British Imports Cut To Minimum: Cripps

LONDON (UP) — Sir Stafford Cripps, chancellor of the exchequer, disclosed yesterday that he had ordered imports from the United States cut to an absolute minimum as one means of combatting a major British economic crisis.

In a grim statement to the house of commons, Cripps announced as had been expected that Britain's gold and dollar reserves had dropped to $1.6-billion, far below the safety mark.

Cripps called for "immediate corrective action" to stop the drain of the country's reserves. He rejected any idea of devaluing the pound.

He asked industry to reduce costs and prices and give top priority to producing goods which might be exported to the United States. He asked labor to work harder and more efficiently without higher pay and to give up what he called in a later statement "the ridiculous luxury of politically inspired strikes." He called on the country generally to abandon any idea of increasing personal incomes.

Cripps's statement confronted Britons with months of ever intensified austerity after six years of war and four years of an uneasy peace.

It means less tobacco and, he warned, probably less food insofar as imports from America are concerned.

While Cripps was speaking in commons Fuel Minister Hugh Gaitskell said in a speech in Wales:

"This is a moment of supreme crisis for the government."

Cripps appealed indirectly to the United States and Canada to buy more British goods, for their own sake as well as Britain's.

Snyder Rejects French Dollar Devaluation Plan

PARIS (UP) — Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder has rejected a French government proposal that the United States devalue the dollar by raising the price of gold, it was understood last night.

He told French leaders that the solution of Europe's economic crisis will be found not in "currency manipulation" but in getting markets for both European and American surplus products.

Snyder is understood, however, to have said that he believes devaluation of most European currencies, and especially the British pound, is desirable.

French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche is understood to have suggested to Snyder that the United States raise the price of gold from $35 to $55 an ounce. This would mean devaluation of the dollar.

Heat Wave Toll Hits 152 With No Relief in Sight

(By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Much of the nation still simmered yesterday in a long heat wave which had brought death to at least 152 persons, six of them Iowans.

No widespread relief was in sight, although cooler air from Canada had overspread most of New England, New York, and northeastern Pennsylvania. The midwestern states on the northern border, including Wisconsin, Michigan, and the upper two-thirds of Minnesota, also felt cooler temperatures. The weather bureau said this cooler atmosphere probably would not spread further.

Elsewhere in the hot belt from the Rocky mountains eastward, scattered thundershowers brought but temporary relief. The rains, which continued to fall yesterday in parts of some midwestern states, merely made the humidity high and uncomfortable.

Chicago, after six straight days of 90 degree temperatures or higher, received temporary relief Tuesday from overnight showers. The temperature was 82 degrees in the downtown district at noon (CST) although it was higher at the airport, at the southwest end of town away from Lake Michigan.

Baltimore registered a blistering 98 yesterday, equaling the 1911 record there for that date.

The city's water supply was threatened by excessive use, and lawn sprinkling was banned.

Many Maryland areas reported crops in "critical condition" because of the heat and lack of rain. The weather bureau predicted scattered thundershowers today for the north central states, with high humidity and temperatures 10 to 15 degrees above normal in the middle Mississippi and lower Ohio valleys.

"What we need up here right now are refrigerators. We've had difficulty the past few weeks keeping food fresh because of the heat wave. Why the temperature has even been up to 50 degrees."

SPITZBERGEN (UP) — There's even a heat wave in the Arctic circle.

Sheriff Haakon Balstad, opening the first telephone connection between this Norwegian polar dependency and the mainland, said yesterday:

"What we need up here right now are refrigerators. We've had difficulty the past few weeks keeping food fresh because of the heat wave. Why the temperature

Conferees Pass Housing Plan

Final House, Senate Okay Expected
Today for First 'Fair Deal' Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The compromise, trimmed-down version of President Truman's multi-billion-dollar housing bill was approved by a senate-house conference committee last night. It calls for 810,000 publicly-owned dwellings in six years.

