NORWAY'S ROLE IN Thwarting COMMUNISM

Only NATO Nation Bordering Russia, Norway Kicked Out Reds

Fifth in a series of 12 articles on the North Atlantic Treaty organization and its role in strengthening the free world.

By H. D. CRAWFORD Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Norway is the North Atlantic Treaty Organization member sharing a border directly with the Soviet Union.

Larger than the British Isles, Norway is a long, narrow country with only 3,250,000 people to defend land frontiers with three nations and a 12,000-mile fjord-slashed western and northern coastline on the North sea, the Atlantic ocean and the Arctic ocean.

Norway's longest land border is with Sweden. Its common border with Finland is about 400 miles. Its border with Russia is about 125 miles long in the extreme north, and the Russians have a good road from Murmansk to a point near the Norwegian border.

Norwegians suffered great devastation under Nazi domination. They faced vast problems of reconstruction after liberation. They were beginning to see bright spots on their horizon, however, shortly before the 1948 Communist coup in Czechoslovakia.

The Czech coup was a tremendous shock to Norwegians, who long have felt culturally close to Czechoslovakians. Both Norway and Czechoslovakia had believed after the war that they could serve as valuable bridges between east and west. Czechoslovakia's fall shocked Norwegians into re-evaluating the true character of the Communists.

In Norway's first national election after liberation, in 1945, Communists won 11 seats in the one-chamber parliament of 150 members. One was the widow of the first Norwegian executed by the Nazis. Other Communists had admired Russia's World War II fighting. Russia had helped liberate Norway's northern tip. Russian soldiers had conducted themselves well while in Norway. Furthermore, they had left ardent to armament. This proved to be good propaganda.

Communists lost all seats in the Norwegian parliament in 1949, however, because the Czech coup and the conduct of Norway's Communists had convinced Norwegians that Communists were driven by aggressive motives manipulated from Moscow.

Norway's Communist party then split. Factions called each other Stalinists. Communist newspapers still in Norway are having a hard struggle. Circulations are small. Advertisers boycott them. Norwegians believe Communist editors must get money from outside Norway to keep the papers operating. These Communist newspapers consistently follow the Moscow line.

Suffering under Nazi occupation and witnessing such blatant Communist aggressions as the Czech coup and the invasion of South Korea have increased the Norwegian will to resist.

Today it is amazing what the people are willing to do to strengthen their security, a Norwegian spokesman told me. NATO has bolstered their morale substantially. Shortly after Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower arrived as NATO supreme commander in Europe, Norway transferred its 5,000 troops on occupation duty in Germany to Eisenhower's NATO Integrated Force.

Norway's expanded defense program for the next year includes 50 per cent increases in its army and air force, and a substantial buildup of its navy strength. Its fighter squadrons will be fully jet-equipped.

Norway knows it could not turn back a full-scale Russian invasion, but it is determined to be prepared to stall such an invasion until NATO help could arrive.

Compulsory military training is in force. Except for officers, its young men serve largely without pay. Most of its military budget goes for armament and equipment instead of salaries.

Besides its army, air force and navy, Norway has an important Home Guard that operates much as minute men did in our American Revolution. This volunteer force has a strength of about 165,000, with nearly 100,000 more applicants not yet taken in because of lack of uniforms and equipment. Home Guard members spend two or three evenings a week and most week-ends training. They keep their uniforms and guns at home and are subject to call on two hour's notice.

Norway claims to have the third largest merchant fleet in the world, with 90 per cent of it operating from foreign ports. Norwegians feel this fleet can be one of their most important NATO contributions. Norway's fleet, you will remember, carried 40 per cent of the gas and oil and one-third of the food to Great Britain during the historic 1940 and 1941 Battle of Britain.

Historically no nation has a better right to be in NATO, for Norwegian Vikings settled in France, Ireland, Scotland, England, North Atlantic islands and, under Leif Ericson, reached North America almost 500 years before Columbus. Norway's Vikings of today are determined to uphold their illustrious traditions, and they believe NATO affords their best opportunity to maintain peace.

Hoey Hints Hearing On Boyle Influence

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Clyde Hoey (D-N.C.) said Tuesday his senate investigations subcommittee may hold hearings to "clear up the matter" of whether Democratic chairman William M. Boyle Jr., was paid to use his influence on an RFC loan.

"Even if there is nothing to the charges it may be advisable to hold public hearings to clear up the matter," Hoey told reporters. He had announced Monday that agents of the committee were making a "preliminary inquiry."

Britain Plans Around-World Jet Service

LONDON (AP)—Britain announced plans Tuesday for an all-jet air service which will whisk passengers around the rapidly-shrinking world at 500 miles an hour.

Sir Miles Thomas, chairman of the government-operated British Overseas Airways corporation, said that within five years BOAC hopes to be operating an "all-British, round-the-world airline" which will slash present travel schedules more than half.

Ultimately, he said, it will be possible for a traveler in Britain's airlines to circle the globe in three and a half days, compared to the eight days now required.

The key to Britain's air ambitions is the De Havilland comet, a swept-wing, four-jet airliner which British designers say is superior to anything the United States can develop in time to compete.

Some comets have been delivered, and Thomas predicted that by the end of 1951 BOAC's London-Cairo line will be "the world's first all-jet passenger service."

With that as a start, the British airline plans to extend jet service from Cairo south to Johannesburg, South Africa, and east to Britain's Asiatic colony of Singapore.

At the same time, comets will be sent to the U.S. to start high-speed service between New York and the resort centers of Bermuda and the Caribbean sea.

The present-model comet is designed to carry 48 passengers smoothly and silently at altitudes up to 40,000 feet and speeds up to 500 M.P.H. Its chief limitation is its relatively short range.

