SUI Eye Camera, with Product

SUI Cameras Take Pictures Of The Eye

By Joe Moran

Two costly and complex cameras, one for two-dimensional pictures of the interior of the eye and one that takes "3-D" photographs of forward eye areas, are being used in the ophthalmology department of the SUI hospitals. Both cameras use color film.

A number of improvements in eye photography developed at SUI are now in use in the country.

Staff physicians and medical instructors say photography has proved an invaluable tool in their work.

Rare Conditions

Color photographs of rare, or typical eye conditions are often more helpful in teaching medical students than volumes of text-book description would be, a physician said. Prints are lasting, exact records of eye injuries, abnormalities and diseases, he said.

Observing that the living eye is constantly changing, he said the camera catches permanently steps in progress or decline of individual cases. Far more precise than words, photographs can be shown and sent to other specialists for comment and examination.

The Nordenson retinal camera, like the ophthalmoscope doctors use to look into the eye, may show symptoms of general bodily conditions like high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, diabetes, and cancer, as well as eye diseases.

Special Problems

Lee Allen, research assistant, and Howard Webster, staff artist, ocular prosthetics specialist and photographer, said eye photography is subject to special difficulties.

Alignment of the retinal camera into the eye is so critical, Allen said, that patient movement may spoil the picture. Patients must be still while the photographer focuses a tiny beam of light through a small area of the eye lens onto the eye-ground, or retina, on the back interior wall of the eye.

The patient's eye is dilated first to make a larger "hole" through which the picture is taken. But there remain delicate problems of color quality and light adjustment for the photographer to solve, a staff physician said.

Improvements

He said several improvements on the Nordenson two-dimensional camera have been made at SUI. The camera was invented by a Swedish ophthalmologist in the late '20's, he noted. Manufactured by the Zeiss optical company, Germany, the early model is one of several now widely used.

Allen, who has worked at SUI hospitals since 1937, adapted the retinal camera to take pictures of the lens of the eye. This technique involves reflecting camera light off the retina and through the lens to silhouette opaque areas, making it possible to record abnormalities such as cataracts and displaced lenses.

A physician said the eye lens is too translucent to be photographed without reflection of light off the retina.

Allen and a former resident doctor at SUI hospitals published a paper on the process in the late '40's.

Angle Viewer

Another device, the gonioscopic contact lens, allows easy examination of the critical and hard-to-see angle between the iris and cornea. The iris is the colored area around the pupil. The cornea is the clear "window" covering the lens and iris.

A saucer-shaped, clear plastic viewer, with reflecting surfaces on four sides, the prism is placed on the eye-ball. A drop of fluid between it and the eye lets light pass freely through the prism and into the eye.

Ophthalmologists then can see "around the corner" of the iris-cornea angle, where material may accumulate and cause glau-

Late Hours For Women Explained

Union Board will meet Saturday to complete final entertainment plans for the basketball team recognition party scheduled for Monday night at the Iowa Memorial Union.

In a statement from the Central Judiciary board, women's hours for the party have been set as follows:

1. If the basketball team returns Monday evening, hours for university women attending the function will be extended. Women will be required to return to their places of residence immediately following the close of the party.

2. The same permission will be granted if the party is held Tuesday night. This might occur if the team is prevented from returning to Iowa City due to bad weather.

3. Senior privileges and late leaves are not in effect beyond the close of the party.

The reason for these rules, according to Central Judiciary board members, is that if the arrival of the team should be later than the anticipated time of 11:30 p.m., no definite closing time for the party could be set. For this reason they are asking the girls to return to their residences immediately upon close of the party.

King's Combo

The party, sponsored by Union Board, UWA, Student Council, and the Hawk-I pep club will begin immediately following the Iowa-Michigan basketball game. Fred King's combo will provide music for dancing.

Following the arrival of the team, the SUI Varsity band directed by John Whitlock, asst. director of bands, will play. Hawk-I pep club is in charge of a program following the team's arrival.

An attempt is being made to get films of the latest basketball games. If possible they will be shown to those attending.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served. All regular union facilities will be open for student use.

The same schedule will be followed if the party is held Tuesday night.

New Eruption In Hawaii

PAHOA, Hawaii (AP) — Earthquakes rocked the stricken eastern tip of Hawaii Wednesday night and early Thursday and lava from a new, mile-long fissure exploded 200 feet into the air.

Another 100 persons were added to the 400 villagers removed from their homes when a long dormant volcanic area began erupting Monday five miles east of Pahoa.

