Gambler, 5 Players Receive Sentences In Basketball Fixes

NEW YORK (AP) — A basketball fixer was sentenced to a long prison term Monday by a judge who called college basketball and football a sordid big business. Five former college players also drew jail terms, and nine others received suspended sentences.

General Sessions Judge Samuel S. Streit sentenced gambler Salvatore Sollazzo to 8 to 16 years in prison for spending $22,000 to bribe basketball stars of big-time Madison Square Garden games.

"Commercialism and over-emphasis in intercollegiate football and basketball are rampant throughout the country," said Judge Streit. He said the nation's schools are courting an "atomic athletic scandal."

Streit called Sollazzo "a cool, calculating and cunning weasel, who preys on the gullible and unsuspecting."

Five former players drew jail terms as conspirators in the biggest scandal in the history of intercollegiate sports.

One of them, Edward Gard, a Sollazzo lieutenant from Long Island University, got an indeterminate sentence up to three years.

Other former players and their sentences were Sherman White, LIU, one year; Edward Warner and Alvin Roth, City College of New York, and Harvey "Connie" Schaff, New York University, six months each.

Judge Streit called the players "mature young men, all over 22 years of age, who should have known the iniquity of their conduct."

The court suspended sentence on Adolph Biggs, Richard Feur-tado, Nathan Miller, and Leroy Smith, all of LIU; and Norman Mager, Irwin Dambrot, Herbert Cohen, Floyd Layne and Edward Roman, all of City College.

Some of them wept with relief at escaping jail terms.

Cases against 16 other players are pending in the big cage scandal, in which players rigged points in games for the benefit of gamblers.

Dist. Atty. Frank S. Hogan said "the itch for easy money" led the young men to sell out their schools.

Judge Streit, however, saw the scandal as evidence of widespread corruption in the college athletic setup.

He blamed college authorities, alumni and coaches—labelling as "despicable" the attitude of many big-time coaches.

Hitting at subsidizing on American campuses, Judge Streit said an athlete finds himself "bid and bargained for in the crassest way, by those colleges who want his athletic services."

He advised the nation's schools to clean house in a hurry, or have congress or the states do it for them.

As examples of over-emphasis in football, Streit singled out Oklahoma, Texas, Texas A. & M., Southern Methodist, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Maryland and Kentucky. Only Kentucky has been mixed up in the basketball scandal.

Said Judge Streit as he handed down the punishments: "We have 'scratched the surface; like the iceberg, four-fifths of the corruption is as yet beneath the level of legal proof and indictment. The exposure before me is only the lifting of the curtain for a small glimpse of intercollegiate football and basketball."

7 College Presidents Meet to Consider Sports De-Emphasis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven college presidents agreed Monday that "something has to be done" to remove whatever evils there are in the intercollegiate sports program.

The college presidents are members of a special committee set up by the American Council on Education—the first time in history such a high ranking group ever was named to look into sports.

The college presidents met behind closed doors with sports writers and athletic commissioners. Their views were given in news conferences held by the committee chairman, Dr. John A. Hannah of Michigan State college.

Hannah told reporters: "We start with the assumption that there is much good in college sports. We want to preserve what's good and take the evil out."

Were the presidents agreed that sports must be de-emphasized? "The general tenor," Hannah replied, "was that something has to be done."

But Hannah warned that it probably would be weeks before any verdict is reached.

The committee spent Monday trying to define the problem. The discussions ranged from gambling on games to recruiting of athletes.

The presidents got advice from "Sec" Taylor, sports editor of the Des Moines Register and president of the National Football Writers association; Leo H. Petersen, United Press sports editor; Hugh Fullerton Jr., Associated Press columnist; Asa S. Bushnell, commissioner for eastern colleges, and Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson, Big Ten commissioner.

Besides Hannah, those attending Monday's meeting were: The Rev. Fr. John J. Cavanaugh of Notre Dame, Raymond B. Allen of the University of Washington, R. G. Gustavson of Nebraska, John S. Mills of Western Reserve, Humphrey Lee of Southern Methodist and John L. Pyler of Furman.

The total of known and reported American dead last week stood at 16,805, including 183 who were originally reported missing.

Sen. Guy Gillette (D-Iowa) separately demanded that the United Nations promptly call to "strictest account" the Communist forces that have murdered American prisoners.

Gillette said in a statement that the number of those slain "is entirely inconsequential excepting to emphasize the horror."

Some sources in Washington and Tokyo have suggested there may have been duplications in the reports on the killings. They said the story had caused anguish among thousands of families of captured American GIs.

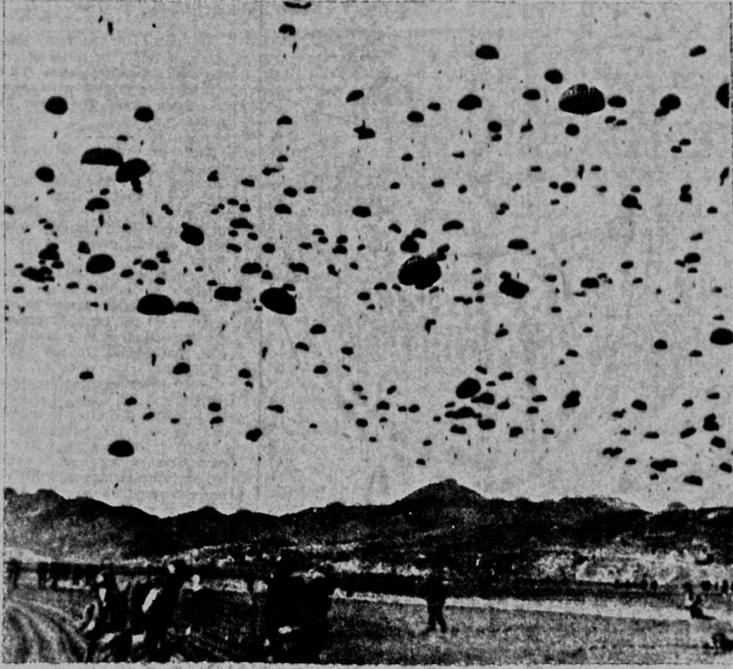

High officials said the facts so far received from Ridgway have not added substantially to the total of known American dead.

Paratroopers Jump in Korea

3,000 AMERICAN PARATROOPERS FLOAT TO EARTH in full combat conditions during training exercises in Korea. The troops, members of the 187th regimental combat team, were airlifted from a base in Japan by C-119 flying boxcars. Paratroopers have been used behind enemy lines during the war.