New models with more powerful engines are in the works, and BOAC hopes to be able to offer Trans-Atlantic jet service within two years.

Once the Atlantic is mastered, round-the-world jet service will be only a question of time.

Anti-Freeze Price Ceilings Announced By OPS in Iowa

DES MOINES (AP)—New Dollar-and cents ceiling prices have been placed on anti-freeze in Iowa, Walter J. Bender, chief of the fuels division of the Des Moines district office of price stabilization, reported Tuesday.

Bender said the ceilings, on both retail and wholesale sales, were effective Monday.

Retail ceilings for three standard types of anti-freeze were listed by Bender as follows:

Type S volatile (such as synthetic methanol) $1.50 per gallon in lots of one gallon or more; 40 cents per quart in lots of less than a gallon.

Type SC (diluted synthetic methanol) $1.40 per gallon in lots of one gallon or more; 35 cents per quart in lots of less than a gallon.

Type P (permanent glycol) $3.75 per gallon in lots of one gallon or more; $1 per quart in lots of less than a gallon.

Bender said ceiling prices may not be increased by charges for containers. Retailers are required, he said, to post ceiling prices in their establishments.

It is estimated that some 15,000 Iowa filling stations, garages and other establishments handle anti-freeze at retail regularly.

Minneapolis Bakery Strike Is Deadlocked

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—A state conciliator cancelled a meeting Tuesday between representatives of 24 Twin City bakeries and AFL bakers when neither side showed signs of budging in a dispute which has caused an eight-day-old strike.

Harry Hanson, state labor conciliator, had scheduled the meeting a week ago in an effort to bring about a compromise solution to the dispute over wages and vacations.

A federal conciliator met with representatives of both sides most of the day Monday and adjourned the session after no progress was made.

Neither side gave any indication it would change its views and so the meeting called for Tuesday was cancelled by A. C. Lyon, assistant state labor conciliator.

RICHLAND (AP)—A. J. Steinbeck has donated right-of-way to Washington county to enable the county to construct a half-mile rock road to a proposed youth camp on the north side of the new Lake Darling state park east of here. A seven-acre site for the youth camp has been acquired from the state conservation commission for $700.

Traces of Uranium Found in N. Dakota

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—United States Geological survey explorers have found small traces of uranium in North Dakota lignite deposits, a United States bureau of mines spokesman revealed Tuesday.

A. B. Needham, chief of the mining division, said the uranium had amounted to only about a hundredth of one per cent or less and was far too low to be considered yet as a source of uranium for atomic bombs.

"The traces were found about a year ago by the explorers," Needham said.

Special Session of Legislature Unlikely

DES MOINES (UP)—Gov. William S. Beardsley virtually ruled out the possibility of a special session of the legislature Tuesday as he met with a 10-member committee representing cities and towns.

The committee, although not specifically asking Beardsley to call the special session, had indicated in the past that it wanted one to revise the municipal financing law passed by the 1951 legislature.

Beardsley told the committee Tuesday to go to the attorney general and "canvass the situation" with him.

"Then you will know if you have a problem and what it is," he said.

The municipal officers said the law, limiting taxes for municipal purposes to 30 milles and limiting the debt retirement fund to a five-mill levy, has made it almost impossible for them to sell bonds to finance construction projects. They said bond attorneys will not approve the sale of the bonds under the present law.

Beardsley said a declaratory judgment from the courts might solve the problem and eliminate the necessity for a special session. He told the committee to study that possibility with the attorney general.

Mayor Herschel Loveless, Ottumwa, said the committee would be glad to meet with the attorney general. He said the committee would like to meet again with the governor after meeting with the attorney general. Beardsley said that was agreeable with him.

Mayor Marion L. Shugart, Council Bluffs, served as spokesman for the committee of city officials.

"We are sure the intent of the legislature in passing the law was good," he said. "But some communities have had to abandon construction projects and some have not even started them because they cannot finance them under the present law."

Thanks to Parents — Cerebral Palsy Treated

— At St. Louis Center

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE Associated Press Service Reporter

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Some parents refused to admit defeat over cerebral palsy.

So little children are learning to speak, watching in mirrors as they form their mouths as if to blow bubbles, or eat an ice cream cone.

Others are succeeding for the first time in dressing themselves, buttoning buttons and tying shoes and one who could walk only in circles is learning to walk straight and steadily.

The cerebral palsy training center was established last February in Firmin Desloge hospital by St. Louis University with the co-operation of the Cerebral Palsy Parents' council of Greater St. Louis.

The main impetus came from the parents, beginning two years ago with a meeting of as small number of men and women whose children had cerebral palsy. This is not a disease, but a condition. Damage to the brain before birth, during birth, or in young childhood, destroys normal control over muscles, or arms, legs, trunk, or head, interferes with coordination, puts them under minor or heavy retarding handicaps. Yet their minds often are as bright and receptive as those of most children.

Alone, one parent could do little; together they decided they could do much.

The most concrete result is the training center, planned by the university, but established two full years ahead of schedule by the enthusiasm and aid of the parents and others in the council. At night and on days off, parents came in to remodel the chaplain's room and guest room on the top floor of the hospital in the new center. They painted, made furniture, installed lights, and helped furnish it with all the special training equipment.

Now the center is a going affair; with 75 young patients aged eight months to ten years.

There are many applicants. A medical advisory board, composed of physicians from departments of physical medicine, pediatrics, neurology, and orthopedics, selects those most likely to benefit. Children receive a medical check-up from private physicians or from clinics at the medical school. An executive committee chooses the children who can be admitted. The parents' council assists many families who cannot pay the two or three dollars per lesson at the center.

The center, with Miss Diane Foster as coordinator, runs a small nursery school from 9 a. m. to noon, and from 1 to 4 p. m. to give youngsters experiences in creative activities, and also how to get along with other children before they go to regular or special schools. Other children come one to three times a week for speech, physical, and occupational therapy. The psychology department of St. Louis University provides consultation.

