Motion for New Trial Filed in Anderson Case

The defense attorney for Oscar Anderson filed a motion for a new trial in Johnson county district court Saturday, on grounds of jury misconduct.

William H. Bartley, Anderson's attorney, charged that the jury violated the law by having access to a copy of Wednesday's Press-Citizen containing accounts of the trial and "many matters not properly in the (court) record."

Anderson was found guilty Thursday of assault with intent to murder Clifford Kelly, former used-machinery salesman, April 22, 1948. The verdict came after the jury had deliberated since 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Bartley's motion charged that since the newspaper quoted Anderson's comments concerning the trial, the jury's consideration of the comments violated the defendant's right to refuse to testify.

The motion further claimed that the law was violated because a jury is to consider only evidence presented in court and instructions from the judge.

The newspaper also revealed the fact Bartley had made certain motions in the jury's absence and the court had overruled them. Bartley claimed this was "bound to result in prejudicing the jury."

Also in the newspaper account was the statement that two expert witnesses were present but that the defense failed to call them as previously planned.

The motion claimed the court had erred in permitting County Atty. Jack C. White to question Defense Witness Dr. Andrew Woods as to Anderson's present mental conditions — sane or insane.

(Anderson's plea was "not guilty by reason of insanity." He was found insane at a previous trial in Johnson county district court over a year ago, but was declared sane at a recent habeas corpus hearing in Jones county.)

The motion said after admitting the evidence concerning the witness' opinion, the court should have advised the jury of the provision of the Iowa Code which states:

"If the defense is insanity of the defendant, the jury must be instructed, if it acquits him on that ground, to state that fact in its verdict."

"The court may thereupon, if the defendant is in custody, and his discharge is found to be dangerous to the public peace and safety, order him committed to the insane hospital, or retained in custody, until he becomes sane."

Robbery Suspect Identified Here

"THERE'S LITTLE DOUBT in my mind — that's one of the boys," Forrest Meyer, owner of the Reliable Loan company here, said Saturday in identifying Francis Morton, 22, in this picture, as one of the three men who robbed his establishment September 26. Morton is shown in a police station in Chicago where he's been indicted on a charge of armed robbery of a restaurant Jan. 13. His companion in the holdup, Jerome E. Zeidman, 28, was shot and killed by police. Also has been identified by Meyer through pictures as being one of the trio that robbed him. Ralph Luttrell, reportedly the third partner in the Iowa City holdup, surrendered to Chicago police Monday. Morton is quoted by police as saying his short crime spree included three robberies: in Moline and Rock Island, Ill., and Iowa City.

Kampus Kapers Benefit Nets $306.50 for Polio

Kampus Kapers benefit performance Saturday night netted $306.50 to the 1950 March of Dimes campaign. The show originally had been scheduled to run four performances, but the cast agreed Thursday night after the third performance to put on the benefit show Saturday night.

Nearly $400 in dimes had been collected by late afternoon in the "Block of Dimes" drive conducted Saturday by Iowa City Boy Scouts and radio station KXIC.

The scouts, working in six-man shifts every two hours, laid planks along the sidewalk in the block between Clinton and Dubuque streets along Washington street. Passers-by contributed dimes which were placed end to end on the planks.

Contributions toward Johnson county's $10,000 March of Dimes goal, totaled $1,701 by Saturday noon according to Mrs. J.K. Schaaf, president of the Johnson county chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Iowa City theaters collected $1,530.13 during this week, she said. The St. Pat's — St. Mary's high school basketball game Wednesday night added $59.06 to the drive.

Crisis in Italy Develops from Cabinet Shuffle

ROME (AP) — Premier Alcide de Gasperi's routine reshuffling of his cabinet turned into a full-fledged government crisis Saturday night.

The 68-year-old Christian Democrat leader disclosed the sudden turn of events as he left the Vittoriale palace after an emergency meeting with President Luigi Einaudi.

De Gasperi, who has headed five post-war cabinets, told newsmen his negotiations with minor parties to form a sixth had been deadlocked.

Italy has now been without a cabinet for nine days.

Although the Christian Democrats control both houses of parliament, De Gasperi has insisted on all anti-Communist parties being represented in the cabinet to strengthen his position.

Saturday both the arch-conservative liberals and the non-Communist Socialists (P.S.L.I.) notified De Gasperi they would not serve in the new cabinet.

The immediate bone of contention appeared to be a new electoral law, proposed by the Christian Democrats, which the two dissenting groups claim would favor the bigger group at their expense.

De Gasperi has the choice of a one-party cabinet, as many of his Christian Democrat supporters have been demanding, or one which would also include the moderate Republicans.

Committee Probes Denfeld Dismissal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican members of the senate armed services committee Saturday formally demanded a "full and complete" explanation of the dismissal of Adm. Louis Denfeld as chief of naval operations.

The demand was made in a letter to Committee Chairman Millard Tydings (D-Md.). The letter, signed by five of the six GOP members, asked that Secretary of Navy Francis Matthews be called to a closed committee session.