Administration leaders voiced hope that the senate and house will approve the legislation finally today and toss it on the President's desk. It would give Mr. Truman his first major victory for the domestic program he called the "fair deal".

Besides the controversial public housing section, the bill sets up a huge slum clearing program in cities and provides farm housing aids.

The conferees agreed to accept higher senate figures of $325-million for aids to farm housing, instead of the lower $312.5-million in the house-approved bill.

Hundreds of tons of stockpiled coal were lost in the blaze which also roared through a transportation company garage and threatened four fuel oil storage tanks in a quarter-mile area along Front street bordering on the Penobscot river.

Hiss Defense Hurls Charge of 'Politics' In Final Jury Plea

NEW YORK (AP) — Alger Hiss' perjury trial neared its end yesterday with a defense charge that his chief accuser was playing politics when he branded Hiss a Communist in the midst of the 1948 presidential campaign.

For three and one-half hours, the defense attorney shouted and pleaded for the acquittal of Hiss, once high in the state department.

Then, with the crowded courtroom still hanging on every word of the tense plea, court was adjourned overnight with the defense still one hour away from the end of its summary.

The case is scheduled to reach the jury of 10 men and two women today, on the 26th day of the trial.

Defense Attorney Lloyd Paul Stryker, after a dramatically timed courtroom entrance, launched a scathing attack on ex-Communist Whittaker Chambers, who first questioned Hiss' honor.

When Chambers first called Hiss a Communist before the house un-American activities committee in Washington last August, the 1948 presidential campaign was underway.

Stryker pointed out that all political polls at that time were forecasting a Republican victory.

"He (Chambers) chose what he thought was the strongest side," thundered Stryker, pounding the jury rail and raging back and forth before the jury box.

Trio Robs Gasoline Station Man of $85

Three unidentified men robbed the attendant at the Dean Jones Texaco station, 32 W. Burlington street, of about $85 at 1 a.m. yesterday, police said.

A state-wide alarm has been sent out for the bandits, they added.

Bert Balsinger, robbery victim, said the three men demanded his wallet's contents after entering the station and ordering cigarettes. They made no attempt to rob the cash register or safe, he said.

Balsinger claimed all the men carried pistols; and he described them all as having dark hair and dark eyes. He remembered one man was about five feet, four inches tall, and wore overalls, a sport coat and moccasin oxfords.

The second man was about five feet, nine inches tall, and weighed around 150 pounds. He wore dark trousers, a dark brown shirt and dark oxfords, Balsinger claimed.

He said the third man was about six feet, four inches tall, wearing a dark blue serge suit and dark oxfords.

Balsinger said after the men took his money, they told him to stand still for a few minutes.

"Then they disappeared around the corner, and that's the last I saw of them," he said.

MAO BACKS MOSCOW

MOSCOW (UP) — Mao Tse-Tung, Chinese Communist leader, said yesterday in a full page article in Pravda, that "we belong in the anti-imperialist front led by the Soviet Union and we can hope for genuine friendly aid from this front and not the imperialist front."

Iowa Farmer Walks Last Mile to Gallows

CORLISS R. BRUNTLETT (in dark suit), Iowa farmer convicted for the 1947 shooting of a livestock dealer, walked the last mile at Fort Madison penitentiary before he was hanged at dawn yesterday.

The Rev. Herman V. Bongers, Catholic prison chaplain, led the march to the gallows reading inaudibly from a prayer book. Bruntlett was flanked by deputy prison wardens John Bennett and Bernard Nelson.

CIO-U.S. Steel Negotiations Collapse

He Wasn't Floating a Loan . . .

CHICAGO (UP) — Police raided a flooded basement yesterday and arrested a handbook operator taking bets while seated on a raft.

Police Capt. Thomas Alcock said that Arthur Olsen, 33, was "padding furiously" between three telephones, taking bets on the horse.