Many have never learned to speak. They may have to be taught how to build up lip and tongue pressure in order to talk. Some must be taught the desire to speak.

They watch themselves in mirrors to see their own attempt to imitate their teacher. Murals show children blowing bubbles, eating ice cream cones, as guides to what they must pretend to do to make the words sound right. Toys aid very young children in learning names and sounds.

Occupational therapy, to train fingers and hands, is devoted to useful pursuits, such as dressing themselves, and learning to use silverware.

In another room, children of various ages learn to walk, to balance, to crawl, to overcome crippled gait, to sit down, or stand up and to develop coordination.

Here there are mirrors to observe progress; parallel bars, and straps, all designed to help these children who often must learn consciously to do the things that other children have learned to do reflexively. Until now, many have not known how to bend a leg, or to curl their toes.

The center, cannot do all the training. A main premise is that parents learn the fundamentals and the methods that can be carried out at home to bring these children all the way or a long way back toward normal actions.

The child's progress gives new heart to parents, Miss Foster said. Parents learn how to help their children, without self-pity or hysteria.

Some civic organizations in St. Louis are becoming interested. The parents' council has been enthusiastic in speaking before these clubs and showing movies of the work.

Naval Rocket Shot 135 Miles In Air, Setting New Record

WHITE SANDS PROVING GROUND, N.M., (UP)—The navy's Martin Viking VII set a new altitude record for single-stage rockets here Tuesday, punching 135 miles into the stratosphere above the white sands of southern New Mexico.

Capt. A. E. Uehlinger, officer in charge of the naval unit, said the needle-thin missile reached a maximum speed of 4100 miles per hour as it threaded its way through scattered white clouds.

As witnessed from behind a concrete barrier outside the launching blockhouse, the rocket seemed to reach directly overhead. Actually it was leaning three degrees to the north and landed 40 miles away, almost in the center of the army's huge testing grounds.

The roar of the motor, set off at 11 a.m. MST, after several delays, battered the ears as the missile gained momentum after seeming to stand still in mid-air.

Flames shot from its fanned tail and remained visible until the alcohol and liquid oxygen used as fuel burned out 25 miles to 35 miles above the earth.

From that point on, the rocket was coasting, reaching a peak in four minutes and 23 seconds.

"We waited a long time for that one," yelled James Hartman, the man who pushed the firing button. "We gave 'em a mark to shoot at and it'll be a long time before anybody else meets it."

Hartman is an engineer with the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co., the firm which builds the Vikings for the naval research laboratory.

"We felt pretty good at the time the motors shut off," said Milton Rosen, scientific officer in charge. "We thought then that we topped the old record."

The previous altitude record for a single-stage rocket was held by a German-built V-2, the type that was fired on London late in World War II. It was fired here early in 1946 and reached a height of 114 miles.

However, man has already probed further into outer space than today's 135 miles. A two-stage rocket, consisting of a small "WAC corporal" fired at the peak of a V-2's climb, holds the all-time record of 250 miles.

Rosen indicated Tuesday that officials will not be satisfied with the new record. He said work had already started on the eighth of the ten Vikings to be fired and said, "We're never completely satisfied with any altitude."

Frank Pace, secretary of the army, and a large contingent of army and navy officials, watched the shoot from a spot some three miles from the launching platform.

The missile came to earth after being blown into sections to slow down its fall. Salvage crews were dispatched to the scene to recover instruments, although most of the information had already been recorded back to earth and recorded on film. The flight was a part of the navy's experimental program to gain high altitude information and to perfect its rockets.

SUI Wives Are Packing to Leave...

(TOP) I THINK BARRACKS are a godsend to students—Iowa itself I don't mind leaving," remarks Mrs. Oliver Smith, 1100 Finkbine park, as she packs some more items to add to the stack in the corner. By Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Smith had packed all their household goods except dishes and utensils. She sold the refrigerator and washing machine, was storing food supplies at a neighbor's. Mrs. Smith and her husband, who will receive his Ph.D. degree in mass communications tonight, will return to Brigham Young university, where Smith heads the journalism department. Mrs. Smith has lived in Finkbine a year and a half, joining her husband here after her baby, Ronald, came. The Smiths, including (left to right) Kenneth, 4, Ronald, 20 months, Olivia, 6, and Barbara Kay, 8, will start their return to Utah early Thursday morning.

(Daily Iowan Photos)

"I'M AFRAID IT WILL BE A LITTLE LONELY out in the cruel world again," muses Mrs. Roy Minnis, 1106 Finkbine, as she weeds her barracks garden while sons David 4½, and Paul, 7 months, sun. "We have a sentimental attachment for Iowa City." She and her husband have been coming here off and on for the last 11 years while he has attended SUI. Both sons were born here. Even after the Minnises were confronted with company of five after they sold their studio couch and began eating meals on a card table after they sold their dining set, Mrs. Minnis said, "Living here is very pleasant—a most congenial neighborhood. Its friendliness compensates for times I'm an academic widow." Minnis is completing requirements for his Ph.D. in education; he will join the University of Denver staff in the fall.

(LEFT) "IT'LL FEEL SORT OF FUNNY, NOT COMING BACK—we'll miss our friends—but we've already been looking for a 10 room house," exclaims Mrs. Clayton Fowler, 113 Stadium park, as she gives Kathleen and Lee Paul Kolstoe a wagon ride. "Until you know you're going to move, it's fine—afterward you get pretty impatient." Besides Mrs. Fowler and her husband, their family includes her mother and daughter Virginia, 13. The Fowlers have been coming to Iowa City summers since 1946. He received his M.A. degree in 1947; tonight he will receive his Ph.D. degree in art history. They will move within two weeks to Cedar Falls, where Fowler will join the faculty of Iowa State Teachers college.