The text of the letter was not available.

Like It, Lump It; Coal Doesn't Fit

Out of town guests aren't always welcome, but Burt E. Vandecar, manager of a local department store, went out of his way to invite seven to Iowa City.

Seven tons of hard-to-get coal were transported to Iowa City and stored in the bin before it was discovered the lumps were the wrong size to feed through the stoker.

The shipment was returned, but all's not lost. The store has enough coal on hand to keep the furnace going for a while.

SUI State Historian Marries Climaxing 40-Year Friendship

GLENDALS, CAL. (UP) A friendship that first budded 40 years ago in Tiskilwa, Ill., was climaxed in marriage Saturday night when Jacob A. Swisher, 65, Iowa City, wed Mrs. Blanch E. Fletcher, 60 — the woman who introduced him to his first wife.

The couple denied that they had been sweethearts 40 years ago when their paths took separate directions and Swisher became an authority in Iowa history and Mrs. Fletcher married her now divorced husband.

"We were very good friends, in the same college circle back in Tiskilwa, and I introduced Dr. Swisher to the girl he married — Nora Anthony. I was the bridesmaid at their wedding," Mrs. Fletcher, whose maiden name was Blanche Thompson, said, "but we weren't sweethearts and he didn't 'jilt' me."

Swisher, a research associate in the Iowa State Historical society and the author of several books on Iowa history, never forgot the charming and pretty Mrs. Fletcher, however. When his wife died a year ago, he began to wonder if Mrs. Fletcher still lived in Florida, the last address he knew for her.

He wrote, telling of his be- reavement, and his letter was forwarded, "miraculously," said the couple, to her at Costa Mesa, Calif., and the old friendship was renewed.

Mrs. Fletcher had spent the previous four years in South

Search for Robbers in New York City; Employee Released

BOSTON (AP) — Boston detectives were on a "hot" money hunt in New York Saturday as a report of "some progress" came from the chief director of the nationwide search for the gang that bagged a million dollar cash loot.

Deputy Police Supt. James Daley gave the progress report but wouldn't say what he based it on.

"It's not a new lead," Daley said, "but we've got some good ones and we've eliminated a lot of bad ones."

The federal bureau of investigation has sent its ace inspector, Myron Gurnea, to Boston to direct its part in the inquiry.

The switch to New York and the release of a Brink's employee, with 22 years service were Saturday's major police moves in the four-day-old search for the gunmen who raided a counting room of Brink's armored car service last Tuesday night.

Daley said William Manter, 49, a Brink's guard, was questioned last night and Saturday after a police alarm because he was reported missing.

Daley said Manter suffered from a nervous condition and apparently was "shocked" by the holdup.

In New York City, Boston Lt. James Crowley said he believes the masked gunmen who vanished after their 20-minute raid headed for New York.

SUI Student Hurt As Car Overturns

Calvin Duke, A3, West Union, was injured shortly after midnight this morning when the car he was driving overturned on N. Dubuque street.

The auto, a model A, ran across a sidewalk and stopped on an embankment in front of the residence at 615 N. Dubuque. Police helped Duke, the only person in the car, from the overturned auto.

Richard Truxau of Burlington said Duke was attempting to pass his car when the accident occurred. According to Truxau, Duke's car, going north, glanced off the fender of his auto before swerving from the street.

Duke, who suffered facial cuts, was taken to University hospitals, where the full extent of his injuries had not been determined at 1 a.m.

Hiss Grim-Faced after Verdict

ALGER HISS AND HIS WIFE are pictured as they left the U.S. courthouse in New York after a jury found Hiss guilty on both counts of his second perjury trial. The verdict came 24 hours after the eight-woman, four-man jury received the case. Hiss' $5,000 bail was continued until date of sentencing, Jan. 25.

UMW Rebellion Test Looms

PITTSBURGH (UP) — John L. Lewis' forces in the United Mine Workers battled in last ditch efforts today to quell a rank-and-file rebellion against the UMW's three-day week.

A major test of the UMW president's control over his 478,000 members will come when the mine whistles blow for work Monday. Lewis has ordered all miners to report and end the wildcat walkout which hit six states this week.

Anybody's Guess

Lewis' lieutenants seemed to be gaining in their attempt to persuade the 90,000 rebel strikers that the UMW's three-day week is better than a full-scale shutdown walkout. But the outcome still was "anybody's guess."

Rebel forces were holding out in some areas, particularly northern West Virginia. Scattered violence was reported as angry mine pickets patrolled the fields. A power shovel was dynamited and a picket wounded in Pennsylvania and miners were stoned in Colorado.

Call Peace Meeting

At Fairmont, W. Va., UMW District President Cecil Urbanik cancelled a "peace" meeting of 500 local union officers. He said he had no plans for further meetings.

There was speculation that he had abandoned efforts to enforce Lewis' back-to-work order on 18,000 "no contract; no work" strikers in the district.

