clark, 502 1-2 Clark street, were ordered to vacate their apartment in an eviction suit ruling handed down by the Johnson county district court yesterday.

In addition to the ouster ruling asked by Gordon Webster, owner of the apartment, the defendants were ordered to pay $65 rent for the month of June, plus costs.

In the original suit, Webster, fifth ward alderman, charged that the defendants had failed to make the June rent payment as contracted.

Thursday the court ordered the defendants to pay the $65 rent to the county clerk, which they failed to do.

Macbride Library Departments Moved

The catalogue and order department of the general library in Macbride have recently been moved to more convenient locations, Norman L. Kilpatrick, associate director of SUI libraries, said yesterday.

The catalogue department has been moved from rooms 1, 2 and 3 in the basement to rooms 110, 111 and 112 on the main floor of Macbride. This shift makes bibliographies more easily available for reference Kilpatrick said.

The order department has been moved from rooms 14 and 15 to rooms 2 and 3 in the basement.

Kilpatrick also said Irene Steidl, who is in charge of inter-library loans, now has her office in room 1 of Macbride hall.