"HAVING THE CHILDREN play with other children is what we've enjoyed most," Mrs. Hideya Kumata, 305 Finkbine, explains. She takes time out from last minute typing for her husband to reassure daughter Carol, 19 months. Mrs. Kumata said her other daughter, Ellen, 3, was very shy when they came to Finkbine a year ago last February, but "has certainly outgrown it." Kumata was in the army before the Kumatas came to Iowa City; he will return Aug. 22, after having been deferred so that he could complete his M.A. degree in sociology.

Cadets May Resign, Army Says

Sports Writers Air Their Views

By The Associated Press

A cross-section of opinion among the nation's sports writers on the West Point "cribbing scandal" Tuesday revealed an undercurrent of dissatisfaction with the methods of the way college football teams are organized.

Some writers lay the blame on Washington while most also see the gradual decline of moral values as contributing to the scandal.

Practically all believe the emphasis placed on winning teams has contributed to the trouble. Gordon Cobbledeek of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer: "Army's most formidable rivals in the high-powered football business don't expect their athletes to be students or they expect them to be students only in course that could be passed by a low-grade idiot. In requiring its football players to pass the same sources non-athletic students must pass, West Point encouraged cheating."

Jimmy Cannon, New York Post: "It causes a man who makes his living reporting games to wonder if amateur sports assist in the education of the young. They will trim a boy's waistline, but it is doubtful if they will improve his character. . . . It is obvious that football has no reason to exist at West Point."

Top Williams, New York World-Telegram and Sun: "As long as the honor system is in effect, it should be respected. But maybe it has become outmoded. Maybe it doesn't fit in with the kind of life we live these days."

Dick Hackenberg, Chicago Sun-Times: "If the boys have been naughty why don't we give them a sound spanking and send them back into the same routine that we may take pride in watching them bounce back from chastisement—to become finer officers and gentlemen. That was the job we set out to do, wasn't it? It would seem that ours would be the greater crime if we allowed the flower of American manhood to wither on the vine for the want of a little horticulture."

H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News: "If all colleges expelled students for cribbing, football would have to be abolished. Without cribbing the game could not continue as

Cribbing for Class Rank, Not Eligibility, Former Cadet Says

DALLAS (AP)—Dewitt Coulter, the Texan who gained all-American fame at West Point, said Tuesday he was convinced that the Army football players kicked out for cribbing were not doing it to stay eligible but to advance themselves in rank.

Coulter played tackle at the academy in 1944 and 1945, was a professional football player, and now is a sports writer on the Dallas Times Herald.

He declared that "the cadets who got caught with their paws in the wrong place were lifting the correct answers to tests not to stay eligible for football, but to elevate their ranking in the corps of cadets."

Coulter explained that each man is ranked in each subject. When he graduates, he is given an overall ranking in his class. It is advantageous to him to rank as high as possible.

"First, he gets his choice of which branch of the army he wishes to be assigned to according to his rank; second, his promotions are often expedited if his cadet record warrants it," Coulter said.

The fact that it is mostly upperclassmen of last year who are involved in the "beat-the-system" affair leads Coulter to believe the football players were acting as cadets, and not as football players trying to keep eligible.

"The cadets are guilty of being blinded by ambition," he declared. "They committed an error and as on the football field where sportsmanship prevails, should accept whatever punishment is dealt them."

Coulter said football players "had no advantage at West Point."

"The only advantage a football player has over anyone else is in getting an appointment to the academy," he added.

Won't Go Against Record If They Do

WEST POINT (UP) — The Army eased up Tuesday on 80 cadets who confessed cheating in their West Point examinations by offering them a chance to resign and promised to investigate 29 other cadets they have implicated in the cribbing ring.

Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, academy superintendent, also was authorized to court martial the 10 additional cadets who have been accused of cribbing but still deny the charges.

Before the sudden "softening" in policy all 90 cadets accused of cheating had been ordered given "general" discharges.

At a press conference, Irving pointed out, however, that even under the new policy any cadet who can't clear himself will be out of the army one way or another.

Irving said he believed that "we probably are cleaner than almost any other institution. The fact that we took action just makes us look bad."

Denies Coercion He denied the cadet charges that they were coerced into making statements which were used against them.

The cadets immediately replied with a written statement offering to swear under oath that they were victims of "threats and intimidations" during their investigation, that they were denied legal counsel and that they were never informed of their rights under the articles of war.

Irving, speaking from behind a massive desk in his flag-draped office, said that the action against the 10 who still deny cheating charges will depend "on the evidence."

Chance to Resign Those 80 who have confessed, he said, will be offered a chance to resign. If they don't resign, they will be given "administrative" discharges "without specification as to character."

Fellow Cadets Favor Dismissals Deployed at nearby Camp Buckner, a summer training camp for cadets, more than 300 men vigorously defended the honor code, said they had "no complaints" over the dismissal of the wayward 90, and shouted such declarations as "the sooner they go, the better off we'll be."

Irving made it plain that he didn't consider the accused cadets criminals. The mass dismissal, he said, "is comparable to an order to leave college in civilian life."

Iowan Accuses Point Of Trying to Use Congress as Scouts

WASHINGTON (UP) — Rep. Paul Cunningham (R-Ia.) charged Tuesday that West Point football coaches have tried to use congressmen as grid talent scouts, and a senator demanded abolition of both the military and naval academies.

They joined in a hot-and-heavy congressional debate over the impending dismissal of 90 West Point cadets—including most of the football team—for cheating on examinations.

The senate's permanent investigating committee already is conducting a "preliminary" inquiry into the scandal, but Chairman Clyde R. Hoey (D-N.C.), said it is too early to tell whether full-dress hearings will be held.