In UMW district 4, where virtually all of the 20,000 miners refused to work this week, Lewis' adherents reported progress. At Uniontown, Pa., more than 200 local union officers met and voted to call meetings of their locals tomorrow. They agreed to urge resumption of production.

Sentence Date Set for Jan. 25; Plans to Appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — Alger Hiss was convicted of perjury Saturday.

The jury's verdict branded him a traitor to his country and stripped him of a brilliant, hard-won reputation.

Hiss, a Yalta aide to President Roosevelt, was found guilty of lying in his denial that he sold out his once-high state department office to prewar communist spies.

Sentence was set for Jan. 25. The maximum is 10 years in prison and $4,000 in fines.

Will Appeal Verdict

"You can be sure the verdict will be appealed," said Defense Attorney Claude Cross of Boston.

Hiss was convicted of lying twice — once when he denied giving away secrets and again when he denied any contact with Whittaker Chambers, ex-communist spy ring courier, after Jan. 1, 1937.

The jury's double-barrelled guilty finding upheld the story of Chambers, who was Hiss' chief accuser.

Asks Imprisonment

Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Murphy, who prosecuted Hiss relentlessly through both trials, asked that he be clapped behind bars at once to await sentence.

However, Federal Judge Henry Goddard allowed Hiss to continue free on his present $5,000 bail.

Hiss was tried last spring and summer on the federal perjury charge. But the first jury disagreed on July 8 and was dismissed.

That jury — ten men and two women — was out nearly 29 hours. The second jury — eight women and four men — reached its verdict at 1:50 p.m. (CST), just 20 minutes short of 24 hours after receiving the case.

They had returned from lunch only 42 minutes earlier.

Shows No Emotion

Hiss gave no sign of emotion when the foreman, Mrs. Ada Conde, announced the verdict. His chin went up. His lips tightened. He folded his arms.

His wife, Priscilla, was by his side as she has been since her first was accused. She squirmed in her seat at the verdict and looked down at the floor.

Later, outside the court, the two embraced for an instant. Then they left the courtroom area, lips tight, faces stern, with no word to anyone.

Down near Westminster, Md., Chambers said of the conviction:

"I don't see how any other verdict was possible. I hope the American people will realize the debt they owe to this jury, Mr. Murphy, and the tireless and splendid efforts of the FBI."

Mundt Lauds Murphy For Hiss' Conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Karl Mundt, (R., S.D.) Saturday telegraphed congratulations to Prosecutor Thomas Murphy on his "magnificent victory" in the perjury conviction of Alger Hiss, former state department official.

Mundt added in a statement that he had believed Hiss guilty ever since the defendant was confronted by his accuser, Whittaker Chambers, before the house un-American activities committee in 1948. committee at that time.

Dad Denies Farouk Nixed Marriage

CAIRO (AP) — Narriman Sadek, 16-year-old Egyptian girl whose engagement allegedly was broken by King Farouk, never was formally engaged to Egyptian economist Saki Hashem, never loved him and didn't know what love and marriage was all about.

Her father contemplated an engagement between Narriman and Hashem but called it off when she told him: "I don't want to marry him. I have no feeling for him."

That was the version of the recent story of the alleged romance of King Farouk as told to the United Press in an exclusive interview by the girl's father, Hussein Fahmy Sadek Bey. He is former secretary general in the Egyptian ministry of communications.

The father said King Farouk had "absolutely nothing" to do with his decision to abandon plans to engage his daughter to Hashem and that his daughter never had seen Farouk until after the plan for her to become Hashem's fiancée was broken.

As to the girl's future — whether she still may become engaged to Farouk and maybe become Queen of Egypt — Sadek said: "She is free and always was free to marry another man. I want my daughter to be happy. If destiny decides that Narriman shall eventually be married to our king, that will be the acme of her happiness and it will be an honor or us all."

The stories about which Sadek made his statement had said his daughter Narriman was engaged to Hashem at the time Farouk met her.

When Farouk met Narriman, the stories went, he allegedly ordered the engagement broken so that he might make her his bride. Hashem left Egypt earlier this month to return to the United States where he resigned a post with the United Nations.

Said Sadek: "My daughter never was officially engaged to Hashem. The agreement whereby my daughter was to have become engaged to him was cancelled by me because Narriman did not care for him. This cancellation had absolutely nothing to do with Farouk, who my daughter had never seen until after the engagement was broken."

Concert Review . . .

TO THE EDITOR:
After attending the concert of the university band last Wednesday evening, I wondered, among other things, what your music critic would have to say about the performance.

Having attended this university during pre-war and post-war years, I have observed the coming and going of many writers whose opinions about the university orchestra and band concerts have run the literary gamut from honestly interpreted critical evaluations to seemingly indiscriminate condemnation.

Since I studied instrumental music in high school and in the university as a major for several years, and have played in a good many bands and orchestras, I continue to attend the university concert series.

Because of this, I often know from experience the nature of such concerts as that of Wednesday evening termed by the morning-after reviewer as "mediocre."