Army Asks 'Specific' Atrocity Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defense department disclosed Monday night it has asked Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway for a more specific "clarifying" statement on the reported Communist slaughter of some 5,500 American prisoners of war in Korea.

High officials at the Pentagon said they expect Gen. Ridgway's headquarters in Tokyo to issue a new statement very soon, perhaps within 24 hours.

The latest message to Gen. Ridgway was sent Monday after defense officials had considered the supreme Allied commander's Nov. 18 statement.

Ridgway's statement neither confirmed nor denied the accuracy of the atrocity figures, but said it was regrettable that the information was not coordinated before it was released.

Reds Hint Acceptance Of 30-Day Truce Trial

No-Cut Rule to Go On Trial Wednesday

By BOB HESS

SUI students go on trial Wednesday and Monday to find out if the no-cut rule is as old-fashioned as the "Roaring Twenties" when it was first adopted.

For the first time in 30 years, the no-cut rule is not in effect this Thanksgiving vacation, and for the students it's a "do or die" proposition.

If the mass exodus out of Iowa City is a little premature Wednesday, chances are that the ruling will be reinstated, if not etched as a permanent SUI tradition.

Instructors have been advised to keep close tab on classroom attendance this Wednesday and next Monday as if the ruling was in effect. But unlike past vacations, no graduation hours will be added to a student's total because of absences.

After vacation, the attendance figures will then be studied by a student council committee and the deans of the colleges of liberal arts, commerce, engineering and nursing.

If they decide the "class-cutting" on the day before and after vacation was too "excessive," the no-cut rule will be put back in effect.

But if the two committees decide that the suspension has worked effectively the ruling will be lifted for Christmas and a second trial run.

Today at 12:20, instructors will begin the check of classroom attendance.

All day Monday, classroom attendance will be watched to find the number of students who took a prolonged vacation.

The opinion around the campus seems to be that the suspension will work—for Thanksgiving at least.

The majority of the students interviewed by The Daily Iowan said they believed most students would not take advantage of the suspension this time.

One student, however, had an answer which might be all-too-typical of the campus reaction: "Yeah, all the fellows here at the house are going to class at Thanksgiving vacation so we can skip at Christmas."

The controversial no-cut rule came up for discussion this month after it had popped up in student council, faculty meetings and throughout the campus in general for many years.

Expect Final Reply to UN Plan Today

TOKYO (TUESDAY) (AP) — North Korea hinted today that the Communists would agree to an Allied 30-day trial plan for a Korean armistice and then would demand the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea.

The truce talks were recessed for the day. The Reds asked for time to prepare their answer. Presumably they had to check the issue to a higher level — Peiping, P'yongyang, perhaps the Kremlin.

The Communists promised to give their final, overall yes or no at the 27th meeting in Panmunjom Wednesday at 11 a.m. (8 p.m. CST today). The Allied proposal was for a cease-fire along the present battle line for a month while other armistice problems are being worked out.

United Nations spokesmen said they believed the compromise offer would be accepted. Communist newsmen at Panmunjom, who usually reflect the party line, said they could see nothing wrong with the scheme.

The first Communist hint that might bear on the situation came early today from the P'yongyang radio. It said foreign minister Pak Yon Yong of North Korea had forwarded to the United Nations a four-point proposal for ending the war.

The message, addressed to the presidents of the UN general assembly and security council, made no direct mention of the current Allied truce proposal. But its first two points tallied with the Allied plan, and the other two, some quarters believed, could foreshadow the Communist tack thereafter.

The North Korean proposal as reported from P'yongyang was:

1. Military action in Korea should be stopped at once as the first step toward peaceful settlement of the Korean situation.

2. Troops of both sides should be withdrawn two kilometers (1.24 mile) from the battle line and a demilitarized zone set up, according to the "reasonable" proposals of the Communist truce delegates.

3. All foreign troops should be withdrawn from Korea.

4. "War criminals" responsible for extending the Korean war and those responsible for "barbarous deeds" against innocent civilians should be punished.

Education Institute Praises SUI for Student Exchanges

SUI was cited Monday for "outstanding contribution to the advancement of world understanding" by the Institute of International Education in New York.

Praising the university's active participation in the student exchange program, Kenneth Holland, president of the institute, presented SUI with a special certificate for "bettering the foreign relations of the United States through the medium of the international exchange of persons."

"The State University of Iowa, by welcoming students from other lands, has contributed immeasurably to this international movement," Holland said.

Cook on Trial Again

CONVICTED MURDERER BILLY COOK (center), already serving a 300-year term at Alcatraz, is shown being led into the courtroom at El Centro, Calif. Monday to stand trial for another murder. Cook is charged with killing Robert H. Dewey, a Seattle salesman, last Jan. 6. He has already been convicted of the kidnap-murder of five members of the Carl Messer family of Alwood, Ill.

USS Iowa Sails for Hawaii

SUI PRESIDENT VIRGIL M. HANCHER and 13 other prominent Iowans sailed aboard the USS Iowa (shown above) from Long Beach, Calif. Monday on a two-week shakedown cruise to Hawaii. The ship was just recently recommissioned. The party will return to the United States on the navy flying boat Mars.

British, Egyptians Negotiate 7-Day Truce in Canal Zone

CAIRO, EGYPT (AP) — British and Egyptian authorities Monday were reported to have agreed to a seven-day "truce" in the disputed Suez canal zone where week-end clashes between British troops and Egyptian civilians and police left 17 dead and nearly two score wounded.

Egyptian demonstrators, aroused by the reports of violence, marched through the streets of several cities, shouting demands for arms, as the truce arrangement was being worked out.

Informal sources in Ismailia, the canal zone city in which the week-end riots centered, told a United Press correspondent the truce was agreed upon at a meeting of British and Egyptian officials in the troubled city.

A British military spokesman confirmed that Egyptian police in Ismailia now are carrying staves instead of arms. He said Egyptian police and British military patrols jointly were maintaining order.

A British spokesman said a British officer wounded in Sunday's pitched battle in Ismailia died Monday, bringing the total of British dead to five.

Egyptian sources said 12 Egyptians were killed and 33 Egyptian nationals were wounded. The British listed five officers, men and civilians injured.

Egypt's acting Foreign Minister Ibrahim Farag warned Monday that world peace is "threatened" by the week-end violence.

Farag said the bloody encounters between British troops and Egyptian police and civilians represent, in fact, a "state of war."