President Truman remained silent on an appeal from the parents of the cadets, that he intervene "as a fatherly act" and restore them to good standing.

Sen. John J. Sparkman (D-Ala.) said it would not be enough to outlaw football at West Point and Annapolis as some lawmakers have proposed.

"We should abolish both academies," he told reporters. "We should draw all our officers from the college ROTC programs."

Cunningham said football has been emphasized so heavily at West Point in recent years that he and other congressmen have been asked to use their cadet-appointing powers to get high school grid stars into the military academy.

He said an Army football coach approached him with such a request four or five years ago. He could not remember the name of the coach or the Iowa high school star involved, but said he spurned the proposition.

"I was surprised that West Point would go scouting around all over the country," from becoming army officers in the future if they are drafted and want to go up through the ranks. "They are basically honorable—most of them, that is—and I would like to see them given an opportunity to continue their education and their careers," he said. "They are fundamentally a good bunch of boys. They did have, however, a wrong sense of values and got off on the wrong step."

Maj. Gen. Irving

demey. "We have and we will investigate charges that others are involved. These 90 men have submitted a list implicating 29 others, but we have not uncovered any evidence to find them guilty. If we discover others, we will do the same as we have in the case of the 90," Irving said.

Meanwhile, an aroused body of West Point upperclassmen, demanding that the public "hear the other 2,300 cadets," openly condemned the 90 accused of cheating and staunchly upheld the academy's honor code.

Fellow Cadets Favor Dismissals Deployed at nearby Camp Buckner, a summer training camp for cadets, more than 300 men vigorously defended the honor code, said they had "no complaints" over the dismissal of the wayward 90, and shouted such declarations as "the sooner they go, the better off we'll be."

Irving made it plain that he didn't consider the accused cadets criminals. The mass dismissal, he said, "is comparable to an order to leave college in civilian life."

Tribe Wins, Bosox Lose

NEW YORK (UP)—The Cleveland Indians made the most of an opportunity to gain ground on the idle Yankees Tuesday night by whipping the St. Louis Browns, 5-1, but the slumping Boston Red Sox blew another chance as they dropped their fourth straight game, 7-4, to the Philadelphia A's.

Mike Garcia really proved the whole show in the Indians' sixth straight victory, and it was an important victory for him, too. This was his 15th win of the campaign, topping his best previous year, 1949, when he had 14. And what could delight the heart of a pitcher more than a three-run homer, like he clouted in the sixth inning against Jim McDonald to turn a tight 2-0 game into an easy one. It was the second homer of his career. He had a shutout until the ninth inning when the Browns counted once on Bill Jennings' single, Frank Saucier's double, and an infield out.

Hooper, recording the first victory of his career against the Red Sox, thus helped his mates end their own six-game losing streak. He gave up two runs in the first inning and two more in the second, but that was all. Meanwhile, the A's kept chipping away at Ray Scarborough, pulling up to a 4-3 deficit on Joe Tipton's bases-empty homer in the fifth and going ahead to stay in the sixth when they scored twice on a triple by Elmer Valo, a single by Wally Moses, and a triple by Hank Majeski.

The White-Sox Tigers game rolled along for 12 innings as a duel between Chicago lefty Bill Pierce and Detroit lefty Ted Gray. Robinson had smashed his third homer in two games, 20th of the season, in the second inning to give Chicago a 1-0 lead but Detroit had tied things up in the seventh on Steve Souchock's double and Don Kolloway's single.

Southpaw Bob Cain took over for Gray in the 13th and got the first man out. But then Robinson walked. The Sox veteran moved to second as Bert Haas grounded out and raced home with the winning run when Jim Eusby lashed his single just past Detroit third baseman George Kell.

Bill Proposed to Exempt Pro Sports from Anti-Trust Laws

WASHINGTON (AP)—A senator who runs a minor league on the side and a 30-year-old former bush leaguer Tuesday gave house investigators somewhat clashing views on baseball.

The lawmaker, Sen. Edwin Johnson (D-Colo.), who is head of the Western league, told the judiciary subcommittee there ought to be legislation to legalize baseball's current operations.

But Ross C. Horning, who gave up his infielder's mitt to study for a foreign service career, didn't see it quite that way.

He suggested there ought to be a change in the game's controversial reserve clause, through which club owners dispose of players. But he couldn't say what that change should be.

Johnson, author of a bill in the senate to change the anti-trust laws so professional sports won't be disturbed, voiced a fear that the committee's hearings will be harmful to the game. A lot more lawsuits against baseball, he said, might follow if the hearings "result in casting further doubts with respect to the legality of the reserve clause and territorial rights."

Johnson urged the committee to support his bill, which he said would handle the problem "without fuss or feathers."

He told the committee about the 600-mile over-night bus rides the Sioux Falls team took to save paying hotel bills, the way minor leaguers could be fired or transferred without warning, and how they could be thrown out of organized baseball if they didn't comply.

He said he thought a player ought to have something to say about where he would play. But that, he said, isn't the way the major league clubs run their farm teams.

11 Remain as Choice For Chandler's Job NEW YORK (UP) — Screening more than two score possibilities, major league owners Tuesday reduced to 11 secret survivors the candidates for baseball commissioner to succeed fired A. B. (Happy) Chandler.

After more than seven hours in which the qualifications of all candidates were discussed thoroughly, and the field at one time was reduced to five, the owners adjourned until Aug. 21.

"We did a pretty good job of eliminating," commented Del Webb, a co-owner of the New York Yankees who presided as chairman of the meeting. "I am hopeful of an election Aug. 21," he declared.

"It didn't matter too much whether they are politicians, judges, or what not. It's whether we get the right man," said Webb.