Olsen, hustled to the police station, said the basement was flooded by Tuesday's rains. He said he made the raft himself.

Bruntlett Dies For '47 Killing

FORT MADISON (UP) — Corliss R. Bruntlett, 52, an outwardly mild farmer, was hanged yesterday for the brutal 1947 slaying of a wealthy livestock dealer.

An impeccable figure in a new prison-made suit, Bruntlett walked without a falter up 16 steps to the gallows and was pronounced dead 14 minutes after the trap was released.

He was executed at Fort Madison penitentiary for the murder of Percy Smith, 57, Council Bluffs on Dec. 8, 1947. Bruntlett admitted shooting Smith and then burning the body on a pyre of corn cobs, soaked with kerosene.

Natty but sweating in tan gabardine "civvies," Vaughan arrived with his family and friends at Union station at the end of a 19-day vacation trip that included a cruise to Guatemala.

"I paid it all out of my own pocket," he said.

The condemned man was the father of three children, ranging in ages from 2 to 5. His wife and family had not called at the prison since last March.

In a farewell message handed to the chaplain, Bruntlett said he wanted to extend "most sincere grief and sympathy" to members of his family.

The impact, he said, should be sufficient to "give even a re-incarnated Hitler pause."

Vanderberg, the senate's GOP leader in foreign affairs, spoke on the second day of the treaty debate which is expected to reach the voting stage before the end of the week. The treaty, already signed by the United States and 11 other nations in the so-called north Atlantic area, requires a two-thirds senate vote to become binding upon this country.

Without mentioning Soviet Russia by name as a plotter against world peace, Vandenberg sternly denounced "embattled, greedy Communism."

Eisenhart told the jury he was a souvenir fancier. When he learned that Tokyo Rose was in the prison where he was stationed, he sought her autograph.

She wrote on the bill "Iva I. Toguri," and after it, in quotation marks, "Tokyo Rose."

The steelworkers are seeking a fourth-round pay boost. In 1946, the industry granted an 18 1/2 cent hourly wage hike, then gave 15 cents more in 1947, and, last year, came across with 13 cents additional.

The current contract has almost a year to run but was reopened this summer on "rates of pay" and insurance. The contract permits a strike if no agreement is reached by July 16.

U.S. Steel, in a three-hour session at which negotiations were resumed after a two-week recess, told the union wage hikes were out. "Big Steel" also said its refusal to discuss pensions could be arbitrated and that any insurance program would have to be paid for equally by union and company.

C.R. Schlesselman and T.W. King, both of Swisher, pleaded innocent yesterday in Johnson county district court to three charges filed against them as a result of a June 4 raid on the Ranch supper club in Cou Palls.

Schlesselman, operator of the supper club, was charged with the illegal possession of liquor and gambling devices, and King was charged with recording and registering race horse bets in information filed by County Attorney Jack C. White after the raid.

More than 100 bottles of liquor, punch boards, slot machines, a telegraphic quotation ticker, a microphone and sound system and racing bet sheets were confiscated.

The state criminal investigation agents who made the raid turned the confiscated articles over to Sheriff Albert J. (Pat) Murphy.

French Discussions Held at Union Table

A table for students who speak French is being reserved every noon in the cafeteria of the Iowa Union. Prof. C.J. LeVois of the romance language department said yesterday.

Approximately 10 students are now attending the lunches, Jacqueline Ragner, chairman of the group, said. The students have been discussing current politics and comparing American and French women and food.

A Spanish table is begun earlier in the summer under the direction of Rosa Igarzabal, G. of Uruguay. Several of the students take turns at both the French and the Spanish tables, Miss Ragner said.

Methodist Students To Picnic Sunday

A picnic for the Methodist students will be held Sunday afternoon at Lake Macbride, the Rev. R. R. Sanks of the Wesley foundation said yesterday.

Students will divide into two groups and go at different times, Rev. Sanks said. Those who wish to swim will meet at Methodist student center at 120 N. Dubuque street before 2:30 p.m. The other group will meet at 4 p.m.