He said the government itself would protest in a strongly worded note to the British embassy. A copy of the protest, he said, will be forwarded to Foreign Minister Mohammed Salah El Din Pasha, representing Egypt at the UN general assembly meeting in Paris, and to the Egyptian embassy in London.

ONCE OVER Lightly

By LEE GARNER
In case you care at all some people are starting to bounce radio signals off the moon. This piece of intelligence probably accounts for a lot of things, including those fuzzy surps that zip across television screens and all the flying saucers henpecked husbands keep thinking they see.

We suggest radio comedians try bouncing some of their jokes to the moon by this faster radio system. Most of the stuff they use now sounds old enough to have walked to the moon and back. On a treadmill.
We might as well say it before somebody else does: And so does the stuff in this column.

ACCORDING TO THE LAST campus poll, most Thanksgiving vacationers are going home to eat and sleep. Two out of six intend to open the books. In other words, university life will go on just as usual. Nobody is going to let a little thing like a holiday interfere with essential things.
What does Thanksgiving mean? Thanksgiving means a whole riotous week of cold roast turkey, turkey sandwiches, turkey salad, turkey soup, turkey, hash and a morbid revulsion for any bird larger than a sparrow. It is the season when folks feel bilious just looking at the pet canary.

One good thing about Thanksgiving is that it gives Iowans an excuse for eating something besides pork. Think what a momentous world it would be if the founders of this state had proclaimed a Thanksgiving day of their own and elevated the ham as the official piece de resistance of the festive board.
The hog is not so bad. Every night we are lulled to sleep by the melodious harmonies which rise from the Sweet Singers of the stock truck as it pulls up at the stop light down the street. Luckily, we are able to sleep with a clothespin on our nose.

Interpreting the News — Allied Proposal For Dismarming Irritates Reds

By J. M. ROBERTS JR.
Associated Press News Analyst
The Allied disarmament proposal before the United Nations, designed to let the world see just where Russia stands on peace, already has the Soviets screaming. Vishinsky laughed when Acheson sat down to play, but the tune seems to be making a deep penetration. The Soviet and satellite press didn't think it should publish Vishinsky's mirth over a topic which is close to the hearts of people everywhere, including those under Moscow's thralling.

And the Red government of China chimes in with a radio attack on the Allied program. It apparently anticipates UN approval of the U.S. sponsored proposal by calling the UN a tool of the United States, and tries to make the program out to be a part of an American desire to "dominate the world."

The disarmament resolution as finally presented by Secretary Acheson, in an unprecedented personal appearance before a UN committee, skillfully draws the sting of many arguments left to the Soviet obstructionists.

It proposes that the UN arrange a disarmament conference—something the Soviets asked for. It provides for attendance by all nations which maintain sufficient arms to affect the world level. This includes Communist China, and robs Vishinsky of a chance to set up a howl for that on his own hook.

While this whole maneuver calls for Russia to put up or shut up on her "peace offensive," that will hardly be the result. Russia will fume and wiggle out, continuing her efforts to convince people that she is the one who really wants peace while the Allies seek imperialist power. The record of her campaign of chaos should be clearer, however, when this debate is over.

A Special Report On The Universities Scholarship, Hysteria and Freedom Income Down, Costs Up

(Editor's note: The Daily Iowan today concludes its series of articles on The Universities. These articles were printed with special permission from The New Republic.)
The best evidence of the effects of higher taxation on educational philanthropy is the surprising failure of colleges to receive financial gifts in an amount at all proportional to the much higher level of income in recent years.
Despite much more effective fund raising organization, colleges are not receiving donations from private sources commensurate with their needs. The sharp decline in their gift income is made evident by the following comparison:
In each of the three decades—1900-1910, 1910-1920 and 1920-1930—colleges received about $600 million in gifts. This amounted to roughly one eighth of one per cent of the national income of the period.
If the colleges were to get an equivalent percentage of the national income in the 1950's, they might expect about $3 billion, or more than their total endowment at the end of the year. However, on the basis of the results of the 1940's, we can expect the decade's gifts to amount to no more than $1 billion—or about one thirtieth of one per cent of the national income.

Less Giving
In short, the public is less disposed to give; and what it gives returns less, both because the yields are down and because prices are up.
It is no wonder, then, that Harvard could increase its $100 million endowment by about $75 million in a recent period of 18 years and yet fail to increase its real returns on investments (in dollars of stable purchasing power). In fact, the investment income "per student" declined by one third.
What about help from state governments and from tuition? State and local governments, which support approximately half the student capacity, find it difficult to increase their receipts with the rise of prices.
In general, state and local governments play a much less vital part in the national economy than they did in the early 1930's; this is reflected in the educational field.

As to tuition, the colleges and universities are not disposed to, and cannot, raise tuition in proportion to the increase in prices. Since postwar increases in tuition have been substantially less than the inflation of other costs, students seem to be getting an education at a bargain price.
But the lower charges in 1950 dollars are offset by a deteriorated product associated with increased enrollment, failure to maintain plants and the skimping of funds for many other university functions. Thus, from 1932 to 1947 college expenditures increased 40 per cent in stable dollars. But with enrollment twice as great, the real output per student is today actually 36 per cent less. These reductions may present significant economies, but they also mean deterioration of the product.

Hurt Faculty Morale
Most conspicuously, these economies hurt faculty morale. Many colleges have been able to balance their budgets by squeezing their faculties. The financial position of faculty members has been declining steadily in both absolute and relative terms. Their pay since prewar has risen only about two thirds as much as prices; and this in a period during which real income per capita has risen about 40 per cent.

In relation to the rest of the community, the relative position of the average faculty member has fallen by one half in the past decade.
The results are obvious. Dissatisfaction, outside work, even neglect of responsibilities to the institution follow. Perhaps most important, recruiting new members for the teaching profession becomes more difficult.
Faculty members of leading universities frequently recommend their current crop of Ph.D.'s for employment with business and even with the government at rates of pay greatly exceeding their own. As always happens in periods of stress, there is also an egalitarian principle at work. The older and the more able suffer.

In the four city colleges of New York, according to a New York Times article, the pay of professors rose by only seven per cent over the last 10 years; that of associate professor, 14 per cent; assistant professor, 25 per cent; and that of instructors, 44 per cent. That is to say, the real pay of full professors declined by 37 per cent, that of instructors by only 15 per cent.