A ballot was taken on each of the 40 men to see if they should be kept on the list. At least eight votes were required to keep a name on the final list. None received a unanimous vote, but some were regarded "very favorably" and got as many as 12 votes.

Professor Knew Man As 'Organized Red'

WASHINGTON (UP)—A former German Red testified Tuesday that a man he had known as "an organized Communist" nine years earlier occupied a post in the White House during the Roosevelt administration.

Prof. Karl A. Wittfogel, now director of a university Chinese history project, told the senate internal security subcommittee the man was Michael Greenberg, an aide to Lauchlin Currie, then an assistant to President Roosevelt.

The subcommittee is investigating the institute of Pacific relations and its possible influences in U.S. Far Eastern policy.

Wittfogel also testified that he had known Owen Lattimore, with whom he made a trip to China, said in 1944 "it would be a good conservative solution" for Korea's problems "if the Soviet Union would take over the country."

But he immediately produced a letter from Lattimore, written in 1947, in which the Johns Hopkins Professor denied he ever made the remark. Wittfogel said his reply to Lattimore was that the issue "will always remain your memory against mine."

Wittfogel was asked by Sen. Willis Smith, (D-N.C.), if Lattimore, an institute trustee, "was or is a Communist?"

The witness replied that Lattimore had always said he is not. But Wittfogel said he would not take Lattimore's statement at "face value."

Lattimore promptly issued a statement saying that Wittfogel's testimony about him was "largely a repetition of charges" the same witness made last December before the house un-American activities committee.

Wittfogel's statement, Lattimore said, "show the compulsion felt by so many ex-Communists not to lag behind in making denunciations right and left."

He asserted that "any Far Eastern expert who does not swallow Wittfogel's own personal theories is 'in danger of being called a Communist by Wittfogel.'"

Lattimore has been accused of being a Communist by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, (R-Wis.), but has denied the allegation under oath.

A senate subcommittee also cleared Lattimore, but McCarthy called the inquiry a "whitewash."

Discussing Greenberg, Wittfogel said he knew him as "an organized Communist" in Great Britain in 1934 and that Greenberg later "landed as a minor assistant to Mr. Currie" at the White House.

Swim Certificates Awarded to 231

Certificates are being awarded to 231 persons who have met swimming requirements in various classifications during the six weeks summer swimming lessons at the Iowa City Municipal pool.

Included are certificates issued to 143 beginners, 67 intermediates, 20 swimmers and one senior life saver.

The lessons, sponsored by the Johnson county Red Cross chapter, concluded last week. Prof. Gladys Scott, women's physical education department, was the director.

Total number of lessons given was 7,006. The largest attendance was 1,308 during the week of July 23 to 27.

The greatest number of classes, nine, were for second and third grade children, although a total of 30 classes covered eight-year-olds through adults.

McCarthy Debate Asked by Demos

MADISON WIS., (UP)—Gov. Walter Kohler was invited Tuesday to debate with state democrats on the issue of McCarthyism at the Dane county Democratic club picnic Sunday.

Stanley Prudeaux, chairman of county Democrats, said he wired Kohler inviting him "to debate with a Democratic spokesman on the issue of McCarthyism or any other of the subjects which you mentioned in a recent letter to several Democrats."

Prudeaux said he referred to a letter written by Kohler on July 18 to four leading state Democrats who had asked the governor to take a public stand on Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Kohler then declined to discuss McCarthyism and criticized the national Democratic administration as "meddler."

63% of Corn Crop In Tasseling Stage

DES MOINES (UP)—Iowa's Weekly Crop and Weather bulletin said Tuesday that 63 per cent of the state's corn crop had reached the tasseling stage by last Saturday.

Judging of Clothing On Girls Program Opens 4-H Show

The 23rd annual Johnson county 4-H club show opened Monday in the Iowa City Community building with the judging of clothing from the girls' achievement program.

The girls' show will continue through Wednesday. Each of the 14 Johnson county girls clubs has a booth set up in the show.

The livestock show, with both boys and girls entering their animals will be Thursday and Friday in the Iowa City sales pavilion.

It will close Saturday afternoon with the annual auction of baby beef steers, market pigs and lambs in the sale barn. Prizes totaling nearly $1,000 will be awarded.

Manager of the achievement show is Mrs. Gladys Meeker, county 4-H club director. Mrs. Louis Lord is chairman of the county club committee.

Judges for the girls show are Mrs. C. E. Herriot and Mrs. Roger Conklin, both of Cedar Rapids.

In the livestock show, Harold J. Montgomery, county extension director, is manager.

Judges will be Donald Rinner, Washington county farmer and cattle breeder; E. L. Quaise, Iowa State college extension division and Lloyd J. Arnold, also of Iowa State college.

Ohio College Student Exposed as Burglar

TOLEDO (AP)—One of Bowling Green university's honor students has been exposed as a burglar who stole $10,000 in two years, police announced Tuesday.

The combination safecracker and cash drawer robber, said detective Capt. Orrin Gonias, is Vincent J. Foss, 28, married, and the father of five children in Grand Rapids, Ohio.

Foss, a GI student who complained his monthly GI check was only $153, was in county jail here. He has pleaded innocent to a charge of burglarizing the John Canell Co. here Saturday night.

That night, said police, Foss and one of his neighbors, Charles McEwen, 22, made the mistake of tripping over a burglar alarm.

Gonia reported that Foss had freely admitted 46 night robberies to finance family expenses and pay his way through school.

McEwen also has pleaded innocent to the same charge.

Arch B. Conklin, dean of students at Bowling Green, described Foss as a "very bright boy—an A and B student" and said he was a summer student specializing in piano and voice.

Iowa Man Fined For Drunk Driving

OTTUMWA (UP)—District Judge Heinrich Taylor, Bloomfield, Ia., pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He was fined $300 and his driver's license was suspended for 60 days.