The cost will be 35 cents a plate. Single and married students are welcome, Rev. Sanks said.

Harold Swartz, Robert Todd, George A. Pavlick Jr., Robert Cook and Helen Larson are members of the picnic committee.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

AMERICA'S leading composers of popular music have one thing in common. When surrounded by convivial companions, all of them love to sit down at the piano—and play their own compositions. Truth to tell, they cannot help themselves. Should they ever protest that they are "not in the mood" they are accused of being ingrates and spoilsports.

The composer who needed least urging was the late George Gershwin. He frankly delighted in playing his songs on all possible occasions—and how he could play them, too! I remember one dinner party at George Kaufman's house where not only Gershwin, but Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers and Arthur Schwartz were present. We were having dessert in the ground-floor dining room when Kaufman rose and announced dramatically, "When I give the signal, all composers can make a break for the piano on the second floor. The one who gets there first can play his own song for exactly one hour."

Everybody laughed and settled back for more talk. When we finally did climb back to the second floor, however, there was George Gershwin seated at the piano, happily improvising on the theme of "Embraceable You." "I'm a little bothered by that crack Kaufman made downstairs," he confided to me. "Do you think he was kidding?" Copyright, 1949, by Bennett Cerf. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Wipe-Clean Curtains Save on Budget

Work Made Easier By Plastic Drapes

By PAT LEWIS

A wipe-clean curtain for crowded budgets is now on the market in Iowa City. Made of plastic, the draperies look and hang like cloth.

They have no "see-through" effect, but have a self-lined look, and come in a variety of colors and prints.

These curtains, which only upon close inspection prove to look like plastic, should save time, money and effort for housewives. The curtains need only to be wiped off with a damp cloth for ordinary cleaning. At housecleaning time they can be tossed in the washing machine, with no danger of stretching or shrinking and with no ironing necessary.

The curtains are non-inflammable and the manufacturer claims they are mildew-proof and will not crack or peel.

The plastic curtains are easily hung on a rod, and a pleat can be pinched in with the fingers.

The low price becomes even lower when the long life of these plastic drapes is taken into account.

Now that plastic curtains need not be used solely around the shower and tub, homemakers can use the prints, stripes and colors offered in the new drapes to add interest to any room.

Davies Discusses 'Big Business' in Article

Big business destroys the ideals of small business, develops a system of taxation through unearned income and stimulates wars. Prospects of an atom bomb war are prompting a decentralization of business, since it is important to the national security. Government support of this movement, nearness to markets, better labor conditions and scenic attractions are also inducing big business to move to the country, Davies wrote.

But Davies added, big business has advanced society by fostering scientific development and it was an essential factor in keeping the United States from losing World War II.

Recent world developments have brought the ideals of small business and big business into sharp contrast, Davies said. Small business is individualistic, independent and equalitarian, while big business is collective, aristocratic and imperialistic.

The public has a contradictory attitude toward big business, it supports the efficiency of big business but condemns it for the control by which it gains that efficiency, Davies said.

Idealistic reformers stimulate this criticism of both big business and big government and support small business and organized labor, Davies wrote.

High Pound Said Unwise

Sir Stafford Cripps says Britain has "not the slightest intention of devaluing the pound."

Five will get you ten in certain American financial circles that he can't make it stick beyond the first of the year, and probably not beyond September.

Cripps, chancellor of the exchequer and virtual economic dictator of Britain, has been brutally direct in budgetary, trade and production matters in an effort to pull the country through regardless of temporary political effects.

He has dared to believe the people will support this directness for the sake of Britain without holding the sacrifices he asks against the party.

But there is a political problem connected with devaluation which cannot be entirely ignored. It will, at least temporarily, increase the cost of living. One of the questions the labor government must consider is whether to do it now and hope the repercussions will subside before the May elections, or to try to put it off until after that.