Federal Subsidies
In 1945, a committee appointed by the house committee on education reported that federal subsidies would be required should the war go on through 1945-46; it proposed subsidies to institutions with less than 60 per cent of normal enrollment. What has happened to the proposals of the president's commission for higher education to provide scholarships, construction aid, and other federal and state aid? Without such assistance the colleges, battered by 10 years of inflation, temporarily saved by the GI bill and now facing a long period of mobilization with a drop of enrollment are once more confronted with a dismal future.

This could be done by having a book store sponsored either by the student council or run by the university itself.
Such facilities are even now available at the University of Kansas, at Lawrence, where I had the pleasure of studying for a few weeks. The advantage of this system is that while books etc. are sold in the first instance at market prices, a rebate is given on the purchases, at the end of the year. At K.U., for example, the rebate is as much as 15%.
At the engineering college of the University of Macao, the same system is in force; here, however, the rebate is not a fixed amount, but depends on the profits earned by the store.

My country turned to the system of consumer co-operative societies during the last war, and it was very successful. In fact, it is claimed that 50% of the families in Ceylon are members of consumer co-ops.
I do not know how the system would work in this country, but I am quite certain that it would be of the greatest benefit to the students of this university, if a co-operative book store were run on the campus.

Appreciates Series
TO THE EDITOR:
I should like to heartily commend The Daily Iowan for reprinting the "New Republic's" excellent series of articles on "The Universities."

A vigorous defense of academic freedom is especially heartening in these times to all of us seriously interested in doing the best possible job as teachers. Without qualification, the articles were based on the firm conviction that "It is the business of scholars and teachers to justify confidence placed in them and expenditure here society makes on their behalf, by addressing themselves openly and objectively to any pertinent questions that suggest themselves."

Certainly another attempt at severe curtailment of academic freedom can be expected. The form this infringement may well take is that of the "loyalty oath," happily defeated in the last state legislature.
Your articles will be part of the indispensable ammunition needed against any such obnoxious future action.

Book Co-ops
TO THE EDITOR:
A few days ago, The Daily Iowan carried an editorial condemning the habit of some professors who write a new text book each year. You were apparently trying to reduce the cost of education.
I believe that you should take a more positive attitude on this matter if you are really interested in reducing the cost of the books and equipment used by students.

Concerning MABTE
TO THE EDITOR:
Movies are better than ever, perhaps, good advertisement, but is it true? And also, even if it were true, which I have strong reason to doubt, is that any reason to think movies are so good, merely because they are "better than ever?"
The "better than ever" seems to imply that they were good before, an inference it is not at all necessary to accept even though there have been a few good movies in the past.
By good, I mean outstanding, a movie that makes people feel when or as they leave the theatre that they have really experienced something memorable, and not merely the run-of-the-mill stuff which will be all but forgotten by the next morning's breakfast, if not sooner, and is something just to make a few hours "slip pleasantly away."

I believe "A Place in The Sun" verged on being a memorable movie. I believe it was good; not perfect (what is?) but good, and I think that not Hollywood, but George Stevens, the players, and the other behind-the-scenes participants should be commended for the production.
It is encouraging to know that such people are in Hollywood, but let us remember that they are but a few of the thousands who make up the total industry. In other words, let us not be guilty of judging the whole by a part, even though that part might give us faith in the whole, and to some extent, justify it.
As Basil Rathbone pointed out in his lecture here mass production destroys art; it has to. And for an industry such as Hollywood to produce so many movies and still produce good ones—well, that is expecting a lot. But I, for one, would be much happier if there weren't so many movies, and a few more good ones.
P.S. If I am assuming "the pseudo-intellectual role," please forgive me.

Bollinger-Lincoln Collection Dedicated Monday

60 Collectors Hear Chicago Director In Union Address

"There are many so-called Lincoln collections, but only a few in which the collector really aimed at inclusiveness. The Bollinger library is one of these rare inclusive collections."

This opinion was expressed Monday night by Paul Angle, director of the Chicago historical society, speaking in connection with ceremonies in University library.

The collection was willed to the library by the late Judge James W. Bollinger, Davenport.

About 60 Lincoln students and collectors attended a dedication banquet Monday night in the Iowa Memorial Union on the 88th anniversary of the Gettysburg address.

'Extensive Collection'

"Most researchers can find what they need in Lincoln books contained in a good library, but this is one of the very few places in which the inquiring student can find almost anything which has ever been printed about Lincoln," Angle said.

Addition of the Bollinger collection to SUI library puts University library in a class with such famous libraries as the Illinois State Historical library, the Library of Congress and Brown university library, in the eyes of Lincoln scholars, Angle said.

Leading Scholar

One of the world's leading Lincoln scholars, Angle spoke on Judge Bollinger as a person and as a Lincoln collector, drawing on their mutual friendship over many years. Judge Bollinger spent 48 years in assembling his collection of Lincoln books and mementos prior to his death last January.

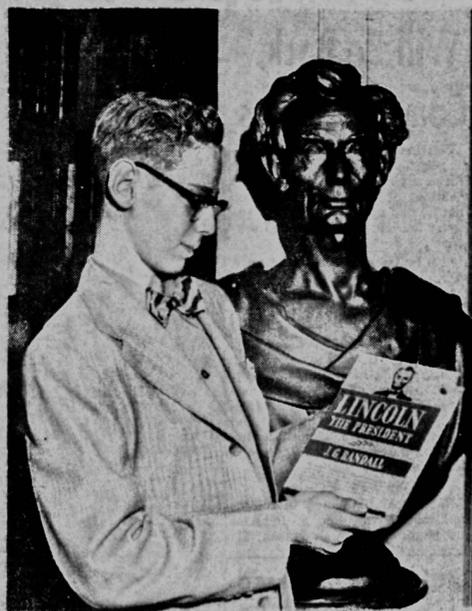

One highly interested participant was 14-year-old Ronald Rietveld, Des Moines, believed to be the youngest full-fledged Lincoln collector in the country.

Ronald took two days from his classes at Amos Hiatt junior high school to attend the dedication and talk to his fellow collectors. He has corresponded with several of them in the past, and was thrilled at the chance to meet with them face-to-face.

Prize item in Ronald's own collection is a letter written by Hannibal Hamlin, Lincoln's vice-president.

Guest Speakers

Guest speakers this morning included Harry Pratt, Illinois state historian, and Ben Thomas, "Abraham Lincoln Quarterly" editor, both of Springfield; Charles Lynch Jr., Cedar Rapids attorney, and Louis A. Warren, director of the Lincoln National foundation at Fort Wayne, Ind.