The new fissure, which opened with shattering suddenness Wednesday and almost engulfed 12 plantation workers, lies farther east of the old eruption area, which has begun to quiet down.

The fissure is only a mile and a half north of the abandoned village of Kappoho, which is near the coast at the eastern tip of Hawaii.

Most of the eruption was coming from the western half of the fissure. Red-hot lava was flung high in the air and the flow appeared to be getting stronger early in the day.

Churchill Assumes U.S. Bomber Aid

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill said Thursday a sneak hydrogen bomb raid on Britain might bring a retaliatory punch "almost immediately" from American bombers.

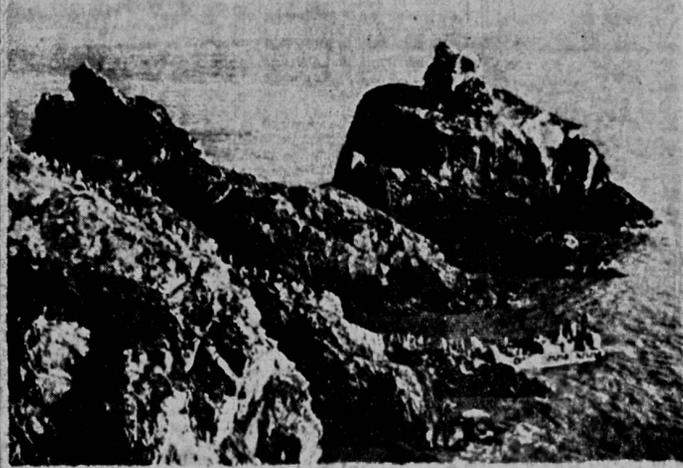

Churchill rather testily told the house of commons in answer to questions: "I suppose an immediate destructive, surprise and treacherous attack by the hydrogen bomb upon this island might possibly be aed upon by our allies in the U.S.A."

Legislators accepted Churchill's remarks as a warning to Russia against attempting a surprise strike.

The Prime Minister said his March 1952 agreement with President Eisenhower on the use of the American nuclear bomb force in this country still holds good. This provides that the U.S. jet fleet and bases would be used in an emergency after joint decisions by the Brit-

U.S. Requests Abolition Of Korean Peace Teams

Chinese Communist Troops Land on Tachens

2d Choice To Reduce Size of Teams

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Thursday sought the abolition of a commission set up to supervise the Korean armistice. It contended that Communist "obstruction" tactics have rendered it useless.

The state department announced it is backing up demands by Sweden and Switzerland, two members of the commission, that it be abolished.

As a second choice, the U.S. goes along with the Swiss-Swedish alternative proposal that the commission be drastically reduced in size.

20 Teams

Sweden, Switzerland, Communist Poland and Communist Czechoslovakia comprise the commission. Its personnel, counting 20 inspection teams and such aides as drivers and clerks, totals somewhere between 250 and 400.

Last week the U.S. told its 16 United Nations allies in Korea that the balance of military power was upset by illegal movement of jet planes and other modern weapons into North Korea.

The truce signed 20 months ago was supposed to freeze armaments and manpower. The commission was supposed to see to this, but the UN command has contended the Communist members block any effective investigations in Communist North Korea.

Too Long

The Swedish and Swiss delegations complained they were unable to do their jobs, and that the task had dragged on past the period they had expected to serve.

On the basis of these complaints, the Swedish and Swiss governments last Jan. 27 made their two-part proposal to the U.S. and Red China: (1) Abolish the commission or (2) reduce its personnel.

The Red Chinese replied about two weeks ago that they oppose doing away with the commission. But they accepted in principle a reduction in personnel.

Dulles Says U.S. Will Not Bargain Quemoy or Matsus

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told President Chiang Kai-shek Thursday Quemoy and the Matsus would not be used in any cease-fire negotiations without Nationalist consent, sources close to Dulles said.

These sources said abandonment of the offshore islands would be considered only if the Nationalists agreed and if such a step could bring a guarantee of peace in Asia.

The Nationalists have vowed to defend Quemoy and the Matsus against the Communists. Chiang told the closing session of the Central committee of the Kuomintang — his Nationalist party — that the government must strengthen itself "to realize our mission of counterattack and national survival."

Dulles reiterated that the mobile U.S. air and sea forces in the Far East would be used as a deterrent to aggression. But he put the accent on peace in a statement at the airport before his departure.

"It is the ardent hope of the U.S.," he said, "that the Chinese Communists will not insist on war as an instrument of their policy."

