Lattimore Accused Of Lying

WASHINGTON (AP) - A special house committee on Wednesday released a report on the career of former Senator Frank W. O. Lattimore, who is accused of having been a "wet commie" or "wet commie sympathizer" during the Cold War. The report was based on the testimony of witnesses and evidence gathered during a month-long investigation. The committee held hearings in Washington, D.C., and concluded that Lattimore had engaged in activities that were consistent with communist sympathies.

Industrial Strength Centered In Midwest, Economist Says

Central United States, "the industrial heart of the nation," is the center for the nation's industrial growth, according to economist J. B. Jones. Jones said that the region's economy is moving forward at a faster pace than any other part of the country. The report, which was released Wednesday, said that the region's industrial growth is being driven by a number of factors, including a strong manufacturing sector, a large and skilled labor force, and a favorable business climate.

A Sensitive Thermometer

The piece of equipment shown above is an electronic thermometer, a device for measuring the heat of a chemical reaction. It is sensitive to minute variations in heat, the changes in temperature can be detected within a fraction of a degree. The thermometer is valuable in laboratories and industries where accurate temperature readings are necessary.