ADMIRING ONE OF THE MANY volumes from the Lincoln-Bollinger collection dedicated at the SUI library Monday is 14-year-old Ronald Rietveld, Des Moines, believed to be one of the youngest full-fledged Lincoln collectors in the country. Prize item in his own collection is a letter written by Hannibal Hamlin, Lincoln's vice-president.

Youngest Collector Plans to Devote Life To Lincoln Study

Ronald Rietveld, 14-year-old Lincoln collector from Des Moines was properly impressed by some of the older and more dignified collectors attending the dedication ceremonies of the Lincoln-Bollinger collection at the SUI library Monday.

But he made one concession. The late Judge Bollinger of Davenport who donated the collection, once advised him to "Keep your head in the clouds until you are really ready and know more than all the rest of them. Then let them hear what you have to say."

Ronald is used to the comment, "He's very young." But it doesn't bother him.

He said, "I've spent half my life collecting and studying the information about the life of Lincoln and I plan to devote the rest of it to just that."

Ronald is in the ninth grade at Amos Hiatt junior high school in Des Moines. He attributes his interest in Lincoln, which has been active since he was five, to his grandfather.

"During the civil war, people of Pella, a small Dutch community about 40 miles east of Des Moines participated in an underground movement helping Negro slaves escape from the South. My grandfather's grandfather was an ardent admirer of Lincoln at that time and I guess we have all felt pretty much the same," Ronald explained.

Collection Describes Lincoln's Life, Includes Photostats of Many Letters

"If you will let your whiskers grow I will get the rest of them to vote for you," promised 11-year-old Grace Bedell in her letter of Oct. 12, 1860, to the then beardless Abraham Lincoln.

The young Lincoln enthusiast explained that "some" of her four brothers already planned to vote for him as a presidential candidate, but if the honorable Mr. Lincoln would only grow a beard she assured him that he would receive each of the four votes.

Lincoln kindly dismissed little Grace's idea in his reply, saying, "People would call it a piece of silly affectation." But—shortly thereafter, Lincoln acquired the distinguished beard with which he is usually pictured.

Photostats of Letters

Photostatic copies of Grace Bedell's letter and Lincoln's gracious response are displayed in the university library's Bollinger-Lincoln collection.

The 3,500-volume library, a gift from the late Judge James W. Bollinger of Davenport, are formally being dedicated at the library this week.

Over a period of 48 years Judge Bollinger tirelessly sought and collected everything he could find concerning the Civil war president. A prominent figure among Lincoln collectors and scholars, Bollinger's intense interest in Lincoln lore originated with a gift book from his mother in 1903.

"Nancy Hanks: A Story of Abraham Lincoln's Mother" kindled his desire to read more of the great president and was the beginning of almost a half-century spent in assembling his collection.

Describes Life

All phases of Lincoln's life are described in the volumes, some of them imposing in fine leather bindings, others small with paper covers. The oldest pamphlet printed in 1848, is a speech made by Lincoln in the house of representatives.

The judge considered his personal copy of "Lincoln's New Salem" his greatest "showpiece" and kept in an easily-reached case in front of his desk. The book of etchings, containing familiar scenes from the life of Lincoln in New Salem, was etched, printed and bound by Bernhardt Wall of Connecticut.

Most Valuable Book

One of the most valuable books is one bearing the genuine A. Lincoln signature. This copy of "Wealth and Worth: or, Which Makes the Man?" is from the great statesman's personal library.

Bollinger's copy of the 1929 "Abraham Lincoln Association Papers" contains the rare signature of the late Grace Bedell Billings, author of the letter to Lincoln suggesting that he grow a beard. It is found among the signatures of Lincoln scholars seated at Bollinger's table at the 1930 Abraham Lincoln association meeting in Springfield.

Three Lincoln miniatures in the collection are more picturesque than practical. The smallest, "Lincoln Messages," is less than one-half inch high. Printed with actual type, the 30-page book is the only known copy in existence. The tiny books fit easily into a pair of bookends fashioned from Lincoln pennies.

Other Languages

Lincoln books in Japanese, Chinese, Italian, Spanish, German, African, Swiss, Greek and many other languages are included in the collection. Most valuable of these is an 1869 Hawaiian version of "The Pioneer Boy," a gift from former governor Horner of Illinois.

"Guide Politique" is unique in that it is the only known copy of the volume written for French-American voters in the days of the Great Emancipator. The Greek version of "The Emigrant Boy," one of the seven known copies, is another of the outstanding foreign editions.

In addition to the great number of Lincoln books, Judge Bollinger assembled approximately 300 pictures of Lincoln and his family, some of which are on display in the special collections room of the university library.

One apparently "pictureless" frame in the group reveals the judge's intense interest in anything concerning the great leader. It is a portrait of John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin. Although he felt that it should be a part of his collection, the judge preferred to have it hang with the traitor's face against the wall. It still hangs in that position among the many poses of Booth's victim.

Raff to Resign?

You'd hardly have known that there was a football game coming up the next day if you had attended a press and radio smoker in Madison Friday night.

These are get-togethers of newspaper and radio men that are held all around the conference on the eve of each game. The conversation quite naturally usually concerns the approaching contest, but this time it was different.

Just like most current discussions on Iowa football, talk centered on the status of Leonard Raffensperger and whether or not the Hawkeye boss would be back next year for another try.

This, of course, has been bandied about in several newspaper stories already and each time Raffensperger has flatly denied any intentions of resigning as the stories have insisted he would.

Athletic Director Paul Brechler has also stated that no consideration of a coaching change has been made thus far.

Be that as it may, there are still many well-informed sources that have not the slightest doubt but that Raff will step down at the close of the season. In fact judging from the consensus of opinion of the writers, radio commentators and alumni in Madison over the weekend, it's just about a certainty.

The whole thing, it seems, boils down to cold, hard figures—either Raff is replaced or there won't be enough alumni financial support next year to field a checkers team.

"Except for Waterloo, the whole state's insisting on a change and if it doesn't come there's going to be a tremendous withdrawal of support," one extremely well informed source from Des Moines told us.

An Iowa alumnus from Cedar Rapids who is thoroughly familiar with the situation had this to say:

"In Cedar Rapids there's no uproar or anger among the alumni over the situation. They're just determined that there's going to be a change and that's all there is to it."

Whether or not these views are exaggerated or actually do reflect the general feeling, it would be difficult to dispute this fact: that seldom before have the alumni and supporters of the university throughout the state been so divided as they are now.

The criticism of Raff naturally stems from the poor showing of an Iowa team that supposedly was the best collection of talent here in years.

