Elevator Strike In Chicago Hits 133 Buildings

CHICAGO, I11., October 4. (AP) - More than 133,000 elevator workers in Chicago, the country's second largest city, went on strike Wednesday, the second day of a walkout by the city's elevator operators in a dispute over who should control the city's elevator industry.

The strike is a significant event in the city's history and marks the first time the city's elevator operators have used strike action to force changes in their working conditions.

Transportation and parking companies have been retaliating to the workers' strike by taking action to restrict access to New York City's skyscrapers and office buildings, where the bulk of the workers are employed.

The strike also highlights the growing tensions between the city's elevator operators and their employers, who have been seeking to limit the workers' power and influence in the city's economic landscape.

The strike comes as the city is looking to the future, with the prospect of new developments and growth in the city's skyline. However, the workers' demand for a say in the running of the city's elevator industry is seen as a threat to the status quo, with some arguing that it could lead to a decline in the city's economic health.

The strike is expected to continue for an extended period, with both sides holding firm on their positions. The city's business community is reportedly concerned about the potential impact of the strike on its operations, and is possibly looking to negotiate a settlement to end the dispute.

The strike is a significant development in the city's economic landscape and is likely to have far-reaching implications for the city's future.

Hawks, Hoosiers Clash Today

Budapest, Hungary, April 14 (UPI) — Yogi Berra, the Brooklyn catcher, blamed the series-tying 7-0 victory over the New York Yankees for the World Series loss in 1951.

In the fifth game of the World Series, Berra took over the role of pinch hitter and scored a run in the fourth inning. The Yankees went on to win the series 4-3.

Berra, who will be 80 this year, said in a recent interview with the Associated Press that he felt he had taken too many pitches in the previous game, which had been lost by the Yankees.

He said he was disappointed in himself for allowing the series to slip away.

Berra Joins Star Catchers On 'Goat List'

NEW YORK — Yogi Berra, the Brooklyn catcher, is ranked among the all-time greats in Major League Baseball history.

Yogi Berra has 3,441 career hits, 544 home runs, and 1,311 RBIs in 15 seasons with the New York Yankees and the New York Mets.

Berra was a five-time All-Star and three-time World Series champion with the Yankees, winning in 1952, 1953, and 1956.