Cripps' words suggest that the latter course may have been chosen. There is strong doubt in the United States it can succeed.

The national advisory council on international monetary and financial problems has just reported the time for devaluation of European currencies has arrived.

Secretary State Acheson says Britain must get her export prices down to where she can compete in world markets. They are part of what is becoming a chorus.

Europeans have complained for two years that Britain, through the pegged price of $4.03 for the pound, was charging inflated prices. Britain replied for a long time that there was no reason to devalue while she could sell everything she produced. That time is ended.

Britain now contends devaluation would only be a temporary palliative at best, that wages would soon have to go up to meet increased living cost, that other European currencies would have to be adjusted also, and that in the long run the general relationship would be unchanged. Which may be true. But the short run is the greatest immediate concern.

What the British want is time to modernize their productive plant, increase efficiency and break costs down.

Sir Stafford obviously is trying for that time in his announcement of a virtual ban on imports from dollar countries until September, when Marshall plan funds for the coming year will be allocated, a new system of payments between European countries will go into effect and a new appraisal of the situation can be made.

The United States is caught in the middle of the whole business.

Britain has decided against devaluation now, America probably will go along, even to the point of statements by officials attempting to minimize the crisis, as Acheson did yesterday.

But if Britain goes down to $1,624-million in gold and dollars combined in a dangerous financial position which threatens to nullify America's entire investment in the Marshall plan.

A Britain which cannot buy from the United States complicates our own current business troubles, cutting off markets for great American surpluses in tobacco, wheat, cotton and refined oil products, to mention only the most important. America's economic ability to support Europe until the day of self-support is weakened.

What if Britain does devalue, her competition with the United States for export markets becomes greater, and America's economy is also weakened?

It's a ring-tailed merry-go-round, affected by the cold war and all the other multitudinous problems of the postwar world.

For the long run, basic factors such as improved world distribution through development of underdeveloped areas and free trade will have to be brought into play. For the short run, the odds are on early British devaluation as something that will have the most immediate effect.

The heart of the problem is Britain's inefficient, costly production. Currency juggling can shield the situation, it can't cure it. That's why the current crisis is so serious . . . it proves that Britain isn't able to pay her way in a competitive postwar world. Only the most drastic economy surgery can put the island back on its feet.

Politically, the British crisis is bad for the western world. Soviet postwar calculations plan on a depression in the United States to kick the props out from under the rest of the western world. If the slight business slump the U. S. is experiencing today can plunge Britain into so deep a crisis, the prospect of facing Russia is not bright.

Santa Claus on Vacation

The GI gravy train, laden with all kinds of financial assistance to veterans, will probably drop the 52-20 jobless pay benefits unless congress acts within the next two weeks.

The program was originally designed to cushion veterans against a recession that was expected immediately after the war.

However, framers of the 52-20 provision did not foresee a recession that came much later in the postwar period—toward the end of 1948.

The program, which was embodied in the GI Bill, would pay $20 to veterans for 52 weeks, but was limited to two years after the termination of the war, or two years after discharge from the service, whichever was later.

The 80th congress picked July 25, 1947, as the official end of World War II. Accordingly, rights to jobless benefits are due to expire the last week in July for the majority of veterans.

There are, however, duplicate bills in house and senate committees aiming to extend the unemployment benefits from two to five years.

Rep. John Rankin (D-Miss.) has bottled up the house version of the bill, preferring instead his own multi-billion dollar bonus bill which he hopes to get out of committee first.

Rep. Walter Huber (D-Ohio) has filed a discharge petition to force the 52-20 bill onto the floor of the house.

In spite of the boom that came on the heels of the war, more than half of the World War II veterans took advantage of the 52-20 benefits.

A figure in the neighborhood of 8.5-million veterans represents the number of veterans who shared in the program. The government spent more than $3.67-billion since the program went into effect in September, 1944.