As has been said here and other places all season, it is not merely losing that has irked Iowans—rather it's been the sloppy, futile performances that the Hawks have turned in on too many occasions.

Was It Lack of Material?

On the other hand, Raff's supporters maintain that the Iowa material wasn't comparable to the rest of the league in the first place and that the situation was made worse by the refusal of some squad members to give it their all.

The time must come when Brechler and the board in control of athletics will have to decide which view is correct and then take the appropriate steps.

"There are a hundred other factors involved besides coaching in the success of a football team," Brechler said after the Wisconsin game which gave the Hawks an 0-5 record in Big Ten play.

"Despite what some people think, I hate to lose. I just hate it. But the question I keep asking myself is this: 'Considering our material, should we be doing better than we have?'"

Certainly it is not the place of this or any other writer to say who should or should not coach at Iowa. However, we, along with every other student and alumnus do have the right to ask that the men who will finally make that decision be familiar with every fact in the case, know what course they wish Iowa to take in big-time athletics, and make a decision that will realistically accomplish their purpose.

As for the game itself, this was another case where the Hawks ran into a fine team that had too much manpower and finesse. The Badgers were clearly the better club but again Iowa mistakes made the winning margin greater than it should have been.

Wisconsin was all it was cracked up to be with defensive line second to none and a battering-ram of a fullback in freshman Allan Ameche.

Against this the Hawks made their most determined stand of the year in the first half and turned in some sparkling defensive play of their own, especially on the part of Bernie Benett, Don Chelf, Andy Houg, Bill Fenton, Bill Kersten, Duane Brandt and several others. But in the end, the Badgers just had too many horses.

SMU's Bell Defends Athletic Scholarships

DALLAS (AP) — Matty Bell, athletic director of Southern Methodist University, asked Monday what was wrong with his school granting 154 athletic scholarships.

Commenting on a scathing statement by general sessions Judge Paul S. Street in New York, at the time he sentenced a basketball fixer to prison, during which the judge said Southern Methodist awarded 154 athletic scholarships, Bell declared:

"Well it isn't any of the judge's business in the first place and in the second place these scholarships cover all sports, not just football. Only about 90 are for football, both freshman and varsity. We give athletic scholarships in basketball, baseball, track, golf, tennis and swimming."

Majors Take 17 In Draft Picks

CINCINNATI (AP) — Eleven major league teams, seeking to strengthen their 1952 pennant chances, elected to gamble in the annual draft Monday by picking up 17 minor league players at a cost of $159,000.

The selective player group, smallest in years, was headed by such 1951 standout performers as outfielder George Schmees, No. 1 draft choice; Floyd (Bill) Bevins, former star pitcher of the New York Yankees, and outfielder George Wilson, one time property of the Boston Red Sox.

The list included six infielders, five pitchers, four outfielders and two catchers.

Raff Repeats Denial To Chicago Quarterback Club

'Will Be Back,' Coach Declares

CHICAGO (AP) — Len Raffensperger, head football coach at the University of Iowa, Monday told members of the Quarterback club that he had no intention of resigning at the end of the gridiron season.

"I'll be back at Iowa next year, so far as I am concerned," Raffensperger added.

Iowa finished its Big Ten schedule of six games with only a tie with Minnesota on the credit side. The Hawkeye coach pointed out, however, that his team played the five top teams of the western conference—Illinois, Wisconsin, Purdue, Michigan and Ohio — and bucks into Notre Dame in the final of the season at South Bend next Saturday.

No Low Morale

Raffensperger denied that football morale was low at Iowa as the result of a tough season. He

Raff Not Discussed

There was no mention of the football coaching situation at the Iowa Athletic Board meeting Monday night, Athletic Director Paul Brechler said following the meeting.

Football was not discussed at all, Brechler said.

He said that the board went on record to ask Baseball Coach Otto Vogel to remain at Iowa. Vogel has been rumored as being in line for the baseball vacancy at Illinois.

said that only 260 of the state's high schools play football, whereas 1,000 schools engage in basketball. Some of the prep football schools have enrollments of only 50 to 100, he said.

"The means we at Iowa must spend an additional year in development of our talent," Raffensperger explained.

Asked if Iowa might resume grid relations with the University of Miami, Raffensperger replied: "I am not sure we should again schedule Miami or continue playing amateur teams."

Played Negroes

Iowa lost to Miami a year ago in a game that caused some discussion over whether Iowa should play five Negro team members in the Orange bowl. The Negroes played in the game.

"I told people worrying about it at the time, there weren't any southern boys on the Miami team, anyway, they were mostly from the east and midwest," said Raffensperger.

In Miami, Jack Harding, Miami athletic director, said Monday he thought Raffensperger's statement about Miami was "made under stress."

"He probably wouldn't have said that under different circumstances," Harding added.

Referring to Raffensperger's statement that "I'm not sure whether we should schedule Miami or continue playing amateur teams," Harding said:

"Our eligibility rules conform with those of the southeastern and southern conferences. We are members of the NCAA. I think that speaks for itself."

"As for members of the team being from other sections of the country, our football squad compares favorably, percentage-wise, with the student body."

Athletic Director Doug Mills of Illinois said the fighting Illinois would be in better mental and physical condition for their crucial finale at Northwestern Saturday than they were against the same foe a year ago. Last season Northwestern scored a 14-7 upset win to knock Illinois out of the Big Ten title and Rose bowl.

Asked if Coach Ray Elliott's job would be endangered if Illinois was defeated, Mills retorted: "If we get a new coach because we lose one game, you'll get a new athletic director, too."

Kentucky Accepts Invitation to Play In Cotton Bowl

DALLAS, TEXAS (AP) — The University of Kentucky, with its record-smashing passer, Vito (Babe) Parilli, will play in the Cotton bowl on Jan. 1, 1952.

Kentucky, playing mighty Tennessee in its closing game next Saturday at Lexington, Ky., accepted an invitation late Monday to play the champion of the scrambled Southwest conference in the Cotton bowl classic.

Four southwest teams are still in contention—Baylor, Texas Christian, Rice Institute and Texas Not until the final game on Dec. 1 between Baylor and Rice at Houston is the championship likely to be decided.

Wildcats Honored

Athletic Director Bernie Shively of Kentucky, in accepting for his school, said the Wildcats were "honored" and deeply appreciative of an opportunity to play the champion of the Southwest conference.

