Aberdeen Crowds Give Highlanders Welcome That's 'Best Yet!'

Aberdeen (Scotland) (AP) - A big crowd turned out here to welcome the 134th Infantry Regiment of American marines who arrived Sunday afternoon (today) for a six-month tour of duty in England and France. The marines were given a heroes' welcome as they marched down Front Street and a sun-drenched Union Street, cheered by the enthusiastic crowds.

The marines were greeted by Mayor James H. Hueston and other city officials, who shook hands and posed for photographs with the soldiers. The crowd, numbering in the thousands, included many families of Aberdeen residents, who had come to welcome their loved ones home.

The marines were also greeted by local band, whose music added to the festive atmosphere. The American flag was raised, and a moment of silence was observed.

The marines carried their rifles and equipment, and were dressed in their distinctive uniforms. They were led by a color guard, while drums and bugles played, creating a patriotic backdrop.

The welcoming ceremony lasted for several hours, with speeches and presentations made by local officials and the marines. The marines received a warm welcome, and were praised for their service.

The marines will be stationed in England and France, where they will train for their upcoming deployment. They will play an integral role in the Allied forces' efforts to ensure peace and stability in the region.

The Aberdeen crowds' welcome for the marines was seen as a sign of the community's pride and support for its hero soldiers.