I must add, however, that this is the first time that I have ever been stimulated so adversely as to cause me to write such a letter as this.

Suffice it to say that I was greatly impressed by this concert, as were many others whose comments I heard as my wife and I left the union after it was over. Of course, there were the usual clarinet squeaks, a mis-cue or two, and the almost inevitable dropping of a drum-stick at an equally inopportune moment.

Yet, these occurrences did not detract in any way from our appreciation of the music. I doubt that anyone attended this concert, with the possible exception of your music critic, expecting to hear a performance equal to that of the Goldman band or the Cities Service Band of America, if these organizations can be considered professional enough by your critic for suitable comparison here.

I see no reason for any music reviewer on this campus adopting such an attitude of rigorous, censorious authority concerning the reception of university concerts, especially when his opinions contribute so little to the entire situation.

After all, he certainly isn't in a position here to decree the success or failure of a musical performance. It seems, however, to be a well established tradition that the university band continues to progress through the years despite the reviews that occasionally follow its public performances.

Wednesday's concert was an unusual one from the standpoint of the music presented. Clearly a carefully prepared and planned program of popular — accepted favorites, it was an excellent example of the sincere desire of the music department to present an hour or two of real entertainment "to a crowd of nearly 1,000 who braved the zero weather to hear it." As such, it was well received, and was enjoyed immensely. The band showed a remarkable control of tone and dynamics, the contrasting passages were thrilling in their presentation.

I should like to say that it is too bad that such a review as this will have to go on file as the only tangible evidence of what was a most enjoyable evening of entertainment.

I sincerely hope that your music critic will endeavor in the future to break away from his characteristic apathy when reporting upon the concerts he attends.

He will certainly find it just as easy to make a few logical allowances in order that he may see the forest through the trees.

TO THE EDITOR:
I was interested in the last paragraph of Mr. Smith's letter in the Jan. 19 Daily Iowan.

It seems to me that the American people are respectful to Madame Chiang Kai-shek to some extent. We Chinese, however, have a quite different opinion as far as her personality is concerned.

The Chinese, who are "children" and share a part of the "illiteracy" with the Indians, used to judge a person according to what he, or she, had done, instead of what that person had been educated.

If one had ever heard any news in addition to that from the United Press or the Associated Press, he would find Madame Chiang's name has usually been associated with such terms as corruption and totalitarianism.

The only compliment about her, to my poor knowledge, was something concerning her nose in 1949 (according to the standard in the United States, of course).

Apparently she was right about what she said, but the thing that puzzled me all day long was just to whom she referred. I am sure she has not paid any blood—yet!

This is in reference to the letter from Mr. Smith, published in The Daily Iowan on Jan. 19.

He indicates that Indians are less concerned with communism because they do not know the dangers of communism due to illiteracy.

Assuming for the sake of argument that this is true, I would like to ask Mr. Smith how many Americans, who claim a literacy rate of more than 95 percent, know anything about communism?

Moreover, I doubt whether Mr. Smith has read any books on communism, either. Even though I detest communism as any other American, is it not true that in general all Americans have fear of communism based upon newspaper criticism and speeches of leaders which generally do not go into detail about communism?

The case in India is exactly the same. The historians of the world will definitely regret the knowledge of Mr. Smith in the department of history; otherwise, he would not have made the gross misstatement that Indians did not know freedom as Americans do.

For his information, I would like to point out that Indian civilization ranges back to about 3000 B.C., when the word "civilization" was unknown to Europe, not to speak of America.

I would like to ask him to read about the great Indian kingdoms of Asoka, Akbar, Shivaji, and others in ancient India before making any more such statements.

Lastly, I have to inform people like Mr. Smith, who think of themselves as "fathers" of Asiatic people (since he calls Asiatic people children), that the world-known leader Pandit Nehru, and his cabinet are quite capable of facing any situations, including dangers of communism.

TO THE EDITOR:
He (Smith) might pause to study a few items in Indian history. Perhaps then the sophistication of a country that has experimented with all manners of political and social institutions will not appear quite so childish.

He should know of the Samitis and Sabhas, the popular assemblies found in Indian kingdoms and republics, the federation of republics like the Adhika - Vrishni league, ruled by Ganas, the forerunner of cabinet government.

He should read the minutes of a village panchayat to realize that not only do ignorant villagers realize the implications of communism, but also of finance-capitalism and dollar diplomacy.

For the rest of Mr. Smith's letter there can be no comment.

Such statements as the Indians "living in spiritual darkness" since they are not Christians and hence being unaware of communism, do not require any discussion, but serve as brilliant commentary on the value of collegiate education.

Civil Rights . . .

TO THE EDITOR:
I read with interest your editorial anecdote in the Jan. 20 Daily Iowan concerning Bill, the erring supporter of civil rights.

After some serious thought, I discovered that you have made a good point.

What makes this "point" more interesting to me is the fact that it has finally been brought home to the place where it belongs.