President L. M. Green of the Cotton bowl athletic commission, acting for the Southwest conference, said "We are pleased to have Kentucky, a fine team of the Southeastern conference and one of college football's most colorful groups, as our guest in the Southwest."

The Wildcats' record for the season is seven victories in 10 starts but all the defeats were by close scores—6 to 7 to Texas, 17 to 21 to Mississippi and 7 to 13 to Georgia Tech. Kentucky has beaten Tennessee Tech, Mississippi State, Villanova, Florida, Miami, Tulane and George Washington.

Third Appearance

It will be Kentucky's third appearance in a bowl game. The Wildcats lost to Santa Clara 21-13 in the 1950 Orange bowl and beat Oklahoma in the Sugar bowl last Jan. 1, 13-7.

Regulars Get Day-Off As Hawks Turn to Irish

Twenty-nine Iowa regulars got the day off Monday while the rest of the squad scrimmaged with the JVs as the Hawks started their final week of practice.

Also absent from drill was Coach Leonard Raffensperger who spoke to the Quarterback club in Chicago Monday. All will be on hand today, though, when the serious work starts for the season's finale with Notre Dame at South Bend Saturday.

Line Coach Pat Boland took charge while Raff was away.

The Hawkeyes came out of the Wisconsin defeat last Saturday in good physical condition and should have all hands available for the Irish.

Knee injuries to Dusty Rice and Pete Spanjers were treated by Trainer Doyle Alsup and both are expected to be ready.

Wally Schwank, who has scouted Notre Dame, reports that the Irish always are dangerous. They have won six of eight games, losing only to Michigan State and Southern Methodist.

"Notre Dame's offense is hard to handle. They use the 'I' and 'T' formations, with flanker, and against North Carolina they even used the old Notre Dame box. "Neil Worden, sophomore fullback, is an extremely dangerous runner who may go all the way at any time and John Lattner, right halfback, is fast and clever. John Pettibon and Bill Barrett, two senior backs, did not play last week because of injuries," Schwank said.

The scout said that Jim Mutscheller and Chet Ostrowski are a fine pair of senior ends and that Bob Toney, tackle of 230 pounds, is a top man. On defense, some of the younger men have replaced veterans, with John Lee, freshman guard, and Frank Mangialardi, sophomore end, as standouts.

Notre Dame ...

SOUTH BEND, IND. (AP) — Notre Dame's football team received its usual day of rest Monday as coaches hoped a thaw would continue to permit outdoor practice tomorrow.

Fred Poehler, first string left tackle whose ankle was injured against North Carolina, was expected to be ready for Iowa Saturday, Trainer Hugh Burns said.

Ramblers Win In Last Seconds

Tommy Black's tip-in in the last ten seconds of play gave St. Mary's basketball team a 49-47 victory here Monday night over St. Columbkille's of Dubuque.

Black's game-winning score climaxed the Rambler's uphill battle which saw them trailing at one time by 14 points early in the third quarter.

It was the first league game for both teams. St. Mary's next competition is Wednesday night here against Sacred Heart of Waterloo.

Boilermakers Aim For Rose Bowl, Old Oaken Bucket

LAFAYETTE, IND. (AP)—There's nothing Purdue would rather do than beat Indiana—except win a trip to the Rose Bowl.

The young Boilermakers could do both Saturday, but it's a tough parlay—Northwestern over Illinois as well as Purdue over the Hoosiers. That's a long shot, but Purdue is a long shot entry riding a November surge.

Stu Holcomb's boys are ready and willing and a lot less green than they were two months ago. They've won only half of their eight games, but three victories and only one defeat have been in Western conference competition.

Indiana has done worse, winning only two of eight games over all and only one of five in the Big Ten. Complicating the situation, however, is the fact that IU walloped Ohio State, 32-10, lost to Wisconsin by only one touchdown, made a two-touchdown rally against Minnesota before losing by a safety, and almost upset mighty Michigan State last Saturday before losing, 30-26.

Purdue has won its last three "Old Oaken Bucket" games with Indiana. But Indiana had won seven of the previous eight contests, frequently in seasons when the Boilermakers were heavy favorites.

Both teams have shown backfield improvements this month. Michigan State couldn't stop the plunging of Indiana's junior Pat Gedman and junior Bill Dozier, or the passing of juniors Dick Ashburner and Lou D'Achille.

Purdue also has a standout passer in junior Dale Samuels and more runners; than Indiana. It's November improvement has been due largely to the effectiveness of sophomore fullback Max Schmalzing, sophomore halfback James Whitmer and freshman halfback Rex Brock.

Tax Man Resigns; McGrath Won't Fire Justice Witnesses

WASHINGTON (AP)—Daniel A. Bolich, former assistant commissioner of internal revenue, resigned Monday as congressional investigators disclosed that he has been under investigation for "several months."

Simultaneously, Atty. Gen. J. Howard McGrath promised not to fire Asst. U.S. Atty. Charles O'Garra of San Francisco or any other justice department employe for helping congress expose tax "scandals."

Bolich said he was resigning for "health" reasons. But congressional tax investigators said he had been under investigation. They refused to say why but said their inquiry will continue.

In still another development, congressional investigators were told that former Asst. Atty. Gen. T. Lamar Caudle had circulated reports that Rep. Cecil R. King (D-Calif.) had intervened in behalf of delinquent taxpayers.

King is chairman of the house ways and means subcommittee which has been investigating tax "irregularities" in several cities across the nation. Caudle was fired by President Truman Friday on grounds his outside activities were "incompatible" with his high post.

Adrian W. Dewind, counsel for King's investigating group was asked about Bolich's resignation. He replied:

"The committee was informed of the receipt of the commissioner of internal revenue (John B. Dunlap) of Mr. Bolich's resignation, but his resignation was not requested by the subcommittee."

Art Freyberger, 36, of 1402 First ave., has been charged with petty larceny in connection with the theft of women's underclothing from an Iowa City residence.

Information was filed in police court Monday charging Freyberger after a local resident identified some garments taken recently from her clothesline.

Police said there were numerous reports of stolen women's underclothing during the past few months.

Blood Plant Strike Threatens Supply For Armed Forces

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal mediation officials Monday sought to stave off a threatened strike at a blood plasma processing plant, while the Red Cross and the armed forces ordered sharp cutbacks in blood collection in the eastern United States.

The dispute involves the CIO United Chemical workers union and the Sharp and Dohme company's blood processing plant at West Point, Pa. The workers have authorized a strike at midnight today if a new contract is not reached when the old agreement expires today.