Dulles' first act on his arrival earlier in the day was to sign the mutual defense treaty under which the U.S. guarantees to defend Formosa and the nearby Pescadores from Red attack.

He had said previously the U.S. would not defend the offshore islands "as such," but would watch closely for any Communist attempt to use them as stepping stones to an attack on Formosa.

Iowa Needs Two Parties, More Says

Jake More, Democratic state chairman, Thursday called upon young people to make Iowa a two-party state.

More spoke at a meeting of the SUI Young Democrats.

"We will have good government in Iowa only if we have a two party system," said More.

Iowa has not had a Democratic governor for 17 years. Only 22 of the 168 state legislators are Democrats.

"We hear that school and road needs have been neglected in Iowa for the past 12 years. "They are issues in every state campaign," said More. "Yet, you can see what has been done. And nothing will be done until more people start taking an interest in their government."

Bissonnette Weeps At Farewell Mass; To Leave Saturday

MOSCOW (AP) — The Rev. George Bissonnette, American Roman Catholic priest ordered expelled by Saturday, devoted hours Thursday to hearing confessions of his saddened Western diplomatic parishioners.

Soviet police lifted his passport Wednesday without giving a reason. Thursday they acceded to the young priest's plea for as much additional time as possible and granted him permission to leave the country by plane instead of by train.

The 33-year-old clergyman from Central Falls, R.I., will fly from Moscow to Helsinki, Finland, Saturday. A farewell Mass will be held Friday night by U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Charles E. Bohlen at their residence, Spasso House.

Thursday morning Father Bissonnette, with tears streaming down his cheeks, bade farewell to his weeping congregation as he said his final mass in the chapel adjoining his apartment. He has held services there since he came to Moscow in January 1953.

Deadline Today For Nominations

The deadline for filing nomination petitions for candidates to the Iowa City school board is noon today. The election will be held March 14, at polling places in the Junior high school gymnasium and SUI's Communications center.

Student Council Cuts Membership

The SUI Student Council Thursday night voted to cut its membership from 28 to 18 to become effective with the March 23 election.

The change is a major revision of the constitution and election code.

Representation on the council will be based on eight per cent of the total fall enrollment of the university. Each electorate will receive a minimum of one representative. For each eight per cent of the total university enrollment, each electorate will receive one additional representative.

Under this plan, it would be necessary for an electorate to have 673 members (or over eight per cent) to have two members on the council. (Eight per cent of the total fall, 1954, enrollment is 673.)

Following is a list of resident groups, the number of representatives now, and the number of representatives to be selected in March: Currier, 3, 2; Westlawn, 2, 1; Russell House, 1, 1; Panhellenic, 2, 2; Quadrangle, 3, 2; South Quadrangle, 1, 1; Hillcrest, 2, 1; Interfraternity, 3, 2; Married Students, 3, 2; Town Men, 3, 2; and Town Women, 2, 1.

One delegate will be elected from Eastlawn in March to represent the group until the end of the 1954-55 school year. In September Law Commons will elect one member to replace Eastlawn's, Eastlawn, which has had one member in the past, will be used for classes next year. Law Commons will be converted into a girls' dormitory.

Union board and University Women's association, which currently have one representative each, will have no representatives on the next council because they are not housing units.

If, during the year following a spring election, the number belonging to any electorate increases to the point where that electorate is entitled, under the eight per cent plan, to an additional representative, the electorate may petition the council for the additional representative. It will be mandatory that the petition shall be granted.

All revisions are subject to the approval of the Committee on Student Life.

BRAIN LECTURE SET

Dr. H. M. Zimmerman, chief of laboratory services at Montefiore hospital, New York, will speak on "Experimental Brain Tumors" Monday at the medical amphitheater, University hospitals.

Last Mass Before Leaving Russia

THE REV. GEORGES BISSONNETTE, American Catholic priest ordered to leave Russia by Saturday, is shown holding his last Mass in a chapel adjoining his apartment Thursday. No reason has been given by the Russians for ordering the priest from their country.

Quiz on Values—

We are conducting a quiz to test your sense of dollars and cents values.

First question: How much does it cost to train 155 persons in first aid techniques?

Next question: How much would it cost to conduct 11,789 lessons for 1,399 children on water safety and the fundamentals of swimming?

Third question: If you were to provide 8,939 hours of help at community activities and at hospitals, what would be your estimate of the cost?

Next, how much expense is involved in providing 95 gift boxes to overseas schools?