Bill didn't live in the south; he lived in the north. This is definitely a departure from the usual. Bill "cried out in anger" when he heard about the near-lynching in the south, but he evidently gave no thought to the race riots of the north.

He was disgusted with the conditions in Harlem, and here he might have applauded the current programs in the south for improving the lot of the Negro.

For as long as I can remember the north has been voicing its opinions on the "deplorable" conditions surrounding the life of the southern Negro.

Granted that they haven't been as good as they could and should be, but is it so much worse in the south that we must center all of our attention there and ignore similar conditions elsewhere in the country?

Until those people who support civil rights, prove themselves sincere in their voiced convictions, by putting their ideas to work at "home," they will be unable to correct those non-supporters, who believe that local problems should be worked out by those who are in direct contact with the problem.

A good policy for the north to follow would be: clean up your own backyard before suggesting to your neighbors that he do the same. Your neighbor might even lend you some tools to work with.

La Monte Fulton
310 S. Lucas

Bill believed in "theoretical" equality of individuals. When the issue was really brought home to him — that is when he learned that a Negro family was planning to move into the neighborhood — he quickly jumped the fence. As long as the injustice was somewhere else, he would fight it. But when it directly involved him, it was preposterous to even call it "injustice." It was then a matter of practicality.

By GIL PEARLMAN

YOUNG children in a restaurant are always good for a few smiles and chuckles to the adult crowd around them. You know, you see a baby in a high-chair in a local cafe and you always judge your companion to have a look-see.

I always do anyway, and sometimes my companion isn't too happy about this particular habit. I usually nudge him with my elbow just as he is about to drink his coffee.

NEVERTHELESS, he looks up and says, "Cute, isn't he?" or "Cute, isn't she?" depending upon whether or not the baby has a hat on.

The kids probably look at us and say to themselves, "What are all these goons looking at me for? Haven't they ever seen anyone eat farina before?"

IT WAS last Thursday when a young man and his mother walked into one of Iowa City's leading cafes. He must have been all of four, but to him age must have been a deduction of actions, as he was attempting to appear as a metropolitan businessman.

The hostess walked up to the mother and son and politely inquired, "Two?"

The child prodigy held up all ten fingers and repeated, "Two!" They were seated, temporarily. Our hero wasn't comfortable in the chair on the right of his mother, so he changed, to the one on the left.

SATISFACTION was still a desire in his young and misguided mind, so he changed to the chair opposite his mother. This went on and on as if he were a disciple of the Boston gang and he was casing the joint.

When the lovely young waitress finally gathered enough courage to wait on the table, Little Leroy (that's what his mother called him in a fit of temper) greeted her with, "I want to see the well!"

"THE WELL?"
"Yeah, the well! That's where ya got the water, isn't it?"
"Well, yes, but . . ."
"I want to see the well!"

The waitress probably would have loved to show him the well, and then thrown him in. His mother saved her from further agony by interrupting, "Leroy, give the lady your order!"
"Very well mater, I want RB on two."

THE waitress and the mother silently let their inquiring minds focus on the lad's order. My companion and I leaned closer to the scene. Maybe the kid has come up with something, we thought, visualizing "RB" as a new French pastry.

"RB?" asked the waitress.
"RB?" asked the mother.
"RB?" asked my companion, who, I hate to say this, was eavesdropping.

"On two?" yelled a coed three tables down to make the investigation complete.

Little Leroy waited for the confusion to reach the calmer limits, inhaled proudly and explained, "Yeah, RB — root beer and roast beef."

EVERYONE chuckled. Leroy grew quite indignant, yelling, "Go ahead and laugh. Don't you peasants ever get tired of hamburgers?"

Leroy got his root beer and roast beef, odd as it sounds. And you know what? When I returned to the scene of the crime the next day, I counted four senior students eating roast beef with root beer. It isn't bad, either!

Former Professor of To State Department

He is officer in charge of River Plate affairs in the recently organized Bureau of Inter-American affairs, and is associated with the office of east coast affairs in that state department organization.

Atwood taught at SUI during a summer session "about ten years ago," according to Prof. H. H. McCarty, chairman of the geography department.

Woman Explorer Plans Return to African Wilds

NEW YORK (AP) — Explorer Osa Johnson said Saturday that civilization is too savage for her.

She's going to pack up her lipstick, lousing pajamas and a ca-yar and leave as soon as she can to spend a year on a safari in the wilds of Africa. She wants a little peace and quiet among spear-throwing natives, roaring lions and herds of wild water buffalo.

It's been 13 years since five-foot-tall Mrs. Johnson last trekked across darkest Africa at the head of a safari. She's spent about half of her 56 years in jungles throughout the world. With her late husband, Martin Johnson, who was killed in an airplane crash in 1937, she made 11 expeditions. The first was the Johnsons' honeymoon. The last one she led all alone.

"After losing Mr. Johnson I was lost in civilization," she said. "Everything in the city is so artificial."

"I can hardly wait to get back to the jungle. I prefer it out there. When I sling my rifle over my shoulder and go out into the forest, I feel like everything belongs to me."