Taylor entered the plea when appearing before district Judge Elmer K. Dougherty, and said he did so with full understanding of its significance.

Taylor was charged with drunken driving after he had difficulty parking his car April 12.

At the time of the arrest, a physician reported Taylor had been under treatment and had been taking barbiturates on a prescription.

Steffes Appointed At Bowling Green

Robert A. Steffes, G. Carbonale, Ill., has been appointed assistant professor of journalism at Bowling Green State university, Bowling Green, Ohio.

Steffes received a B.S. from South Dakota State college and a M.A. from Syracuse university. He is currently working on his Ph.D. degree.

For the last three years, Steffes has been chairman of the department of journalism and photography at Southern Illinois university.

FBI Men Tell Of Rendezvous At Rocha Trial

OMAHA (UP)—An FBI agent Tuesday told of a rendezvous in the Burlington railroad station here with Samuel Rocha, 27, Council Bluffs, charged in connection with the burglary of the McClelland, Ia., savings bank last Jan. 31.

Testifying at a preliminary hearing for Rocha before U. S. Commissioner M. O. Cunningham, special agent Clyde G. Matthews, of the Davenport FBI office, told how, on instructions from his superiors, he entered the station, "exchanged winks" with Rocha then went to the men's restroom with him ostensibly to exchange $24,000 in cash for more than $100,000 in bonds. He said he had never seen Rocha before but identified him from a picture he had seen.

Another special agent of the FBI, Ray E. Lamb of Omaha, told how he watched and listened during Matthews' meeting with Rocha, and then arrested Rocha and took possession of a paper sack containing the bonds.

The testimony of Matthews and Lamb detailed the arrest of Rocha in Omaha July 25. The FBI took from him a paper sack containing $119,520 in U. S. savings bonds, all of them identified as having been taken from the McClelland savings bank.

Rocha was charged with entering a bank to commit a felony and theft of property in the custody of a bank.

Matthews said he and Rocha identified each other by matching torn halves of a one-dollar bill and when Rocha asked him for "the money" he in turn demanded to see the bonds.

After that Matthews testified, Rocha left the room to go to his car, and returned with a paper sack. He showed Matthews a card on which he had figures purportedly showing the total of each denomination of the bonds. Matthews took the paper sack into a toilet booth to examine it and he found that the sack contained "at least $100,000 in bonds."

He said he then handed the sack back to Rocha, offered him a cigar, and when Rocha refused it, saying he did not smoke, Matthews lit up a cigar, which was a prearranged signal to two other FBI agents hidden in toilet booths that Rocha had the bonds.

SUI Student Draws Cartoon at Request Of Newspaper Group

G. Robert Artley, A4, Hampton, Daily Iowan cartoonist, will have an original cartoon offered to United States newspapers during National Newspaper week, Oct. 1-8.

The cartoon was drawn at the request of the Newspaper Week committee. It shows a man struggling through a storm, holding a torch representing the free press. The cartoon is entitled, "A Light We Must Protect."

Artley, an art student, won honors for his cartoons during the 1950-51 school year.

One drawing was featured in the state cancer drive last April. The cartoon was chosen the best of a group submitted by Daily Iowan artists.

At the school of journalism's annual Matrix Table banquet May 10, Artley was given the top three honors for his Iowan cartoons.

Artley expects to graduate today and intends to study at SUI for his master's degree. He plans to teach or do newspaper cartooning.

The 1950 National Newspaper week cartoons were drawn by Richard Spencer III and Rube Mehling, former SUI students.

2 Men Slain As Gang Law Enforced Again

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The dog-eat-dog law of the underworld has been enforced again with the expert slaying of two mobsters. And police, as is usual in such killings, are faced with an almost clueless case.

The latest eruption of gangland warfare in southern California came Monday night when Tony Brancato, 36, and Tony Trombino, 31, were rubbed out with efficiency and dispatch.

They were found slumped in a parked car on a quiet Hollywood street. Trombino was killed by two shots in the back of the head and a third in the shoulder, an autopsy showed. Brancato, beside him in the front seat of the sedan, was slain by one shot in the back of the head.

Apparently, police said, they were blasted by a "friend" seated in the back of the car or by someone hiding in the back. The murder weapon isn't been located and so far no one has been found who saw the killing.

Both were well-known underworld figures here and in Kansas City. Their car bore a 1951 Missouri license plate.

It was prophesied last July 3 that Brancato was a marked man when he appeared in San Francisco federal court on a Las Vegas, Nev., charge of holding up a bookie shop in the swank Flamingo hotel. "There is a man who has never carried a gun in his life," said his attorney, Nathan Coghlin. "Somebody's out to get him."

Whatever the motive, it is still a gangland secret and may remain one. Police Chief William J. Parker who took personal charge of the investigation, suggested the possibility that the two were rubbed out because of heavy debts to bookies. He said it looks like a "welsch job."

Investigators also advanced the idea that the pair, in desperate need of money, may have tried to collect from an underworld figure and were paid in lead.

At Her Illinois School — SUI Grad to See Thesis Put into Practice

By CATHY PHELPS
Jeanette Lloyd, who will receive her M.A. degree in dramatic arts today, will see the results of her master's thesis every day she teaches in her hometown of Freeport, Ill.

Miss Lloyd's thesis dealt with recommendations and pitfalls in planning an auditorium-stage to be used for all school activities.

In the fall of 1949, the Freeport school system began making plans for a building that would include an auditorium-stage and consulted Miss Lloyd concerning this area.

She received her B.A. degree in dramatic arts at SUI in 1934 and came back to the university to talk to her former professors concerning the project. This started her on the road to her master's thesis.

Miss Lloyd said her thesis is designed to help anyone else planning a similar project so they can profit from the Freeport school's experience.