For you veterans, how much is it worth to have a counseling and guidance service to answer your questions, to provide financial aid in emergencies and assistance in filing applications for government benefits? Quite a sum we would say.

Another question. How much would it cost to provide tray favors — about 14,010 of them — for county hospitals?

If you have given these queries some thought you no doubt will have arrived at a total which would be in five figures.

All of these services, and more, are provided by the Iowa City Red Cross chapter, which is currently conducting a fund-raising campaign.

The goal for 1955 has been set at $17,144, a figure slightly lower than last year's. The local organization will keep $9,059 to carry out their valuable services in Johnson county and $8,085 will be sent to the national organization to provide emergency relief and other services.

Your Red Cross is the "good Samaritan" in Iowa City and Johnson county. It provides assistance when you are too busy, it gives a helping hand when you are down and out.

The Red Cross deserves the generous support of everyone in the current campaign.

Tax Cut and Item Veto—

The Democrat-sponsored $20 income tax cut rider to the President's bill to extend corporation and excise taxes for another year illustrates the need for presidential item veto power on fiscal legislation.

The item veto, at present the prerogative of 38 governors, gives the executive power to strike out specific sections of an appropriation bill and yet sign the remaining portion of the legislation.

However, this power has not been extended to the president. On appropriation measures, he must either sign or veto the entire bill.

If the present bill passes the senate as written, the president will have two alternatives:

1. He can sign the bill. By so doing, he will extend the present corporation and excise tax rates — due to expire April 1 — which will bring the treasury $3 billion in revenue. Also, he would approve the cut in income taxes, which will mean an estimated $1.5 billion cut in revenue.

Thus by signing the bill, the government will gain only $1.5 billion in revenue.

2. He can veto the legislation and lose the entire amount. Under the Budget and Accounting act of 1921, the President, with the help of the Bureau of the Budget, is given the responsibility for formulation of the budget. His decision on the budget is based on expected income and anticipated expenditures for the coming fiscal year.

The President's approval of the present appropriation bill would mean $1.5 billion would be added to the proposed 1955 fiscal year deficit of $2.4 billion.

If the President had the item veto power on appropriation bills, he could strike out the amendment calling for income tax cuts and yet retain the original $3 billion revenue in corporation and excise taxes he anticipated in formulation of the budget.

The method used by the Democrats' plan resorts to the dubious legislative device of a rider which largely negates the purpose of the President's bill.

The present rider is an obvious political move to take play away from the administration for any claims for individual tax reduction next year, with little consideration of the effect of the move on the budget during the upcoming fiscal year.

If the president is to be held responsible for the financial guidance of the nation, he should have the authority to reject items which do not fit in the general plan.

The item veto on financial legislation — obtainable only by constitutional amendment — would give him the opportunity to guide government spending for which he must assume ultimate responsibility.

Fulbright Hits Trend As Totalitarian

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Here are excerpts from two speeches at the tenth National Conference on Higher Education in Chicago this week.)

By J. W. Fulbright

U.S. Senator from Arkansas
Some time ago, so this story goes, a warden at the Joliet penitentiary played host to a conference of criminologists, called to consider ways and means of reducing the crime rate. One speaker seemed to carry the day with his thesis that the way to do this was by requiring all young people to study mathematics intensively.

For the discipline gained in this way, so the speaker claimed, would lead the young to think logically, and so make them virtuous when they came of age.

There was great applause when he reached the end and sat down. The warden alone seemed unimpressed. He asked an aide to fetch a certain prisoner, introduced him to the meeting, and then at once sent the prisoner back to his cell.

"That man you just saw," the warden explained to the criminologists, "is the most brilliant mathematician in the whole prison. So brilliant, in fact, that it took bank examiners 10 years before they found that he was embezzling funds by juggling bank ledgers.

Grammar, Rhetoric

"That man was not deficient in mathematics. What he lacked was a sense of grammar and rhetoric. He simply didn't know the difference between the words 'mine' and 'yours.'"

You will agree, I think, that the criminologist who saw in the science of mathematics the means to create a nation of moral men and good citizens, is not alone in his approach. He is joined by a chorus of voices, each with a special educational emphasis leading to the magic formula.

To one person, it is training in physics, or medicine or plant life. To another, it is training in business, or home making or athletics.

Let this or that be the cornerstone for higher education — so they say — and the arrangement of its own force will meet every danger, solve every problem, remove every evil and gain every good.

As for myself, I am inclined to favor the "Warden theory" of education, if I may call it that. I am inclined to favor it, subject to three qualifications.