"There's no competition out there. No worry about what to wear and what other women are wearing. I am queen of the jungle."

The exact date of her departure has not been set, but she said it would be in a month or two. It will cost $500,000 to finance the expedition for a year, she has contracts for advertising endorsements and plans to broadcast over a nationwide network from the jungle once a week. Three sound, technical movies are planned. When she has nothing else to do, Mrs. Johnson will work on a book.

She also hopes to capture a new mate for the late Gargantua's gorilla widow and a pigmy hippopotamus as a pet for herself.

A C-47 transport will carry Mrs. Johnson, her 73-year-old mother, Mrs. Belle Leighty, and 14 men to Africa. They are taking a helicopter along for jungle explorations. About 150 natives will join them in Nairobi and accompany them on the trip.

Supplies going by ship include seven automobiles, gasoline, cameras, radio equipment and tons of food.

"Mother is going along just for a short time," Mrs. Johnson said. "She's heard so much about Africa that she wants to see a little bit of it for herself."

Freedom of information, Herbert Brucker Macmillan company, $4.00

When a newspaperman writes that's not news, but when a newspaperman writes a book of philosophy of the press that is news — man bites dog variety. The Macmillan company seems to have realized this when they agreed to publish Herbert Brucker's "Freedom of Information."

"Freedom of Information" is indeed a unique book. Mr. Brucker is the soul of objectivity, a fact alone which merits its reading. The Cassandras among us who herald this as the Fourth Estate's dark age, and who, like the Commission on Freedom of the Press, see government as the ultimate safeguard to the first freedom, will gain little sympathy from this book.

Nor does Mr. Brucker play dupe to the apologists who maintain that the past and current abuses of the press, in the form of monopolies or wholesale inaccuracies, are the price we must pay for a free press in a free enterprise system.

According to Mr. Brucker, man's most valuable possession is his access to information, since man's personal knowledge is limited. Hence, democracy is dependent upon a free flow of information.

Any control of these sources imperils our concept of freedom; man becomes aware of only one view of the world. It is for this reason and not that of mere size or malpractice, that monopoly over the sources of information is so dangerous.

"Freedom of Information" is an evaluation of the extent to which our sources of knowledge are limited, how this limitation has come about and how infringements of the present and future may be met.

"Although the concentration of newspapers into fewer and bigger units has altered the foundation on which the free press was built, that is not the only change forced upon democracy's information system by the 20th century."

The potential danger of monopoly is revealed by the fact that there are only 1,103 U.S. cities with daily newspapers and only 117 with competing journals, plus a handful of radio networks.

Mr. Brucker does not indicate any intentional or coercive force behind this practice. Rather, it has been the product of mass production and the prohibitive cost necessary to publishing a daily.

A discussion of advertising and its influence on newspaper policy brings the author to claim the conservative policies inherent in the nature of large corporations and not deliberate intimidation causes the lack of leadership on the editorial page.

"There can be little doubt that most American newspapers stand expressions of opinion in a conservative direction. This is . . . what is wrong with the 20th century press."

Despite the fact that the theory of a free press has reached its fullest development in America, it would be dangerous to our future, according to Mr. Brucker, to consider this freedom a permanent, non-alterable fact.

"Many an American publisher rests content, vastly impressed by the gratifyingly high and ever higher, circulation figures of his paper. All too often, however, large circulation testify merely to the completeness of news coverage, the popularity of features, and the lack of rivals."

"The invisible and imponderable quality of devotion on the part of readers is something else again. Its existence in Russia while many American readers are cynical about their own press gives to Russian journalism, for all its totalitarian halter, a seasoning of strength that Americans well might envy."

The conclusions to be drawn from this inquiry into freedom of information are suggested by the philosophic — realistic approach of the author:

"If we are ever to lift the curse of war from mankind all peoples everywhere must have freedom of information."

Instead of arguing for a preconceived point of view, expressions of opinion, must be dedicated in a spirit of scientific inquiry, to the search for truth," Brucker says.

keynote by DONALD KEY

Anton Bruckner, Austrian composer who lived most of his life in Vienna, is considered today to be one of the greatest masters of the techniques of symphonic writing — combining and developing melodic and concordant strains into a well-knit work.

His "Symphony No. 6 in A Major," which will be the featured work on program of the SUI Symphony orchestra concert next Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. in the Iowa Union, is an excellent example of such Brucknerian writing.

Each movement of the symphony does not consist of one theme and many developments, but of several motifs woven and interwoven together with ease and mastery.

The first movement provides the most dominant motif, for it appears intermittently throughout the work and is developed in many different moods. It is also used as a closing theme.

In the first movement, a slower section finds the oboe singing a limpid, flowing motif, one of the most beautiful in the symphony.

It is interesting to note that three sections of the work, the first movement, scherzo of the third movement and the last movement, all close in the same manner, a series of nine short chords building to a climax.

Many of the themes and motifs in the symphony begin on an off beat, and nearly all of them undergo a process of augmentation and inversion.