When the planning for the Freeport building including auditorium-stage began, architects, school board, superintendent, and Miss Lloyd pooled their knowledge.

She said that she firmly believes that anyone planning such a building should consult a theater specialist because it is impossible for an architect to understand all the working problems of a stage.

In this project she discovered that the architects knew the front of the house much better than the working area behind the stage curtain.

Special problems she mentioned were selecting the right location for the auditorium in the building, adequate and handy scenery and costume shop space, and providing parking facilities.

"Suggestions I received from Prof. Arnold Gillette and Walter Dewey helped greatly in getting correct working facilities and lighting equipment, and in avoiding many pitfalls," she said.

She has taught in Freeport since 1938 and is now head of the dramatic department there. During this time conditions for producing dramatic productions have been very poor and have provided innumerable handicaps.

There was no stage-auditorium in connection with the school so all practicing for plays was done in the study hall where the seats had to be moved in and out every night.

The plays were produced on the stage in the Masonic Consistory building. The cast never got on this stage until the night of the first performance of the play.

There were no dress rehearsals. The students simply had to transplant themselves from their study hall area to the real stage which was much larger than their practice conditions.

This meant that they did not have scenery and furniture facilities to use until the night of the first performance. Sets were built at school and erected on the stage the afternoon before the opening.

These conditions did not hinder Miss Lloyd's thespians in producing high caliber performances. She took a play cast to the state contest every year except one with the Freeport group winning first place six different times.

Theater goes will remember Miss Lloyd's delightful performance as Mrs. Malaprop in "The Rivals" which played at the SUI theater the past week.

Mt. Vernon Couple Killed in Nebraska Auction Barn Fire

OXFORD, NEB. (AP)—Mrs. F. F. Ebersole became the second victim Tuesday of an auto accident that claimed the life of her husband, Dr. F. F. Ebersole, Mt. Vernon, Ia.

Ebersole was killed outright Monday night as his car struck a concrete abutment on highways 6 and 34 northwest of here. State highway patrolmen said the couple was en route to Colorado for a vacation when the doctor apparently fell asleep at the wheel.

Mrs. Ebersole died at a hospital here. Ebersole had been a practicing physician at Mt. Vernon for 46 years.

RED OAK (AP)—Cause of a fire which destroyed the Red Oak auction barn remained undetermined Tuesday, but Charles Conner of the state fire marshal's office said the case would remain open.

Conner declined to speculate on the possible connection of the fire and the robbery of the Hunt supermarket. A safe containing $500 was taken from the supermarket as firemen battled the blaze.

Conner said the case would remain open through the three-year period provided under the status of limitations.

Contino Sentenced To 6 Months, Fined For Draft Evasion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Accordantist Dick Contino, who pleaded guilty to dodging the draft because he couldn't stand being "fenced in," Tuesday was fined $10,000 and sentenced to serve six months behind the walls of a federal prison.

The handsome, 21-year-old musician who rose from an unknown amateur to a $4,000-a-week professional on the wings of a radio talent competition, was sentenced by Federal Judge Michael J. Roche who rejected a probation department recommendation for leniency.

"I have received letters from wives whose husbands have paid the price—death," the judge said in pronouncing sentence. "I don't think this is a proper case for probation. What will they think about what we're doing here today? We have to think about that too."

Contino was trembling slightly and appeared nervous as he stood before the judge to hear his sentence. He brightened as the probation officer recommended probation and smiled when Roche said: "I'm going to give him an opportunity to go into the army."

But his face fell in dismay when the judge added: "But he will have to pay the price before he does." Maj. Martin S. Drucker of the sixth army took the stand before sentencing to testify that under laws passed in 1950, Contino would be ineligible for induction if he were placed on probation, or if he were ordered by the court to join the army.

For that reason Judge Roche said the youth "may" join the army when his sentence is completed. The dark-haired former Fresno,

Paulette Goddard Charlestons

(AP Wirephoto) FILM STAR PAULETTE GODDARD hatched up her party-motiff evening gown of the 1920 period as she stepped out a speedy Charleston with host Jacques Fath, Parisian couturier. The garden party at Fath's home near Paris, annual social high point of the Paris August fashion season, later was enlivened by Fath's fancy-dress imitation of Charlie Chaplin, one-time husband of Miss Goddard.

Calif., butcher's apprentice appeared dazed and bewildered as he was led to the county jail to await transfer to prison. His mother, Mrs. Mary Contino, wept softly when sentence was pronounced.

Contino, who won success on the nationwide Horace Heidt talent show, originally pleaded not guilty to the draft evasion charges,

Former Latvian D.P. Given Scholarship

A former displaced person from Latvia who came to Iowa City a year ago has been awarded an International scholarship at SUI.

Aristides Ratermanis, son of SUI romance language instructor Janis Ratermanis, has received the scholarship for the 1951-52 school year.

Ratermanis, who graduated from University high school in June, has just completed his first SUI semester this summer. He received his grade school instruction in a D.P. camp in Germany.

A pre-engineering student, Ratermanis arrived in the United States in December, 1949. He and his family came to this country through arrangements of the Lutheran World federation.

Ratermanis has a younger brother enrolled at the University high school. His father teaches Russian and French at SUI.

Albia Man Wins Plowing Contest

DAKOTA CITY (AP) — Lloyd Goode, Albia, won the state level land plowing contest Tuesday, defeating seven other experts in the tests on the Jim Junert farm.

Virgil Bender, Norwalk, placed second; Clint Bane, Bondurant, was third and Wayne Nelson, Goldfield, was fourth. Nelson qualified for the tourney Tuesday as the representative of Humboldt county.

Clint Bane was first place winner in a safety contest. Marian Clausen, of Weaver township in Humboldt county, was chosen level land contest queen. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clausen.