First, no system of higher education, however arranged, can bear the whole load of cultivating what lies in the human spirit. For that spirit, as the ancients taught us long ago, is a mixed thing.

Reason, Passion

It is formed and ruled not alone by reason. It is also formed, and it is all too often ruled, by the will and by the passions.

The second qualification is that if the education of the individual is viewed in its entirety, then disciplined hearts must dwell in the same body as disciplined minds.

And in this light, not the schools alone can carry the burden of the work that needs to be done. Nor can they be charged — as they now often are — with full responsibility for any defective products. Our homes, our churches, our political institutions, our economic enterprises — all our media of communication — are, and must be, considered a part of what educates the individual. None can absolve itself from the end result. All are jointly responsible for what it is like.

The third qualification is addressed to those who would have the schools and colleges emphasize this or that specialized science and art. Let me say here that I have the utmost respect for the specialist.

It is plain for example, that we urgently need scientists and technicians who can lend their expertness to the defense of America and the free world. So, too, as a further example, do we need men, skilled in the art of economic management, who can perfect the way we organize production and distribution.

Supreme Importance

This work is of supreme importance; for though it is true enough that man does not live by bread alone, at least he lives by bread. And we need places specifically set aside for the purpose of cultivating the science and art of making bread, and defending it.

Yet divorced from all else, this specialization in art, and science — and here I come to my point — is not an education for democracy. There is nothing to distinguish it from an educational system in a totalitarian state.

These bits of knowledge are not political or moral by nature. The same textbooks dealing with them can be used by students in both democracies and tyrannies.

I repeat that this specialization does not form an education for a democracy. It does not create an atmosphere in which the mind can be opened to every intimate impulse and voice, meshed with other minds of a like sort. Specialization, by definition, focuses on only a small part of the human battle line.

It orients no one toward a view and a place in the battle line as a whole. It orients no one toward the whole intellectual life and tradition of a country. It orients no one toward an understanding of man as he appears in a particular moment of current history, and in the history of the ages.

And it is precisely at this point that the comment of the Warden at Joliet seems to apply on all fours. Here, let me digress to say that from what I have seen of our colleges and universities, their key weakness is not that they breed communists.

J. W. Fulbright
"Warden Theory"

It is arrant nonsense to say that they do.

There is a weakness in our colleges and universities. And, now, in this hour of grace, when we do not have to spend all our strength in fighting back the McCarthy line of attack, we ought to turn our thoughts inward, and seek where this lies.

In my view, it lies in our failure to teach grammar and rhetoric — to teach the difference between "mine" and "yours." In the largest sense for which this difference in words is but a symbol, it lies in our failure to keep intact as a unifying reference point for the undergraduate body, a common intellectual tradition, a sense of an intellectual community leading to a sense of the continuity of human experience.

Pay $5,250 Ransom To Colonel's Kidnappers

RANGOON, Burma (P) — A retired British army colonel kidnapped by bandits Feb. 6 has been released after payment of ransom.

Reports Thursday said Col. Richard Oswald Perrott, 57, was freed Monday after friends paid 25,000 kyats ($5,250) to bandits who snatched him while he was duck hunting 42 miles north of Rangoon.

David Says College Aim 'Distorted'

By Henry David

Exec. Sec., Nat'l Manpower Council
Columbia University
In 1890, out of every 100 of our young people, about three or four graduated from high school, and only one from college. Today, one in every eight of our young people graduates from college, and about six in every ten collect — even if they do not earn — a high school diploma.

America's economic life has left its imprint upon higher education — that convenient abstraction which permits one to deal coherently with not far from 2,000 institutions of learning, diverse in character and involving millions of people engaged in a bewildering variety of activities.

It is also clear, as one looks ahead, that the rate and direction of America's future economic development will depend to a critical degree upon the quality and the number of men and women whose preparation for economic functions will be overwhelmingly a responsibility of the colleges and universities.

Now we are becoming increasingly sensitive to the role that highly trained manpower and, consequently, higher education play in economic development.

Demand Scientists

The explosive growth of the research and development effort has been a primary factor in the high demand for scientists and engineers on the part of the government, industry and the universities.

We know far less than we should about the future demand for highly trained manpower. But the indicators upon which we rely point to the judgment that it is unlikely that the United States will produce more college and university trained men and women in the approximate level of their skills.

The big danger, it seems clear, lies not in that direction, but in the possibility that the supply of highly trained men and women will be inadequate to the nation's future demands.