The actual number of claims has declined during the fiscal year just completed in comparison to a similar period of a year ago.

There were 1.12-million claims filed during 1947 while 512,534 jobless veterans received the jobless compensation through June, 1948.

Other features of the Uncle Sam Santa Claus program for the veterans include insurance premium refunds of $2.8-million and agitation for a bonus for veterans.

The bonus measure, also sponsored by Rankin, will probably not get immediate action. In the past such bills have won their widest support in periods of depression—so congress will hold off until a genuine recession sets in.

But a Britain down to $1,624-million in gold and dollars combined is in a dangerous financial position which threatens to nullify America's entire investment in the Marshall plan.

A Britain which cannot buy from the United States complicates our own current business troubles, cutting off markets for great American surpluses in tobacco, wheat, cotton and refined oil products, to mention only the most important. America's economic ability to support Europe until the day of self-support is weakened.

What the British want is time to modernize their productive plant, increase efficiency and break costs down.

Sir Stafford obviously is trying for that time in his announcement of a virtual ban on imports from dollar countries until September, when Marshall plan funds for the coming year will be allocated, a new system of payments between European countries will go into effect and a new appraisal of the situation can be made.

The United States is caught in the middle of the whole business.

Britain has decided against devaluation now, America probably will go along, even to the point of statements by officials attempting to minimize the crisis, as Acheson did yesterday.

Internes, Resident Physicians Now Total Record 156 at SUI

The largest group of interns and resident physicians in the history of the SUI hospitals is now in training here, Gerhard Hartman, hospitals superintendent announced yesterday.

He said there are 156 interns and residents now receiving supervised clinical instruction under the direction of the hospital staff doctors.

This number is two and one-third times the total trained 12 years ago, according to Hartman.

The total also represents an increase of 12 percent over the number in training a year ago. Now 88 more doctors are in training at the hospitals than were in 1937.

More of the interns and residents come from Iowa than from any other state but all sections of the country are represented. Five of the doctors come from foreign countries—one each from England, China and Austria and two from Canada.

"The training of doctors is a basic responsibility," Hartman said. "The University hospitals has facilities not generally available which make it an ideal training ground for the young doctor preparing for community service."

The University hospitals is continuing to expand every effort to meet the need of doctors for training and of the people for especially prepared physicians."

Physics Building Gets A Summer Face-Lifting

SUI physics students who took the summer off may not recognize their old classrooms when they return this fall. Painters are at work giving offices and classrooms a face-lifting.

The third and fourth floors of the physics building has been completed and the second floor is now being painted.

Ware's Book Goes Into Third Edition

Prof. Lawrence A. Ware, electrical engineering department, is the co-author of a third edition of a textbook for undergraduate students in electrical engineering.

Entitled "Communications Circuits," the book gives the basic principles of communication transmission lines and their associated networks.

The new edition is about one-fourth larger than the previous edition due to new developments brought out during the war, Ware said.

Henry T. Reed, formerly of SUI and now professor of electrical engineering at the University of Maryland, is also an author of the book.

Speech Pathology Conference Opens

The second conference of SUI's Speech Pathology and Hearing Conservation summer program will begin at 4 p.m. tomorrow in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Kenneth Scott Wood, director of the University of Oregon speech clinic, will discuss "An Approach to the Correction of Articulation Disorders."

He will lead a round-table discussion of his lecture Saturday at 10 a.m. in the senate chamber.

Wood is a member of the Council of the American Speech and Hearing Association. He is especially interested in the psychological aspects of articulation disorders.

Martin L. Hunter Officially Installed As Scout Leader

Martin L. Hunter, scout executive for the Iowa River Valley Boy Scout council was officially installed last night at dinner and reception in the River room, Iowa Union.

O. A. Kitterman, regional executive of the eighth region, Kansas City, was installing officer.

Hunter, who has held the office unofficially the past three weeks, came here from Powell, Wyo., where he had been scout executive of the Central Wyoming council for three years.