Officials here said if the strike develops, it would shut off about 1/4 of the flow of blood plasma to the armed forces.

In Philadelphia, however, a government mediation spokesman said the strike "would threaten the army's entire blood plasma program."

A company spokesman said union officials had indicated their members would refuse to process blood in the event of a strike. But Herbert Heath, SIO local agreed to process blood received before the walkout.

Federal mediators conferred at length with union and company representatives here in an attempt to settle the dispute.

Meanwhile the Red Cross advised its chapters in the east and southeast to ship no blood to the Pennsylvania plant after midnight Monday unless the strike threat is called off.

Iowa to Accept Cage Ticket Orders Nov. 26

Applications for reserved seats for eight Iowa home basketball games will be accepted beginning Nov. 26 and there are no restrictions upon the number which can be ordered.

This was announced Monday by Frank Havlicek, business manager of athletics. Number to be sold is limited because about 8,600 must be available for university students and staff members.

For the first time, there are two prices for reserved seats. The $2 seats are for north and south bleachers and rows 1 and 2 of court-side chairs. Seats in the east and west bleachers and rows 3, 4 and 5 of court-side chairs are $1.75. Last season all reserved seats were $2.

The three December non-conference games are general admission affairs, with no reserved seats available, Havlicek said.

100 Dead in Worst Italian Flood of This Century

ROVIGO, Italy (AP) — Heavy rains pushed crests of the Po river and its tributaries higher Monday, posing new threats for refugee-jammed towns on the rim of the worst Italian flood in this century. The death toll has climbed to more than 100, with most of the figures two days old.

Calls went out for the emergency evacuation of Villadose, midway between this almost deserted city and flooded Adria. The town's normal population of 5,000 is swollen by hundreds of refugees.

The floods, starting 11 days ago with heavy rains, have driven 200,000 people from their homes in scores of cities, towns and villages creating a vast relief problem.

Damage has mounted to millions of dollars.

Two U. S. army flying boxcars and other aircraft dropped food and supplies into Adria while a huge fleet of small boats battled swirling currents and rescued thousands of beleaguered there.

An Italian news agency photographer telephoned over the city's only remaining line that two "daredevil" American officers landed their helicopter in the city time after time to ferry in supplies and take out refugees.

An amphibian also flew in from the American rescue center at Wiesbaden, Germany, and dropped 48 sacks of rations by parachute.

The flying boxcars, a four-engined British Lancaster and Italian army planes also kept up a day-long drop to other isolated communities.

Most of Adria's 35,000 population did not heed warnings to flee Saturday night when the flood spread over a vast Po delta triangle 25 miles wide and 40 miles deep.

Late Sunday 20,000 were still believed huddled in upper stories and other insecure places of refuge. But the situation was described as confused Monday with no accurate count of those endangered.

Camilo Meleagri, the Italian news agency photographer in Adria, said flood waters seemed to be everywhere. But with the food drops the stranded people seemed to have enough to eat for the time being.

But much of the 8,000 pounds of food and medicine dropped by the two U. S. army C-52 flying boxcars from Frankfurt fell into the water, he said.

The two American officers who pluckily landed their helicopter in the flooded city were Capt. Robert G. Martin, Manchester, Conn., and 1st Lt. Clarence Gilles Jr., Tuscola, Ill., he said.

Howard Berg Wins Local High School Speech Contest

The Iowa City Junior Chamber of Commerce speech contest, "I Speak for Democracy," was won by Howard Berg, a University high school student.

Jane Ruppenkamp, of St. Mary's high school, won second place in the contest.

First prize was a $50 defense bond and second prize a $25 bond. The First National bank and Iowa State Bank and Trust Co. of Iowa City awarded the prizes.

A recording of Howard Berg's speech will be entered in a state-wide Jaycee contest. The winner of that contest will receive a four-year scholarship to Parsons college at Fairfield.

Prof. Robert F. Ray, director of the SUI institute of public affairs, and former mayor Preston Koser were the judges.

Other students competing in the contest were Margaret Pechous, St. Patrick's high school, Mary Jo Ponce, St. Mary's high school, Phyllis Bentley, of Oakdale, and Gary Black, Kent Braverman and Kay Greene, all of City high school.

The Jaycees will hold an award dinner honoring the eight contestants at the Melody Mill at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Melchor T. Villanueva, SUI graduate student from Naga City, Philippine Islands, is scheduled to speak at the dinner.

Villanueva is a graduate of the University of the Philippines at Manila and a former teacher there.

He was founder of the Naga Teachers college at Naga City and as a former officer in the Philippine army, served in the underground during the Japanese occupation.

Huggins is executive vice president of the Westinghouse Electric International company. He is expected to assume his air force post Nov. 27 under a recess appointment which is subject to confirmation later.

Drops Phone Book — Mother Finds Lost Son

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (AP) — When you can drop a phone book and find a son lost for 39 years it really is thanksgiving.

Mrs. Katherine Young, 59, told a reporter Monday that last Tuesday she was looking in the telephone book for the number of a friend. She dropped the book and it fell open to page 431.

As she picked it up a name near the bottom of the page caught her eye. The name, Jacob H. Koch, was the same as that of her long lost son.

It was her son. After a couple of telephone calls they were reunited. Unknown to each other, the son has been living in Inglewood, 15 miles from here, for the last 10 years, and the mother has been in Long Beach for nine years.

Mrs. Young related that she grew up in Denver and when 17 married Harry Koch. They moved to La Crosse, Wis., but separated when their son was 6 months of age, and she took Jacob with her to Cheyenne, Wyo.

But before the boy was a year old Harry Koch obtained the child, and as far as Mrs. Young was concerned they dropped from sight.

She said the elder Koch is now living in San Francisco.

Young Koch said he was boarded out to a Sparta, Wis., farm family at the age of 13, later lived with his father at St. Paul, Minn., and at 19 was "out on his own."

He now has a wife and four children. All are planning a real Thanksgiving celebration on Thursday.

Suits Ask $52,995 Damages in Wreck

Myrtle Martin, 720 Second ave., Monday filed suit in district court seeking judgment of $2,995 for damages and inquiries suffered in an auto accident last July.

Her husband, Thomas D. Martin, filed a similar suit last week asking judgment of $50,000 for injuries suffered in the same accident.

Elmer Thomas of Moline, Ill., is the defendant in both actions. Mrs. Martin claims that she was riding in the rear seat of an auto driven by her son when the accident occurred. She claims that the Thomas car attempted to pass a truck in a no-passing zone and struck her car head-on.