And this danger is enhanced if we fail with respect to three objectives:

1. To increase the supply of young people of ability reaching the colleges.
2. To strengthen the institutions of higher education.

3. And, finally, to reduce the present degree of wastage of potential ability in the population.

Unless there is early identification of ability, a drastic improvement in the quality of secondary education, a more effective program of educational and vocational guidance and easier access to more equal educational opportunities for the members of groups presently disadvantaged in this respect, the stream of young people of ability reaching college will remain too small, and large-scale waste of potential ability will continue.

Without much greater financial support from both private and public sources than they now receive, the colleges cannot be fashioned into stronger centers of intellectual activity than they now are.

But it is naive to believe that money alone will serve to attain this goal. For, what is involved are attitudes, deep-seated in our society, in which a general approval of education — that is, of formal schooling — is accompanied by an amiable contempt for the intellectual and the academic.

With a few notable exceptions, higher education has been defensive about its intellectual functions and responsibilities.

Many institutions of higher education discourage — though not necessarily by conscious intent — disinterested, critical thought and reflection in both their students and their faculty.

Too many of them respond so readily to the demands made upon them by society, that they tend to operate as educational service stations, rather than as educational institutions.

Higher education has fashioned its own professional language — some might prefer the more invidious term "jargon" — and while this may help its personnel to talk with one another, it has certainly been far more potent in discouraging effective communication with the larger community.

Mission Distorted

An urgent and quite valid cry has been raised for some time for extraordinary efforts to be made to increase the supply of our engineers and scientists.

It is not necessary, nor would it be wise, to achieve this objective by imposing penalties upon other fields of endeavor and thus seriously distorting the larger mission of higher education.

The college or university moved by a sense of its own integrity and its obligation to serve the larger community will be on guard against such possible distortions in its spirit and structure.

It will want its faculty to make important contributions to basic knowledge in the sciences and to the translation of this knowledge into processes, machines, goods and services.

But it will also want to maximize the capacity of its faculty to investigate freely and critically, and with full recognition that error has a positive function in the pursuit of truth, the full range of man's behavior and activities and the meaning of human experience.

The injunction to higher education implicit in my argument is quite simple. It must not confuse the economy with society.

'Service Stations'

If the institutions of higher education were geared to respond automatically and with maximum efficiency only to the current needs of the economy, they would take on the appearance of high level and expensive service stations.

A system of higher education engaged, in effect, in supplying parts and repair operations would not only debase its name. It would do the economy disservice.

Preparation for continuing change has more than a technological dimension. It also means an education which equips men and women to recognize, if not to cope with, the alterations that a dynamic technology and economy impose upon other aspects of their lives.

Happily, a number of distinguished leaders of the business community have expressed more persuasively than I could the obligation of that community to maintain and strengthen the institutions of higher education through funds for operating expenses, plant expansion, research and library facilities and scholarships and fellowship programs.

It is an act of self-interest.

Great Expansion

In the course of this century, both American higher education and the American economy have experienced expansions and structural modifications of revolutionary magnitude.

We can now perceive more clearly than we did in the past a system of interdependence in the enormous changes which have marked these two areas of American life.

Their future developments will be linked even more intimately.

Both, I suspect, realize that Henry Adams' characterization of the crisis of the present century, as a race between education and catastrophe, carries more weight than it ever did.

Green—A New Color For Men's Clothing

A large majority of men take their clothes so much for granted that they would be startled to think that men's apparel could undergo any major change. Rather than taking a fresh look at what they wear, they dress by a sizeable list of "don'ts."

A prominent item in this list of negatives has been green. The appearance of a man in a green suit has evoked the male equivalent of tongue-clucking. It takes clever thought to work around such a taboo, but the designers of wool fabrics have created some handsome spring materials in green for suits, sport and topcoats that will do just that.

The new green is described variously as "burnt grass" or "burnt olive," and, as these descriptions indicate, there is no doubt about its being a man's color. This shade appears in handsome, soft wool shetland and in saxony tweed suits.

The color is used as the background for a small pattern in the tweed suits, setting off a small, typical tweed pattern such as a dry brown herringbone. It is also shown in Bermuda walking shorts in both lightweight wool flannel and wool tropical cloth. The color makes these particularly suitable for wear with sport shirts in which yellow, orange or red predominates.

Heightens Color
 Men of light coloring will find that the new greens are particularly good for them, for it heightens their coloring and widens the range of colors that can be worn in shirts and ties.

If the man is conservative he will probably choose a medium gray, but if he's a man with an eye for the distinctive, the wool suit in "burnt grass" will be his choice.