Educators Bar Communists in NEA Meeting

BOSTON (AP)—The 825,000-member National Education association, through its convention, Wednesday recorded itself against permitting employment of Communist party members as teachers.

A good-humored roar of ayes from the 3,000 delegates adopted a section of a report which declared: "Members of the Communist party of the United States should not be employed as teachers."

Twice before the vote the teachers were told of its national importance.

American Legion Commander S. Perry Brown said, "The nation is looking to you today to make your decision."

John Knorton of Teachers college, Columbia Institute, chairman of the committee whose report included the chapters on communism, declared, "The country is looking at what we do in the next half-hour."

Action on the full report is expected to come up as a resolution today.

In adopting the Communist section the teachers also banned "advocacy" but not teaching of "communism or any other form of dictatorship."

Accident Victim Still In Serious Condition

Five-year-old Linda Ann Buzzelle, Los Angeles, who was injured in the automobile-bus crash a half mile west of Iowa City Tuesday afternoon, was still in "serious" condition at 5 p.m. yesterday. University hospitals officials said.

Her father, Leslie Buzzelle, 32, was said to be in "satisfactory" condition.

The accident occurred at 1:45 p.m. Tuesday when the car in which Mr. and Mrs. Buzzelle and their children were riding went out of control and crashed into a Greyhound bus on highway 6 near the Melody Mill night club.

Mrs. Buzzelle, only slightly injured, was not hospitalized, and 14-month-old Catherine Ellen Buzzelle was uninjured in the crash.

Death of Two Infants Reported by Hospitals

The deaths of two infants were reported yesterday by University hospitals officials.

Veldon Broyles, 15 months, Newton, died at 12:45 p.m. Tuesday. He was admitted to the hospital March 23. He is the son of Veldon Gene Broyles, Newton.

Mary Lou De Anda, 13-month-old daughter of Raymond De Anda, Davenport, died at 5:45 p.m. Tuesday. She was admitted to the hospital April 14.

Two Polio Patients Enter Hospitals 'Active' Ward

Two new polio patients were admitted to the "active" ward at University hospitals yesterday according to hospitals officials.

Lloyd Goering, 28, Sumner, and Louise Stufflebam, 15, Ottumwa were both described as in "fair" condition yesterday.

Miss Stufflebam was admitted for diagnosis Monday and Goering was admitted June 30.

Anderson Hearing Re-Set for Aug. 11

Judge James P. Gaffney yesterday postponed the hearing on the motion to return Oscar Anderson to the insane ward of the men's reformatory at Anamosa until 10 a.m. Aug. 11. The hearing originally was set for July 20. Anderson, 58-year-old Iowa Citian, was committed to the Anamosa institution after a Johnson county jury adjudged him insane last October. He was on trial for the attempted murder of Clifford Kelly, 47, an Iowa City salesman.

Anamosa authorities declared Anderson sane June 14, and he was returned to Iowa City by County Sheriff Albert J. (Pat) Murphy.

County Attorney Jack C. White who filed the motion to return Anderson to Anamosa, claimed that the reformatory authorities had no legal basis for declaring Anderson sane. White charged that Anderson could be released from the Anamosa ward only through proper court proceedings.

James E. Wiley, chairman of the Citizens' Committee for Rent Control, said the citizens' committee would take no action until the property owners association brought the rent control issue before the city council.

"We have quite a number of petitions for rent control signed and ready to present to the council when the time comes," Wiley said.

Fraternity Repairs House for $3,500

The Alpha Chi Sigma fraternity house, 114 E. Market street, is being repaired and remodeled, fraternity officers said yesterday.

Remodeling of the home of the professional chemistry fraternity includes a new porch, doors at the front entrance, and complete refinishing of the outside of the house. The building will be painted an off-white color with grey trim.

Additional repair work will bring the total cost to $3,500, fraternity officers said. Work is expected to be completed by Sept. 1.