Such is especially true of the motif in the last movement. For this reason, critics of Bruckner have called him more of a schoolmaster than musical poet, but today few such remarks are heard for nearly a century — the expert workmanship adding to tuneful and enjoyable listening.

A work of unusual instrumentation, written for soprano, cello and contrabass, will be performed at Wednesday's concert with Edith LeCoque, SUI voice instructor, as soprano soloist.

The number, "Bachianas Brizilicas, No. 5" by the contemporary Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, is divided into two sections, the first is slow and chromatic. The second is a lively "Dance Martelo" in which difficult rhythmic ensemble background accompanies a violin-like soprano solo.

Darling Sparks Iowa to Second Conference Win

By ALAN MOYER
Daily Iowan Sports Editor

Iowa, on the strength of its second-string center and over 13,000 partisans who wouldn't have anything but a victory, came from behind Saturday night and defeated Northwestern, 61-56.

The Big Ten victory was the second for the Hawkeyes, who can thank the home crowd for awakening them from a sleep that lasted the better part of 27 minutes.

The Hawkeyes were trailing by 10 points with seven minutes of the second half played, could get but one shot on each attack and showing an amazing disinterest in rebounding. But from then on it was all Iowa.

Six minutes, 25 seconds later, when Skip Greene scored on a driving fast - break the Hawkeyes led, 48-47. They were tied, but never headed, from then on. If the big home crowd provided the inspiration, it was Center Chuck Darling who provided the spark from the playing floor. He entered the game just before the rally began and proceeded to tally 10 points, in addition to doing a sterling job of rebounding.

Vollers Scores 17
Bob Vollers led all scoring, with 17 points, while Jim Hughes, on four field goals and seven free throws, led the Wildcat parade with 15 points. Three of his team-

Clifton Fouls Out
At that point Clifton fouled out, but, with the crowd so noisy that the officials threatened to stop the game if it didn't calm down for a Northwestern free throw, Iowa was rolling to a home-court victory.

Darling added two more from the field, then Hughes tied things up with a pair of free tosses, 49-49. Darling broke a 51-51 tie with three minutes left by tipping in a shot and the Wildcats were behind to stay.

Greene, Dick Riecks and Vollers added free throws in the final minute, to account for the five point margin.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL. (AP) - The Illinois basketball team paced by Center Wally Osterkorn who popped in 24 points, Saturday night knocked Ohio State out of the Big Ten's undefeated ranks by beating the Buckeyes, 66-50.

It was Illinois' third Big Ten triumph against two defeats and left the Buckeyes with a 3 - 1 league record. Ohio State defeated the Illini, 83-62, at Columbus two weeks ago.

Illinois jumped off to a commanding lead and at the end of seven minutes and 45 seconds enjoyed a 13-5 margin. Osterkorn contributed six points to the rally. Ohio State then scored its first field goal on Bob Burkholder's short shot.

Dick Schmittker, 6-foot, 5-inch forward, who had averaged 24.3 points in three conference games for the Bucks, was held to 16 Saturday night. Rod Fletcher, guard, had a job on

Cagers, Swimmers Face Road Contests Monday

A pair of road contests confront Iowa's swimming and basketball teams Monday night as the tankers travel to Lafayette for a dual meet against Purdue and the cagers meet Ohio State at Columbus.

The Iowa representatives will be seeing major action for the second time in three days Monday. Saturday, the swimmers participated in the Iowa AAU championship meet and the basketball team met Northwestern.

Iowa's cage team, which will leave by plane for Columbus at 1 p.m. today will be battling the strong Buckeyes Monday in addition to the home court advantage that has been a telling factor in Big Ten play this year.

Craig Harper Paces Iowa Quarter-Milers In Time Trial Races

Craig Harper, a newcomer on the Iowa track team, still dominates the quarter - milers as the result of time trials held Friday. The blond speedster tore through the 440 in :51.7, clipping one-tenth of a second off his last week's time.

Harper was followed by DeReef Greene, another sophomore, who was timed at :52.3. Tom Sangster was third with :53.3.

One of the closest events of the day was the 70-yard low hurdles. Veteran Russ Merkel barely shaded Sophomore DuWayne Dietz in the barrier race, both being clocked at :08.1. Merkel was also top high hurdler with an :08.9 time.

Bill Snook overthrew Bill Bye in the two-mile run. Snook's time was 10:05.2.

The 60-yard dash was a repeat of the low hurdles only this time there were three men in the dead heat instead of two. Dietz, Gary Scott and Leonard Sykes, the latter pair freshmen, sped down the track in :06.4. Jack Simpson was unable to participate because of a strained muscle sustained recently.

Keith Brown, veteran half-miler, maintained his margin in that event by edging Mel Rosen. Brown ran the half in 2:00.5.

Rosen, a converted quarter-miler, was timed at 2:03.7.

No miler gave much competition to Jack Davis who won easily over the distance in 4:31.8. He has also run the half under two minutes and the quarter about :53.