Men who are torn between tradition and the good looks of the new color can find consolation in the fact that the dark green wool tweed suit was a standard item in men's wardrobes several decades ago.

The current revival got underway by way of Eastern colleges, where students found the worsted wool gabardine suit in light brown with a faint green cast was suitable for wear most of the school year.

The shade preferred in the charcoal green flannel suits is described as "bottle green," a darker, bluer shade. Spongy-surfaced wool fabrics, woven of thick-and-thin curly yarns, are favored for the solid color, while it appears as a broken dash on a black background in others.

5 Hawkeye Winter Teams Go To Conference Title Meets

Five Iowa winter sports teams left Thursday for Big Ten conference championship meets, which begin today, while a sixth, the basketball team, groomed itself for Monday's important game at Michigan.

Departing for Minneapolis were Wrestling Coach Dave McCuskey's matmen and Gymnastics Coach Dick Holzapfel's gymnasts. Track Coach Francis Cretzmeier took his indoor team to the conference meet at East Lansing, Mich.; Swimming Coach Dave Armbruster left with the Hawk swimmers for Columbus, O.; and Fencing Coach Harry Hollien's swordsmen went to Madison, Wis.

Having the best chance of winning a conference title in addition to the basketball team which can do no worse than to share the crown with Minnesota, is McCuskey's wrestling squad. Iowa, along with Illinois and Michigan, is favored to dethrone Purdue as the Big Ten mat king.

Illini Gymnasts Favored
Holzapfel rates Illinois as tops in gymnastics with Michigan State, Minnesota and his own Hawks as challengers.

Cretzmeier points to Michigan as the track favorite with Illinois next and Indiana, Michigan State, Wisconsin and Iowa to follow. Iowa's hopes for a first division finish in track were dampened by leg injuries to Earl Smith, defending Big Ten broad jump champ, and to sprinter John Oakley, who also runs a leg on the relay team.

Iowa is expected to garner some honors in swimming, but again, like the past 18 years, Ohio State or Michigan should win the team title. In the seven-team fencing joust at Madison, Hollien's charges hope for fourth or better.

31 of 44 Dual Meets Won
In the five winter sports (basketball excluded) Iowa teams won 31 of 44 dual meet matches plus one tie. The Big Ten record is 18-11.

Four of the teams will enter the NCAA meets Mar. 25-26, while the other one, track, will compete in meets at Milwaukee, Cleveland and Chicago.

Meanwhile, Basketball Coach Bucky O'Connor's Hawk cagers for the second straight day went through a rugged workout in anticipation of a tough game at Michigan Monday.

"In the Big Ten you can't take anything for granted," pointed out Bucky Thursday, "and besides Michigan has had a good home record this year."

Graham To Trade Blows with Vejar
NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Graham, the old boxing master of the welterweight division, will face Chleo Vejar in Madison Square Garden tonight.

The 10-rounder will start at 9 p.m. CST and will be broadcast and telecast (NBC).

Holstein Girls, Royal, Gilman, Goldfield Win

DES MOINES (AP)—Two unbeaten teams—Holstein, the tournament favorite, and Royal—Thursday advanced to tonight's semi-finals of the girls' state basketball tournament, while another pair—Gilbert and Eldora—suffered their first losses of the season to bow out of the meet.

Holstein turned back Eldora, 58-51, in an afternoon game to snap Eldora's all-winning streak at 24, and Royal tipped Grafton, 66-62, to set the stage for their meeting tonight.

In the lower bracket Gilman handed Gilbert its first loss in 30 starts, 79-69, while Goldfield whipped Monona, 53-44, to earn the right to meet Gilman tonight.

Garmaker, Gophers Still Title Hopfuls

CHICAGO (AP)—Minnesota's Gophers have a vital two-way interest in Saturday's basketball finale with Wisconsin, striving for a title tie with Iowa and the individual scoring crown for their Dick Garmaker.

Official league statistics Thursday credited Garmaker with 329 points, two more than runnerup Frank Ehmann of Northwestern, who has 327, and 7 more than the third-place total of 322 by Indiana's Don Schlundt.

While Garmaker is playing his 14th and last game against the Badgers at Minneapolis, Ehmann shoots his final game Saturday night against Illinois and Schlundt winds up against Ohio State. Ehmann and Schlundt also have home court advantages.

Even if Minnesota defeats Wisconsin for a closing 11-3 record, the Gophers will have to await the outcome of Iowa's (11-2) finale at Michigan Monday night to learn whether the race ends in a two-team deadlock.