... Vaults 15 Feet

CHAMPAIGN, ILL. (AP) - Don Laz, 20-year-old University of Illinois junior, Saturday became the second man in history to pole vault 15 feet.

Laz equalled Cornelius Warmstead's feat in an inter - squad practice meet at Illinois armory. The leap was measured by Eugene Schroth, official starter and referee.

Laz went straight up to 15 feet. He missed at 14'4" but made it the second time. Then he cleared 15 feet on the third trial.

It was 10 inches higher than he ever had vaulted before.

Warmstead had cleared 15 feet 43 times in his amazing career, but he was 26 years old and out of college three years before he accomplished the prodigious vault.

U-High Getting 'Face-Lifting'

Face-lifting in the basement of University high school is now being done by the University physical plant, John McAdam, acting director of the school, said Saturday.

Changes will include transfer of the kitchen from the east end of the cafeteria to the west end. A clothing lab will occupy the space in the east.

New stoves, refrigerators, roasters and a deep freeze will be installed in the kitchen. New counters will be put in the cafeteria. Removal of a wall between the south room and a hallway will provide space for overflow from the cafeteria. Students bringing their own lunch also will eat here.

This area will also be used as a recreation center, McAdam said. There will be adequate space for dancing and table games.

When the physical plant finishes its work, the high school art department, under the direction of Frank Wachowiak, will take over to decorate the recreation room with murals.

The remodeling project was started in November.

Active Polio Cases Here Rise to Four

The number of active polio cases under treatment at University hospitals rose to four this week as three new patients were admitted to active wards, hospital officials said Saturday.

Two patients were transferred to inactive wards.

James Mohrfeld, 7, West Point, was admitted to the active list in "serious" condition, officials said. Also admitted, both in "fair" condition, were Darrell Steffansmeier, 7, Salem, and Lloyd Turner, 25, Waterloo.

Transferred to the inactive list were Robert Benson, 6, DeWitt, and Sharon Underwood, 6, LaPorte City.

The only other polio patient in active wards is Merna Christianson, 20, Dows.

Iowa Wire Editors Confer Here Today

Iowa's first state-wide conference of wire editors from member newspapers of The Associated Press opens this morning at Old Capitol.

Prof. Arthur Wimer, SUI school of journalism, who arranged the meeting, said the purpose of the conference is to form a state organization to solve mutual problems encountered by the editors.

About 25 telegraph editors are expected to attend. Registration will start 8:45 a.m.

Prof. Leslie G. Moeller, director of the SUI school of journalism, will open the conference with a welcoming address.

A cafeteria luncheon at the Iowa Union at 1 p.m. today will end the meeting.

Smoke Signal Sends Communiques For Association

By BILL HOLLANDER

What's the use of having radio, television and the Hollywood products when you can get the same idea across with a couple of puffs of smoke?

Tonto's telegraph — a roaring blaze and a large Indian blanket — is being used by the National Independent Students Association for inter-campus communication.

Only these smoke signals are sent by mail. It's the Smoke Signal — the NISA publication alleged to carry "features, organizational news, humor and cartoons (which) round out the interest-packed issue."

The first issue of the Smoke Signal hit the SUI campus Saturday. Local representative for the magazine is Keith Kirkpatrick, A3, Sheldon.

Smoke Signals are puffed to 85 NISA chapters throughout the country from the magazine's home office at the University of Oklahoma. The editor is Wayne Barrett, said to be a cartoonist and leader in independent's activities on the Oklahoma campus.

Copies may be purchased at the Iowa Union (where the magazine is now being displayed) or the Office of Student Affairs.

This is all on the level. No one's blowing smoke nowhere.

Six Alley Lights Remain To Finish City's Project

Completion of six alley lights is the only work remaining to be done on downtown Iowa City's new streetlighting system, City Engineer Fred Gartzke said Saturday.

He said he hoped the $43,284 project would be ready for city approval within a few days.

The contract for the work, granted by the city council in September, requires the city engineer's approval on the project before the council authorizes payment.

You're probably used to looking at Dixie's window by now, but this coming month you'll want to keep a special watch. Dixie's are putting in a full reproduction of their Frivol ad... and it's really a beauty.

Make this Valentine's Day a really exciting one. Give a box of Dixie's famous candies. They're now being featured in a lovely choice of heart shaped boxes. The boxes come in traditional colors with frills and lace that really say this is Valentine's Day (and for you).

Remember, each and every box is filled with Dixie's wonderfully tasty candy selection. You can have the regular assortment or have a box packed to your choice. Dixie's Carmel Corn Shop, 5 So. Dubuque.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK
How did you spend New Year's Eve?

Joe Lewis — Went to a dance, lost my date, and got drunk all by myself.

Clem Drish — Sat home and drank orange juice with my folks.

Jean McDonald — I chewed snuff.

John Goodell — Listened to the radio and ate taffy apples.

Dave Shugart — Is New Year's Eve over already?

Bob Wolford — Partied. (It was a very quiet affair at my house).