In team statistics, Iowa owns the best shooting average, 42.1 per cent of all shots, and ranks second in both offense and defense. Illinois leads offensively with a 13-game average of 84.0 and Minnesota is the defensive leader with an average yield of 72.8.

NEW YORK (AP)—Bradley (7-19) and Oklahoma City university (9-16) were added to the National Collegiate Athletic association basketball championship field Thursday.

The All-America teams are out in force now, and as could be expected in an era when the Saturday Evening Post comes out in the middle of the week and magazines are scheduled one or two months in advance, the Hawkeyes were all but ignored.

So far center Bill Logan, who is probably the best center in the conference, has received only "honorable mention." And forward Carl Cain, who could play forward with any team in the country, has been held to one NCAA region four team and a couple of honorable mentions.

But, due to circumstances, the voting was done early in the season, and let's face it, the Hawkeyes weren't an outstanding team at that time.

They handed Michigan State its only home loss of the year. They overwhelmed the Illini on their home floor, handing them their worst loss in 18 years. And then, they went to Minneapolis and beat the Gophers at their own game—stalling—40 all but kill Minnesota's hopes for its first conference championship since 1937.

Dogs Enrolled in SUI Class

Above the swimming pool room in the field house, Bruce Hutt, a research associate in physiology, has been conducting an "obedience school for dogs." Class meets Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m.

This week, eight dogs and their owners showed up for a run-through of some of the basic exercises they had learned.

The dogs are trained to "heel." They must learn to walk laterally "at-the-heel" of the owner on the verbal command "heel!" They must pay no attention to distractions.

Talks to Dogs

Hutt stood in the middle of the room and spoke to the group. "All right, let's form a double line down the middle — and no sniffing this time either." The word "heel" was heard around the room, coupled with an occasional "yip," as the owners practiced walking their dogs past each other in opposite directions. If a dog got out of line, he was given a firm tug by the leash. On the end of the leash there is a "choker," a noose-like collar which constricts at the neck of the dog when the leash is pulled. He soon gets the "point" and heels.

"The choker develops a conditional reflex to a verbal command," said Hutt. "The ultimate goal is to have them do all this without the choker and leash."

Hans and Gretel

There were two German shepherds owned by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert P. Hasenclever, 430 Ronalds st., that couldn't bear to be separated. Hans, the tan male, and Gretel, the black female dog, kept their eyes fixed on one another throughout the evening. Hans occasionally whimpered when he was taken too far from Gretel.

Hi Jolie, a Chinese pug (originally from Mesa, Ariz.), gave his owner a little trouble when they came to the exercise "down."

Press on Nose

For this exercise, the dog must be pulled down, from a sitting position to a prone position, by the choker. The dog's head must be "downed" by pressing on his nose with the hand. When Mrs. Charles Fieseler, Coralville, tried to push down on Hi Jolie's stub nose, she exclaimed—"He hasn't got enough nose!"

"The training should come after the housebreaking period, which is quite a 'blow' to the dog to begin with, at about a year old," Hutt explained.

National Champion

"One can go as far as he wants in training the dog," said Hutt. "He can be trained so well that he could be a national competition champion in 'obedience'." After class was dismissed, Gretel, the German shepherd, demonstrated what she could do by "heeling" in a tight circle. "Look! She didn't do that well all evening," said Mrs. Hasenclever.

BRUCE HUTT, RESEARCH ASSISTANT in physiology, teaches a boxer to get into a prone position at the sound of his voice. Hutt runs an obedience school for dogs in the SUI field house.

Says Delegation Should Include Meat Packer

DES MOINES (AP) — Russell Bull, district director of the CIO United Packinghouse workers union, said Thursday that if anything comes of the proposal for an exchange of U.S. and Russian farm delegations a worker from one of Iowa's packing plants should be included in the group.

CLASS TRIP

GORDON, Neb. (AP) — Delmar Toczeczek of Kyle, S. D., delivered a load of wheat to an elevator and with it, his school class ring. The wheat and the ring went from here to Davenport, then Kansas City, Mo. At Kansas City it was found and sent back to the elevator here and then in turn on to Toczeczek in South Dakota.

ROUND AND ROUND

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)

The man's first mistake, reported Police Officer V. D. Moore Jr., was drinking too much. His second mistake was getting on a merry-go-round at the amusement park. What with the alcohol and the circular motion, Moore and officer G. R. Hewlett had to carry the man to the squad car. He was jailed on intoxication charges.
